After the slaughter of so many peers,
So many captains, gentlemen, and soldiers,
That in this quarrel have been overthrown,
And sold their bodies for their country's benefit,
Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace?
Have we not lost most part of all the towns,
By treason, falsehood, and by treachery,
Our great progenitors had conquered?—
O, Warwick, Warwick! I foresee with grief
The utter loss of all the realm of France.

War. Be patient, York: if we conclude a peace,

It shall be with such strict and severe covenants,
As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby.

Enter CHARLES, attended; ALENÇON, BASTARD,
REIGNIER, and others.

Char. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed, [France,
That peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd in

We come to be informed by yourselves
What the conditions of that league must be.

York. Speak, Winchester; for boiling choler chokes

The hollow passage of my poison'd voice,
By sight of these our baleful^a enemies.

Win. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus:
That—in regard king Henry gives consent,
Of mere compassion, and of lenity,
To ease your country of distressful war,
And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace,—
You shall become true liegemen to his crown:
And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear
To pay him tribute, and submit thyself,
Thou shalt be plac'd as viceroy under him,
And still enjoy thy regal dignity.

Alen. Must he be then as shadow of himself?
Adorn his temples with a coronet:[†]
And yet, in substance and authority,
Retain but privilege of a private man?
This proffer is absurd and reasonless.

Char. 'Tis known, already that I am possess'd

With more than half the Gallian territories,
And therein reverenc'd for their lawful king:
Shall I, for lucre of the rest unvanquish'd,
D-tract so much from that prerogative,
As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole?
No, lord ambassador; I'll rather keep
That which I have, than, coveting for more,
Be cast from possibility of all.

York. Insulting Charles! hast thou by secret
Used intercession to obtain a league; [means
And, now the matter grows to compromise,
Stand'st thou aloof upon comparison?
Either accept the title thou usurp'st,
Of benefit proceeding from our king,
And not of any challenge of desert,
Or we will plague thee with incessant wars.

Reig. My lord, you do not well in obstinacy
To cavil in the course of this contract:
If once it be neglected, ten to one,
We shall not find like opportunity.

Alen. To say the truth, it is your policy,
To save your subjects from such massacre,
And ruthless slaughters, as are daily seen
By our proceeding in hostility:
And therefore take this compact of a truce,
Although you break it when your pleasure serves. [Aside, to CHARLES.

War. How say'st thou, Charles? shall our condition stand?

Char. It shall:
Only reserv'd, you claim no interest
In any of our towns of garrison.

York. Then swear allegiance to his majesty;
As thou art knight, never to disobey.
Nor be rebellious to the crown of England,
Thou, nor thy nobles, to the crown of England.—

[CHARLES, and the rest, give Tokens of fealty.
So, now dismiss your army when ye please;
Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still,
For here we entertain a solemn peace. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—London.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter King HENRY, in conference with SUR-
FOLK; GLOSTER and EXETER following.

K. Hen. Your wondrous rare description, noble earl,
Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish'd me:
Her virtues, graced with external gifts,
Do breed love's settled passions in my heart:
And like as rigour in tempestuous gusts
Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide;

So am I driven, by breath of her renown,
Either to suffer shipwreck, or arrive
Where I may have fruition of her love.

Suff. Tush! my good lord! this superficial
Is but a preface of her worthy praise: [m
The chief perfections of that lovely dame,
(Had I sufficient skill to utter them,)
Would make a volume of enticing lines,
Able to ravish any dull conceit.
And, which is more, she is not so divine,
So full replete with choice of all delights,
But, with as humble lowliness of mind,
She is content to be at your command;
Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intent,
To love and honour Henry as her lord.

K. Hen. And otherwise will Henry not presume.

Therefore, my lord protector, give consent,
That Margaret may be England's royal queen.

Glo. So should I give consent to flatter in.
You know, my lord, your highness is betroth'd
Unto another lady of esteem;

How shall we then dispense with that contract,
And not deface your honour with reproach?

Suff. As doth a ruler with unlawful oaths.
(Or one, that, at a triumph^{*} having row'd
To try his strength, forsaketh yet the lists
By reason of his adversary's odds:

A poor earl's daughter is unequal odds,
And therefore may be broke without offence.

Glo. Why, what, I pray, is Margaret more than that?

Her father is no better than an earl,
Although in glorious titles he excel.

Suff. Yes, my good lord, her father is a king,
The king of Naples, and Jerusalem;
And of such great authority in France,
As his alliance will confirm our peace,
And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.

Glo. And so the earl of Armagnac may do.
Because he is near kinsman unto Charles.

Exc. Beside, his wealth doth warrant liberal dower;

While Reignier sooner will receive, than give.

Suff. A dower, my lords! disgrace not so your king,

That he should be so abject, base, and poor,
To choose for wealth, and not for perfect love.

Henry is able to enrich his queen,
And not to seek a queen to make him rich:
So worthless peasants bargain for their wares,
As market-men for oxen, sheep, or horse.

Marriage is a matter of more worth,
Than to be dealt in by attorneyship;[†]
Not whom we will, but whom his grace affects

Must be companion of his nuptial bed:
And therefore, lords, since he affects her most,
It most of all these reasons bindeth us.

In our opinions she should be preferr'd.
For what is wedlock forced, but a hell,
An age of discord and continual strife?

Whereas the contrary bringeth forth bliss.
And is a pattern of celestial peace. [K
Whom should we match, with Henry, bea

But Margaret, that is daughter to a king?
Her peerless feature, joined with her birth,
Approves her fit for none, but for a king.

Her valiant courage, and undaunted spirit,
(More than in women commonly is seen,)
Will answer our hope in issue of a king:

For Henry, son unto a conqueror,
Is likely to beget more conquerors,
If with a lady of so high resolve,

As is fair Margaret, he be link'd in love.

 Not what you are, I know it will excuse
 This sudden execution of my will.
 And so conduct me, where from company,
 I may revolve and ruminate my grief. [Exit.
 Glo. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last. [Exeunt GLOSTER and EXETER.
 Suff. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd: and thus he goes,
 As did the youthful Paris once to Greece;
 With hope to find the like event in love,
 But prosper better than the Trojan did.
 Margaret shall now be queen, and rule the king;
 But I will rule both her, the king, and realm.

SCENE I.—London.—A Room of State in the Palace.

Flourish of Trumpets: then Hautboys. Enter, on one side, King HENRY, Duke of GLOSTER, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and Cardinal BEAUFORT; on the other, Queen MARGARET, led in by SUFFOLK; YORK, SOMERSET, BUCKINGHAM, and others, following.

Suf. As by your high imperial majesty,
I had in charge at my depart for France,
As procurator to your excellence,
To marry princess Margaret for your grace;
So, in the famous ancient city, Tours,—
In presence of the kings of France and Sicil,
The dukes of Orleans, Calaber, Bretagne, and Seven earls, twelve barons, twenty reverend

I have perform'd my task, and was espous'd:
And humbly now upon my bended knee,
In sight of England and her lordly peers,
Deliver up my title in the queen [stance
To your most gracious hands, that are the sub-
Of that great shadow I did represent;
The happiest gift that ever marquis gave,
The fairest queen that ever king receiv'd.

Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse?

This peroration with such circumstance?*

For France, 'tis ours; and we will keep it still.

Glo. Ay, uncle, we will keep it, if we can;

But now it is impossible we should:

Suffolk, the new-made duke that rules the roast,

Hath given the dutchies of Anjou and Maine
 Unto the poor king Reignier, whose large style
 Agrees not with the leanness of his purse.

Sal. Now, by the death of him that died for
 all,

These counties were the keys of Normandy:—
 But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant son?

War. For grief, that they are past recovery:
 For, were there hope to conquer them again,
 My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes
 no tears.

Anjou and Maine! myself did win them both;
 Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer:

And are the cities, that I got with wounds,

Deliver'd up again with peaceful words?

Mort Dieu!

York. For Suffolk's duke—may he be suffocate,

That dims the honour of this warlike isle!

France should have torn and rent my very
 heart,

Before I would have yielded to this league.

I never read but England's kings have had Large sums of gold, and dowries, with their wives:

And our king Henry gives away his own.

To match with her that brings no vantages.

Glo. A proper jest, and never heard before,

That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth,

For costs and charges in transporting her!

She should have staid in France, and starv'd in France,

Before—

Car. My lord of Gloster, now you grow too hot;

It was the pleasure of my lord the king.

Glo. My lord of Winchester, I know your mind;

'Tis not my speeches that you do mislike,

But 'tis my presence that doth trouble you.

Rancour will out: Proud prelate, in thy face

I see thy fury: if I longer stay,

We shall begin our ancient bickerings.†—

Lordings, farewell; and say, when I am gone,

I prophesied—France will be lost ere long.

[Exit.]

Car. So, there goes our protector in a rage.

'Tis known to you he is mine enemy:

Nay, more, an enemy unto you all;

And no great friend, I fear me, to the king.

Consider, lords, he is the next of blood,

And heir apparent to the English crown;

Had Henry got an empire by his marriage,

And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west,

There's reason he should be displeas'd at it.

Look to it, lords; let not his smoothing words

Bewitch your hearts; be wise, and circum-spect.

What though the common people favour him,

Calling him—*Humphrey, the good duke of Glos-
 ter;*

Clapping their hands, and crying with loud
Jesu maintain your royal excellence! [voice—

With—God preserve the good duke Humphrey!

* This speech crowded with so many circumstances of aggravation. † Skirmishings.

I fear me, lords, for all this flattering gloss,
He will be found a dangerous protector.

Buck. Why should he then protect our sovereign,
He being of age to govern of himself?—
Cousin of Somerset, join you with me,
And all together—with the duke of Suffolk,—
We'll quickly hoise duke Humphrey from his seat.

Cur. This weighty business will not brook delay;
I'll to the duke of Suffolk presently. [Exit.]

Som. Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride,
And greatness of his place be grief to us,
Yet let us watch the haughty cardinal;
His insolence is more intolerable
Than all the princes in the land beside;
If Gloster be displac'd, he'll be protector.

Buck. Or thou, or I, Somerset, will be protector, Despight duke Humphrey, or the cardinal.

[Exit BUCKINGHAM and SOMERSET.]

Sal. Pride went before, ambition follows him.

While these do labour for their own preferment,
Behoves it us to labour for the realm.

I never saw but Humphrey duke of Gloster
Did bear him like a noble gentleman.
Oft have I seen the haughty cardinal—
More like a soldier, than a man o'the church,
As stout, and proud, as he were lord of all,—
Swear like a ruffian, and demean himself
Unlike the ruler of a common-weal.—

Warwick, my son, the comfort of my age!
Thy deeds, thy plainness, and thy house-keeping,

Hath won the greatest favour of the commons,
Excepting none but good duke Humphrey.—

And, brother York, thy acts in Ireland,
In bringing them to civil discipline;
Thy late exploits, done in the heart of France,
When thou wert regent for our sovereign,
Have made thee fear'd, and honour'd, of the people:—

Join we together for the public good;
In what we can to bridle and suppress
The pride of Suffolk, and the cardinal,
With Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition;
And, as we may, cherish duke Humphrey's deeds,

While they do tend the profit of the land.

War. So God help Warwick, as he loves the land,

And common profit of his country!

York And so says York, for he hath greatest cause.

Sal. Then let's make haste away, and look unto the main.

War. Unto the main! O father, Maine is lost;

That Maine, which by main force Warwick did win,

And would have kept, so long as breath did Main chance, father, you meant; but I meant Maine;

Which I will win from France, or else be slain.

[Exit WARWICK and SALISBURY.]

York. Anjou and Maine are given to the French;

Paris is lost; the state of Normandy
Stands on a tickle* point, now they are gone:
Suffolk concluded on the articles;

The peers agreed; and Henry was well pleas'd,
To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair daughter.

* For ticklish

I cannot blame them all; what is't to them?
'Tis thine they give away, and not their own
Pirates may make cheap penniworths of their pillage,

And purchase friends, and give to courtezans.
Still revelling, like lords, till all be gone:
While as the silly owner of the goods

Weeps over them, and wrings his hapless hands,

And shakes his head, and trembling stands
While all is shar'd, and all is borne away;
Ready to starve, and dare not touch his own.
So York must sit, and fret, and bite his tongue.
While his own lands are bargain'd for, and sold.

[Ireland.]
Methinks, the realms of England, France, and Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood,
As did the fatal brand Althea burn'd,
Unto the prince's heart of Calydon.*

Anjou and Maine, both given unto the French:
Cold news for me; for I had hope of France.
Even as I have of fertile England's soil.

A day will come, when York shall claim his own;

And therefore I will take the Nevil's parts,
And make a show of love to proud duke Humphrey,

And, when I spy advantage, claim the crown.
For that's the golden mark I seek to hit:

Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right,
Nor hold the sceptre in his childish fist,

Nor wear the diadem upon his head,
Whose church-like humours fit not for a crown.

Then, York, be still awhile, till time do move:
Watch thou, and wake, when others be asleep.

To pry into the secrets of the state;
Till Henry, surfeiting in joys of love,

With his new bride, and England's dear-bought queen,

And Humphrey with the peers be fall'n;
Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose.

With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfum'd;

And in my standard bear the arms of York.
To grapple with the house of Lancaster:

And, force perforce, I'll make him yield his crown,
Whose bookish rule hath pull'd fair England down.

[Exit]

SCENE II.—The same.—A Room in the Duke of GLOSTER'S House.

Enter GLOSTER and the DUCHESS.

Duch. Why droops my lord, like over-ripe corn,

Hanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load?
Why doth the great duke Humphrey knit his brows,

As frowning at the favours of the world?
Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth?

Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight?
What see'st thou there? King Henry's diadem

Enchas'd with all the honours of the world?
If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face,

Until thy head be circled with the same.
Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious

gold:—

To call them both—a pair of crafty knaves.

Well, so it stands: And thus, I fear, at last,

Hume's knavery will be the duchess' wreck;

And her attainure will be Humphrey's fall:

SCENE III.—The same.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter PETER, and others, with Petitions.

1 Pet. My masters, let's stand close; my lord protector will come this way by and by, and then we may deliver our supplications in the quill.†

2 Pet. Marry, the Lord protect him, for he's a good man! Jesu bless him!

Enter SUFFOLK, and Queen MARGARET.

1 Pet. Here 'a comes, methinks, and the queen with him: I'll be the first, sure.

2 Pet. Come back, fool; this is the duke of Suffolk, and not my lord protector.

Suf. How now, fellow? would'st any thing
with me?

1 Pet. I pray, my lord, pardon me! I took ye for my lord protector.

Q. Mar. [Reading the superscription.] To my lord protector! are your supplications to his lordship? Let me see them: What is thine?

1 Pet. Mine is, an't please your grace, against John Goodman, my lord cardinal's man, for keeping my house, and lands, and wife, and all,
from me.

* Let the issue be what it will.

† With great exactness and observance of form.

Suf. Thy wife too? that is some wrong, indeed.—What's yours?—What's here! [Reads.] Against the duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford.—How now, sir knave?

2 Pet. Alas, Sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our whole township.

Peter. [Presenting his petition.] Against my master, Thomas Horner, for saying, That the duke of York was rightful heir to the crown.

Q. Mar. What say'st thou? Did the duke of York say, he was rightful heir to the crown?

Peter. That my master was? No, forsooth: my master said, That he was; and that the king was an usurper.

Suf. Who is there? [Enter Servants.]—Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant presently:—we'll hear more of your matter before the king.

[Exeunt Servants, with PETER.]

Q. Mar. And as for you, that love to be protected

Under the wings of our protector's grace,
Begin your suits anew, and sue to him.

[Tears the Petition.]

Away, base cullions!—Suffolk, let them go.

All. Come, let's be gone.

[Exeunt PETITIONERS.]

Q. Mar. My lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise,

Is this the fashion in the court of England?
Is this the government of Britain's isle,
And this the royalty of Albion's king?
What, shall king Henry be a pupil still,
Under the surly Gloster's governance?
Am I a queen in title and in style,
And must be made a subject to a duke?
I tell thee, Poole, when in the city Tours
Thou ran'st a tilt in honour of my love,
And stol'st away the ladies' hearts of France;
I thought king Henry had resembled thee,
In courage, courtship, and proportion:
But all his mind is bent to holiness,
To number Ave-Maries on his beads:
His champions are—the prophets and apostles;
His weapons, holy saws of sacred writ;
His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves
Are brazen images of canoniz'd saints.
I would, the college of cardinals [Rome,
Would choose him pope, and carry him to
And set the triple crown upon his head;
That were a state fit for his holiness.

Suf. Madam, be patient: as I was cause
Your highness came to England, so will I
In England work your grace's full content.

Q. Mar. Beside the haught protector, have we Beaufort,
The imperious churchman; Somerset, Buckingham, [these,
And grumbling York: and not the least of
But can do more in England than the king.

Suf. And he of these, that can do most of
all,
Cannot do more in England than the Nevils:
Salisbury, and Warwick, are no simple peers.

Q. Mar. Not all these lords do vex me half
so much,
As that proud dame, the lord protector's wife.
She sweeps it through the court with troops of ladies, [wife;
More like an empress than duke Humphrey's
Strangers in court do take her for the queen:
She bears a duke's revenues on her back,
And in her heart she scorns her poverty:
Shall I not live to be aveng'd on her?
Contemptuous base-born callat; as she is,

She vaunted 'mongst her minions t'other day,
The very train of her worst wearing-gown
Was better worth than all my father's lands.
Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daughter.

Suf. Madam, myself have lim'd a bush for her;

And plac'd a quire of such enticing birds,
That she will light to listen to the lays,
And never mount to trouble you again.
So, let her rest: And, madam, list to me;
For I am bold to counsel you in this.
Although we fancy not the cardinal,
Yet must we join with him, and with the lords,
Till we have brought duke Humphrey in disgrace.

As for the duke of York,—this late complaint*
Will make but little for his benefit:
So, one by one, we'll weed them all at last,
And you yourself shall steer the happy helm.

Enter King HENRY, YORK, and SOMERSET, conversing with him; Duke and Duchess of GLOSTER, Cardinal BEAUFORT, BUCKINGHAM, SALISBURY, and WARWICK.

K. Hen. For my part, noble lords, I care not which;

Or Somerset, or York, all's one to me.

York. If York have ill demean'd himself in France,

Then let him be deny'd† the regentship.

Som. If Somerset be unworthy of the place,
Let York be regent, I will yield to him.

War. Whether your grace be worthy, yes,
or no,

Dispute not that: York is the worthier.

Car. Ambitious Warwick, let thy better
speak.

War. The cardinal's not my better in the field.

Buck. All in this presence are thy better,
Warwick.

War. Warwick may live to be the best of all.

Sal. Peace, son;—and show some reason.
Buckingham,

Why Somerset should be preferr'd in this.

Q. Mar. Because the king, forsooth, will have it so.

Glo. Madam, the king is old enough himself
To give his censure:‡ these are no women's matters.

Q. Mar. If he be old enough, what needs
your grace

To be protector of his excellence?

Glo. Madam, I am protector of the realm:
And, at his pleasure, will resign my place.

Suf. Resign it then, and leave thine insolence. [thou']

K. Hen. Uncle, what shall we say to this in

Glo. This doom, my lord, if I may judge.
Let Somerset be regent o'er the French,
Because in York this breeds suspicion:
And let these have a day appointed them
For single combat in convenient place;
For he hath witness of his servant's malice:
This is the law, and this duke Humphrey's doom.

K. Hen. Then be it so. My lord of Somerset,
We make your grace lord regent o'er the French.

Som. I humbly thank your royal majesty.
Her. And I accept the combat willingly.

Pet. Alas, my lord, I cannot fight; for God's against me. O, Lord, have mercy upon me! I shall never be able to fight a blow: O Lord, my heart!

Glo. Sirrah, or you must fight, or else be

K. Hen. Away with them to prison: and the day

Of combat shall be the last of the next month.
Come, Somerset, we'll see thee sent away.

tell you, expects performance of your promises.

Boling. Master Hume, we are therefore provided: Will her ladyship behold and hear our exorcisms?*

Hume. Ay; What else? fear you not her courage.

Boling. I have heard her reported to be a woman of an invincible spirit: But it shall be convenient, master Hume, that you be by her you, go in God's name, and leave us. [*Exit

Simp. Red, master; red as blood.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Abbey at Bury.

Enter to the Parliament, King HENRY, Queen
MARGARET, Cardinal BEAUFORT, SUFFOLK,
YORK, BUCKINGHAM, and others.

K. Hen. I muse,* my lord of Gloster is not come:

'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man,
Whate'er occasion keeps him from us now.

Q. Mar. Can you not see? or will you not observe

The strangeness of his alter'd countenance?

With what a majesty he bears himself;

How insolent of late he is become,

How proud, peremptory, and unlike himself?

We know the time, since he was mild and affable;

And, if we did but glance a far-off look,

Immediately he was upon his knee,

That all the court admir'd him for submission

But, meet him now, and, be it in the morn,

When every one will give the time of day,

He knits his brow, and shows an angry eye,

And passeth by with stiff unbowed knee,

Disdaining duty that to us belongs.

Small curs are not regarded, when they grin

But great men tremble, when the lion roars;

And Humphrey is no little man in England.

First, note, that he is near you in descent;

And should you fall, he is the next will mount.

Me seemeth then, it is no policy,—

Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears,

And his advantage following your decease,—

That he should come about your royal person,

(Or be admitted to your highness' council.

By flattery hath he won the commons' hearts;

And, when he please to make commotion,

'Tis to be fear'd, they all will follow him.

Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted;

[den,
Suffer them now, and they'll o'ergrow the gar-

And choke the herbs for want of husbandry.

The reverent care, I bear unto my lord,

Made me collect‡ these dangers in the duke.

If it be fond,‡ call it a woman's fear;

Which fear, if better reasons can supplant,

I will subscribe and say—I wrong'd the duke.

My lord of Suffolk,—Buckingham,—and York,—

Reprove my allegation, if you can;

Or else conclude my words effectual.

Suf. Well hath your highness seen into this duke;

And, had I first been put to speak my mind,

I think, I should have told your grace's tale.

The duchess, by his subornation,

Upon my life, began her devilish practices:

(Or if he were not privy to those faults,

Yet, by reputed of his high descent,§

(As next the king, he was successive heir,)

And such high vaunts of his nobility,

Did instigate the bedlam brain-sick duchess,

By wicked means to frame our sovereign's fall.

* Look again favourably on me.

no, my sovereign. Gloster is a man ounded yet, and full of deep deceit.
ar. Did he not, contrary to form of law,
ise strange deaths for small offences done?
ork. And did he not, in his protectorship,
y great sums of money through the realm,
soldiers' pay in France, and never sent it?
means whereof, the towns each day revolved.

Enter SOMERSET.

om. All health unto my gracious sovereign!

. Hen. Welcome, lord Somerset. What news from France?

om. That all your interest in those territories
tterly bereft you; all is lost.

. Hen. Cold news, lord Somerset: But God's will be done!

ork. Cold news for me; for I had hopes of France,

firmly as I hope for fertile England.
s are my blossoms blasted in the bud,
l caterpillars eat my leaves away:

I will remedy this gear^e ere long,

Enter GLOSTER.

France.

Beshrew the winners, for they play'd me false!
And well such losers may have leave to speak.

Buck. He'll wrest the sense, and hold us here all day:—

Lord cardinal, he is your prisoner.

Car. Sirs, take away the duke, and guard him sure.

Glo. Ah, thus king Henry throws away his crutch,

Before his legs be firm to bear the body:
Thus is the shepherd beaten from thy side,
And wolves are gnawing who shall gnaw thee first.

Ah, that my fear were false! ah, that it were!
For, good king Henry, thy decay I fear.

[Exit ATTENDANTS, with GLOSTER.]

K. Hen. My lords, what to your wisdoms seemeth best,

Do, or undo, as if ourself were here.

Q. Mar. What, will your highness leave the parliament?

K. Hen. Ay, Margaret; my heart is drown'd with grief,

Whose flood begins to flow within mine eyes;
My body round engirt with misery;
For what's more miserable than discontent?—

Ah, uncle Humphrey! in thy face I see
The map of honour, truth, and loyalty;
And yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to come,
That e'er I prov'd thee false, or fear'd thy faith.

What low'ring star now envies thy estate,
That these great lords, and Margaret our queen,
Do seek subversion of thy harmless life?

Thou never didst them wrong, nor no man wrong;

And as the butcher takes away the calf,
And binds the wretch, and beats it when it strays,

Bearing it to the bloody slaughter-house;
Even so, remorseless, have they borne him hence.

And as the dam runs lowing up and down,
Looking the way her harmless young one went,
And can do nought but wail her darling's loss;
Even so myself bewails good Gloster's case,
With sad unhelpful tears; and with dimm'd eyes

Say—Who's a traitor? Gloster he is none. [Exit.]

Q. Mar. Free lords, cold snow melts with the sun's hot beams.

Henry my lord is cold in great affairs,
Too full of foolish pity; and Gloster's show
Beguiles him, as the mournful crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers;
Or as the snake, roll'd in a flowering bank,*
With shining checker'd slough,† doth sting a child,

That, for the beauty, thinks it excellent.
Believe me, lords, were none more wise than I,
(And yet, herein, I judge mine own wit good,)
This Gloster should be quickly rid the world,
To rid us from the fear we have of him.

Car. That he should die, is worthy policy;
But yet we want a colour for his death:

'Tis meet, he be condemn'd by course of law.

Suf. But, in my mind, that were no policy:

The king will labour still to save his life,
The commons haply* rise to save his life;

And yet we have but trivial argument,
More than mistrust, that shows him worthy death.

York. So that, by this, you would not have him die.

Suf. Ah, York, no man alive so fain as I.

York. 'Tis York that hath more reason for his death.—

But, my lord cardinal, and you, my lord of Suffolk,— [souls,—

Q. Mar. So the poor chicken should be sure of death.

Suf. Madam, 'tis true: And wer't not madness then,

To make the fox surveyor of the fold?

Who being accus'd a crafty murderer,

His guilt should be but idly posted over,

Because his purpose is not executed.

No; let him die, in that he is a fox,

By nature prov'd an enemy to the flock,

Before his chaps be stain'd with crimson blood;

As Humphrey, prov'd by reasons, to my liege,

And do not stand on quilllets, how to slay him:

Q. Mar. Thrice-noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke.

Suf. Not resolute, except so much were done;
For things are often spoke, and seldom meant:

But, that my heart accordeth with my tongue,—
Seeing the deed is meritorious,

And to preserve my sovereign from his foe,—

Say but the word, and I will be his priest.

Car. But I would have him dead, my lord of Suffolk,

Ere you can take due orders for a priest:

Say, you consent, and censure well the deed,

And I'll provide his executioner,

I tender so the safety of my liege.

Suf. Here is my hand, the deed is worthy doing.

Q. Mar. And so say I.

York. And I: and now we three have spoke it,

It skills not greatly‡ who impugns our doom.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Great lords, from Ireland am I come again,

To signify—that rebels there are up,

And put the Englishmen unto the sword:

Send succours, lords, and stop the rage betime,

Before the wound do grow incurable;

For, being green, there is great hope of help.

Car. A breach, that craves a quick expedient§ stop!

What counsel give you in this weighty cause?

York. That Somerset be sent as regent thither:

'Tis meet that lucky ruler be employ'd;

Witness the fortune he hath had in France.

York. My lord of York, try what your fortune is.

Uncivil Kernes of Ireland are in arms,
Temper clay with blood of Englishmen:
Ireland will you lead a band of men,
Selected choicely, from each county some,
To try your hap against the Irishmen?

York. I will, my lord, so please his majesty.

Mar. Why, our authority is his consent;

What we do establish, he confirms:

And, noble York, take thou this task in hand.

York. I am content: Provide me soldiers,
lords,

And I take order for mine own affairs.

Mar. A charge, lord York, that I will see perform'd.

York. [Rey.]
Now return we to the false duke Humphrey.
Mar. No more of him; for I will deal with
him.

York. Henceforth, he shall trouble us no more.
So break off; the day is almost spent:

Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.

York. My lord of Suffolk, within fourteen Bristol I expect my soldiers; [days.]

there I'll ship them all for Ireland.

Mar. I'll see it truly done, my lord of York.

[Exeunt all but YORK.]

York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful thoughts,

Change misdoubt to resolution:

What thou hop'st to be; or what thou art
Gn to death, it is not worth the enjoying:
Pace-fac'd fear keep with the mean-born
man.

Find no harbour in a royal heart.

More than spring-time showers, comes thought

Not a thought, but thinks on dignity.

Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies.

Whom, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting your hearts.

He is dead!

Innocent gazer with thy sight:

Of death I shall find joy;
Bleed death, now Gloster's dead.

Do you rate my lord of Suffolk

As he was enemy to him,

—For as he was to me,
Fears, or heart-offending groans,

And with weeping, sick with

Now the world may deem of me?
We were but hollow friends;

And I made the duke away:
Me with slander's tongue be ed, Hurts be fill'd with my reproach.

His death: Ah me, unhappy!

And crown'd with infamy!
Woe is me for Gloster, wretched

Woe for me, more wretched
Than this.

Turn away, and hide thy face:
Me leper, look on me.

Like the adder, waken dead?
Go, and kill thy father's queen.

Alas, doth my lord of Suffolk coming?

Now* to sing a raven's note,
None bereft my vital powers;

That the chirping of a wren,
Forth from a hollow breast,

Is all thy comfort shut in Gloster's tomb?

Why, then dame Margaret was ne'er thy joy:

Erect his statue then, and worship it,

And make my image but an alehouse sign.

Was I, for this, nigh wreck'd upon the sea;

And twice by awkward wind from England's bank

Drove back again unto my native clime?

What boded this, but well-forewarning wind

Did seem to say,—Seek not a scorpion's nest,

Nor set no footing on this unkind shore?

What did I then, but curs'd the gentle gusts,

And he that loos'd them from their brazen caves;

And bid them blow towards England's blessed

Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock?

Yet Æolus would not be a murderer,

But left that hateful office unto thee:

The pretty vaulting sea refus'd to drown me;

Knowing, that thou would'st have me drown'd

on shore,

With tears as salt as sea through thy unkind-

The splitting rocks cow'rd in the sinking

sands,

And would not dash me with their ragged

Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they,

Might in thy palace perish Margaret.

As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,

When from the shore the tempest beat us back,

I stood upon the hatches in the storm:

And when the dusky sky began to rob

My earnest-gaping sight of thy land's view,

I took a costly jewel from my neck,—

A heart it was, bound in with diamonds,—

And threw it towards thy land;—the sea re-

ceiv'd it;

And so, I wish'd, thy body might my heart:

And even with this, I lost fair England's view,

And bid mine eyes be packing with my heart;

And call'd them blind and dusky spectacles,

For losing ken of Albion's wished coast.

How often have I tempted Suffolk's tongue

(The agent of thy foul inconstancy,) To sit and witch me, as Ascanius did,

When he to madding Dido, would unfold

His father's acts, commenc'd in burning Troy?

Am I not witch'd like her? or thou not false like him?

Ah me, I can no more! Die, Margaret!

For Henry weeps, that thou dost live so long.

Noise within. Enter WARWICK and SALISBURY.

The Commons press to the door.

War. It is reported, mighty sovereign,

That good duke Humphrey traitorously is mur-

der'd

By Suffolk and the cardinal Beaufort's means,

The commons, like an angry hive of bees,

That want their leader, scatter up and down.

And care not who they sting in his revenge.

Myself have calm'd their spleenful mutiny,

Until they hear the order of his death.

K. Hen. That he is dead, good Warwick,

'Tis too true;

But how he died, God knows, not Henry:

Enter his chamber, view his breathless corpse,

And comment then upon his sudden death.

War. That I shall do, my liege:—Stay,

Salisbury,

With the rude multitude, till I return.

[WARWICK goes into an inner Room, and

SALISBURY retires.

K. Hen. O thou that judgest all things, stay

my thoughts:

My thoughts, that labour to persuade my soul.

* Just now.

He be to thee for Gloster, but for me.

Some violent hands were laid on Humphrey's
If my suspect be false, forgive me, God; [life!
For judgement only doth belong to thee!
Fain would I go to chafe his paly lips
With twenty thousand kisses, and to drain
Upon his face an ocean of salt tears;
To tell my love unto his dumb deaf trunk,
And with my fingers feel his hand unfeeling:
But all in vain are these mean obsequies;
And, to survey his dead and earthly image,
What were it but to make my sorrow greater?

The folding Doors of an inner Chamber are thrown open, and GLOSTER is discovered dead in his Bed: WARWICK and others standing by it.

War. Come hither, gracious sovereign, view this body.

K. Hen. That is to see how deep my grave is made:

For, with his soul, fled all my worldly solace;
For seeing him, I see my life in death.*

War. As surely as my soul intends to live
With that dread King that took our state upon him

To free us from his Father's wrathful curse,
I do believe that violent hands were laid
Upon the life of this thrice-famed duke.

Suf. A dreadful oath, sworn with a solemn tongue!

What instance gives lord Warwick for his vow?

War. See, how the blood is settled in his face!
Oft have I seen a timely-parted ghost,† (less,
Of ashy semblance, meagre, pale, and blood-
Being all descended to the labouring heart;
Who, in the conflict that it holds with death,
Attracts the same for aidance 'gainst the enemy;
Which with the heart there cools and ne'er returneth

To blush and beautify the cheek again.

But, see, his face is black, and full of blood;
His eye-balls farther out than when he liv'd,
Staring full ghastly like a strangled man:

His hair uprear'd, his nostrils stretch'd with struggling;

His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp'd
And tugg'd for life, and was by strength sub-du'd. [ing;

Look on the sheets, his hair, you see, is stick-
His well-proportioned beard made rough and rugged,

Like to the summer's corn by tempest lodg'd.

It cannot be, but he was murder'd here;
The least of all these signs were probable.

Suf. Why, Warwick, who should do the duke to death?

Myself, and Beaufort, had him in protection;
And we, I hope, Sir, are no murderers.

War. But both of you were vow'd duke
Humphrey's foes;

And you, forsooth, had the good duke to keep:
'Tis like, you would not feast him like a friend;
And 'tis well seen he found an enemy.

Q. Mar. Then you, belike, suspect these noblemen

As guilty of duke Humphrey's timeless death.

War. Who finds the heifer dead, and bleeding fresh,

And sees fast by a butcher with an axe, [ter?
But will suspect, 'twas he that made the slaugh-
Who finds the partridge in the puttock's nest,
But may imagine how the bird was dead,
Although the kite soar with unbloodied beak?
Even so suspicious is this tragedy.

* I. e. I see my life destroyed or endangered by his death.

† A body become inanimate in the common course of nature; to which violence has not brought a timeless end.

Q. Mar. Are you the butcher, Suffolk;
where's your knife?

Is Beaufort term'd a kite? where are his talons?

Suf. I wear no knife, to slaughter sleeping
men;

But here's a vengeful sword, rusted with care,
That shall be scoured in his rancorous heart,
That slanders me with murder's crimson badge:
Say, if thou dar'st, proud lord of Warwickshire,
That I am faulty in duke Humphrey's death.

[Enter CARDINAL, Son, and others.

War. What dares not Warwick, if false Sul-folk dare him?

Q. Mar. He dares not calm his contumacious
Nor cease to be an arrogant controller, [spirit, Though Suffolk dare him twenty thousand times.

War. Madam, be still; with reverence may I say;

For every word, you speak in his behalf,
Is slander to your royal dignity.

Suf. Blunt-witted lord, ignoble in demeanour!
If ever lady wrong'd her lord so much,
Thy mother took into her blameful bed
Some stern untutor'd churl, and noble stock
Was graft with crab-tree slip; whose fruit thou
And never of the Nevils' noble race. [art,

War. But that the guilt of murder buckles
thee,

And I should rob the deathman of his fee,
Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames,
And that my sovereign's presence makes me
mild,

I would, false murderous coward, on thy knee,
Make thee beg pardon for thy passed speech,
And say—it was thy mother that thou mean'st,
That thou thyself wast born in bastardy:
And, after all this fearful homage done,
Give thee thy hire, and send thy soul to hell,
Pernicious bloodsucker of sleeping men!

Suf. Thou shalt be waking, while I shed thy
blood,

If from this presence thou dar'st go with me.

War. Away even now, or I will drag thee
hence:

Unworthy though thou art, I'll cope with thee,
And do some service to duke Humphrey's ghost.

[Enter SUFFOLK and WARWICK.

K. Hen. What stronger breast-plate than a heart untainted?

Thrice is he arm'd, that hath his quarrel just;
And he but naked, though lock'd up in steel.
Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted. [A Noise within.

Q. Mar. What noise is this?

Re-enter SUFFOLK and WARWICK, with their Weapons drawn.

K. Hen. Why, how now, lords? your wrathful weapons drawn

Here in our presence? dare you be so bold?—
Why, what tumultuous clamour have we here?

Suf. The traitorous Warwick, with the men of Bury,
Set all upon me, mighty sovereign

Noise of a Crowd within. Re-enter SALISBURY.

Sal. Sirs, stand apart; the king shall know your mind.—

[Speaking to those within.

Dread lord, the commons send you word by me.
Unless false Suffolk straight be done to death.
Or banished fair England's territories,
They will by violence tear him from your palace.
And torture him with grievous ling'ring death

They say, by him the good duke Humphrey died;

They say, in him they fear your highness' death;
And mere instinct of love, and loyalty,—
Free from a stubborn opposite intent,
As being thought to contradict your liking,—
Makes them thus forward in his banishment.
They say, in care of your most royal person,
That, if your highness should intend to sleep,
And charge—that no man should disturb your rest,

In pain of your dislike, or pain of death;
Yet notwithstanding such a strait edict,
Were there a serpent seen, with forked tongue,
That slily glided towards your majesty,
It were but necessary, you were wak'd;
Lest, being suffer'd in that harmful slumber,
The mortal worm* might make the sleep eternal:

And therefore do they cry, though you forbid,
That they will guard you, whe'r you will, or no,

From such fell serpents as false Suffolk is;
With whose envenomed and fatal sting,
Your loving uncle, twenty times his worth,
They say, is shamefully bereft of life.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king, my lord of Salisbury.

Suf. 'Tis like, the commons, rude unpolish'd hinds,

Could send such message to their sovereign:
But you, my lord, were glad to be employ'd,
To show how quaint† an orator you are:
But all the honour Salisbury hath won,
Is—that he was the lord ambassador,
Sent from a sort‡ of tinkers to the king.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king, or we'll all break in.

K. Hen. Go, Salisbury, and tell them all from me,

I thank them for their tender loving care:
And had I not been 'cited so by them,
Yet did I purpose as they do entreat;
For sure, my thoughts do hourly prophesy
Mischance unto my state by Suffolk's means.
And therefore,—by His majesty I swear,
Whose far unworthy deputy I am,—
He shall not breathe infection in this air§
But three days longer, on the pain of death.

[Exit SALISBURY.]

Q. Mar. O Henry, let me plead for gentle Suffolk!

K. Hen. Ungentle queen, to call him gentle Suffolk.

No more, I say; if thou dost plead for him,
Thou wilt but add increase unto my wrath.
Had I but said, I would have kept my word;
But, when I swear, it is irrevocable:—
If, after three days space, thou here be'st found
On any ground that I am ruler of,
The world shall not be ransom for thy life.—
Come, Warwick, come good Warwick, go with me;

I have great matters to impart to thee.

[Exeunt K. HENRY, WARWICK, Lords, &c.]

Q. Mar. Mischance, and sorrow, go along with you!

Heart's discontent, and sour affliction,
Be playfellows to keep you company!
There's two of you; the devil make a third!
And threefold vengeance tend upon your steps!

Suf. Cease, gentle queen, these execrations,
And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave.

* Deadly serpent. † Dexterous. ‡ A company.
§ I. e. He shall not contaminate this air with his infected breath.

Q. Mar. Fie, coward woman, and soft-hearted wretch!

Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemies?

Suf. A plague upon them! wherefore should I curse them? [groan,

Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's
I would invent as bitter-searching terms,
As curst, as harsh, and horrible to hear,
Deliver'd strongly through my fixed teeth,
With full as many signs of deadly hate,
As lean-fac'd Envy in her loathsome cave:
My tongue should stumble in mine earnest words:

Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint;
My hair be fix'd on end, as one distract;
Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban:
And even now my burden'd heart would break,
Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink!

Gall, worse than gall, the daintiest that they
Their sweetest shade, a grove of cypress trees!
Their chiefest prospect, murdering basilisks!
Their softest touch, as smart as lizards' stings!
Their music, frightful as the serpent's hiss;
And boding screech-owls make the concert full!

All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell—

Q. Mar. Enough, sweet Suffolk; thou torment'st thyself;

And these dread curses—like the sun 'gainst
Or like an overcharged gun,—recoil, [glass,
And turn the force of them upon thyself.

Suf. You bade me ban,* and will you bid me leave?

Now, by the ground that I am banish'd from,
Well could I curse away a winter's night,
Though standing naked on a mountain top,
Where biting cold would never let grass grow,
And think it but a minute spent in sport.

Q. Mar. O, let me entreat thee, cease! Give me thy hand,

That I may dew it with my mournful tears;
Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,
To wash away my woeful monuments.
O, could this kiss be printed in thy hand;

[Kisses his hand.]

That thou might'st think upon these by the seal,
Through whom a thousand sighs are breath'd for thee!

So, get thee gone, that I may know my grief;
'Tis but surmis'd whilst thou art standing by,
As one that surfeits thinking on a want.

I will repeal thee, or, be well assur'd,
Adventure to be banished myself:
And banished I am, if but from thee.

Go, speak not to me; even now be gone.—
O, go not yet!—Even thus two friends condemn'd

Embrace, and kiss, and take ten thousand
Loather a hundred times to part than die.

Yet now farewell; and farewell life with thee!

Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banish'd,

Once by the king, and three times thrice by
'Tis not the land I care for; wert thou hence;
A wilderness is populous enough,
So Suffolk had thy heavenly company:
For where thou art, there is the world itself,
With every several pleasure in the world;
And where thou art not, desolation.

I can no more:—Live thou to joy thy life;
Myself no joy in naught, but that thou livest.

Enter VAUX.

Q. Mar. Whither goes Vaux so fast? What news, I pry thee?

* Curse.

Vaux. To signify unto his majesty,
That Cardinal Beaufort is at point of death:
For suddenly a grievous sickness took him,
That makes him gasp and stare, and catch the
air,
Blaspheming God, and cursing men on earth.
Sometime, he talks as if duke Humphrey's
ghost
Were by his side: sometime, he calls the king,
And whispers to his pillow, as to him,
The secrets of his overcharged soul:
And I am sent to tell his majesty,
That even now he cries aloud for him.

Q. Mar. Go, tell this heavy message to the king. [Exit VAUX.]

Ah me! what is this world? What news are these?

But wherefore grieve I at an hour's poor loss,
Omitting Suffolk's exile, my soul's treasure?
Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee,
And with the southern clouds contend in tears;
Theirs for the earth's increase, mine for my sorrows? [coming;]

Now, get thee hence: the king thou know'st is
If thou be found by me, thou art but dead.

Suf. If I depart from thee, I cannot live:
And in thy sight to die, what were it else,
But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap?
Here could I breathe my soul into the air,
As mild and gentle as the cradle-babe,
Dying with mother's dug between its lips:
Where,* from thy sight, I should be raging mad,

And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes.
To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth;
So shouldst thou either turn my flying soul,
Or I should breathe it so into thy body,
And then it lived in sweet Elysium.
To die by thee, were but to die in jest;
From thee to die, were torture more than
death:

O, let me stay, befall what may befall.

Q. Mar. Away! Though parting be a fretful corrosive,

It is applied to a deathful wound. [thee;
To France, sweet Suffolk: Let me hear from
For wheresoe'er thou art in this world's globe,
I'll have an Irist that shall find you out.

Suf. I go.

Q. Mar. And take my heart with thee.

Suf. A jewel lock'd into the woeful'st cask
That ever did contain a thing of worth.
Even as a splitted bark, so sunder we:
This way fall I to death.

Q. Mar. This way for me. [Exit, severally.]

SCENE III.—London.—Cardinal BEAUFORT'S Bed-chamber.

Enter King HENRY, SALISBURY, WARWICK,
and others.—The CARDINAL in Bed; Attendants with him.

K. Hen. How fares my lord? Speak, Beaufort, to thy sovereign.

Car. If thou be'st death, I'll give thee England's treasure, Enough to purchase such another island,
So thou wilt let me live, and feel no pain.

K. Hen. Ah, what a sign it is of evil life,
When death's approach is seen so terrible!

War. Beaufort, it is thy sovereign speaks to thee.

Car. Bring me unto my trial when you will.
Died he not in his bed? Where should he die?
Can I make men live, whe'r they will or no?

O! torture me no more, I will confess.— Alive again? Then show me where he is;
I'll give a thousand pounds to look upon
him.—

He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them.—
Comb down his hair; look! look! it stands upright,

Like lime-twigs set to catch my winged soul!—
Give me some drink; and bid the apothecary
Bring the strong poison that I bought of him.

K. Hen. O thou eternal Mover of the heavens,

Look with a gentle eye upon this wretch!
O, beat away the busy meddling fiend,
That lays strong siege upon this wretch's soul,
And from his bosom purge this black despair!

War. See, how the pangs of death doth make him grin.

Sul. Disturb him not, let him pass peaceably.

K. Hen. Peace to his soul, if God's pleasure be! [bliss,

Lord-cardinal, if thou think'st on heaven's
Hold up thy hand, make signal of thy hope.—
He dies, and makes no sign; O God, forgive
him!

War. So bad a death argues a monstrous life.

K. Hen. Forbear to judge, for we are sinners
all.—

Close up his eyes, and draw the curtain close;
And let us all to meditation. [Exit.]

ACT IV. .

SCENE I.—Kent.—The sea-shore near Dover.

Firing heard at Sea.—Then enter from a Boat,
a CAPTAIN, a MASTER, a MASTER'S-MATE,
WALTER WHITMORE, and others; with them
SUFFOLK, and other Gentlemen, Prisoners.

Cap. The gaudy, blabbing, and remorseful
Is crept into the bosom of the sea; [day
And now loud-howling wolves arouse the jades
That drag the tragic melancholy night;
Who with their drowsy, slow, and flagging wings [jaws

Clip dead men's graves, and from their misty
Breathe foul contagious darkness in the air.
Therefore, bring forth the soldiers of our prize;
For, whilst our pinnace anchors in the Downs,
Here shall they make their ransom on the sand.
Or with their blood stain this discolour'd shore.—

Master, this prisoner freely give I thee:—
And thou that art his mate, make boot of
this:—

The other, [Pointing to Suffolk.] Walter Whitmore, is thy share.

1 Gent. What is my ransom, master? Let me know.

Must. A thousand crowns, or else lay down your head.

Mate. And so much shall you give, or oil goes yours.

Cap. What, think you much to pay two thousand crowns,
And bear the name and port of gentlemen?—
Cut both the villains' throats;—for die you shall;

The lives of those which we have lost in fight,
Cannot be counterpoised with such a petty sum.

1 Gent. I'll give it, Sir; and therefore spare
my life.

2 Gent. And so will I, and write home for it straight.

* For whereas.

Against the senseless winds shall grin in vain,
Who, in contempt, shall hiss at thee again:
And wedded be thou to the hags of hell,
For daring to affy* a mighty lord
Unto the daughter of a worthless king,
Having neither subject, wealth, nor diadem.
By devilish policy art thou grown great,
And, like ambitious Sylla, overgorged
With gobbets of thy mother's bleeding heart.
By thee, Anjou and Maine were sold to France:
The false revolting Normans, thorough thee,
Disdain to call us lord, and Picardy
Hath slain our governors, surprised our forts,
And sent the ragged soldiers wounded home.
The princely Warwick, and the Nevils all,— Whose dreadful swords were never drawn in
As hating thee, are rising up in arms: [vain;
And now the house of York—thrust from the crown,

By shameful murder of a guiltless king,
And lofty proud encroaching tyranny,— Burns with revenging fire; whose hopeful colours

Advance our half-faced sun, striving to shine,
Under the which is writ—Invitis sublevo.
The commons here in Kent are up in arms:
And, to conclude, reproach, and beggary,
Is crept into the palace of our king,
And all by thee:—Away! Convey him hence.

Suf. O that I were a god, to shoot forth

Upon these paltry, servile, abject drudges?
Small things make base men proud: this villain

Thy words move rage, and not remorse, in me:

Cap. Walter,—

Walt. Come, Suffolk, I must waft thee to thy
death.

Suf. Gelus timor occupat artus:—Thou thee I fear.

Walt. Thou shalt have cause to fear, before
I leave thee.

What, are ye daunted now? Now will ye stoop?
1 Gent. My gracious lord, entreat him, speak him fair.

Suf. Suffolk's imperial tongue is stern and rough,

Used to command, netaught to plead for favour.
Fare be it, we should honour such as these
With humble suit: no, rather let my head Stoop to the block, than these knees bow to any.

Save to the God of heaven, and to my king;
And sooner dance upon a bloody pole,
Than stand uncover'd to the vulgar groom.
True nobility is exempt from fear:—

More can I bear, than you dare execute.
Cap. Hail him away, and let him talk no
more.

Suf. Come, soldiers, show what cruelty ye
That this my death may never be forgot! [can,
Great men oft die by vile bezonians:
A Roman sworder and banditto slave,
Murder'd sweet Tully; Brutus' bastard hand
Stabb'd Julius Cæsar; savage islanders,
Pompey the great, and Suffolk dies by pirates.

[Exit Suf. with WHITMORE and others.
* To betroth in marriage.
† A pinnace then signified a ship of small burden.
‡ Low men.

Cap. And as for these whose ransom we have
It is our pleasure, one of them depart:— [set,
Therefore come you with us, and let him go.
[Exeunt all but the first GENTLEMAN.

Re-enter WHITMORE with SUFFOLK's Body.

Whit. There let his head and lifeless body lie,
Until the queen his mistress bury it. [Exit.
1 Gent. O barbarous and bloody spectacle!
His body will I bear unto the king:
If he revenge it not, yet will his friends;
So will the queen, that living held him dear.
[Exit with the Body.

SCENE II.—Blackheath.

Enter GEORGE BEVIS, and JOHN HOLLAND.

Geo. Come, and get thee a sword, though made of a lath; they have been up these two days.

John. They have the more need to sleep now
then.

Geo. I tell thee, Jack Cade the clothier means to dress the commonwealth, and turn it, and set a new nap upon it.

John. So he had need, for 'tis threadbare.
Well, I say, it was never merry world in England, since gentlemen came up.

Geo. O miserable age! Virtue is not regarded in handicrafts-men.

John. The nobility think scorn to go in leather aprons.

Geo. Nay more, the king's council are no good workmen.

John. True: and yet it is said,—Labour in thy vocation: which is as much to say, as,— let the magistrates be labouring men: and therefore should we be magistrates.

Geo. Thou hast hit it: for there's no better sign of a brave mind, than a hard hand.

John. I see them! I see them! There's Best's son, the tanner of Wingham;—

Geo. He shall have the skins of our enemies, to make dog's leather of.

John. And Dick the butcher,—

Geo. Then is sin struck down like an ox, and iniquity's throat cut like a calf.

John. And Smith the weaver:—

Geo. Argo, their thread of life is spun.

John. Come, come, let's fall in with them.

Drum.—*Enter CADE, DICK the Butcher, SMITH
the Weaver; and others in great number.*

Cade. We John Cade, so term'd of our supposed father,—

Dick. Or rather, of stealing a cade of herrings.* [Aside.

Cade.—for our enemies shall fall before us, inspired with the spirit of putting down kings and princes,—Command silence.

Dick. Silence!

Cade. My father was a Mortimer,—

Dick. He was an honest man, and a good bricklayer. [Aside.

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet,—

Dick. I knew her well, she was a midwife.
[Aside.

Cade. My wife descended of the Lacies,—

Dick. She was, indeed, a pedlar's daughter, and sold many laces. [Aside.

Smith. But, now of late, not able to travel with her furred pack, she washes bucks here at home. [Aside.

Cade. Therefore am I of an honourable house.

Dick. Ay, by my faith, the field is honourable; and there was he born, under a hedge; for his father had never a house, but the cage.

[Aside.

Cade. Valiant I am.

Smith. 'A must needs; for beggary is valiant.
[Aside.

Cade. I am able to endure much.

Dick. No question of that; for I have seen him whipp'd three market days together.
[Aside.

Cade. I fear neither sword nor fire.

Smith. He need not fear the sword, his coat is of proof. [Aside.

Dick. But, methinks, he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt i'the hand for stealing of sheep. [Aside.

Cade. Be brave then; for your captain is brave, and vows reformation. There shall be, in England, seven halfpenny loaves sold for a penny: the three-hoop'd pot shall have ten hoops; and I will make it felony, to drink small beer: all the realm shall be in common, and in Cheapside shall my palfry go to grass. And, when I am king, (as king I will be)—

All. God save your majesty!

Cade. I thank you, good people:—There shall be no money; all shall eat and drink on my score; and I will apparel them all in one livery, that they may agree like brothers, and worship me their lord.

Dick. The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers.

Cade. Nay, that I mean to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? That parchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo
a man? Some say, the bee stings: but I say,
'tis the bee's-wax: for I did but seal once to a thing, and I was never mine own man since.
How now? Who's there?

Enter some, bringing in the CLERK of Chatham.

Smith. The clerk of Chatham: he can write and read, and cast account.

Cade. O monstrous!

Smith. We took him setting of boys' copies.

Cade. Here's a villain!

Smith. H'as a book in his pocket, with red letters in't.

Cade. Nay, then he is a conjurer.

Dick. Nay, he can make obligations, and write court-hand.

Cade. I am sorry for't: the man is a proper man, on mine honour; unless I find him guilty, he shall not die.—Come hither, sirrah, I must examine thee: What is thy name?

Clerk. Emmanuel.

Dick. They use to write it on the top of letters:—'Twill go hard with you.

Cade. Let me alone:—Dost thou use to write thy name? or hast thou a mark to thyself, like a honest plain-dealing man?

Clerk. Sir, I thank God, I have been so well brought up, that I can write my name.

All. He hath confess'd: away with him; he's a villain, and a traitor.

Cade. Away with him, I say: hang him with his pen and inkhorn about his neck:

[Exeunt some with the CLERK.

Enter MICHAEL.

Mich. Where's our general?

Cade. Here I am, thou particular fellow.

Mich. Fly, fly, fly! Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the king's forces.

Cade. And you, that love the commons, fol-

We will not leave one lord, one gentleman:
Spare none, but such as go in clouted shoes;*

As would, (but that they dare not) take our

Dick. They are all in order, and march towards us.

Cade. But then are we in order, when we are most out of order. Come, march forward.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another part of Blackheath.

Alarums.—The two Parties enter, and fight, and both the STAFFORDS are slain.

Cade. Where's Dick, the butcher of Ashford?
Dick. Here, sir.

Cade. They fell before thee like sheep and oxen, and thou behavedst thyself as if thou hadst been in thine own slaughter-house:
therefore thus will I reward thee,—The Lent shall be as long again as it is; and thou shalt have a licence to kill for a hundred, lacking one.

Dick. I desire no more.

Cade. And, to speak truth, thou deservest no less. This monument of the victory will I bear; and the bodies shall be dragg'd at my horse's heels, till I do come to London, where we will have the mayor's sword borne before us.

Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good,
break open the jails, and let out the prisoners.

Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come,
let's march towards London. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—London.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter KING HENRY, reading a Supplication; the duke of BUCKINGHAM, and Lord SAY with him: at a distance, Queen MARGARET, mourning over SUFFOLK's head.

Q. Mar. Oft have I heard—that grief soft-tens the mind,

And makes it fearful and degenerate;
Think therefore on revenge, and cease to weep.
But who can cease to weep, and look on this?
Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast:
But where's the body that I should embrace?

Buck. What answer makes your grace to the rebel's supplication?

K. Hen. I'll send some holy bishop to en-

Hen. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head.

have his.

Hen. How now, madam? Still sitting and mourning for Suffolk's death?

I would'st not have mourn'd so much for

Mar. No, my love, I should not mourn, but die for thee.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Hen. How now! What news? Why
comest thou in such haste?

Ms. The rebels are in Southwark; Fly, my
lord!

Cade proclaims himself Lord Mortimer, banded from the duke of Clarence's house;
calls your grace usurper, openly,
vows to crown himself in Westminster.

His army is a ragged multitude of rinds and peasants, rude and merciless:
the death of Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death has given them heart and courage to proceed:

scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen,
they call—false caterpillars, and intend their
death.

Hen. O graceless men!—They know not what they do.

uck. My gracious lord, retire to Kenelworth,

until a power be raised to put them down.

Mar. Ah! were the duke of Suffolk now alive,

the Kentish rebels would be soon appeased.

Hen. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee, therefore away with us to Kenelworth.

y. So might your grace's person be in danger:

the sight of me is odious in their eyes:

I therefore in this city will I stay,

I live alone as secret as I may.

Enter another MESSENGER.

Mes. Jack Cade hath gotten London-bridge; the citizens and forsake their houses:

the rascal people, thirsting after prey,
go with the traitor; and they jointly swear,
to spoil the city, and your royal court.

uck. Then linger not, my lord; away, take horse!

Hen. Come, Margaret; God, our hope, will succour us.

Mar. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is deceased.

Hen. Farewell, my lord; [To Lord SAY.]
trust not the Kentish rebels.

uck. Trust nobody, for fear you be betray'd.

y. The trust I have is in mine innocence, and therefore am I bold and resolute.

[Excunt.

Enter Lord SCALES, and others, on the Walls.

they have won the bridge, killing all those that withstand them: the lord mayor craves of your honour from the Tower, to defend the city from the rebels.

Dick. My lord, when shall we go to Cheapside, and take up commodities upon our bills?

Cade. Marry, presently.

All. O brave!

Re-enter Rebels, with the Heads of Lords SAY and his Son-in-law.

Cade. But is not this braver?—Let them kiss one another, for they loved well, when they were alive. Now part them again, lest they consult about the giving up of some more towns in France. Soldiers, defer the spoil of the city until night: for with these horns before us, instead of maces, will we ride through the streets; and, at every corner have them kiss—
 Away! [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.—Southwark.

Alarm.—Enter CADE, and all his Rabblement.

Cade. Up Fish-street! Down Saint Magnus' corner! Kill and knock down! Throw them into Thames.

Enter BUCKINGHAM, and old CLIFFORD, with Forces.

Buck. Ay, here they be that dare and will disturb thee:

Now, Cade, we come ambassadors from the king

To the commons, whom thou hast misled;
And here pronounce free pardon to them all,
That will forsake thee, and go home in peace.

Clif. What say ye, countrymen? will ye relent,

And yield to mercy whilst 'tis offer'd you;
Let a rabble lead you to your deaths?

No loves the king, and will embrace his pardon,

Rising up his cap, and say—God save his majesty!
Who hateth him, and honours not his father,
Cries the fifth, that made all France to quake,

For he hath no home, no place to fly to;

SCENE X.—Kent.—IDEN's Garden.

Enter CADE.

Cade. Fie on ambition! Fie on myself; that have a sword, and yet am ready to famish! These five days have I hid me in these woods; and durst not peep out, for all the country is layed for me; but now am I so hungry, that if I might have a lease of my life for a thousand years, I could stay no longer. Wherefore, on a brick-wall have I climbed into this garden; to see if I can eat grass, or pick a sallet another while, which is not amiss to cool a man's stomach this hot weather. And, I think, this word sallet was born to do me good: for, many a time, but for a sallet,* my brain-pan, had been cleft with a brown bill; and, many a time, when I have been dry, and bravely marching, it hath served me instead of a quart-pot to drink in; and now the word sallet must serve me to feed on.

Enter IDEN, with Servants.

Iden. Lord, who would live turmoiled in the court,
And may enjoy such quiet walks as these,
This small inheritance, my father left me,
Contenteth me, and is worth a monarchy.
I seek not to wax great by other's waining;
(Or gather wealth, I care not with what envy;
Sufficeth, that I have maintains my state,
And sends the poor well pleased from my gate.

Cade. Here's the lord of the soil come to seize me for a stray, for entering his fee-simple without leave. Ah, villain, thou wilt betray me, and get a thousand crowns of the king for carrying my head to him; but I'll make thee eat iron like an ostridge, and swallow my sword like a great pin, ere thou and I part.

Iden. Why, rude companion, whatso'er thou be, [thee?]
I know thee not; why then should I betray Is't not enough, to break into my garden,
And, like a thief, to come to rob my grounds,
Climbing my walls, in spite of me the owner,
But thou wilt brave me with these saucy terms?

Cade. Brave thee? Ay, by the best blood that ever was broach'd, and beard thee too. Look on me well: I have eat no meat these five days; yet, come thou and thy five men, and if I do not leave you all as dead as a door-nail, I pray God, I may never eat grass more.

Iden. Nay, it shall ne'er be said, while England stands,
That Alexander Iden, an esquire of Kent,
Took odds to combat a poor famish'd man.
Oppose thy steadfast-gazing eyes to mine,
See if thou canst outface me with thy looks.
Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser;
Thy hand is but a finger to my fist;
Thy leg a stick, compared with this truncheon;
My foot shall fight with all the strength thou hast;

* A kind of helmet.

And if mine arm be heaved in the air,
Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth.

By my valour, the most complete champion that ever I heard.—Steel, if thou turn the edge, or cut not out the burly-boned clown in chins of beef ere thou sleep in thy sheath, I beseech God on my knees, thou may'st be turn'd to hobnails. [They fight, CADE falls.] O, I am slain! Famine, and no other, hath slain me: let ten thousand devils come against me, and give me but the ten meals I have lost, and I'd defy them all. Wither, garden; and be henceforth a burying place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquer'd soul of Cade is fled.

Iden. Is't Cade that I have slain, that monstrous traitor?

Sword, I will hallow thee, for this thy deed.
And hang thee o'er my tomb, when I am dead:

Ne'er shall this blood be wiped from thy point;
But thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat,
To emblaze the honour that thy master got.

Cade. Iden, farewell; and be proud of thy victory: Tell Kent from me, she hath lost her best man, and exhort all the world to be cowards; for I, that never fear'd any, am vanquish'd by famine, not by valour. [Dies.]

Iden. How much thou wrong'st me* heaven be my judge.

Die, damned wretch, the curse of her that bare thee!

And as I thrust thy body in with my sword,
So wish I, I might thrust thy soul in hell.
Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels
Unto a dunghill which shall be thy grave,
And there cut off thy most ungracious head;
Which I will bear in triumph to the king,
Leaving thy trunk for crows to feed upon.

[Exit, dragging out the Body.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The same.—Fields between Dartford and Blackheath.

The King's Camp on one side.—On the other, enter YORK attended, with Drum and Colours: his Forces at some distance.

York. From Ireland thus comes York, to claim his right,
And pluck the crown from feeble Henry's head:
Ring, bells, aloud; burn, bonfires, clear and bright,
To entertain great England's lawful king.
Ah, sacra majestas! who would not buy thee dear?

Let them obey, that know not how to rule;
This hand was made to handle naught but gold:

I cannot give due action to my words,
Except a sword, or sceptre balance it.†
A sceptre shall it have, have I a soul;
On which I'll toss the flower-de-luce of France.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well.

* In supposing that I am proud of my victory.

† Balance my hand.

York. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting,
Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure?
Buck. A messenger from Henry, our dread liege,
To know the reason of these arms in peace;
Or why, thou—being a subject as I am,—
Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn,
Shouldst raise so great a power without his leave,
Or dare to bring thy force so near the court.

York. [Aside.] Scarce can I speak, my choler is so great.

O, I could hew up rocks, and fight with flint,
I am so angry at these abject terms;
And now, like Ajax Telamonius,
On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury!
I am far better born than is the king;
More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts:
But I must make fair weather yet awhile,
Till Henry be more weak, and I more strong.

[Aside.
O Buckingham, I pr'ythee, pardon me,
That I have given no answer all this while;
My mind was troubled with deep melancholy.
The cause why I have brought this army hither,

Is—to remove proud Somerset from the king,
Seditious to his grace, and to the state.

Buck. That is too much presumption on thy
But if thy arms be to no other end, [part:
The king hath yielded unto thy demand;
The duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

Buck. Upon mine honour, he is prisoner.

York. Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my powers.—

Soldiers, I thank you all; disperse yourselves;
Meet me to-morrow, in Saint George's field,
You shall have pay, and every thing you wish.—

And let my sovereign, virtuous Henry,
Command my eldest son,—nay, all my sons,
As pledges of my fealty and love,
I'll send them all as willing as I live;
Lands, goods, horse, armour, any thing I have
Is his to use, so Somerset may die.

Buck. York, I commend this kind submission:
We twain will go into his highness' tent.

Enter King HENRY, attended.

K. Hen. Buckingham, doth York intend to harm us,
That thus he marcheth with thee arm in arm?

York. In all submission and humility,
York doth present himself unto your highness.

K. Hen. Then what intend these forces thou dost bring?

York. To heave the traitor Somerset from hence;
And fight against that monstrous rebel, Cade,
Who since I heard to be discomfited.

Enter IDEN, with CADE'S Head.

Iden. If one so rude, and of so mean condition,
May pass into the presence of a king, [tion,
Lo, I present your grace a traitor's head,
The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew.

K. Hen. The head of Cade?—Great God, how just art thou!

O, let me view his visage being dead,
That living wrought me such exceeding trouble.
Tell me, my friend, art thou the man that slew him?

Iden. I was, an't like your majesty.

K. Hen. How art thou call'd? and what's thy degree?

Iden. Alexander Iden, that's my name;
A poor esquire of Kent, that loves his king.

Buck. So please it you, my lord, 'twere not amiss

He were created knight for his good service.

K. Hen. Iden, kneel down; [He kneels.
Rise up a knight.

We give thee for reward a thousand marks;
And will, that thou henceforth attend on us.

Iden. May Iden live to merit such a bounty,
And never live but true unto his liege!

K. Hen. See, Buckingham! Somerset comes with the queen;
Go, bid her hide him quickly from the duke.

Enter Queen MARGARET and SOMERSET.

Q. Mar. For thousand Yorks he shall not hide his head,
But boldly stand, and front him to his face.

York. How now! Is Somerset at liberty?
Then, York, unloose thy long-imprison'd thoughts,

And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart.
Shall I endure the sight of Somerset?—
False king! why hast thou broken faith with me,

Knowing how hardly I can brook abuse?
King did I call thee? no, thou art not king;
Not fit to govern and rule multitudes,
Which dar'st not, no, nor canst not rule a traitor.

That head of thine doth not become a crown;
Thy hand is made to grasp a palmer's staff,
And not to grace an awful princely sceptre.
That gold must round engirt these brows of mine;

Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles' spear,
Is able with the change to kill and cure.
Here is a hand to hold a sceptre up,
And with the same to act controlling laws.
Give place; by heaven, thou shalt rule no more

O'er him, whom heaven created for thy ruler.
Som. O monstrous traitor!—I arrest thee, York,

Of capital treason 'gainst the king and crown:
Obey, audacious traitor; kneel for grace.

York. Would'st have me kneel? first let me ask of these,

If they can brook I bow a knee to man.—
Sirrah, call in my sons to be my bail;

I know, ere they will have me go to ward,*
They'll pawn their swords for my enfranchisement.

Q. Mar. Call hither Clifford; bid him come again,

To say, if that the bastard boys of York
Shall be the surety for their traitor father.

York. O blood-bespotted Neapolitan,
Outcast of Naples, England's bloody scourge!
The sons of York, thy betters in their birth,
Shall be their father's bail; and bane to those
That for my surety will refuse the boys.

Enter EDWARD and RICHARD PLANTAGENET, with Forces, at one side; at the other, with Forces also, old CLIFFORD and his Son.

† Bear-keeper.

Sal. My lord, I have consider'd with myself
The title of this most renowned duke;

And in my conscience do repute his grace
The rightful heir to England's royal seat.

K. Hen. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me?

Sal. I have.

K. Hen. Canst thou dispense with heaven for such an oath?

Sal. It is great sin, to swear unto a sin;
But greater sin, to keep a sinful oath.

Who can be bound by any solemn vow
To do a murderous deed, to rob a man,

To force a spotless virgin's chastity,
To reave the orphan of his patrimony,

To wring the widow from her custom'd right;
And have no other reason for this wrong,

But that he was bound by a solemn oath?

Q. Mar. A subtle traitor needs no sophister.

K. Hen. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself.

York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou hast,

I am resolv'd for death, or dignity.

Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true.

War. You were best to go to bed, and dream
again,

To keep thee from the tempest of the field.

Clif. I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm,
Than any thou canst conjure up to-day;

And that I'll write upon thy burgonet,
Might I but know thee by thy household badge.

War. Now, by my father's badge, old Nevil's crest,

The rampant bear chain'd to the ragged staff,
This day I'll wear aloft my burgonet,*

(As on a mountain-top the cedar shows,
That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm,)

Even to affright thee with the view thereof.

Clif. And from thy burgonet I'll rend thy
bear,

And tread it under foot with all contempt, Despight the bear-ward that protects the

bear.

Y. Clif. And so to arms, victorious father,
To quell the rebels, and their 'complices.

Rich. Fie! charity, for shame! speak not in spite,

For you shall sup with Jesu Christ to-night.

Y. Clif. Foul stigmatic,† that's more than thou canst tell.

Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely sup in hell.

[Exeunt severally.]

SCENE II.—Saint Albans.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter WARWICK.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwick calls!

And if thou dost not hide thee from the bear,
Now,—when the angry trumpet sounds alarm,

And dead men's cries do fill the empty air,—
Clifford, I say, come forth and fight with me!

Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to arms.

Enter York.

How now, my noble lord? what, all a-foot?

York. The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steed;

* Helmet.

† One on whom nature has set a mark of deformity, a stigma.

But match to match I have encounter'd him,
And made a prey for carrion kites and crows
Even of the bonny beast he lov'd so well.

Enter CLIFFORD.

War. Of one or both of us the time is come.

York. Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some other chace,

For I myself must hunt this deer to death.

War. Then, nobly, York; 'tis for a crown thou fight'st.—

As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day,
It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd.

[Exit WARWICK.]

Clif. What seest thou in me, York? why doest thou pause?

York. With thy brave bearing should I be in love,

But that thou art so fast mine enemy.

Clif. Nor should thy prowess want praise and esteem,

But that 'tis shown ignobly and in treason.

York. So let it help me now against thy sword,

As I in justice and true right express it!

Clif. My soul and body on the action both!—

York. A dreadful lay!*—address thee instantly.

[They fight, and CLIFFORD falls.]

Clif. La fin couronne les oeuvres. [Dies.]

York. Thus war hath given thee peace, for thou art still.

Peace with his soul, heaven, if it be thy will!
[Exit.]

Enter young CLIFFORD.

Y. Clif. Shame and confusion! all is on the roust;

Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds
Where it should guard. O war, thou son of hell,

Whom angry heavens do make their minister,
Throw in the frozen bosoms of our part
Hot coals of vengeance!—Let no soldier fly:
He that is truly dedicate to war,
Hath no self-love; nor he, that loves himself,
Hath not essentially, but by circumstance,
The name of valour.—O, let the vile world end, [Seeing his dead Father.]

And the promised† flames of the last day
Knit earth and heaven together!
Now let the general trumpet blow his blast,
Particularities and petty sounds
To cease!‡—Wast thou ordain'd, dear father,
To lose thy youth in peace, and to achieve§
The silver livery of advised|| age;
And, in thy reverence, and thy chair-days,

thus
To die in ruffian battle?—Even at this sight,
My heart is turn'd to stone: and, while 'tis
mine,

It shall be stony. York not our old men spares;
No more will I their babes: tears virginal
Shall be to me even as the dew to fire;
And beauty, that the tyrant oft reclaims,
Shall to my flaming wrath be oil and flax.
Henceforth, I will not have to do with pity:
Meet I an infant of the house of York,
Into as many gobbets will I cut it,
As wild Medea young Absyrtus did:
In cruelty will I seek out my fame.

Come, thou new ruin of old Clifford's house;
[Taking up the body.]

As did Æneas old Anchises bear,
So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders;
But then Æneas bore a living load,
Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine.
[Exit.]

Enter RICHARD PLANTAGENET and SOMERSET, fighting, and SOMERSET is killed.

Rich. So, lie thou there;—

For, underneath an alehouse' paltry sign,
The Castle in Saint Albans, Somerset
Hath made the winard famous in his death.—
Sword, hold thy temper; heart, be wrathful still:

Priests pray for enemies, but princes kill.
[Exit.]

*Alarums: Excursions. Enter King HENRY,
Queen MARGARET, and others, retreating.*

Q. Mar. Away, my lord! you are slow; for shame, away!

K. Hen. Can we outrun the heavens? good
Margaret, stay.

Q. Mar. What are you made of? you'll not fight, nor fly:

Now is it manhood, wisdom, and defence,
To give the enemy way: and to secure us
By what we can, which can no more but fly.
[Alarums afar off.]

If you be ta'en, we then should see the bottom
Of all our fortunes: but if we haply scape,
(As well we may, if not through your neglect.)
We shall to London get; where you are lov'd;
And where this breach, now in our fortunes
made,
May readily be stopp'd.

Enter young CLIFFORD.

Y. Clif. But that my heart's on future mischief set,

I would speak blasphemy ere bid you fly;
But fly you must; incurable discomfit
Reigns in the hearts of all our present parts.*
Away, for your relief! and we will live
To see their day, and them our fortune give:
Away, my lord, away! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Fields near Saint Albans.

Alarum: Retreat. Flourish; then enter YORK, RICHARD PLANTAGENET, WARWICK, and Soldiers, with Drum and Colours.

York. Of Salisbury, who can report of him;
That winter lion, who, in rage forgets
Aged contusions and all brush of time;†
And, like a gallant in the brow of youth,‡
Repairs him with occasion? this happy day
Is not itself, nor have we won one foot,
If Salisbury be lost.

Rich. My noble father,
Three times to-day I help him to his horse,
Three times bestrid him, thrice I led him off,
Persuaded him from any further act:
But still, where danger was, still there I met
him;

And like rich hangings in a homely house,
So was his will in his old feeble body.
But, noble as he is, look where he comes.

* For parties.

† I. e. The gradual detrition of time.

Enter SALISBURY.

L. Now, by my sword, well hast thou fought to-day ; [Richard :
the mass, so did we all.—I thank you,
knows, how long it is I have to live ;
it hath pleas'd him, that three times to-day have defended me from imminent death.— lords, we have not got that which we have :
not enough our foes are this time fled,
g opposites of such repairing nature.†
a. We have not secured that which we have ac-
a. Being enemies that are likely as soon to rally and re themselves from this defeat.

York. I know, our safety is to follow them ;
For, as I hear, the king is fled to London,
To call a present court of parliament.
Let us pursue him, ere the writs go forth :—
What says lord Warwick ; shall we after them ?
War. After them ! nay, before them, if we can.
Now by my faith, lords, 'twas a glorious day :
Saint Albans' battle, won by famous York,
Shall be eterniz'd in all age to come.—
Sound, drums and trumpets ;—and to London
all :
And more such days as these to us befall !
[Exeunt.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London.—The Parliament-House.

Drums. Some Soldiers of YORK's party break in. Then, Enter the Duke of YORK, EDWARD, RICHARD, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and others, with White Roses in their Hats.

War. I wonder how the king escap'd our hands.

York. While we pursu'd the horsemen of the north,

He slily stole away, and left his men:
 Whereat the great lord of Northumberland,
 Whose warlike ears could never brook retreat,
 Cheer'd up the drooping army; and himself,
 Lord Clifford, and lord Stafford, all a-breast,
 Charg'd our main battle's front, and, breaking in,

Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.

Edw. Lord Stafford's father, duke of Buckingham,

Is either slain, or wounded dangerous:
 I cleft his beaver with a downright blow;
 That this is true, father, behold his blood.

[Showing his bloody Sword.]

Mont. And, brother, here's the earl of Wiltshire's blood, [To YORK, showing his.]
 Whom I encounter'd as the battles join'd.

Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them what I did.

[Throwing down the Duke of SOMERSET's Head.]

York. Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons.—[set!]

What, is your grace dead, my lord of Somerset? Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt!

Rich. Thus do I hope to shake king Henry's head.

War. And so do I.—Victorious prince of York,

Before I see thee seated in that throne
 Which now the house of Lancaster usurps,
 I vow by heaven, these eyes shall never close.
 This is the palace of the fearful king,
 And this the regal seat: possess it, York:
 For this is thine, and not king Henry's heir.

York. Assist me then, sweet Warwick, and I will;

For hither we have broken in by force.

Norf. We'll all assist you; he, that flies, shall die.

York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk,—Stay by me, my lords;—[night.]

And, soldiers, stay, and lodge by me this

War. And when the king comes, offer him no violence,

Unless he seek to thrust you out by force.

York. The queen, this day, here holds her parliament,
 But little thinks we shall be of her council:

By words, or blows, here let us win our right.

as we are, let's stay within this loody parliament shall this be

I send thee, Warwick, such a messenger,
As shall revenge his death, before I stir.

War. Poor Clifford! how I scorn his worthless threats!

York. Will you, we show our title to the crown?

If not, our swords shall plead it in the field.

K. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown?

Thy father was, as thou art, duke of York;
Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, earl of March:

I am the son of Henry the fifth,
Who made the Dauphin and the French to stoop,
And seiz'd upon their towns and provinces.

War. Talk not of France, sith* thou hast lost it all.

K. Hen. The lord protector lost it, and not I;
When I was crown'd, I was but nine months old.

Rich. You are old enough now, and yet, methinks, you lose:—

Father, tear the crown from the usurper's head.

Edw. Sweet father, do so; set it on your head.

Mont. Good brother, [To YORK.] as thou lov'st and honour'st arms,

Let's fight it out, and not stand cavilling thus.

Rich. Sound drums and trumpets, and the king will fly.

York. Sons, peace!

K. Hen. Peace thou! and give king Henry leave to speak.

War. Plantagenet shall speak first:—hear him, lords;

And be you silent and attentive too,
For he, that interrupts him, shall not live.

K. Hen. Think'st thou, that I will leave my kingly throne,

Wherein my grandsire, and my father, sat?

No: first shall war unpeople this my realm;

Ay, and their colours—often borne in France;

And now in England, to our heart's great sorrow,— [lords?

Shall be my winding sheet.—Why faint you,
My title's good, and better far than his.

War. But prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be king.

K. Hen. Henry the fourth by conquest got the crown.
York. 'Twas by rebellion against his king.
K. Hen. I know not what to say; my title's weak.
 Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir?
York. What then?
K. Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful king:
 For Richard, in the view of many lords,
 Resign'd the crown to Henry the fourth;
 Whose heir my father was, and I am his.
York. He rose against him, being his sovereign,
 And made him to resign his crown perforce.
War. Suppose, my lords, he did it unconstrain'd,
 Think you, 'twere prejudicial to his crown?
Exc. No; for he could not so resign his crown,
 But that the next heir should succeed and
K. Hen. Art thou against us, duke of Exeter?
Exc. He is the right, and therefore pardon me.
York. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer not?
Exc. My conscience tells me he is lawful king.
K. Hen. All will revolt from me, and turn to him.
North. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st,
 Think not, that Henry shall be so depos'd.
War. Depos'd he shall be, in despite of all.
North. Thou art deceiv'd: 'tis not thy southern power,
 Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent,—
 Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud,—
 Can set the duke up, in despite of me.
Clif. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong,
 Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence:
 May that ground gape, and swallow me alive,
 Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father!
K. Hen. O Clifford, how thy words revive my heart!
York. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy crown:—
 What matter you, or what conspire you, lords?
War. Do right unto this princely duke of York;
 Or I will fill the house with armed men,
 And, o'er the chair of state, where now he sits,
 Write up his title with usurping blood.
[He stamps, and the Soldiers show themselves.]
K. Hen. My lord of Warwick, hear me but one word;—
 Let me, for this my life-time, reign as king.
York. Confirm the crown to me, and to mine heirs,
 And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou liv'st.
K. Hen. I am content: Richard Plantagenet,
 Enjoy the kingdom after my decease.
Clif. What wrong is this unto the prince your son?
War. What good is this to England, and himself?
West. Base, fearful, and despairing Henry!
Clif. How hast thou injur'd both thyself and us?

Now now, sons and brother, at Warrel ? how began it first ?

* Peck.

Edw. No quarrel, but a slight contention.
Yerk. About what ?
Rick. About that which concerns your grace,
and us ;
The crown of England, father, which is yours.
Yerk. Mine, boy ? not till king Henry be dead.
Rick. Your right depends not on his life, or
death.
Edw. Now you are heir, therefore enjoy it now : [breathe,
By giving the house of Lancaster leave to
It will outrun you, father, in the end.
Yerk. I took an oath, that he should quietly reign.
Edw. But, for a kingdom, any oath may be broken :

I'd break a thousand oaths, to reign one year.

Rick. No ; God forbid, your grace should be forsworn.

Yerk. I shall be, if I claim by open war.

Rick. I'll prove the contrary, if you'll hear me speak.

Yerk. Thou canst not, son ; it is impossible.

Rick. An oath is of no moment, being not Before a true and lawful magistrate, [took
That hath authority over him that swears :
Henry had none, but did usurp the place ;
Then, seeing 'twas he that made you to depose,
Your oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous.
Therefore, to arms. And, father, do but think,
How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown ;
Within whose circuit is Elysium,
And all that poets feign of bliss and joy.
Why do we linger thus ? I cannot rest,
Until the white rose, that I wear, be dyed
Even in the lukewarm blood of Henry's heart.

Yerk. Richard, enough ; I will be king, or die.—

Brother, thou shalt to London presently,
And whet on Warwick to this enterprise.—
Thou, Richard, shalt unto the duke of Norfolk,
And tell him privily of our intent.—
You, Edward, shall unto my lord Cobham,
With whom the Kentishmen will willingly rise :
In them I trust ; for they are soldiers,
Witty* and courteous, liberal, full of spirit.—
While you are thus employ'd, what resteth
But that I seek occasion how to rise ; [more,
And yet the king not privy to my drift,
Nor any of the house of Lancaster ?

Enter a MESSENGER.

But, stay ; What news ? Why com'st thou in such post ?

Mess. The queen, with all the northern earls
and lords,

Intend here to besiege you in your castle :
She is hard by with twenty thousand men ;
And therefore fortify your hold, my lord.

Yerk. Ay, with my sword. What ! think'st thou, that we fear them ?—

Edward and Richard, you shall stay with me ;—
My brother Montague shall post to London :
Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the rest,
Whom we have left protectors of the king,
With powerful policy strengthen themselves,
And trust not simple Henry, nor his oaths.

Mont. Brother, I go ; I'll win them, fear it not :

And thus most humbly I do take my leave.
[Exit.

Enter Sir JOHN and Sir HUGH MORTIMER.

Yerk. Sir John, and Sir Hugh Mortimer, mine uncles !

* Of sound judgement.

You are come to Sandal in a happy hour;
The army of the queen mean to besiege us.

Sir John. She shall not need, we'll meet her in the field.

York. What, with five thousand men?

Rich. Ay, with five hundred, father, for a need.

A woman's general; What should we fear?

[A March afar off.]

Edic. I hear their drums; let's set our men in order;

And issue forth, and bid them battle straight.

York. Five men to twenty!—though the odds be great,

I doubt not, uncle, of our victory.

Many a battle have I won in France,

When as the enemy hath been ten to one;

Why should I not now have the like success?

Ah, tutor! look, where bloody Clifford comes!

Whose father slew my father,—he shall die.

Tut. And I, my lord, will bear him company.

Tut. Ah, Clifford! murder not this innocent

Lest thou be hated both of God and man.

That trembles under his devouring paws:

And so he walks, insulting o'er his prey;

And so he comes to rend his limbs asunder.—

Ah, gentle Clifford, kill me with thy sword,

And not with such a cruel threat'ning look.

Sweet Clifford, hear me speak before I die;—

I am too mean a subject for thy wrath,

Be thou reveng'd on men, and let me live.

Clif. In vain thou speak'st, poor boy; my fa-

Rut. Then let my father's blood open it

He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him.

Clif. Had I thy brethren here, their lives,

Were not revenge sufficient for me;

No, if I digg'd up thy forefather's graves,

And hung their rotten coffins up in chains,

It could not slake mine ire, nor ease my heart.

The sight of any of the house of York

Is as a fury to torment my soul;

And till I root out their accursed line,

And leave not one alive, I live in hell.

To thee I pray; Sweet Clifford, pity me!

Where are your mess of sons to back you now?

The wanton Edward, and the lusty George?

And where's that valiant crook-back prodigy,

SCENE I.—A plain near MORTIMER'S Cross in Herefordshire.

Had he been slain, we should have heard the Or, had he 'scaped, methinks we should have heard

The happy tidings of his good escape.— How fares my brother ? Why is he so sad ?

Rich. I cannot joy, until I be resolved Where our right valiant father is become. I saw him in the battle range about ; And watch'd him how he singled Clifford forth. Methought he bore† him in the thickest troop, As doth a lion in a herd of neat ;‡

Or as a bear, encompass'd round with dogs ; Who having pinch'd a few, and made them cry,

The rest stand all aloof, and bark at him.

So fared our father with his enemies ;

So fled his enemies my warlike father ;

Methinks, 'tis prize enough to be his son.

See, how the morning opens her golden gates,

And takes her farewell of the glorious sun !

How well resembles it the prime of youth,

Trimm'd like a youngker, prancing to his love !

Edw. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns ?

Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a perfect sun ;

Not separated with the racking clouds ;†

But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky.

See, see ! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss,

As if they vow'd some league inviolable :

Now are they but one lamp, one light, one sun.

In this the heaven figures some event.

Edw. 'Tis wondrous strange, the like yet never heard of.

I think, it cites us, brother, to the field ;

That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet,

Each one already blazing by our meeds,‡

Should, notwithstanding, join our lights together,

And over-shine the earth, as this the world.

Whate'er it bodes, henceforward will I bear

Upon my target three fair shining suns.

Rich. Nay, bear three daughters ;—By your leave I speak it,

You love the breeder better than the male.

Enter a MESSENGER.

But what art thou, whose heavy looks foretell Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue ?

Mess. Ah, one that was a woeful looker on, When as the noble duke of York was slain, Your princely father, and my loving lord.

Edw. O, speak no more ! for I have heard too much.

Rich. Say how he died, for I will hear it all.

Mess. Environed he was with many foes ; And stood against them, as the hope of Troy ; Against the Greeks, that would have enter'd Troy.

But Hercules himself must yield to odds ; And many strokes, though with a little axe, Hew down and fell the hardest-timber'd oak, By many hands your father was subdued ; But only slaughter'd by the ireful arm Of unrelenting Clifford, and the queen : Who crown'd the gracious duke, in high despight ;

Laugh'd in his face ; and when with grief he The ruthless queen gave him, to dry his cheeks, A napkin steeped in the harmless blood Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford slain :

And, after many scorns, many foul taunts, They took his head, and on the gates of York They set the same ; and there it doth remain, The saddest spectacle that e'er I view'd.

Edw. Sweet duke of York, our prop to lean upon ;

Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no stay !—

O Clifford, boist'rous Clifford, thou hast slain

The flower of Europe for his chivalry ;

And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd him,

For, hand to hand, he would have vanquish'd thee !—

Now my soul's palace is become a prison :

*King HENRY, Queen MARGARET, the Duke of WALES, CLIFFORD, and NORTHUM-

Mar. Welcome, my lord, to this brave
Town of York:—

Here's the head of that arch-enemy, Sought to be encompass'd with your
crown:

Is not the object cheer your heart, my lord?

Hen. Ay, as the rocks cheer them that Fear their wreck;—

Not this sight, it irks my very soul.—

Would revenge, dear God! 'tis not my fault,
Sittingly have I infringed my vow.

My gracious liege, this too much lenity
Harmful pity, must be laid aside.

How do lions cast their gentle looks?

On the beast that would usurp their den.

The hand is that the forest bear doth lick?

Is, that spoils her young before her face.

Escapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting?

He, that sets his foot upon her back.

The smallest worm will turn, being trodden on;

Doves will peck, in safeguard of their

Unconscious York did level at thy crown,

Smiling, while he knit his angry brows:

Not a duke, would have his son a king,

Or raise his issue, like a loving sire;

Not being a king, blessed with a goodly son,

Would yield consent to disinherit him,

But argued thee a most unloving father.

SCENE VI.—The same.

A loud Alarum.—Enter CLIFFORD, wounded.

Clif. Here burns my candle out, ay, here it
dies,

Which, while it lasted, gave king Henry light.
O, Lancaster! I fear thy overthrow,
More than my body's parting with my soul.

My love, and fear, glew'd many friends to
thee;

And, now I fall, thy tough commixtures melt.
Impairing Henry, strength'ning mis-proud
York,

The common people swarm like summer flies:
And whither fly the gnats, but to the sun?

And who shines now, but Henry's enemies?
O Phoebus! hadst thou never given consent
That Phaeton should check thy fiery steeds,
Thy burning car never had scorched the earth:
And, Henry, hadst thou sway'd as kings
should do,

Or as thy father, and his father, did,
Giving no ground unto the house of York,
They never then had sprung like summer flies;
I, and ten thousand in this luckless realm,
Had left no mourning widows for our death,
And thou this day hadst kept thy chair in
peace.

For what doth cherish weeds, but gentle air?

No way to fly, nor strength to hold out fight:
The foe is merciless, and will not pity;
For, at their hands, I have deserved no pity;
The air hath got into my deadly wounds,

Edw. Rootless is flight, they follow us with wings;
And weak we are, and cannot then prevail.

Enter RICHARD.

Rich. Ah, Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn thyself?
Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,
Branch'd with the steely point of Clifford's And, in the very pangs of death, he cried,—
Like to a dismal clangor heard from far,— Warwick, revenge! Brother, revenge my death!
So underneath the belly of their steeds,
That stain'd their skirts in his smoking blood,
The noble gentleman gave up the ghost.

War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood:

I'll kill my horse, because I will not fly.
Why stand we like soft hearted women here,
Waiting our losses, whiles the foe doth rage;
And look upon,* as if the tragedy
Were play'd in jest by countervailing actors!
Here on my knee I vow to God above,
I'll never pants again, never stand still,
Till either death hath closed these eyes of mine,
Or fortune given me measure of revenge.

Edw. O Warwick, I do bend my knee with thine;

And, in this vow, do chain my soul to thine.—
And ere my knee rise from the earth's cold face,

I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee
Thou setter up and plucker down of kings!
Beseeching thee,—if with thy will it stands,
That to my face this body must be pry,—
Yet that thy heaven gates of heaven may open,
And give sweet passage to my sinful soul!—
Now, lords, take leave until we meet again,
Where'er it be, in heaven, or on earth.

Rich. Brother, give me thy hand;—and gentle Warwick.

Let me embrace thee in my weary arms:—
I, that did never weep, now melt with woe,
That winter should out off our spring-time so.

War. Away, away! Once more, sweet lords, farewell.

Geo. Yet let us all together to our troops,
And give them leave to fly that will not stay;

SCENE V.—Another part of the Field.

Alarum.—Enter KING HENRY.

K. Hen. This battle fares like to the morning's war,

When dying clouds contend with growing light.

What time the shepherd, blowing of his tale,
Can neither call it perfect day, or night.

Now sways it this way, like a mighty sea,
Forced by the tide to combat with the wind.

Now sways it that way, like the self-same sea,
Forced to retire by fury of the wind.

Sometime, the flood prevails, and then, the wind,
Now, one the better, then, another best.

Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast,
Yet neither conqueror, nor conquered.

So is the equal power of the fell war.
Here on this molehill will I sit me down.

To whom God will, there be the victory!
For Margaret, my queen, and Clifford too,

Have chid me from the battle, swearing both
They prosper best of all when I am thence.

'Would I were dead! if God's good will were so:

For what is in this world, but grief and woe!
O God! methinks, it were a happy life,

To be no better than a homely swain;
To sit upon a hill, as I do now,

To carve out dike quaintly, point by point,
Thereby to see the minutes how they run:

How many make the hour full complete,
How many hours bring about the day,

How many days will finish up the year,
How many years a mortal man may live.

When this is known, then to divide the times:
So many hours must I tend my flock;

So many hours must I take my rest;
So many hours must I contemplate;

So many hours must I sport myself;
So many days my ewes have been with young;

So many weeks ere the poor fools will yearn;
So many years ere I shall shear the fleeces:

So minutes, hours, days, weeks, months, and years,
Pass'd over to the end they were created,

Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave.
Ah, what a life were this! How sweet! How lovely!

Gives not the hawthorn bush a sweeter shade

To shepherds, looking on their silly sheep,
Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy

To kings, that fear their subjects' treachery!
O, yes, it doth; a thousand fold it doth.

And to conclude,—The shepherd's homely curds,
His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle,

His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,
All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,

Is far beyond a prince's delicacies,
His viands sparkling in a golden cup,

His body couched in a curious bed,
When care, mistrust, and treason wait on

him.
Alarum.—Enter a Boy that has killed his Father, dragging in the dead Body.

Boy. Ill blows the wind, that profits no body.—

This man, whom hand in hand I slew in fight,
May be possessed with some store of crowns :
And I, that haply take them from him now,
May yet ere night, yield both my life and them
To some man else, as this dead man doth to me.—

Who's this?—O God! it is my father's face,
Whom in this conflict I unawares have kill'd.
O heavy times, begetting such events!
From London by the king was I press'd forth;
My father, being the earl of Warwick's man,
Came on the part of York, press'd by his master;

And I, who at his hands receiv'd my life,
Have by my hands of life bereaved him.—
Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did!—
And pardon, father, for I knew not thee!—
My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks;
And no more words till they have flow'd their fill.

K. Hen. O piteous spectacle! O bloody times!
Whilst lions war, and battle for their dens,
Poor harmless lambs abide their enmity.—
Weep, wretched man, I'll aid thee tear for tear:
And let our hearts, and eyes, like civil war,
Be blind with tears, and break o'ercharged with grief.

Enter a FATHER who hath killed his Son, with the Body in his Arms.

Fath. Thou that so stoutly had resisted me,
Give me thy gold, if thou hast any gold;
For I have bought it with a hundred blows.—
But let me see:—Is this our foeman's face?
Ah, no, no, no, it is mine only son!—
Ah, boy, if any life be left in thee,
Throw up thine eye; see, see, what showers arise,

Blown with the windy tempest of my heart,
Upon thy wounds, that kill mine eye and heart!—

O, pity, God, this miserable age!—
What stratagems,* how fell, how butcherly,
Erroneous, mutinous, and unnatural,
This deadly quarrel daily doth beget!—
O boy, thy father gave thee life too soon,
And hath bereft thee of thy life too late!

K. Hen. Woe above woe! Grief more than common grief! [deeds!—
O, that my death would stay these ruthless
O pity, pity, gentle heaven, pity;—
The red rose and the white are on his face,
The fatal colours of our striving houses:
The one his purple blood right well resembles;
The other, his pale cheek, methinks, present:

If you contend, a thousand lives must wither.

Son. How will my mother, for a father's death,

Take on with me and ne'er be satisfied!

Fath. How will my wife, for slaughter of my son,

Shed seas of tears, and ne'er be satisfied?

K. Hen. How will the country, for these woeful chances,

Misthink† the king, and not be satisfied?

Son. Was ever son, so rued a father's death?

Fath. Was ever father, so bemoan'd a son?

K. Hen. Was ever king, so grieved for subjects' woe?

Much is your sorrow; mine, ten times so much.

Son. I'll bear thee hence, where I may weep my fill. [Exit with the Body.

Glo. You shall have four, if you'll be rul'd by him.
[Aside.]
K. Edw. 'Twere pity, they should lose their father's land.
L. Grey. Be pitiful, dread lord, and grant it then.
K. Edw. Lords, give us leave; I'll try this widow's wit.

[GLOSTER and CLARENCE retire to the other side.]
K. Edw. Now tell me, madam, do you love your children?
L. Grey. Ay, full as dearly as I love myself.
K. Edw. And would you not do much to do them good?
L. Grey. To do them good, I would sustain some harm.
K. Edw. Then get your husband's land, to do them good.
L. Grey. Therefore I came unto your majesty.
K. Edw. I'll tell you how these lands are to be got.
L. Grey. So shall you bind me to your highness' service.
K. Edw. What service wilt thou do me, if I give them?
L. Grey. What you command, that rests in me to do.
K. Edw. But you will take exceptions to my boon.
L. Grey. No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it.
K. Edw. Ay, but thou canst do what I mean to ask.
L. Grey. Why, then I will do what your grace commands.
Glo. He plies her hard; and much rain wears the marble.
[Aside.]
Clar. As red as fire! Nay, then her wax must melt.
[Aside.]
L. Grey. Why stops my lord? Shall I not hear my task?
K. Edw. An easy task; 'tis but to love a king.
L. Grey. That's soon perform'd, because I am a subject.
K. Edw. Why then, thy husband's lands I freely give thee.
L. Grey. I take my leave, with many thousand thanks.
Glo. The match is made; she seals it with a curt'sy.
[Aside.]
K. Edw. But stay thee, 'tis the fruits of love I mean.
L. Grey. The fruits of love I mean, my loving liege.
K. Edw. Ay, but, I fear me, in another sense.
 What love, think'st thou, I sue so much to get?
L. Grey. My love till death, my humble thanks, my prayers;
 That love, which virtue begs, and virtue grants.
K. Edw. No, by my troth, I did not mean such love.
L. Grey. Why, then you mean not as I thought you did.
K. Edw. But now you partly may perceive my mind.

* This phrase implies readiness of assent.

L. Grey. My mind will never grant what I perceive
 Your highness aims at, if I aim aright.
K. Edw. To tell thee plain, I am to lie with thee.
L. Grey. To tell you plain, I had rather lie in prison.
K. Edw. Why, then thou shalt not have thy husband's lands.
L. Grey. Why, then mine honesty shall be my dower;
 For by that loss I will not purchase them.
K. Edw. Therein thou wrong'st thy children mightily.
L. Grey. Herein your highness wrongs both them and me.
 But, mighty lord, this merry inclination, Accords not with the sadness* of my suit;
 Please you dismiss me, either with ay, or no.
K. Edw. Ay; if thou wilt say ay, to my request:
 No; if thou dost say no, to my demand.
L. Grey. Then, no, my lord. My suit is at an end.
Glo. The widow likes him not, she knits her brows.
[Aside.]
Clar. He is the bluntest wooer in Christendom.
[Aside.]
K. Edw. [Aside.] Her looks do argue her replete with modesty;
 Her words do show her wit incomparable;
 All her perfections challenge sovereignty;
 One way, or other, she is for a king;
 And she shall be my love, or else my queen.—
 Say, that king Edward take thee for his queen!
L. Grey. 'Tis better said than done, my gracious lord:
 I am a subject fit to jest withal,
 But far unfit to be a sovereign.
K. Edw. Sweet widow, by my state, I swear to thee,
 I speak no more than what my soul intends:
 And that is to enjoy thee for my love.
L. Grey. And that is more than I will yield unto:
 I know, I am too mean to be your queen;
 And yet too good to be your concubine.
K. Edw. You cavil, widow; I did mean, my queen.
L. Grey. 'Twill grieve your grace, my sons should call you—father.
K. Edw. No more, than when thy daughters call thee mother.
 Thou art a widow, and thou hast some children;
[lor,
 And, by God's mother, I, being but a bachelor—
 Have other some: why, 'tis a happy thing
 To be the father unto many sons.
 Answer no more, for thou shalt be my queen.
Glo. The ghostly father now hath done his shrift.
[Aside.]
Clar. When he was made a shriver, 'twas for shift.
[Aside.]
K. Edw. Brothers, you muse what chat we two have had.
Glo. The widow likes it not, for she looks sad.
K. Edw. You'd think it strange, if I should marry her.
Clar. To whom, my lord?
K. Edw. Why, Clarence, to myself.
Glo. That would be ten days' wonder, at the least.
Clar. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.
Glo. By so much is the wonder in extremes.

But now mischance hath trod my title down,
And with dishonour laid me on the ground;
Where I must take like seat unto my fortune,
And to my humble seat conform myself.

K. Lew. Why, say, fair queen, whence springs this deep despair?

Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes with tears,

And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares.

K. Lew. Whate'er it be, be thou still like
thyself,

And sit thee by our side: yield not thy neck

To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind
Still ride in triumph over all mischance.

It shall be eas'd, if France can yield relief.

Or than for strength and safety of our country.

K. Lew. But, Warwick, thou,
And Oxford, with five thousand men,
Shall cross the seas, and bid false Edward battle:

And, as occasion serves, this noble queen
And prince shall follow with a fresh supply.

Yet, ere thou go, but answer me one doubt;—
What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty?

War. This shall assure my constant loyalty:—

That if our queen and this young prince agree,
I'll join mine eldest daughter, and my joy,
To him forthwith in holy wedlock bands.

Q. Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your motion:—

Son Edward, she is fair and virtuous, Therefore delay not, give thy hand to Warwick;

And, with thy hand, thy faith irrevocable,
That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine.

Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves it;

And here, to pledge my vow, I give my hand.
[He gives his hand to WARWICK.

K. Lew. Why stay we now? These soldiers

And thou, lord Bourbon, our high admiral,
Shall waft them over with our royal fleet.—

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—London.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter GLOSTER, CLARENCE, SOMERSET, MONTAGUE, and others.

O. Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you

his new marriage with the lady Grey?

Is not our brother made a worthy choice?

War. Alas, you know, 'tis far from hence to France;

How could he stay till Warwick made return?

O. My lords, forbear this talk; here comes the king.

Music. Enter King EDWARD, attended; Lady
 MARY, as Queen; PEMBROKE, STAFFORD,
 ARKING, and others.

O. And his well-chosen bride.

War. I mind to tell him plainly what I think.

Edw. Now brother of Clarence, how like you our choice,

you stand pensive, as half malecontent?

War. As well as Lewis of France, or the earl of Warwick;

Which are so weak of courage, and in judgment,
 they'll take no offence at our abuse.

Edw. Suppose, they take offence without a cause,

Which are but Lewis and Warwick; I am Edward king and Warwick's, and must have my will.

O. And you shall have your will, because our king:

hasty marriage seldom proveth well.

Edw. Yea, brother Richard, are you offended too?

O. Not I:

God forbid, that I should wish them separate. God hath join'd together: ay, and
 'twere pity,

to under them that yoke so well together.

Edw. Setting your scorns, and your mis-like aside,

Give me some reason, why the lady Grey should not become my wife, and England's queen:—

Why you too, Somerset, and Montague, speak freely what you think.

War. Then this is my opinion,—that king
 Lewis

loves your enemy, for mocking him at the marriage of the lady Bona.

O. And Warwick, doing what you gave in charge,

is now dishonoured by this new marriage.

Edw. What, if both Lewis and Warwick be appeas'd,

such invention as I can devise?

Warwick;

And welcome, Somerset:—I hold it cowardice,

brother,

Why, then, let's on our way in silent sort:

For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint

George! [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Edward's Camp, near Warwick.

Enter certain WATCHMEN, to guard the King's Tent.

1 Watch. Come on, my masters, each man take his stand;

The king, by this, is set him down to sleep.

2 Watch. What, will he not to-bed?

1 Watch. Why, no: for he hath made a solemn vow

Never to lie and take his natural rest,

Till Warwick, or himself, be quite suppress'd.

2 Watch. To-morrow then, belike, shall be the day,

If Warwick be so near as men report.

3 Watch. But say, I pray, what nobleman is that,

That with the king here resteth in his tent?

1 Watch. 'Tis the lord Hastings, the king's chiefest friend.

† Thrown off.

2 Watch. O, is it so? But why commands the king, [him, That his chief followers lodge in towns about While he himself keepeth in the cold field?

2 Watch. 'Tis the more honour, because more dangerous.

2 Watch. Ay; but give me worship and quietness, I like it better than a dangerous honour. If Warwick knew in what estate he stands, 'Tis to be doubted, he would waken him.

1 Watch. Unless our halberds did shut up his passage.

2 Watch. Ay; wherefore else guard we his royal tent, But to defend his person from night-foes?

Enter WARWICK, CLARENCE, OXFORD, SOMERSET, and Forces.

War. This is his tent; and see, where stand his guard. Courage, my masters: honour now, or never! But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.

1 Watch. Who goes there?

2 Watch. Stay, or thou diest.

The Drum beating, and Trumpets sounding, Re-enter WARWICK, and the rest, bringing the King out in a Gown, sitting in a Chair; GLOSTER and HASTINGS fly.

Som. What are they that fly there?

War. Richard, and Hastings: let them go, here's the duke.

K. Edw. The duke! why, Warwick, when we parted last, Thou call'dst me king?

War. Ay, but the case is alter'd: When you disgrac'd me in my embassy, Then I degraded you from being king, And come now to create you duke of York. Alas! how should you govern any kingdom, That know not how to use ambassadors; Nor how to be contented with one wife; Nor how to use your brothers brotherly, Nor how to study for the people's welfare; Nor how to shroud yourself from enemies?

K. Edw. Yea, brother of Clarence, art thou here too? [down.—

Nay, then I see, that Edward needs must Yet, Warwick, in despite of all mischance, Of thee thyself, and all thy complices, Edward will always bear himself as king: Though fortune's malice overthrow my state, My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel.

War. Then, for his mind,* be Edward England's king: [Takes off his Crown.

But Henry now shall wear the English crown, And be true king indeed; thou but the shadow.—

My lord of Somerset, at my request, See that forthwith duke Edward be convey'd Unto my brother, archbishop of York. When I have fought with Pembroke and his fellows,

I'll follow you, and tell what answer Lewis, and the lady Bona, send to him:— Now, for a while, farewell, good duke of York.

K. Edw. What fates impose, that men must needs abide;

* Z. c. In his mind; as far as his own mind goes.

It boots not to resist both wind and tide.

[Exit King EDWARD, led out; Somerset with him.

Oxf. What now remains, my lords, for us to do,

But march to London with our soldiers?

War. Ay, that's the first thing that we have to do;

To free king Henry from imprisonment, And see him seated in the regal throne.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—London.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter Queen ELIZABETH and Rivers.

Riv. Madam, what makes you in this sudden change?

Q. Eliz. Why, brother Rivers, are you yet to learn,

What late misfortune is befall'n king Edward?

Riv. What, loss of some pitch'd battle against Warwick?

Q. Eliz. No, but the loss of his own royal person.

Riv. Then is my sovereign slain?

Q. Eliz. Ay, almost slain, for he is taken prisoner;

Either betray'd by falsehood of his guard, Or by his foe surpris'd at unawares: And, as I further have to understand, Is now committed to the bishop of York, Fell Warwick's brother, and by that our foe.

Riv. These news, I must confess, are full of grief:

Yet, gracious madam, bear it as you may; Warwick may lose, that now hath won the day.

Q. Eliz. Till then, fair hope must hinder life's decay.

And I the rather wean me from despair, For love of Edward's offspring in my womb: This is it that makes me bridle passion, And bear with mildness my misfortune's cross. Ay, ay, for this I draw in many a tear, And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighs. Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown King Edward's fruit, true heir to the English crown.

Riv. But, madam, where is Warwick then become?

Q. Eliz. I am informed, that he comes towards London,

To set the crown once more on Henry's head: Guess thou the rest, king Edward's friends must down.

But, to prevent the tyrant's violence, (For trust not him that hath once broken faith.) I'll hence forthwith unto the sanctuary, To save at least the heir of Edward's right: There shall I rest secure from force, and fraud. Come therefore, let us fly, while we may fly; If Warwick take us, we are sure to die.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Park near Middleham Castle in Yorkshire.

Enter GLOSTER, HASTINGS, Sir WILLIAM STANLEY, and others.

Glo. Now, my lord Hastings, and Sir William Stanley,

Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither, Into this chiefest thicket of the park. Thus stands the case: You know, our king my brother,

Is prisoner to the bishop here, at whose hands with good usage and great liberty;

often, but attended with weak guard,
as hunting this way to disport himself.
He advertis'd him by secret means,
Of about this hour, he make this way,
In the colour of his usual game,
Shall here find his friends, with horse and
men,
Set him free from his captivity.

Enter King EDWARD, and a HUNTMAN.

Edw. This way, my lord; for this way lies the game.

Edw. Nay, this way, man; see, where the huntmen stand.—

Brother of Gloster, lord Hastings, and the rest,

if you thus close, to steal the bishop's deer?

Brother, the time and case requireth
haste;

My horse stands ready at the park corner.

Edw. But whither shall we then?

Edw. To Lynn, my lord; and ship from thence to Flanders.

Edw. Well guess'd, believe me; for that was my meaning.

Edw. Stanley, I will requite thy forwardness.

Edw. But wherefore stay we? 'tis no time to talk.

Edw. Huntsman, what say'st thou? wilt thou go along?

Edw. Better do so, than tarry and be hang'd.

Edw. Come then, away; let's have no more ado.

Edw. Bishop, farewell: shield thee from Warwick's frown;

I pray that I may repossess the crown.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—A Room in the Tower.

Enter King HENRY, CLARENCE, WARWICK,
SOMERSET, young RICHMOND, OXFORD, MON-MOUTH, LIEUTENANT of the Tower, and Attendants.

Hen. Master lieutenant, now that God and friends

Shaken Edward from the regal seat;

Turn'd my captive state to liberty,

Turn to hope, my sorrows unto joys;

What enlargement what are thy due fees?

Subjects may challenge nothing of their sovereigns;

If an humble prayer may prevail,

Crave pardon of your majesty.

Hen. For what, lieutenant? for well using
me?

Edw. Be thou sure, I'll well requite thy kindness,

That it made my imprisonment a pleasure:

Such a pleasure as incaged birds

Give, when, after many moody thoughts,

By notes of household harmony,

Quite forget their loss of liberty:—

Warwick, after God, thou set'st me free,
Wholly therefore I thank God, and thee;

—the author, thou the instrument.

Edw. That I may conquer fortune's spite,
Low, where fortune cannot hurt me;

Let the people of this blessed land

Be punish'd with my thwarting stars;

Edw. Although my head still wear the crown,

Be resign my government to thee,

Thou art fortunate in all thy deeds.

Edw. Your grace hath still been fam'd for virtuous;

And now may seem as wise as virtuous,
By spying, and avoiding, fortune's malice,
For few men rightly temper with the stars:†
Yet in this one thing let me blame your grace.
For choosing me, when Clarence is in place.‡

Clar. No, Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway,

To whom the heavens, in thy nativity,
Adjung'd an olive branch, and laurel crown,
As likely to be blessed in peace, and war;
And therefore I yield thee my free consent.

War. And I choose Clarence only for protector.

K. Hen. Warwick and Clarence, give me
both your hands;

Now join your hands, and, with your hands,
your hearts,

That no dissention hinder government:

I make you both protectors of this land;

While I myself will lead a private life,

And in devotion spend my latter days,

To sin's rebuke, and my Creator's praise.

War. What answers Clarence to his sovereign's will?

Clar. That he consents, if Warwick yield consent;

For on thy fortune I repose myself.

War. Why then, though loath, yet must I be content:

We'll yoke together, like a double shadow

To Henry's body, and supply his place;

I mean, in bearing weight of government,

While he enjoys the honour, and his ease.

And, Clarence, now then it is more than needful,

Forthwith that Edward be pronounc'd a traitor,
And all his lands and goods be confiscate.

Clar. What else? and that succession be determin'd.

War. Ay, therein Clarence shall not want his part.

K. Hen. But, with the first of all your chief affairs,

Let me entreat, (for I command no more,)‡
That Margaret your queen, and my son Edward,

Be sent for, to return from France with speed:

For, till I see them here, by doubtful fear

My joy of liberty is half eclips'd.

Clar. It shall be done, my sovereign, with all speed.

K. Hen. My lord of Somerset, what youth is that,

Of whom you seem to have so tender care?

Som. My liege, it is young Henry; earl of Richmond.

K. Hen. Come hither, England's hope: If

His hand to wield a sceptre; and himself

Likely, in time, to bless a regal throne.

Make much of him, my lords; for this is he,

Must help you more than you are hurt by me.

War. What news, my friend?

brother,

And fled, as he hears since, to Burgundy.

SCENE VIII.—London.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter King HENRY, WARWICK, CLARENCE, MONTAGUE, EXETER, and OXFORD.

War. What counsel, lords? Edward from Belgia,

With hasty Germans, and blunt Hollanders,

Hath pass'd in safety through the narrow seas,

And with his troops doth march amain to London;

And many giddy people flock to him.

Oxf. Let's levy men, and beat him back
again.

Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out;

Which, being suffer'd, rivers cannot quench.

War. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted
friends,

Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in war;

Those will I muster up:—and thou, son Clarence,

Shalt stir, in Suffolk, Norfolk, and in Kent,

The knights and gentlemen to come with
thee:—

Thou, brother Montague, in Buckingham,

Northampton, and in Leicestershire, shalt find

Men well inclin'd to hear what thou command'st:—

[lov'd,

And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well be-

In Oxfordshire shall muster up thy friends.—

My sovereign, with the loving citizens,—

Like to his island, girt in with the ocean,

Or modest Dian, circled with her nymphs,—

Shall rest in London, till we come to him.—

Fair lords, take leave, and stand not to reply.—

Farewell, my sovereign.

K. Hen. Farewell, my Hector, and my Troy's true hope.

Clar. In sign of truth, I kiss your highness'
hand.

K. Hen. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate!

Mont. Comfort, my lord;—and so I take my leave.

Oxf. And thus [Kissing HENRY'S hand.] I seal my truth, and bid adieu.

K. Hen. Sweet Oxford, and my loving Montague,

And all at once, once more a happy farewell.

War. Farewell, sweet lords; let's meet at Coventry.

[Exeunt WAR. CLAR. OXF. and MONT.

K. Hen. Here at the palace will I rest a while.

* Know.

Cousin of Exeter, what thinks your lordship?
Methinks, the power, that Edward hath in field,
Should not be able to encounter mine.

Exe. The doubt is, that he will seduce the rest.

K. Hen. That's not my fear, my meed* hath got me fame.

I have not stopp'd mine ears to their demands,

Nor posted off their suits with slow delays;

My pity hath been balm to heal their wounds,

My mildness hath allay'd their swelling griefs,

My mercy dry'd their water-flowing tears:

I have not been desirous of their wealth,

Nor much oppress'd them with great subsidies,

Nor forward of revenge, though they much err'd; [me?

Then why should they love Edward more than

No, Exeter, these graces challenge grace:

And, when the lion fawns upon the lamb,

The lamb will never cease to follow him.

[Shout within. A Lancaster! A Lancaster!

Exe. Hark, hark, my lord! what shouts are these?

Enter King EDWARD, GLOSTER, and Soldiers.

K. Edw. Seize on the shame-fac'd Henry,
bear him hence,

And once again proclaim us king of England.

You are the fount, that makes small brooks to flow; [dry,

Now stops thy spring; my sea shall suck them

And swell so much the higher by their ebb.—

Hence with him to the Tower; let him not speak.

[Exeunt some with King HENRY.

And, lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,

Where peremptory Warwick now remains:

The sun shines hot, and, if we use delay,

Cold biting winter mars our hop'd-for hay.*

Glo. Away betimes, before his forces join,

And take the great-grown traitor unawares:

Brave warriors, march amain towards Coven-try. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Coventry.

Enter, upon the Walls, WARWICK, the Mayor of Coventry, two MESSENGERS, and others.

War. Where is the post, that came from valiant Oxford?

How far hence is thy lord, mine honest fellow?

1 Mess. By this at Dunsmore, marching hitherward.

War. How far off is our brother Montague?—

Where is the post that came from Montague?

2 Mess. By this at Daintry, with a puissant troop.

Enter Sir JOHN SOMERVILLE.

War. Say, Somerville, what says my loving
son?

And, by the guess, how nigh is Clarence now?

Som. At Southam I did leave him with his forces,

And do expect him here some two hours hence.
[Drum heard.

War. Then Clarence is at hand, I hear his drum.

Som. It is not his, my lord; here Southam lies; [Warwick.

The drum your honour hears, marcheth from

* Merit.

† The allusion is to the proverb, "Make hay while the sun shines."

War. Who should that be? belike, unlook'd-for friends.

Sam. They are at hand, and you shall quickly know.

Drums. Enter King EDWARD, GLOSTER, and Forces, marching.

K. Edw. Go, trumpet, to the walls, and sound a parle.

Glo. See, how the surly Warwick mans the wall.

War. O, unbid spite! is sportful Edward come? [duc'd,

Where slept our scouts, or how are they set? That we could hear no news of his repair?

K. Edw. Now, Warwick, wilt thou ope the city gates, [knee?—

Speak gentle words, and humbly bend thy Call Edward—king, and at his hands beg mercy,

And he shall pardon thee these outrages.

War. Nay, rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence, [down?—

Confess who set thee up and pluck'd thee Call Warwick—patron, and be penitent, And thou shalt still remain the duke of York.

Glo. I thought, at least, he would have said—the king;

Or did he make the jest against his will?

War. Is not a dukedom, Sir, a goodly gift?

Glo. Ay, by my faith, for a poor earl to give? I'll do thee service for so good a gift.*

War. 'Twas I, that gave the kingdom to thy brother.

K. Edw. Why, then 'tis mine, if but by Warwick's gift.

War. Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight:

And, weakling, Warwick takes his gift again; And Henry is my king, Warwick his subject.

K. Edw. But Warwick's king is Edward's prisoner:

And, gallant Warwick, do but answer this,—What is the body, when the head is off?

Glo. Alas, that Warwick had no more forecast,

But, whiles he thought to steal the single ten, The king was slyly finger'd from the deck!†

You left poor Henry at the bishop's palace, And, ten to one, you'll meet him in the Tower.

K. Edw. 'Tis even so; yet you are Warwick still.

Glo. Come, Warwick, take the time, kneel down, kneel down:

Nay, when? strike now, or else the iron cools.

War. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow,

And with the other fling it at thy face,

Than bear so low a sail, to strike to thee.

K. Edw. Sail how thou canst, have wind and tide thy friend; [hair,

This hand, fast wound about thy coal-black Shall, whiles the head is warm, and new cut off, blood,—

Write in the dust this sentence with thy Wind-changing Warwick now can change no more.

Enter OXFORD, with Drum and Colours.

War. O cheerful colours! see, where Oxford comes!

Oxf. Oxford, Oxford, for Lancaster!

[OXFORD and his Forces enter the City.

Glo. The gates are open, let us enter too.

K. Edw. So other foes may set upon our backs,

Stand we in good array; for they, no doubt, Will issue out again, and bid us battle:

If not, the city, being but of small defence, We'll quickly rouse the traitors in the same.

War. O, welcome, Oxford! for we want thy help.

Enter MONTAGUE, with Drum and Colours.

Mont. Montague, Montague, for Lancaster! [He and his Forces enter the City.

Glo. Thou and thy brother both shall buy this treason

Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear.

K. Edw. The harder match'd, the greater victory;

My mind presageth happy gain, and conquest.

Enter SOMERSET, with Drum and Colours.

Sam. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster!

[He and his Forces enter the City.

Glo. Two of thy name, both dukes of Somerset,

Have sold their lives unto the house of York; And thou shalt be the third, if this shall hold.

Enter CLARENCE, with Drum and Colours.

War. And lo, where George of Clarence sweeps along,

Of force enough to bid his brother battle; With whom an upright zeal to right prevail,

More than the nature of a brother's love:—Come, Clarence, come; thou wilt, if Warwick calls.

Clar. Father of Warwick, know you what this means;

[Taking the red Rose out of his Cap.

Look here, I throw my infamy at thee: I will not rinate my father's house, [gather,

Who gave his blood to lime* the stones to—And set up Lancaster, Why, throw'st thou, Warwick,

That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt,† unnatural, To bend the fatal instruments of war

To keep that oath, were more impiety [tr. Than Jephtha's, when he sacrific'd his daughter

I am so sorry for my trespass made, That, to deserve well at my brother's hands,

I here proclaim myself thy mortal foe; With resolution, whereso'er I meet thee,

(As I will meet thee, if thou stir abroad,) To plague thee for thy foul misleading me.

And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defy thee, And to my brother turn my blushing cheeks—

Pardon me, Edward, I will make amends; And, Richard, do not frown upon my fault,

For I will henceforth be no more unconstant.

K. Edw. Now welcome more, and ten times more belov'd,

Than if thou never hadst deserv'd our hate.

Glo. Welcome, good Clarence; this is brother-like.

War. O passing traitor, perjur'd, and unjust!

K. Edw. What, Warwick, wilt thou leave the town, and fight?

Or shall we beat the stones about thine ears?

You all farewell, to meet again in heaven.

Oxf. Away, away, to meet the queen's great power!
[Exeunt, bearing off WARWICK's Body.

SCENE III.—Another part of the Field.

Flourish.—Enter King EDWARD in triumph; with CLARENCE, GLOSTER, and the rest.

K. Edw. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course,
And we are grac'd with wreaths of victory.
But, in the midst of this bright-shining day,
I spy a black, suspicious, threat'ning cloud,
That will encounter with our glorious sun,
Ere he attain his easeful western bed:
I mean, my lords,—those powers, that the queen

Hath rais'd in Gallia, have arriv'd our coast,
And, as we hear, march on to fight with us.
Clar. A little gale will soon disperse that cloud,
And blow it to the source from whence it came:
Thy very beams will dry those vapours up;
For every cloud engenders not a storm.

Glo. The queen is valu'd thirty thousand strong,
And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her;
If she have time to breathe, be well assur'd,
Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

K. Edw. We are advertis'd by our loving friends, [bury;
That they do hold their course toward Tewke-
We having now the beat at Barnet field,
Will thither straight, For willingness rids way;
And, as we march, our strength will be augmented,
In every county as we go along.—
Strike up the drum; cry—Courage! and away.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Plains near Tewksbury.

March.—Enter Queen MARGARET, Prince ED-WARD, SOMERSET, OXFORD, and Soldiers.

Q. Mar. Great lords, wise men ne'er sit and wail their loss,
But cheerly seek how to redress their harms.
What though the mast be now blown overboard,
The cable broke, the holding anchor lost,
And half our sailors swallow'd in the flood?
Yet lives our pilot still: Is't meet, that he Should leave the helm, and, like a fearful lad,
With tearful eyes add water to the sea.
And give more strength to that which hath too
much;

Whiles, in his moan, the ship splits on the rock,
Which industry and courage might have sav'd?
Ah, what a shame! ah, what a fault were this?
Say, Warwick was our anchor; What of that?
And Montague our top-mast; What of him?
Our slaughter'd friends the tackles; What of these?

Why, is not Oxford here another anchor?
And Somerset another goodly mast; [lings?
The friends of France our shrouds and tack-
And, though unskilful, why not Ned and I
For once allow'd the skilful pilot's charge?
We will not from the helm, to sit and weep;

But keep our course, though the rough wind say—no, [wreck.
From shelves and rocks that threaten us with
As good to chide the waves, as speak them fair.

And what is Edward, but a ruthless sea?
What Clarence, but a quicksand of deceit?
And Richard, but a ragged fatal rock?
All these the enemies to our poor bark.
Say, you can swim; alas, 'tis but a while:
Tread on the sand; why, there you quickly sink:

Bestride the rock; the tide will wash you off,
Or else you famish, that's a threefold death.
This speak I, lords, to let you understand,
In case some one of you would fly from us,
That there's no hop'd-for mercy with the brothers,
More than with ruthless waves, with sands,
and rocks.

Why, courage, then! what cannot be avoided,
'Twere childish weakness to lament, or fear.

Prince. Methinks, a woman of this valiant spirit

Should, if a coward heard her speak these Infuse his breast with magnanimity,
And make him, naked, foil a man at arms,
I speak not this, as doubting any here:
For, did I but suspect a fearful man,
He should have leave to go away betimes;
Lest, in our need, he might infect another,
And make him of like spirit to himself.
If any such be here, as God forbid!
Let him depart, before we need his help.

Oxf. Women and children of so high a courage! [shame.—
And warriors faint! why, 'twere perpetual O, brave young prince! thy famous grandfather

Doth live again in thee; Long may'st thou
To bear his image, and renew his glories!

Som. And he, that will not fight for such a hope,
Go home to bed, and, like the owl by day,
If he arise, be mock'd and wonder'd at.

Q. Mar. Thanks, gentle Somerset;—sweet
Oxford, thanks.

Prince. And take his thanks, that yet hath nothing else.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Prepare you, lords, for Edward is at
hand,
Ready to fight; therefore be resolute.

Oxf. I thought no less: it is his policy,
To haste thus fast, to find us unprovided.

Som. But he's deceiv'd, we are in readiness.

Q. Mar. This cheers my heart, to see your forwardness.

Oxf. Here pitch our battle, hence we will not budge.

March. *Enter at a distance, King EDWARD,
CLARENCE, GLOSTER, and Forces.*

K. Edw. Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny wood,
Which, by the heavens' assistance, and your
strength,

Must by the roots be hewn up yet ere night.
I need not add more fuel to your fire,
For well I wot,* ye blaze to burn them out:
Give signal to the fight, and to it, lords.

Q. Mar. Lords, knights, and gentlemen,
what, I should say,
My tears gainsay;† for every word I speak,

Ye see, I drink the water of mine eyes.

Therefore, no more but this:—Henry, your sovereign,
Is prisoner to the foe; his state usurp'd,
His realm a slaughterhouse, his subjects slain,
His statutes cancell'd, and his treasure spent;
And yonder is the wolf, that makes this spoil.
You fight in justice: then, in God's name,
lords,

Be valiant, and give signal to the fight.
[Exeunt both Armies.

SCENE V.—Another part of the same.

*Alarums: Excursions: and afterwards a Retreat.
Then Enter King EDWARD, CLARENCE, GLOSTER, and Forces; with Queen MARGARET,
OXFORD, and SOMERSET, Prisoners.*

K. Edw. Now, here a period of tumultuous broils.

Away with Oxford to Hammes' castle* straight:
For Somerset, off with his guilty head.

Go, bear them hence; I will not hear them
speak.

Oxf. For my part, I will not trouble thee with words.

Som. Nor I, but stoop with patience to my fortune.

[Exeunt OXFORD and SOMERSET, guarded.

Q. Mar. So part we sadly in this troublous
world,

To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem.

K. Edw. Is proclamation made,—that, who finds Edward,

Shall have a high reward, and he his life?

Glo. It is: and, lo, where youthful Edward comes.

Enter Soldiers, with Prince EDWARD.

K. Edw. B'ring forth the gallant, let us hear him speak:

What! can so young a thorn begin to prick?
Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make.
For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects,
And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to?

Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York!

Suppose, that I am now my father's mouth;
Resign thy chair, and, where I stand, kneel
thou,

Whilst I propose the self-same words to thee.
Which, traitor, thou wouldst have me answer
to.

Q. Mar. Ah, that thy father had been so resolv'd!

Glo. That you might still have worn the petticoat,

And ne'er have stol'n the breech from Lancaster.

Prince. Let Æsop's fable in a winter's night;
His curish riddles sort not with this place.

Glo. By heaven, brat, I'll plague you for that word.

Q. Mar. Ay, thou wast born to be a plague to men.

Glo. For God's sake, take away this captive scold.

Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crook-back rather.

K. Edw. Peace, wilful boy, or I will charm
your tongue.

Clar. Untutor'd lad, thou art too malapert.

* A castle in Picardy.

deprived of speech by enchantment.

† Unsay, deny.

Prince. I know my duty, you are all undutiful: [George,— Lascivious Edward,—and thou perjur'd

And thou misshapen Dick,—I tell you all,
I am your better, traitors as ye are;—
And thou usurp'st my father's right and mine.

K. Edw. Take that, the likeness of this railer here. [Stabs him.

Glo. Sprawl'st thou? take that, to end thy agony. [GLO. stabs him.

Clar. And there's for twitting me with perjury. [CLAR. stabs him.

Q. Mar. O, kill me too!

Glo. Marry, and shall. [Offers to kill her.

K. Edw. Hold, Richard, hold, for we have done too much.

Glo. Why should she live, to fill the world with words?*

K. Edw. What! doth she swoon? use means for her recovery.

Glo. Clarence, excuse me to the king my brother;

I'll hence to London on a serious matter:

Ere ye come there, be sure to hear some news.

Clar. What? what?

Glo. The Tower, the Tower! [Exit.

Q. Mar. O, Ned, sweet Ned! speak to thy mother, boy! [derers!—

Canst thou not speak?—O traitors! murderers, that stabb'd Cæsar, shed no blood at all, Did not offend, nor were not worthy blame, If this foul deed were by, to equal it.

He was a man; this, in respect, a child; And men ne'er spend their fury on a child. [it? What's worse than murderer, that I may name

No, no; my heart will burst, an if I speak:— And I will speak, that so my heart may burst.

Butchers and villains, bloody cannibals! How sweet a plant have you untimely cropp'd!

You have no children, butchers! if you had, The thought of them would have stirr'd up remorse:

But, if you ever chance to have a child, Look in his youth to have him so cut off,

As, deathsmen! you have rid this sweet young prince!

K. Edw. Away with her; go, bear her hence perforce.

Q. Mar. Nay, never bear me hence, despatch me here; [death:

Here sheath thy sword, I'll pardon thee my What! wilt thou not?—then, Clarence, do it thou.

Clar. By heaven, I will not do thee so much ease.

Q. Mar. Good Clarence, do; sweet Clarence, do thou do it.

Q. Mar. So come to you, and yours, as to this prince! [Exit, led out forcibly.

K. Edw. Where's Richard gone?

Clar. To London, all in post; and, as I guess, To make a bloody supper in the Tower.

K. Edw. He's sudden, if a thing comes in his head.

* Dispute, contention.

† She alludes to the desertion of Clarence

Now march we hence: discharge the common sort [don,

With pay and thanks, and let's away to London, And see our gentle queen how well she fares;

By this, I hope, she hath a son for me. [Exit.

SCENE VI.—London.—A Room in the Tower.

King HENRY is discovered sitting with a Book in his Hand, the Lieutenant attending. Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Good day, my lord! What, at your book so hard?

K. Hen. Ay, my good lord: My lord, I should say rather;

'Tis sin to flatter, good was little better: Good Gloster, and good devil, were alike,

And both preposterous; therefore, not good lord.

Glo. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves: we must confer. [Exit Lieutenant.

K. Hen. So flies the reckless* shepherd from the wolf:

So first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece, And next his throat unto the butcher's knife.—

What scene of death hath Roscius now to act?

Glo. Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind;

The thief doth fear each bush an officer.

But wherefore dost thou come? is't for my life?

Glo. Think'st thou, I am an executioner?

K. Hen. A persecutor, I am sure, thou art; If murdering innocents be executing,

Why, then thou art an executioner.

Glo. Thy son I kill'd for his presumption.

K. Hen. Hadst thou been kill'd, when first thou didst presume,

Thou hadst not liv'd to kill a son of mine. And thus I prophesy,—that many a thousand,

Which now mistrust no parcel§ of my fear; And many an old man's sigh, and many a widow's,

And many an orphan's water-standing eye,— Men for their sons, wives for their husbands' fate,

And orphans for their parents' timeless death,— Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born.

The owl shriek'd at thy birth, an evil sign; The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time;

speech; [Stabs him.

K. Hen. Ay, and for much more slaughter after this.

O God! forgive my sins, and pardon thee! [Dies.

I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear.—
Indeed, 'tis true, that Henry told me of;
For I have often heard my mother say,
I came into the world with my legs forward:
Had I not reason, think ye, to make haste,
And seek their ruin that usurp'd our right?
The midwife wonder'd; and the women cried,
O, Jesus bless us, he is born with teeth!
And so I was; which plainly signified—
That I should snarl, and bite, and play the dog. [so,

Then since the heavens have shap'd my body
Let hell make crook'd my mind to answer it.

And not in me; I am myself alone.— [light;

But I will sort* a pitchy day for thee:
For I will buzz abroad such prophecies,
That Edward shall be fearful of his life;
And then, to purge his fear, I'll be thy death.
King Henry, and the prince his son, are gone:
Clarence, thy turn is next, and then the rest;
Counting myself but bad, till I be best.—
I'll throw thy body in another room,
And triumph, Henry, in thy day of doom.

[Exit.

SCENE VII.—The same.—A Room in the Palace.

King EDWARD is discovered sitting on his Throne; Queen ELIZABETH with the infant Prince, CLARENCE, GLOSTER, HASTINGS, and others, near him.

K. Edw. Once more we sit in England's royal throne,

* Select.

Re-purchas'd with the blood of enemies.
What valiant foe-men, like to autumn's corn,
Have we mow'd down, in tops of all their pride!

Three dukes of Somerset, threefold renown'd
For hardy and undoubted champions:
Two Cliffords, as the father and the son,
And two Northumberlands; two braver men
Ne'er spur'd their coursers at the trumpet's sound:

With them, the two brave bears, Warwick
and Montague,

That in their chains fetter'd the kingly lion,
And made the forest tremble when they roar'd.
Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat,
And made our footstool of security,—

Come hither, Bess, and let me kiss my boy:—
Young Ned, for thee, thine uncles, and myself, [night;

Have in our armour watch'd the winter's
Went all a foot in summer's scalding heat,
That thou might'st repose the crown in
peace;

And of our labours thou shalt reap the gain.

Glo. I'll blast his harvest, if your head were laid;

For yet I am not look'd on in the world.
This shoulder was ordain'd so thick, to heave;
And heave it shall some weight, or break my back:—

Work thou the way,—and thou shalt reap:— [Exit.

K. Edw. Thanks, noble Clarence; worthy brother, thanks.

To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his
master;

K. Edw. Now am I seated as my soul de-

Having my country's peace, and brother

Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem,
And hither have they sent it for her ransom.

Into this breathing world, scarce half made up,
And that so lamely and unfashionable,
That dogs bark at me, as I halt by them;—
Why I, in this weak piping time of peace,
Have no delight to pass away the time;
Unless to spy my shadow in the sun,
And descant on mine own deformity;
And therefore,—since I cannot prove a lover,
To entertain these fair well-spoken days,—
I am determined to prove a villain,
And hate the idle pleasures of these days.
Plots have I laid, inductions* dangerous,
By drunken prophecies, libels, and dreams,
To set my brother Clarence, and the king,
In deadly hate the one against the other:
And, if king Edward be as true and just,
As I am subtle, false, and treacherous,
This day should Clarence closely be mew'd up;
About a prophecy, which says—that G
Of Edward's heirs the murderer shall be.
Dive, thoughts, down to my soul! here Clarence comes.

Enter CLARENCE, guarded, and BRAKENBURY.

Brother, good day: What means this armed guard,
That waits upon your grace?

* Preparations for mischief.

Clar. His majesty,
Tendering my person's safety, hath appointed
This conduct to convey me to the Tower.

Glo. Upon what cause?

Clar. Because my name is—George.

Glo. Alack, my lord, that fault is none of
yours;

He should, for that, commit your godfathers:—
O, belike, his majesty hath some intent,
That you shall be new christen'd in the Tower.
But what's the matter, Clarence? may I know?

Clar. Yea, Richard, when I know; for I protest,

As yet I do not: but, as I can learn,
He hearkens after prophecies, and dreams;
And from the cross-row plucks the letter G,
And says—a wizard told him, that by G
His issue disinherited should be;
And, for my name of George begins with G,
It follows in his thought, that I am he:
These, as I learn, and such like toys* as these,
Have mov'd his highness to commit me now.

Glo. Why, this it is, when men are rul'd by women:—

'Tis not the king, that sends you to the Tower;
My lady Grey, his wife, Clarence, 'tis she,
That tempers him to this extremity.

Was it not she, and that good man of worship,
Anthony Woodville, her brother there, [er;
That made him send lord Hastings to the Tow-
From whence this present day he is deliver'd?
We are not safe, Clarence, we are not safe.

Clar. By heaven, I think, there is no man secure, [heralds

But the queen's kindred, and night-walking
That trudge betwixt the king and mistress
Shore.

Heard you not, what an humble suppliant
Lord Hastings was to her for his delivery?

Glo. Humbly complaining to her deity
Got my lord chamberlain his liberty.

I'll tell you what,—I think, it is our way,
If we will keep in favour with the king,
To be her men, and wear her livery:

Brak. I beseech your graces both to pardon
me;

His majesty hath straitly given in charge,
That no man shall have private conference,
Of what degree soever, with his brother.

Glo. Even so? an please your worship, Brakenbury,

You may partake of any thing we say:

We speak no treason, man;—We say, the king
Is wise, and virtuous; and his noble queen
Well struck in years; fair, and not jealous:
We say, that Shore's wife hath a pretty foot,
A cherry lip,

A bonny eye, a passing pleasing tongue;
And the queen's kindred are made gentlefolks:
How say you, Sir? can you deny all this?

Brak. With this, my lord, myself have naught to do.

Glo. Naught to do with mistress Shore? I tell thee, fellow,

He that doth naught with her, excepting one,
Were best to do it secretly, alone.

Brak. What one, my lord?

Glo. Her husband, knave:—Would'st thou betray me?

Brak. I beseech your grace to pardon me;
and, withal,

Forbear your conference with the noble duke.

Clar. We know thy charge, Brakenbury, and will obey.

Glo. We are the queen's abjects,* and must obey.

Brother, farewell: I will unto the king;
And whatsoever you will employ me in,—
Were it, to call king Edward's widow—sis—
I will perform it to enfranchise you. [ter,—
Mean time, this deep disgrace in brotherhood,
Touches me deeper than you can imagine.

Clar. I know it pleaseth neither of us well.

Glo. Well, your imprisonment shall not be
I will deliver you, or else lie for you: [long;
Mean time, have patience.

Clar. I must perforce; farewell.

[Exit CLARENCE, BRAKENBURY, and Guard.

Glo. Go, tread the path that thou shalt ne'er return,

Simple, plain Clarence!—I do love thee so,
That I will shortly send thy soul to heaven,
If heaven will take the present at our hands.
But who comes here? the new-deliver'd Hastings?

Enter HASTINGS.

Hast. Good time of day unto my gracious
lord!

Glo. As much unto my good lord chamber-
Well are you welcome to this open air. [lain!
How hath your lordship brook'd imprisonment?

Hast. With patience, noble lord, as prisoners must:

But I shall live, my lord, to give them thanks,
That were the cause of my imprisonment.

Glo. No doubt, no doubt; and so shall Clarence too;

For they, that were your enemies, are his,
And have prevail'd as much on him, as you.

Hast. More pity that the eagle should be mew'd,†

While kites and buzzards prey at liberty.

Glo. What news abroad?

Hast. No news so bad abroad, as this at home;—

The king is sickly, weak, and melancholy,
And his physicians fear him mightily.

Glo. Now, by Saint Paul, this news is bad
O, he hath kept an evil diet long, [indeed.
And over-much consum'd his royal person;
'Tis very grievous to be thought upon.

What, is he in his bed?

Hast. He is.

Glo. Go you before, and I will follow you.

[Exit HASTINGS.

He cannot live, I hope; and must not die,
Till George be pack'd with posthorse up to heaven.

I'll in, to urge his hatred more to Clarence,
With lies well steel'd with weighty arguments;
And, if I fail not in my deep intent,
Clarence hath not another day to live:

Which done, God take king Edward to his mercy,

And leave the world for me to bustle in!

For then I'll marry Warwick's youngest daughter: [ther?

What though I kill'd her husband and her fa-
The readiest way to make the wench amends,

Is—to become her husband, and her father:

The which will I; not all so much for love,

As for another secret close intent,

By marrying her, which I must reach unto.

But yet I run before my horse to market:

* Fancies.

† The Queen and Shore.

* Lowest of subjects.

† Confined.

Clarence still breathes: Edward still lives,
and reigns;
When they are gone, then must I count my gains. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The same.—Another Street.

Enter the corpse of King HENRY the Sixth, borne in an open coffin, Gentlemen bearing halberts, to guard it; and Lady ANNE as mourner.

ANNE. Set down, set down your honourable load,—

If honour may be shrouded in a hearse,—
Whilst I a while obsequiously* lament
The untimely fall of virtuous Lancaster.—
Poor key-cold figure of a holy king!
Pale ashes of the house of Lancaster!
'Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood!
Be it lawful that I invoke thy ghost,
'To hear the lamentations of poor Anne,
Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughter'd son, Stabb'd by the self-same hand that made these wounds!

Lo, in these windows, that let forth thy life,
I pour the helpless balm of my poor eyes:—
O, cursed be the hand that made these holes!
Cursed the heart, that had the heart to do it!
Cursed the blood, that let this blood from
hence!

More direful hap betide that hated wretch,
That makes us wretched by the death of thee,
Than I can wish to adders, spiders, toads,
Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives!
If ever he have child, abortive be it,
Prodigious, and untimely brought to light,
Whose ugly and unnatural aspect
May fright the hopeful mother at the view;
And that be heir to his unhappiness!
If ever he have wife, let her be made
More miserable by the death of him, [thee!—
Than I am made by my young lord, and Come, now, toward Chertsey with your holy load,

Taken from Paul's to be interred there;
And, still as you are weary of the weight,
Rest you, whiles I lament king Henry's
corse.

[The Bearers take up the corpse, and advance.

Enter GLOSTER.

GLO. Stay you, that bear the corse, and set it down.

ANNE. What black magician conjures up this fiend,

To stop devoted charitable deeds?

GLO. Villains, set down the corse; or, by Saint Paul,

I'll make a corse of him that disobeys.

1 Gent. My lord, stand back, and let the coffin pass.

GLO. Unmanner'd dog! stand thou when I command:

Advance thy halbert higher than my breast,
Or, by Saint Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot,
And spurn upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness. [The bearers set down the coffin.

ANNE. What, do you tremble? are you all afraid?

Alas, I blame you not: for you are mortal,
And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil.—
Avaunt thou dreadful minister of hell!
Thou hadst but power over his mortal body,
His soul thou canst not have; therefore, be gone.

* Funereal.

GLO. Sweet saint, for charity be not so curs'd.

ANNE. Foul devil, for God's sake, hence, and trouble us not;

For thou hast made the happy earth thy hell,
Fill'd it with cursing cries, and deep ex-claims.

If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds,
Behold this pattern* of thy butcheries:—
O, gentlemen, see, see! dead Henry's wounds
Open their congeal'd mouths, and bleed afresh!—

Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity;
For 'tis thy presence that exhales this blood
From cold and empty veins, where no blood dwells;

Thy deed, inhuman and unnatural,
Provokes this deluge most unnatural.—

O God, which this blood madest, revenge his
death!

O earth, which this blood drink'st, revenge
his death!

Either, heaven, with lightning strike the mur-derer dead,

Or, earth, gape open wide, and eat him quick;
As thou dost swallow up this good king's
blood,

Which his hell-govern'd arm hath butchered!

GLO. Lady, you know no rules of charity,
Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses.

ANNE. Villain, thou know'st no law of God
nor man;

No beast so fierce, but knows some touch of pity.

GLO. But I know none, and therefore am no
beast.

ANNE. O wonderful, when devils tell the truth!

GLO. More wonderful, when angels are so angry.—

Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman,
Of these supposed evils, to give me leave,
By circumstance, but to acquit myself.

ANNE. Vouchsafe, diffus'd infection of a man,
For these known evils, but to give me leave,
By circumstance, to curse thy cursed self.

GLO. Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me have

Some patient leisure to excuse myself.

ANNE. Fouler than heart can think thee, thou canst make

No excuse current, but to hang thyself.

GLO. By such despair, I should accuse myself.

ANNE. And, by despairing, shalt thou stand excus'd;

For doing worthy vengeance on thyself,
That didst unworthy slaughter upon others.

GLO. Say, that I slew them not?

ANNE. Why then, they are not dead:

But dead they are, and, devilish slave, by
thee.

GLO. I did not kill your husband.

ANNE. Why, then he is alive.

GLO. Nay, he is dead; and slain by Edward's hand.

ANNE. In thy soul's throat thou liest; queen
Margaret saw

Thy murderous faulchion smoking in his blood;
The which thou once didst bend against her
breast,

But that thy brothers beat aside the point.

GLO. I was provoked by her slanderous tongue, [ders.

That laid their guilt upon my guiltless shoul-

* Example.

Anne. Thou wast provoked by thy bloody mind,
That never dreamt on aught but butcheries :
Didst thou not kill this king ?

Glo. I grant ye.

Anne. Dost grant me, hedge-hog? then God grant me too,
Thou may'st be damned for that wicked deed!
O, he was gentle, mild, and virtuous.

Glo. The fitter for the King of heaven that hath him.

Anne. He is in heaven, where thou shalt never come.

Glo. Let him thank me, that help to send him thither;
For he was fitter for that place, than earth.

Anne. And thou unfit for any place but hell.

Glo. Yes, one place else, if you will hear me name it.

Anne. Some dungeon.

Glo. Your bed-chamber.

Anne. Ill rest betide the chamber where thou liest!

Glo. So will it, madam, till I lie with you.

Anne. I hope so.

Glo. I know so.—But, gentle lady Anne,—
To leave this keen encounter of our wits,
And fall somewhat into a slower method;—
Is not the causer of the timeless deaths
Of these Plantagenets, Henry, and Edward,
As blameful as the executioner?

Anne. Thou wast the cause, and most accurs'd effect.

Glo. Your beauty was the cause of that effect;
Your beauty, which did haunt me in my sleep,
To undertake the death of all the world,
So I might live one hour in your sweet bosom.

Anne. If I thought that, I tell thee, homicide,
These nails should rend that beauty from my cheeks.

Glo. These eyes would not endure that beauty's wreck,
You should not blemish it, if I stood by:
As all the world is cheered by the sun,
So I by that; it is my day, my life.

Anne. Black night o'ershade thy day, and death thy life!

Glo. Curse not thyself, fair creature; thou art both.

Anne. I would I were, to be reveng'd on thee.

Glo. It is a quarrel most unnatural,
To be reveng'd on him that loveth thee.

Anne. It is a quarrel just and reasonable,
To be reveng'd on him that kill'd my husband.

Glo. He that bereft thee, lady, of thy husband,
Did it to help thee to a better husband.

Anne. His better doth not breathe upon the earth.

Glo. He lives, that loves you better than he could.

Anne. Name him.

Glo. Plantagenet.

Anne. Why, that was he.

Glo. The self-same name, but one of better nature.

Anne. Where is he?

Glo. Here: [She spits at him.] Why dost thou spit at me?

Anne. 'Would it were mortal poison, for thy sake!

Glo. Never came poison from so sweet a place.

Anne. Never hung poison on a fouler toad.
Out of my sight! thou dost infect mine eyes.

Glo. Thine eyes, sweet lady, have infected mine.

Anne. 'Would they were basilisks, to strike thee dead!

Glo. I would they were, that I might die at once;

For now they kill me with a living death.
Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn such tears,

Sham'd their aspects with store of childish tears, — [drops:
These eyes, which never shed remorseful

Nor when thy warlike father, like a child,

And twenty times made pause, to sob, and weep,

That all the standers-by had wet their cheeks,
Like trees bedash'd with rain: in that sad time,

Lo! here I lend thee this sharp-pointed sword;
Which if thou please to hide in this true breast,
And let the soul forth that adoreth thee,
I lay it naked to the deadly stroke,
And humbly beg the death upon my knee.

[He lays his breast open; she offers at it with his sword.

Nay, do not pause; for I did kill king Henry;—
But 'twas thy beauty that provoked me.

Nay, now despatch; 'twas I that stabb'd young Edward;—

Anne. I have already.

Glo. That was in thy rage:

This hand, which, for thy love, did kill thy love,

Shall, for thy love, kill a far truer love;
To both their deaths shalt thou be accessory.

Anne. I would, I knew thy heart.

Glo. 'Tis figur'd in my tongue.

Anne. I fear me, both are false.

Glo. Then man was never true.

Anne. Well, well, put up your sword.

Glo. Say then, my peace is made.

Anne. That shall you know hereafter.

Glo. But shall I live in hope?

Anne. All men, I hope, live so.

Glo. Vouchsafe to wear this ring.

Anne. To take, is not to give.

SCENE III.—The same.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter Queen ELIZABETH, Lord RIVERS, and Lord GREY.

Riv. Have patience, madam; there's no doubt his majesty

Will soon recover his accustom'd health.

Grey. In that you brook it ill, it makes him worse: [fort,

Therefore, for God's sake, entertain good com-
And cheer his grace with quick and merry words.

Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would betide of me?

Grey. No other harm, but loss of such a lord.

Q. Eliz. The loss of such a lord includes all harms.

Grey. The heavens have bless'd you with a goodly son,

To be your comforter, when he is gone.

Q. Eliz. Ah, he is young; and his minority
Is put into the trust of Richard Gloster,
A man that loves not me, nor none of you.

Riv. Is it concluded, he shall be protector?

Q. Eliz. It is determin'd, not concluded yet:
But so it must be, if the king miscarry.

Enter BUCKINGHAM and STANLEY.

Grey. Here come the lords of Buckingham and Stanley.

Buck. Good time of day unto your royal
grace!

Stan. God make your majesty joyful as you have been!

Q. Eliz. The countess Richmond, good my lord of Stanley,

To your good prayer will scarcely say—amen.
Yet, Stanley, notwithstanding she's your wife,
And loves not me, be you, good lord, assur'd,
I hate not you for her proud arrogance.

Stan. I do beseech you, either not believe
The envious slanders of her false accusers;
Or, if she be accus'd on true report,
Bear with her weakness, which, I think, pro-

Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amendment,
lords?

Buck. Madam, good hope: his grace speaks cheerfully.

Q. Eliz. God grant him health! Did you confer with him?

Buck. Ay, madam: he desires to make atonement

Between the duke of Gloster and your brothers,
And between them and my lord chamberlain;
And sent to warn^e them to his presence.

Q. Eliz. Would all were well!—But that will never be;—

I fear, our happiness is at the height.

Enter GLOSTER, HASTINGS, and DORSET.

Glo. They do me wrong, and I will not endure it:—

Who are they, that complain unto the king,
That I, forsooth, am stern, and love them not?
By holy Paul, they love his grace but lightly,
That fill his ear with such dissentious rumours.
Because I cannot flatter, and speak fair,
Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and cog,

Duck with French nods and apish courtesy,
I must be held a rancorous enemy.
Cannot a plain man live, and think no harm,
But thus his simple truth must be abus'd
By silken, sly, insinuating Jacks?

Grey. To whom in all this presence speaks
your grace!

Glo. To thee, that hast nor honesty, nor grace. [wrong?—
When have I injur'd thee? when done thee
Or thee?—or thee?—or any of your faction?
A plague upon you all! His royal grace,— Whom God preserve better than you would wish!—

Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing-while.
But you most trouble him with lewd* complaints.

Q. Eliz. Brother of Gloster, you mistake
the matter:

The king, of his own royal disposition,
And not provok'd by any suitor else;
Aiming, belike, at your interior hatred,
That in your outward action shows itself,
Against my children, brothers, and myself,
Makes him to send; that thereby he may gather

The ground of your ill-will, and so remove it.

Glo. I cannot tell;—The world is grown so bad,
That wrens may prey where eagles dare not perch:

Since every Jack† became a gentleman,
There's many a gentle person made a Jack.

Q. Eliz. Come, come, we know your meaning, brother Gloster;

You envy my advancement, and my friends;
God grant, we never may have need of you!

Glo. Meantime, God grants that we have need of you:

Our brother is imprison'd by your means,
Myself disgrac'd, and the nobility
Held in contempt; while great promotions
Are daily given, to ennoble those That scarce, some two days since, were worth a noble.‡

Q. Eliz. By Him, that rais'd me to this careful height

From that contented hap which I enjoy'd,
I never did incense his majesty
Against the duke of Clarence, but have been An earnest advocate to plead for him.
My lord, you do me shameful injury,
Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects.

Glo. You may deny that you were not the cause
Of my lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Ric. She may, my lord; for——

Glo. She may, lord Rivers!—Why, who knows not so?

She may do more, Sir, than denying that:
She may help you to many fair preferments;
And then deny her aiding hand therein,
And lay those honours on your high desert.
What may she not? She may,—ay, marry may she,—

Ric. What, marry, may she?

Glo. What, marry, may she? marry with a
A bachelor, a handsome stripling too: [king,
I wis,§ your grandam had a worser match.

Q. Eliz. My lord of Gloster, I have too long borne [scoffs:
Your blunt upbraidings, and your bitter
By heaven, I will acquaint his majesty,
Of those gross taunts I often have endur'd.

I had rather be a country servant-maid,
Than a great queen, with this condition—
To be so baited, scorn'd, and storm'd at:
Small joy have I in being England's queen.

Enter Queen MARGARET, behind.

Q. Mar. And lessen'd be that small, God, I beseech thee!

Thy honour, state, and seat, is due to me.

Glo. What? Threat you me with telling of the king? [said

Tell him, and spare not: look, what I have
I will avouch, in presence of the king:

I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower.

'Tis time to speak, my pains* are quite forgot.

Q. Mar. Out, devil! I remember them too
well:

Thou kill'dst my husband Henry in the Tower,
And Edward, my poor son, at Tewksbury.

Glo. Ere you were queen, ay, or your husband king,

I was a pack-horse in his great affairs;

A weeder-out of his proud adversaries,

A liberal rewarder of his friends;

To royalize† his blood, I spilt my own.

Q. Mar. Ay, and much better blood than his, or thine.

Glo. In all which time, you, and your husband Grey,

Were factious for the house of Lancaster;—

And, Rivers, so were you:—Was not you husband

In Margaret's battle at Saint Albans slain?

Let me put in your minds, if you forget, [are;

What you have been ere now, and what you
Withal, what I have been, and what I am.

Q. Mar. A murd'rous villain, and so still thou art.

Glo. Poor Clarence did forsake his father
Warwick,

Ay, and forswore himself,—Which Jesu per-don!—

Q. Mar. Which God revenge!

Glo. To fight on Edward's party, for the crown; [up

And, for his meed,‡ poor lord, he is mew'd.
I would to God, my heart were flint like Ed-
ward's,

Or Edward's soft and pitiful like mine;

I am too childish-foolish for this world.

Q. Mar. Hie thee to hell for shame, and leave this world,

Thou cacodæmon!‡ there thy kingdom is.

Ric. My lord of Gloster, in those busy days,
Which here you urge, to prove us enemies,

We follow'd then our lord, our lawful king:

So should we you, if you should be our king.

Glo. If I should be?—I had rather be pedlar;

Far be it from my heart, the thought thereof!

Q. Eliz. As little joy, my lord, as you suppose, [king,

You should enjoy, were you this country's
As little joy you may suppose in me,

That I enjoy, being the queen thereof.

Q. Mar. A little joy enjoys the queen thereof;

For I am she, and altogether joyless.

I can no longer hold me patient.— [Advancing.

Hear me, you wrangling pirates, that fall out
In sharing that which you have pill'd§ from
me:

Which of you trembles not, that looks on me?

* Rude, ignorant.
† Low fellow. ‡ A coin rated at 6s. 8d. § Think.

* Labour. † Make royal. ‡ Reward.
§ Corrupted. ¶ Corrupt devil. ¶ Pillaged.

If not, that, I being queen, you bow like subjects ;

Yet that, by you depos'd, you quake like rebels?—

Ah, gentle villain, do not turn away!

Glo. Foul wrinkled witch, what mak'st thou in my sight?

Q. Mar. But repetition of what thou hast marr'd;

That will I make, before I let thee go.

Glo. Wert thou not banished on pain of death?

Q. Mar. I was; but I do find more pain in banishment,

Than death can yield me here by my abode.

A husband, and a son, thou ow'st to me,—

And thou, a kingdom;—all of you, allegiance:

This sorrow that I have, by right is yours;

And all the pleasures you usurp, are mine.

Glo. The curse my noble father laid on thee,—

[paper,

When thou didst crown his warlike brows with

And with thy scorns drew'st rivers from his eyes;

And then, to dry them, gav'st the duke a clout,

Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rutland;—

His curses, then from bitterness of soul

Denounc'd against thee, are all fall'n upon thee;

And God, not we, hath plagu'd thy bloody deed.

Q. Eliz. So just is God, to right the innocent.

Hast. O, 'twas the foulest deed to slay that babe,

And the most merciless, that e'er was heard of.

Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported.

Dors. No man but prophesied revenge for it.

Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it.

Q. Mar. What! were you snarling all, before I came,

Ready to catch each other by the throat,

And turn you all your hatred now on me?

Did York's dread curse prevail so much with heaven,

That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death,

Their kingdom's loss, my woeful banishment,

Could all but answer for that peevish brat?

Can curses pierce the clouds, and enter heaven?—

Why, then give way, dull clouds, to my quick curses!—

Though not by war, by surfeit die your king,

As ours by murder, to make him a king!

Edward, thy son, that now is prince of Wales,

For Edward, my son, that was prince of Wales,

Die in his youth, by like untimely violence!

Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen,

Outlive thy glory, like my wretched self!

Long may'st thou live, to wail thy children's

And see another, as I see thee now, [loss;

Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stall'd in mine!

Long die thy happy days before thy death;

And, after many lengthen'd hours of grief,

Die neither mother, wife, nor England's queen!—

Rivers,—and Dorset,—you were standers by,—

And so wast thou, lord Hastings,—when my son [him,

Was stabb'd with bloody daggers; God, I pray

That none of you may live your natural age,

But by some unlook'd accident cut off!

Glo. Have done thy charm, thou hateful withther'd hag.

Q. Mar. And leave out thee? stay, dog, for thou shalt hear me.

If heaven have any grievous plague in store,

Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,

O, let them keep it, till thy sins be ripe,

And then hurl down their indignation

On thee, the troubler of the poor world's peace!

The worm of conscience still begnaw thy soul!

Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou

And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends!

No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine,

Unless it be while some tormenting dream

Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils!

Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog!

Thou that wast seal'd in thy nativity

The slave of nature, and the son of hell!

Thou slander of thy mother's heavy womb!

Thou loathed issue of thy fathers' loins!

Thou rag of honour! thou detested—

Glo. Margaret.

Q. Mar. Richard!

Glo. Ha?

Q. Mar. I call thee not.

Glo. I cry thee mercy then; for I did think,

That thou hadst call'd me all these bitter names.

Q. Mar. Why, so I did; but look'd for no reply.

O, let me make the period to my curse.

Glo. 'Tis done by me; and ends in—Margaret.

Q. Eliz. Thus have you breath'd your curse against yourself.

Q. Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my fortune! [der,*

Why strew'st thou sugar on that bottled spi-

Whose deadly web ensnareth thee about?

Fool, fool! thou whet'st a knife to kill thyself.

The day will come, that thou shalt wish for me

To help thee curse this pois'nous bunch-back'd toad.

Hast. False-boding woman, end thy frantic

curse;

Lest, to thy harm, thou move our patience.

Q. Mar. Foul shame upon you! you have all mov'd mine.

taught your duty.

Uncharitably with me have you dealt, [me;
And shamefully by you my hopes are butcher'd.
My charity is outrage, life my shame,—
And in my shame still live my sorrow's rage!

Buck. Have done, have done.

Q. Mar. O princely Buckingham, I kiss thy
hand,

In sign of league and amity with thee:
Now fair befall thee, and thy noble house!

Thy garments are not spotted with our blood,
Nor thou within the compass of my curse.

Buck. Nor no one here; for curses never pass
The lips of those that breathe them in the air.

Q. Mar. I'll not believe but they ascend the sky,

And there awake God's gentle-sleeping peace.
O Buckingham, beware of yonder dog;

Look, when he fawns, he bites; and, when he bites,

ingham?

Buck. Nothing that I respect, my gracious
lord.

Q. Mar. What, dost thou scorn me for my gentle counsel?

And sooth the devil that I warn thee from?

O, but remember this another day,

When he shall split thy very heart with sorrow?

And say, poor Margaret was a prophetess.—

And he to yours, and all of you to God's!

[Exit.

Hast. My hair doth stand on end to hear her curses.

Riv. And so doth mine; I muse,* why she's at liberty.

Glo. I cannot blame her, by God's holy mother;

She hath had too much wrong, and I repent
My part thereof, that I have done to her.

Q. Eliz. I never did her any, to my knowledge.

Glo. Yet you have all the vantage† of her
I was too hot to do somebody good, [wrong.
That is too cold in thinking of it now.

Marry, as for Clarence, he is well repaid;

He is frank'd‡ up to fattening for his pains;—

God pardon them that are the cause thereof!

Riv. A virtuous and a Christian-like conclusion,

To pray for them that hath done scath§ to us.

Glo. So do I ever, being well advis'd;—

For had I curs'd now, I had curs'd myself.

[Aside.

Enter CATESBY.

Cates. Madam, his majesty doth call for
you,—

And for your grace,—and you, my noble lords.

Q. Eliz. Catesby, I come:—Lords will you go with me?

Riv. Madam, we will attend upon your grace. [Exeunt all but GLOSTER.

* Wender.

† Put in a sty.

‡ Advantage.

§ Harin.

Glo. I do the wrong, and first begin to brawl.
The secret mischiefs that I set abroad,
I lay unto the grievous charge of others.
Clarence,—whom I, indeed, have laid in dark-
I do beweepe to many simple gulls; [seem,— Namely, to Stanley, Hastings, Buckingham;
And tell them—'tis the queen and her allies.
That stir the king against the duke my brother.
Now they believe it; and withal whet me
To be reveng'd on Rivers, Vaughan, Grey:
But then I sigh, and, with a piece of scripture,
Tell them—that God bids us do good for evil:
And thus I clothe my naked villany
With old odd ends, stol'n forth of holy writ:
And seem a saint, when most I play the devil.

Enter two MURDERERS.

But soft, here come my executioners.—

How now, my hardy, stout resolved mates!

Are you now going to despatch this thing?

1 Murd. We are, my lord; and come to have the warrant,

That we may be admitted where he is.

Glo. Well thought upon, I have it here about me: [Gives the Warrant.

When you have done, repair to Crosby-place.

But, Sirs, be sudden in the execution,

Withal obdurate, do not hear him plead;

For Clarence is well spoken, and, perhaps,

May move your hearts to pity, if you mark him.

1 Murd. Tut, tut, my lord, we will not stand to prate,

Talkers are no good doers; be assur'd,

We go to use our hands, and not our tongues.

Glo. Your eyes drop mill-stones, when fools'
eyes drop tears:

I like you, lads;—about your business straight;

Go, go, despatch.

1 Murd. We will, my noble lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The same.—A Room in the Tower.

Enter CLARENCE and BRAKENBURY.

Brak. Why looks your grace so heavily today?

Clar. O, I have pass'd a miserable night,

So full of fearful dreams, of ugly sights,

That, as I am a Christian faithful man,

I would not spend another such a night,

Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days:

So full of dismal terror was the time.

Brak. What was your dream, my lord? I pray you, tell me.

Clar. Methought, that I had broken from the Tower,

And was embark'd to cross to Burgundy:

And, in my company, my brother Gloster:

Who from my cabin tempted me to walk

Upon the hatches; thence we look'd toward England,

And cited up a thousand heavy times,

During the wars of York and Lancaster

That had befall'n us. As we pac'd along

Upon the giddy footing of the hatches,

Methought, that Gloster stumbled; and, in falling,

Struck me, that thought to stay him, over-board,
Into the tumbling billows of the main.

O Lord! methought, what pain it was to drown!

What dreadful noise of water in mine ears!

What sights of ugly death within mine eyes!

Methought, I saw a thousand fearful wrecks:

A thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon;

Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,

Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels,

All scatter'd in the bottom of the sea. [holes
Some lay in dead men's skulls; and, in those Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept
(As 'twere in scorn of eyes,) reflecting gems,
That woo'd the slimy bottom of the deep, [by.
And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatter'd Brak. Had you such leisure in the time of
death,

To gaze upon these secrets of the deep?

Clar. Methought, I had; and often did I strive

To yield the ghost: but still the envious flood
Kept in my soul, and would not let it forth
To seek the empty, vast, and wand'ring air;
But smother'd it within my panting bulk,*
Which almost burst to belch it in the sea.

Brak. Awak'd you not with this sore agony?

Clar. O, no, my dream was lengthen'd after life;

O, then began the tempest to my soul!
I pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood,
With that grim ferryman which poets write of,
Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.

The first that there did greet my stranger soul,
Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick,

Who cried aloud,—*What scourge for perjury
Can this dark monarchy afford false Clarence?*

And so he vanish'd: Then came wand'ring by
A shadow like an angel, with bright hair
Dabbled in blood; and he shriek'd out aloud,— Clarence is come,—false, fleeting, perjur'd Clarence,—

That stabb'd me in the field by Tewksbury;—

Seize on him, furies, take him to your torments!

With that, methought, a legion of foul fiends
Environ'd me, and howled in mine ears
Such hideous cries, that, with the very noise,
I trembling wak'd, and, for a season after,
Could not believe but that I was in hell;
Such terrible impression made my dream.

Brak. No marvel, lord, though it affrighted
you!

I am afraid, methinks, to hear you tell it.

Clar. O, Brakenbury, I have done these things—

That now give evidence against my soul,—
For Edward's sake; and, see, how he requites me!— [thee,

O God! if my deep prayers cannot appease
But thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds,
Yet execute thy wrath on me alone: [dren!—

O, spare my guiltless wife, and my poor chil-
I pray thee, gentle keeper, stay by me;
My soul is heavy, and I fain would sleep.

Brak. I will, my lord; God give your grace good rest!—

[CLARENCE reposes himself on a Chair.

Sorrow breaks seasons, and reposing hours
Makes the night morning, and the noon-tide
night.

Princes have but their titles for their glories,
An outward honour for an inward toil;

And, for unfelt imaginations,
They often feel a world of restless cares:

So that, between their titles, and low name,
There's nothing differs but the outward fame.

Enter the two MURDERERS.

1 Murd. Ho! who's here?

Brak. What would'st thou, fellow? and how cam'st thou hither?

1 Murd. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my legs.

Brak. What, so brief?

2 Murd. O, Sir, better to be brief than tedious:—

Let him see our commission; talk no more.

[A Paper is delivered to BRAKENBURY, who reads it.

Brak. I am, in this, commanded to deliver
The noble duke of Clarence to your hands:—
I will not reason what is meant thereby,
Because I will be guiltless of the meaning.
Here are the keys;—there sits the duke asleep:
I'll to the king; and signify to him,
That thus to you I have resign'd my charge.

1 Murd. You may, Sir; 'tis a point of wisdom:

Fare you well.

[Exit BRAKENBURY.

2 Murd. What, shall we stab him as he sleeps?

1 Murd. No; he'll say, 'twas done cowardly, when he wakes.

2 Murd. When he wakes! why, fool, he shall never wake until the great judgement day.

1 Murd. Why, then he'll say, we stabb'd him sleeping.

2 Murd. The urging of that word, judgement, hath bred a kind of remorse in me.

1 Murd. What? art thou afraid?

2 Murd. Not to kill him, having a warrant for it; but to be damn'd for killing him, from the which no warrant can defend me.

1 Murd. I thought, thou had'st been resolute.

2 Murd. So I am, to let him live.

1 Murd. I'll back to the duke of Gloster, and tell him so.

2 Murd. Nay, I pr'ythee, stay a little: I hope, this holy humour of mine will change; it was wont to hold me but while one would tell twenty.

1 Murd. How dost thou feel thyself now?

2 Murd. 'Faith some certain dregs of conscience are yet within me.

1 Murd. Remember our reward, when the deed's done.

2 Murd. Come, he dies; I had forgot the reward.

1 Murd. Where's thy conscience now?

2 Murd. In the duke of Gloster's purse.

1 Murd. So when he opens his purse to give us our reward, thy conscience flies out.

2 Murd. 'Tis no matter; let it go; there's few,
or none, will entertain it.

1 Murd. What, if it come to thee again?

2 Murd. I'll not meddle with it, it is a dangerous thing, it makes a man a coward; a man cannot steal, but it accuseth him; a man cannot swear, but it checks him; a man cannot lie with his neighbours wife, but it detects him:
'Tis a blushing shame-fac'd spirit, that mutinies in a man's bosom; it fills one full of obstacles: it made me once restore a purse of gold, that by chance I found; it beggars any man that keeps it: it is turned out of all towns and cities for a dangerous thing; and every man, that means to live well, endeavours to trust to himself, and live without it.

1 Murd. 'Zounds, it is even now at my elbow, persuading me not to kill the duke.

2 Murd. Take the devil in thy mind, and believe him not: he would insinuate with thee,
but to make thee sigh.

1 Murd. I am strong-fram'd, he cannot prevail with me.

2 Murd. Spoke like a tall* fellow, that respects his reputation. Come, shall we fall to work?

1 Murd. Take him over the costard† with the hilt of thy sword, and then throw him into the malmsey-butt, in the next room.

2 Murd. O excellent device! and make a sop of him.

1 Murd. Soft! he wakes.

2 Murd. Strike.

1 Murd. No, we'll reason with him.

Clar. Where art thou, keeper? give me a cup of wine.

1 Murd. You shall have wine enough, my lord, anon.

Clar. In God's name, what art thou?

1 Murd. A man, as you are.

Clar. But not, as I am, royal.

1 Murd. Nor you, as we are, loyal.

Clar. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble.

1 Murd. My voice is now the king's, my looks mine own.

Clar. How darkly, and how deadly dost thou speak!

Your eyes do menace me: Why look you pale?

Who sent you hither? Wherefore do you come?

Both Murd. To, to, to,——

Clar. To murder me?

Both Murd. Ay, ay.

Clar. You scarcely have the hearts to tell me so,

and therefore cannot have the hearts to do it.

Wherein, my friends, have I offended you?

1 Murd. Offended us you have not, but the king.

Clar. I shall be reconciled to him again.

2 Murd. Never, my lord; therefore prepare to die.

Clar. Are you call'd forth from out a world of men,

To slay the innocent? What is my offence?

Where is the evidence that doth accuse me?

What lawful quest^{*} have given their verdict up

Unto the frowning judge? or who pronounc'd

The bitter sentence of poor Clarence' death?

Before I be convict by course of law,

To threaten me with death is most unlawful.

I charge you, as you hope for any goodness,

By Christ's dear blood shed for our grievous sins,

That you depart, and lay no hands on me;

The deed you undertake is damnable.

1 Murd. What we will do, we do upon command.

2 Murd. And he, that hath commanded, is our king.

Clar. Erroneous vassal! the great King of kings

Hath in the table of his law commanded,

That thou shalt do no murder; Wilt thou then

Spurn at his edict, and fulfil a man's?

Take heed; for he holds vengeance in his hand,

To hurl upon their heads that break his law.

2 Murd. And that same vengeance doth he hurl on thee,

For false forswearing, and for murder too:

Thou didst receive the sacrament, to fight

In quarrel of the house of Lancaster.

1 Murd. And, like a traitor to the name of God,

Didst break that vow; and, with thy treacherous blade,

Unrip'dst the bowels of thy sovereign's son.

2 Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.

1 Murd. How canst thou urge God's dreadful law to us,

When thou hast broke it in such dear degree?

Clar. Alas! for whose sake did I that deed?

For Edward, for my brother, for his sake:

He sends you not to murder me for this;

For in that sin he is as deep as I.

If God will be avenged for the deed,

O, know you, that he doth it publicly;

Take not the quarrel from his powerful arm:

He needs no indirect nor lawless course,

To cut off those that have offended him.

1 Murd. Who made thee then a bloody minister,

When gallant-springing, brave Plantagenet, That princely novice,^{*} was struck dead by thee?

Clar. My brother's love, the devil, and my rage.

1 Murd. Thy brother's love, our duty, and thy fault,

Provoke us hither now to slaughter thee.

Clar. If you do love my brother, hate not me;

I am his brother, and I love him well.

If you are hir'd for meed,[†] go back again,

And I will send you to my brother Gloster;

Who shall reward you better for my life,

Than Edward will for tidings of my death.

2 Murd. You are deceiv'd, your brother Gloster hates you.

Clar. O, no; he loves me, and he holds me dear:

Go you to him from me.

Both Murd. Ay, so we will.

Clar. Tell him, when that our princely father York

Bless'd his three sons with his victorious arm,

And charg'd us from his soul to love each other,

He little thought of this divided friendship:

Bid Gloster think on this, and he will weep.

1 Murd. Ay, mill-stones; as he lesson'd us to weep.

Clar. O, do not slander him, for he is kind.

1 Murd. Right, as snow in harvest.—Come, you deceive yourself;

'Tis he that sends us to destroy you here.

Clar. It cannot be; for he bewept my fortune,

And hugg'd me in his arms, and swore, with [sobs.] That he would labour my delivery.

1 Murd. Why so he doth, when he delivers you [ven.]

From this earth's thralldom to the joys of heaven.

2 Murd. Make peace with God, for you must die, my lord.

Clar. Hast thou that holy feeling in thy soul,

To counsel me to make my peace with God,

And art thou yet to thy own soul so blind,

That thou wilt war with God, by murdering me?—

Ah, Sirs, consider, he, that sent you on

To do this deed, will hate you for the deed.

2 Murd. What shall we do?

Clar. Relent, and save your souls.

1 Murd. Relent! 'tis cowardly, and womanish.

Clar. Not to relent, is beastly, savage, devilish.—

Which of you, if you were a prince's son,

Being pent[‡] from liberty, as I am now,—

If two such murderers as yourselves came to you,—

* Inquest, jury.

† On the part.

* Youth.

† Reward

‡ Shut up.

Would not entreat for life?—

My friend, I spy some pity 'thy looks;
O, if thine eye be not a flatterer,
Come thou on my side, and entreat for me,
As you would beg, were you in my distress.
A begging prince what beggar pities not?

2 Murd. Look behind you, my lord.

1 Murd. Take that, and that; if all this will not do, [Stabs him.
I'll drown you in the malmsey-butt within.

[Exit, with the body.

2 Murd. A bloody deed, and desperately despatch'd!

How fain, like Pilate, would I wash my hands
Of this most grievous guilty murder done!

Re-enter first MURDERER.

1 Murd. How now? what mean'st thou, that thou help'st me not?

By heaven, the duke shall know how slack
you have been.

2 Murd. I would he knew, that I had sav'd his brother!

Take thou the fee, and tell him what I say;
For I repent me that the duke is slain. [Exit.

1 Murd. So do not I; go, coward, as thou
Well, I'll go hide the body in some hole, [art.—
Till that the duke give order for his burial:
And when I have my meed, I will away;
For this will out, and then I must not stay.

[Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter King EDWARD, (led in sick,) Queen ELIZABETH, DORSET, RIVERS, HASTINGS, BUCKINGHAM, GREY, and others.

K. Edw. Why, so:—now have I done a good day's work;—

You peers, continue this united league:
I every day expect an embassy
From my Redeemer to redeem me hence;
And more in peace my soul shall part to heaven,

Since I have made my friends at peace on earth.
Rivers, and Hastings, take each other's hand;
Dissemble not your hatred, swear your love.

Ric. By heaven, my soul is purg'd from grudging hate;

And with my hand I seal my true heart's love.

Hast. So thrive I, as I truly swear the like!

K. Edw. Take heed, you dally not before
your king;

Lest he, that is the supreme King of kings,
Confound your hidden falsehood, and award
Either of you to be the other's end.

Hast. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love!

Ric. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart!

K. Edw. Madam, yourself are not exempt in
this,—

Nor your son Dorset,—Buckingham, nor you;—
You have been factious one against the other.
Wife, love lord Hastings, let him kiss your
hand;

And what you do, do it unfeignedly.

Q. Eliz. There, Hastings;—I will never more
remember

(Our former hatred, So thrive I, and mine!

K. Edw. Dorset, embrace him,—Hastings, love lord marquis.

Dor. This interchange of love, I here protest,
Upon my part shall be inviolable.

Hast. And so swear I. [Embraces DORSET.

K. Edw. Now, princely Buckingham, seal
thou this league

With thy embracements to my wife's allies,
And make me happy in your unity.

Buck. Whenever Buckingham doth turn his hate

Upon your grace, [To the QUEEN.] but with all duteous love

Doth cherish you, and yours, God punish me
With hate in those where I expect most love!
When I have most need to employ a friend,
And most assured that he is a friend,
Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,
Be he unto me! this do I beg of heaven,
When I am cold in love, to you, or yours.

[Embracing RIVERS, &c.

K. Edw. A pleasing cordial, princely Buck-
ingham,

Is this thy vow unto my sickly heart.

There wanteth now our brother Gloster here,
To make the blessed period of this peace.

Buck. And, in good time, here comes the noble duke.

Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Good-morrow to my sovereign king, and queen;

And, princely peers, a happy time of day!

K. Edw. Happy, indeed, as we have spent
the day:—

Brother, we have done deeds of charity;
Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate,
Between these swelling wrong-incensed peers.

Glo. A blessed labour, my most sovereign liege.—

Among this princely heap, if any here,
By false intelligence, or wrong surmise,
Hold me a foe;

If I unwittingly, or in my rage,
Have aught committed that is hardly borne
By any in this presence, I desire
To reconcile me to his friendly peace:

'Tis death to me, to be at enmity;
I hate it, and desire all good men's love.—

First, madam, I entreat true peace of you,
Which I will purchase with my duteous service;—

Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham,
If ever any grudge were lodg'd between us;—
Of you, lord Rivers,—and lord Grey, of you,—
That all without desert have frown'd on me;—
Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen; indeed of all.
I do not know that Englishman alive,
With whom my soul is any jot at odds,
More than the infant that is born to-night;
I thank my God for my humility.

Q. Eliz. A holy-day shall this be kept hereafter:—

I would to God, all strifes were well compounded.—

My sovereign lord, I do beseech your highness
To take our brother Clarence to your grace.

Glo. Why, madam, have I offer'd love for
this,

To be so flouted in this royal presence?

Who knows not, that the gentle duke is dead?
[They all start.

You do him injury to scorn his corse.

K. Edw. Who knows not he is dead! who knows he is?

Q. Eliz. All-seeing heaven, what a world is
this!

Buck. Look I so pale, lord Dorset as the rest?

Dor. Ay, my good lord: and no man in the presence,

But his red colour hath forsook his cheeks.

K. Edw. Is Clarence dead? the order was revers'd.

Glo. But he, poor man, by your first order
And that a winged Mercury did bear; [died,
Some tardy cripple bore the countermand,
That came too lag to see him buried:—
God grant, that some, less noble, and less loyal,
Nearer in bloody thoughts, and not in blood,
Deserve not worse than wretched Clarence did,
And yet go current from suspicion.

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. A boon my sovereign, for my service
done!

K. Educ. I pr'ythee, peace; my soul is full of sorrow.

Stan. I will not rise, unless your highness hear me.

K. Educ. Then say at once, what is it thou request'st.

Stan. The forfeit, sovereign, of my servant's
Who slew to-day a riotous gentleman, [life;
Lately attendant on the duke of Norfolk.

K. Educ. Have I a tongue to doom my brother's death,

And shall that tongue give pardon to a slave?
My brother kill'd no man, his fault was thought,
And yet his punishment was bitter death.

Who sued to me for him? who, in my wrath,
Kneel'd at my feet, and bade me be advis'd?

Who spoke of brotherhood? who spoke of love?
Who told me, how the poor soul did forsake
The mighty Warwick, and did fight for me?

Who told me, in the field at Tewksbury,
When Oxford had me down, he rescued me,
And said, Dear brother, live, and be a king?

Who told me, when we both lay in the field,
Frozen almost to death, how he did lap me
Even in his garments; and did give himself,
All thin and naked, to the numb-cold night?

All this from my remembrance brutish wrath
Sinfully pluck'd, and not a man of you
Had so much grace to put it in my mind.

But when your carters, or your waiting-vassals,
Have done a drunken slaughter, and defac'd
The precious image of our dear Redeemer,

You straight are on your knees for pardon,
pardon;

And I, unjustly too, must grant it you:—
But for my brother, not a man would speak,—
Nor I (ungracious) speak unto myself

For him, poor soul.—The proudest of you all
Have been beholden to him in his life;
Yet none of you would once plead for his life.—

O God! I fear, thy justice will take hold On me, and you, and mine, and yours, for
this.—

Come, Hastings, help me to my closet. O,
Poor Clarence!

[Exit KING, QUEEN, HASTINGS, RIVERS,
DORSET, and GREY.

Glo. This is the fruit of rashness!—Mark'd
you not,

How that the guilty kindred of the queen
Look'd pale, when they did hear of Clarence'
death?

O! they did urge it still unto the king:
God will revenge it. Come, lords; will you go,
To comfort Edward with our company?

Buck. We wait upon your grace. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter the Duchess of YORK, with a SON and DAUGHTER of Clarence.

Son. Good grandam, tell us, is our father
dead?

Duch. No, boy

Dugh. Why do you weep so oft! and heave your breast;

And cry—O Clarence, my unhappy son!

Son. Why do you look on us, and shake your
head,

And call us—orphans, wretches, cast-aways,
If that our noble father be alive?

Duch. My pretty cousins, you mistake me
I do lament the sickness of the king, [bod;
As loath to lose him, not your father's death,
It were lost sorrow, to wail one that's lost.

Son. Then, grandam, you conclude that he is dead.

The king my uncle is to blame for this:
God will revenge it; whom I will importune
With earnest prayers all to that effect.

Dugh. And so will I.

Duch. Peace, children, peace! the king doth love you well:

Incapable* and shallow innocents, [death.
You cannot guess who caus'd your father's.

Son. Grandam, we can: for my good uncle
Gloster

Told me, the king, provok'd to't by the queen,
Devis'd impeachments to imprison him:

And when my uncle told me so, he wept,
And pitied me, and kindly kiss'd my cheek;

Bade me rely on him, as on my father,
And he would love me dearly as his child.

Duch. Ah, that deceit should steal such gentle shapes,

And with a virtuous visor hide deep vice!
He is my son, ay, and therein my shame,

Yet from my dugs he drew not this deceit.

Son. Think you, my uncle did dissemble, grandam?

Duch. Ay, boy.

Son. I cannot think it. Hark! what noise
is this!

Enter Queen ELIZABETH distractedly; RIVERS, and DORSET, following her.

Q. Eliz. Ah! who shall hinder me to wail and weep?

To chide my fortune, and torment myself?
I'll join with black despair against my soul.

And to myself become an enemy.

Duch. What means this scene of rude impatience?

Q. Eliz. To make an act of tragic violence:—
Edward, my lord, thy son, our king, is dead.

Why grow the branches, when the root is gone?
Why wither not the leaves, that want their sap?—

If you will live, lament; if die, be brief.

That our swift-winged souls may catch the king's;

Or, like obedient subjects, follow him

To his new kingdom of perpetual rest.

Duch. Ah, so much interest have I in thy sorrow,

As I had title in thy noble husband!

I have bewept a worthy husband's death,

And liv'd by looking on his images:

But now two mirrors of his princely semblance

Are crack'd in pieces by malignant death;

And I for comfort have but one false glass,

That grieves me when I see my shame in him.

Thou art a widow; yet thou art a mother,

And hast the comfort of thy children left thee:
But death hath snatch'd my husband from my arms,

And pluck'd two crutches from my feeble
Clarence, and Edward. O, what cause have I.

(Thine being but a moiety of my grief,)

To over-go thy plaints, and drown thy cries!

Son. Ah, aunt! you wept not for our father's death;

How can we aid you with our kindred tears?

Duch. Our fatherless distress was left un-moan'd,

Your widow-dolour likewise be unwept!

Q. Eliz. Give me no help in lamentation,
I am not barren to bring forth laments:

All springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,
That I, being govern'd by the watery moon,
May send forth plenteous tears to drown the world!

Ah, for my husband, for my dear lord Ed[ward!

Chil. Ah, for our father, for our dear lord Clarence!

Duch. Alas, for both, both mine, Edward and Clarence!

Q. Eliz. What stay had I, but Edward? and he's gone.

Chil. What stay had we, but Clarence? and he's gone.

Duch. What stays had I, but they? and they are gone.

Q. Eliz. Was never widow, had so dear a loss.

Chil. Were never orphans, had so dear a loss.

Duch. Was never mother had so dear a loss.
Alas! I am the mother of these griefs;
Their woes are parcell'd,* mine are general.
She for an Edward weeps, and so do I;
I for a Clarence weep, so doth not she:
These babes for Clarence weep, and so do I:
I for an Edward weep, so do not they:—
Alas! you three, on me, threefold distress'd,
Pour all your tears, I am your sorrow's nurse.
And I will pamper it with lamentations.

Der. Comfort, dear mother; God is much displeas'd,

That you take with unthankfulness his doing;
In common worldly things, 'tis call'd—un-grateful,

With dull unwillingness to repay a debt,
Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent;
Much more to be thus opposite with heaven,
For it requires the royal debt it lent you.

Riv. Madam, bethink you, like a careful mother,

(Of the young prince your son: send straight for him,

Let him be crown'd; in him your comfort lives:
Drown desperate sorrow in dead Edward's grave,

And plant your joys in living Edward's throne.

Enter GLOSTER, BUCKINGHAM, STANLEY, HASTINGS, RATCLIFF, and others.

Glo. Sister, have comfort: all of us have cause
To wail the dimming of our shining star;
But none can cure their harms by wailing them.—

Madam, my mother, I do cry you mercy,
I did not see your grace:—Humbly on my knee

I crave your blessing.

Duch. God bless thee; and put meekness in thy breast,
Love, charity, obedience, and true duty!

Glo. Amen; and make me die a good old man!—

That is the butt-end of a mother's blessing;
[Aside.

I marvel, that her grace did leave it out.

* Divided.

Buck. You cloudy princes, and heart sorrowing peers,

That bear this mutual heavy load of moan,
Now cheer each other in each other's love:
Though we have spent our harvest of this king,
We are to reap the harvest of his son.

The broken rancour of your high-swoln hearts,
But lately splinted, knit, and join'd together,
Must gently be preserv'd, cherish'd, and kept:
Me seemeth good, that, with some little train,
Forthwith from Ludlow the young prince be fetch'd

Hither to London, to be crown'd our king.

Riv. Why with some little train, my lord of Buckingham?

Buck. Marry, my lord, lest, by a multitude,
The new-heal'd wound of malice should break out;

Which would be so much the more dangerous,
By how much the estate is green, and yet un-govern'd:

Where every horse bears his commanding rein,
And may direct his course as please himself,
As well the fear of harm, as harm apparent,
In my opinion, ought to be prevented.

Glo. I hope, the king made peace with all of us;

And the compact is firm, and true, in me.

Riv. And so in me; and so, I think, in all:
Yet, since it is but green, it should be put
To no apparent likelihood of breach, (urged:
Which, haply, by much company might be
Therefore I say, with noble Buckingham,
That it is meet so few should fetch the prince.

Hast. And so say I.

Glo. Then be it so; and go we to determine
Who they shall be that straight shall post to Ludlow.

Madam,—and you my mother,—will you go
To give your censures* in this weighty business?

[Exeunt all but BUCKINGHAM and GLOSTER.

Buck. My lord, whoever journeys to the prince,
For God's sake, let not us two stay at home:
For, by the way, I'll sort occasion,
As index† to the story we late talk'd of,
To part the queen's proud kindred from the prince.

Glo. My other self, my counsel's consistory,
My oracle, my prophet!—My dear cousin,
I, as a child, will go by thy direction.

Towards Ludlow then, for we'll not stay behind.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same.—A Street.

Enter two CITIZENS, meeting.

1 Cit. Good morrow, neighbour: Whither away so fast?

2 Cit. I promise you, I scarcely know myself:

Hear you the news abroad?

1 Cit. Yes; the king's dead.

2 Cit. Ill news, by'r lady; seldom comes the better:

I fear, I fear, 'twill prove a giddy world.

Enter another CITIZEN.

3 Cit. Neighbours, God speed!

1 Cit. Give you good morrow, Sir.

3 Cit. Doth the news hold of good king Edward's death?

2 Cit. Ay, Sir, it is too true; God help, the while!

* Opinion.

† Preparatory.

3 Cit. Then, masters, look to see a troubous world.
 1 Cit. No, no; by God's good grace, his son shall reign.
 3 Cit. Woe to that land, that's govern'd by a child!
 2 Cit. In him there is a hope of government;
 That, in his nonage,* council under him,
 And, in his full and ripen'd years, himself,
 No doubt, shall then, and till then, govern
 well.
 1 Cit. So stood the state, when Henry the sixth
 Was crown'd in Paris but at nine months old.
 3 Cit. Stood the state so? no, no, good friends, God wot;†
 For then this land was famously enrich'd
 With politic grave counsel; then the king
 Had virtuous uncles to protect his grace.
 1 Cit. Why, so hath this, both by his father and mother.
 3 Cit. Better it were they all came by his
 father;
 (Or, by his father, there were none at all:
 For emulation now, who shall be nearest,
 Will touch us all too near, if God prevent not.
 O, full of danger is the duke of Gloster;
 And the queen's sons, and brothers, haught
 and proud:
 And were they to be rul'd, and not to rule,
 This sickly land might solace as before.
 1 Cit. Come, come, we fear the worst; all will be well.
 3 Cit. When clouds are seen, wise men put on their cloaks;
 When great leaves fall, then winter is at hand;
 When the sun sets, who doth not look for
 night?
 Untimely storms make men expect a dearth:
 All may be well; but, if God sort it so,
 'Tis more than we deserve, or I expect.
 2 Cit. Truly, the hearts of men are full of fear:
 You cannot reason; almost with a man
 That looks not heavily, and full of dread.
 3 Cit. Before the days of change, still is it so:
 By a divine instinct, men's minds mistrust
 Ensuing danger; as, by proof, we see
 The water swell before a boist'rous storm.
 But leave it all to God. Whither away?
 2 Cit. Marry, we were sent for to the justices.
 3 Cit. And so was I; I'll bear you company.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The same.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter the Archbishop of YORK, the young Duke of YORK, Queen ELIZABETH, and the Duchess of YORK.

Arch. Last night, I heard, they lay at Stony-Stratford;
 And at Northampton they do rest to-night:
 To-morrow, or next day, they will be here.
 Duch. I long with all my heart to see the prince;
 I hope, he is much grown since last I saw him.
 Q. Eliz. But I hear, no; they say, my son of York
 Hath almost overta'en him in his growth.
 York. Ay, mother, but I would not have it
 so.
 Duch. Why, my young cousin; it is good to grow.
 York. Grandam, one night, as we did sit at supper,

My uncle Rivers talk'd how I did grow
 More than my brother; Ay, quoth my uncle
 Gloster,
Small herbe have grace, great weeds do grow apace
 And since, methinks, I would not grow so fast.
 Because sweet flowers are slow, and weeds
 make haste.
 Duch. 'Good faith, 'good faith, the saying did not hold
 In him that did object the same to thee:
 He was the wretched'st thing, when he was young,
 So long a growing, and so leisurely, 'cious.
 That, if his rule were true, he should be gra-Arch. And so, no doubt, he is, my gracious
 madam.
 Duch. I hope, he is; but yet let mother doubt.
 York. Now, by my troth, if I had been re-member'd,
 I could have given my uncle's grace a flout,
 To touch his growth, nearer than he touch'd
 mine.
 Duch. How, my young York? I pr'ythee, let me hear it.
 York. Marry, they say, my uncle grew so fast,
 That he could gnaw a crust at two hours old.
 'Twas full two years ere I could get a tooth
 Grandam, this would have been a biting jest.
 Duch. I pr'ythee, pretty York, who told thee
 this?
 York. Grandam, his nurse.
 Duch. His nurse? why, she was dead ere thou wast born.
 York. If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who told me.
 Q. Eliz. A parlous* boy: Go to, you are too shrewd.
 Arch. Good madam, be not angry with the child.
 Q. Eliz. Pitchers have ears.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Arch. Here comes a messenger:
 What news?
 Mess. Such news, my lord,
 As grieves me to unfold.
 Q. Eliz. How doth the prince?
 Mess. Well, madam, and in health.
 Duch. What is thy news?
 Mess. Lord Rivers, and lord Grey, are sent to Pomfret,
 With them Sir Thomas Vaughan, prisoners.
 Duch. Who hath committed them?
 Mess. The mighty dukes,
 Gloster and Buckingham.
 Q. Eliz. For what offence?
 Mess. The sum of all I can, I have disclos'd.
 Why, or for what, the nobles were committed.
 Is all unknown to me, my gracious lady.
 Q. Eliz. Ah me, I see the ruin of my house!
 The tiger now hath seiz'd the gentle hind;
 Insulting tyranny begins to jut
 Upon the innocent and awless throne:—
 Welcome, destruction, blood, and massacre!
 I see, as in a map, the end of all.
 Duch. Accursed and unquiet wrangling days!
 How many of you have mine eyes beheld?
 My husband lost his life to get the crown;
 And often up and down my sons were lost,
 For me to joy, and weep, their gain, and loss.
 And being seated, and domestic broils
 Clean over-blown, themselves, the conquerors,
 Make war upon themselves; brother to brother.

* Minority.

† Known.

‡ Converse.

* Perilous, dangerous.

Blood to blood, self 'gainst self:—O, preposterous

And frantic courage, and thy damned spleen;
Or let me die, to look on death no more!

Q. Eliz. Come, come, my boy, we will to sanctuary,—

Madam, farewell.

Duch. Stay, I will go with you.

Q. Eliz. You have no cause.

Arch. My gracious lady, go, [To the QUEEN.]

And thither bear your treasure and your goods.

For my part, I'll resign unto your grace

The seal I keep; And so betide to me,

As well I tender you, and all of yours!

Come, I'll conduct you to the sanctuary.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The same.—A Street.

The trumpets sound. Enter the Prince of WALES, GLOSTER, BUCKINGHAM, Cardinal BOUCHIER, and others.

Buck. Welcome, sweet prince, to London, to your chamber.

Glo. Welcome, dear cousin, my thoughts' sovereign:

The weary way hath made you melancholy.

Prince. No, uncle; but our crosses on the way

Have made it tedious, wearisome, and heavy:
I want more uncles here to welcome me.

Glo. Sweet prince, the untainted virtue of your years

Have not yet divid'd into the world's deceit:

No more can you distinguish of a man,

Than of his outward show; which, God he knows,

Seldom, or never, jumpeth with the heart.

Those uncles, which you want, were dangerous;

Your grace attended to the sugar'd words,

But look'd not on the poison of their hearts:

God keep you from them, and from such false friends!

Prince. God keep me from false friends! but they were none.

Glo. My lord, the mayor of London comes to greet you.

Enter the Lord MAYOR, and his Train.

May. God bless your grace with health and happy days!

Prince. I thank you, good my lord;—and thank you all.— [Exeunt MAYOR, &c.]

I thought my mother, and my brother York,

Would long ere this have met us on the way:

Fie, what a slug is Hastings! that he comes not

To tell us, whether they will come, or no.

Enter HASTINGS.

Buck. And in good time, here comes the sweating lord.

Prince. Welcome, my lord: What, will our mother come?

Hast. On what occasion, God he knows, not I,

The queen your mother, and your brother York,

Have taken sanctuary: The tender prince

Would fain have come with me to meet your grace,

But by his mother was perforce withheld.

Buck. Fie! what an indirect and peevish course

Is this of hers?— Lord cardinal, will your grace

Persuade the queen to send the duke of York
Unto his princely brother presently?

If she deny,—lord Hastings, go with him,
And from her jealous arms pluck him perforce.

Card. My lord of Buckingham, if my weak oratory

Can from his mother win the duke of York,
Anon expect him here: But if she be obdurate

To mild entreaties, God in heaven forbid

We should infringe the holy privilege

Of blessed sanctuary! not for all this land,

Would I be guilty of so deep a sin.

Buck. You are too senseless-obstinate, my

Too ceremonious, and traditional: [lord,]

Weigh it but with the grossness of this age,

You break not sanctuary in seizing him.

The benefit thereof is always granted [place,]

To those whose dealings have deserv'd the

And those who have the wit to claim the place:

This prince hath neither claim'd it, nor de-serv'd it;

And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have it:

Then, taking him from thence, that is not

there,

You break no privilege nor charter there.

Oft have I heard of sanctuary men;

But sanctuary children, ne'er till now.

Card. My lord, you shall o'er-rule my mind for once.—

Come on, lord Hastings, will you go with me?

Hast. I go, my lord.

Prince. Good lords, make all the speedy haste you may.

[Exeunt CARDINAL and HASTINGS.]

Say, uncle Gloster, if our brother come,

Where shall we sojourn till our coronation?

Glo. Where it seems best unto your royal

self.

If I may counsel you, some day, or two,

Your highness shall repose you at the Tower:

Then where you please, and shall be thought

most fit

For your best health and recreation.

Prince. I do not like the Tower, of any place:—

Did Julius Cæsar build that place, my lord?

Glo. He did, my gracious lord, begin that

place;

Which, since, succeeding ages have re-edified.

Prince. Is it upon record? or else reported

Successively from age to age he built it?

Buck. Upon record, my gracious lord.

Prince. But say, my lord, it were not regis-

ter'd;

Methinks, the truth should live from age to age,

As 'twere retail'd to all posterity,

Even to the general all-ending day.

Glo. So wise so young, they say, do ne'er live long. [Aside.]

Prince. What say you, uncle?

Glo. I say, without characters, fame lives long.

Thus, like the formal* vice, Iniquity, } Aside.

I moralize two meanings in one word. }

Prince. That Julius Cæsar was a famous

man;

With what his valour did enrich his wit,

His wit set down to make his valour live:

Death makes no conquest of this conqueror,

For now he lives in fame, though not in life.—

I'll tell you what, my cousin Buckingham.

Buck. What, my gracious lord?

Prince. An if I live until I be a man,

I'll win our ancient right in France again,

Or die a soldier, as I liv'd a king.

* Sensible vice the buffoon in the old plays.

Glo. Short summers lightly* have a forward spring. [Aside.]

Enter YORK, HASTINGS, and the CARDINAL.

Buck. Now, in good time, here comes the duke of York.

Prince. Richard of York! how fares our loving brother?

York. Well, my dread lord; so must I call you now.

Prince. Ay, brother; to our grief, as it is yours: [title,

Too late! he died, that might have kept that Which by his death hath lost much majesty.

Glo. How fares our cousin, noble lord of York?

York. I thank you, gentle uncle. O, my lord,

You said, that idle weeds are fast in growth: The prince my brother hath outgrown me far.

Glo. He hath, my lord.

York. And therefore is he idle?

Glo. O, my fair cousin, I must not say so.

York. Then is he more beholden to you, than I.

Glo. He may command me, as my sovereign: But you have power in me, as in a kinsman.

York. I pray you, uncle, then, give me this dagger.

Glo. My dagger, little cousin? with all my heart.

Prince. A beggar, brother?

York. Of my kind uncle, that I know will give;

And, being but a toy, which is no grief to give.

Glo. A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin.

York. A greater gift! O, that's the sword to it!

Glo. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough.

York. O then, I see, you'll part but with light gifts;

In weightier things you'll say a beggar, nay.

Glo. It is too weighty for your grace to wear.

York. I weigh it lightly, were it heavier.

Glo. What, would you have my weapon, little lord?

York. I would, that I might thank you as you call me.

Glo. How?

York. Little.

Prince. My lord of York will still be cross in talk;—

Uncle, your grace knows how to bear with him.

York. You mean, to bear me, not to bear with me:—

Uncle, my brother mocks both you and me; Because that I am little, like an ape,

He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulders.

Buck. With what a sharp-provided wit he reasons!

To mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle, He prettily and aptly taunts himself:

So cunning, and so young, is wonderful.

Glo. My gracious lord, will't please you pass along?

Myself, and my good cousin Buckingham, Will to your mother; to entreat of her,

To meet you at the Tower, and welcome you.

York. What, will you go unto the Tower, my lord?

Prince. My lord protector needs will have it so.

York. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower.

Glo. Why, Sir, what should you fear?

York. Marry, my uncle Clarence' ugly ghost;

My grandam told me, he was murder'd there.

Prince. I fear no uncles dead.

Glo. Nor none that live, I hope.

Prince. An if they live, I hope, I need not fear.

But come, my lord, and, with a heavy heart, Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower.

[Exeunt PRINCE, YORK, HASTINGS, CARDINAL, and Attendants.]

Buck. Think you, my lord, this little prating York

Was not incensed* by his subtle mother, To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously?

Glo. No doubt, no doubt: O, 'tis a pious boy;

Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable; He's all the mother's, from the top to toe.

Buck. Well, let them rest.—

Come hither, gentle Catesby; thou art sworn As deeply to effect what we intend,

As closely to conceal what we impart: [way:—

Thou know'st our reasons urg'd upon the What think'st thou? is it not an easy matter

To make William lord Hastings of our mad, For the instalment of this noble duke

In the seat royal of this famous isle?

Cate. He for his father's sake so loves the prince,

That he will not be won to aught against him.

Buck. What think'st thou then of Stanley? will not he?

Cate. He will do all in all as Hastings doth.

Buck. Well then, no more but this: Go, gentle Catesby, [ings,

And, as it were far off, sound thou lord Hast- How he doth stand affected to our purpose;

And summon him to-morrow to the Tower, To sit about the coronation.

If thou dost find him tractable to us, Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons:

If he be leaden, icy, cold, unwilling, He thou so too, and so break off the talk,

And give us notice of his inclination: For we to-morrow hold divided; councils.

Wherein thyself shalt highly be employ'd.

Glo. Commend me to lord William: tell him, Catesby,

His dangerous knot of adversaries To-morrow are let blood at Pomfret castle.

And bid my friend, for joy of this good news, Give mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more.

Buck. Good Catesby, go, effect this business soundly.

Cate. My good lords both, with all the heed I can.

Glo. Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere we sleep?

Cate. You shall, my lord.

Glo. At Crosby-place, there shall you find us both. [Exit CATESBY.]

Buck. Now, my lord, what shall we, if we perceive

Lord Hastings will not yield to our complet-*

Glo. Chop off his head, man;—some what we will do.—

And, look, when I am king, claim thou of me The earldom of Hereford, and all the move-ables

Whereof the king my brother was possess'd.

Buck. I'll claim that promise at your grace's hand.

* Commonly.

† Lately.

* Incited.

† Intelligent.

‡ Separate.

Glo. And look to have it yielded with all kindness.
Come, let us sup betimes; that afterwards
We may digest our complots in some form.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Before Lord HASTINGS' House.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. My lord, my lord,— [Knocking.]Hast. [Within.] Who knocks?Mess. One from lord Stanley.Hast. [Within.] What is't o'clock?Mess. Upon the stroke of four.

Enter HASTINGS.

Hast. Cannot thy master sleep these tedious nights?Mess. So it should seem by that I have to say. [ship.]

First, he commends him to your noble lord—

Hast. And then,—Mess. And then he sends you word, he dreamtTo-night the boar had rased off his helm;
Besides, he says, there are two councils held;
And that may be determin'd at the one,
Which may make you and him to rue at the other. [pleasure,—]Therefore he sends to know your lordship's
If presently, you will take horse with him,
And with all speed post with him toward the north,

To shun the danger that his soul divines.

Hast. Go, fellow, go, return unto thy lord;
Bid him not fear the separated councils:
His honour, and myself, are at the one;
And, at the other, is my good friend Catesby;
Where nothing can proceed, that toucheth us,
Whereof I shall not have intelligence.
Tell him, his fears are shallow, wanting instance:*And for his dreams—I wonder, he's so fond†
To trust the mockery of unquiet slumbers:
To fly the boar, before the boar pursues,
Were to incense the boar to follow us,
And make pursuit, where he did mean no chase.Go, bid thy master rise and come to me;
And we will both together to the Tower,
Where, he shall see, the boar† will use us kindly.Mess. I'll go, my lord, and tell him what you say. [Exit.]

Enter CATESBY.

Cate. Many good morrows to my noble lord!Hast. Good morrow, Catesby; you are early stirring: [state?]What news, what news, in this our tottering Cate. It is a reeling world, indeed, my lord;
And, I believe, will never stand upright,
Till Richard wear the garland of the realm.Hast. How! wear the garland? dost thou mean the crown?Cate. Ay, my good lord.Hast. I'll have this crown of mine cut from my shoulders,
Before I'll see the crown so foul misplac'd.
But canst thou guess that he doth aim at it?Cate. Ay, on my life; and hopes to find you forwardUpon his party, for the gain thereof:
And, thereupon, he sends you this good news,—That, this same very day, your enemies,
The kindred of the queen, must die at Pomfret.Hast. Indeed, I am no mourner for that news,Because they have been still my adversaries:
But, that I'll give my voice on Richard's side,
To bar my master's heirs in true descent,
God knows, I will not do it, to the death.Cate. God keep your lordship in that gracious mind!Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelve-month hence,That they, who brought me in my master's hate,
I live to look upon their tragedy.Well, Catesby, ere a fortnight make me older,
I'll send some packing, that yet think not on't.Cate. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious lord,

When men are unprepar'd, and look not for it.

Hast. O monstrous, monstrous! and so falls it outWith Rivers, Vaughan, Grey: and so 'twill do
With some men else, who think themselves as safeAs thou, and I; who, as thou know'st, are dear
To princely Richard, and to Buckingham.Cate. The princes both make high account of you,—

For they account his head upon the bridge. [Aside.]

Hast. I know, they do; and I have well deserv'd it.

Enter STANLEY.

Come on, come on, where is your boar-spear, man?

Fear you the boar, and go so unprovided?

Stan. My lord, good-morrow; and good morrow, Catesby:—You may jest on, but, by the holy rood,*
I do not like these several councils, I.Hast. My lord, I hold my life as dear as
And never, in my life, I do protest, [yours;
Was it more precious to me than 'tis now:
Think you, but that I know our state secure,
I would be so triumphant as I am?Stan. The lords at Pomfret, when they rode from London, [sure,
Were jocund, and suppos'd their states were
And they, indeed, had no cause to mistrust;
But yet, you see, how soon the day o'er-cast.
This sudden stab of rancour I misdoubt;
Pray God, I say, I prove a needless coward!
What, shall we toward the Tower? the day is spent.Hast. Come, come, have with you.—Wott'st you what, my lord?

To-day, the lords you talk of are beheaded.

Stan. They, for their truth, might better wear their heads, [hats.]Than some, that have accus'd them, wear their
But come, my lord, let's away.

Enter a PURSUIVANT.

Hast. Go on before, I'll talk with this good fellow. [Exit STAN. and CATESBY.]

How now, sirrah? how goes the world with thee?

Purs. The better, that your lordship please to ask.Hast. I tell thee, man, 'tis better with me now, [meet:]Than when thou met'st me last where now we

But now I tell thee, (keep it to thyself,)
This day those enemies are put to death,
And I in better state than ere I was.

Purs. God hold it, to your honour's good content!

Hast. Gramercy, fellow: There, drink that for me. [Throwing him his purse.]

Purs. I thank your honour. [Exit PURSUIVANT.]

Enter a PRIEST.

Pr. Well met, my lord; I am glad to see your honour.

Hast. I thank thee, good Sir John, with all my heart.

I am in your debt for your last exercise;
Come the next Sabbath, and I will content you.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. What, talking with a priest, lord chamberlain? [priest;

Your friends at Pomfret, they do need the Your honour hath no shriving* work in hand.

Hast. 'Good faith, and when I met this holy man,

The men you talk of came into my mind.

What, go you toward the Tower?

Buck. I do, my lord; but long I cannot stay there:

I shall return before your lordship thence.

Hast. Nay, like enough, for I stay dinner there.

Buck. And supper too, although thou know'st it not. [Aside.]

Come, will you go?

Hast. I'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Pomfret.—Before the Castle.

Enter RATCLIFF, with a guard, conducting RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN, to Execution.

Rat. Come, bring forth the prisoners.

Riv. Sir Richard Ratcliff let me tell thee this,—

To-day, shalt thou behold a subject die,
For truth, for duty, and for loyalty.

Grey. God keep the prince from all the pack of you!

A knot you are of damned blood-suckers.

Vaugh. You live, that shall cry woe for this hereafter.

Rat. Despatch; the limit of your lives is out.

Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody Fatal and ominous to noble peers! [prison,

Within the guilty closure of thy walls,
Richard the second here was hack'd to death:

And, for more slander to thy dismal seat,
We give thee up our guiltless blood to drink.

Grey. Now Margaret's curse is fallen upon our heads,

When she exclaim'd on Hastings, you and I,
For standing by when Richard stabb'd her son.

Riv. Then curs'd she Hastings, then curs'd she Buckingham,

Then curs'd she Richard:—O, remember, God,
To hear her prayers for them, as now for us!

And for my sister, and her princely sons,—
Be satisfied, dear God, with our true bloods,

Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must be spilt!

Rat. Make haste, the hour of death is expiate.†

* Confession.

† Expiated, completed

Riv. Come, Grey,—come, Vaughan,—let us here embrace:

Farewell, until we meet again in heaven.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—London.—A Room in the Tower.

BUCKINGHAM, STANLEY, HASTINGS, the Bishop of ELY, CATESBY, LOVEL, and others, sitting at a Table: Officers of the Council attending.

Hast. Now, 'noble peers, the cause why we are met

Is—to determine of the coronation:

In God's name, speak, when is the royal day?

Buck. Are all things ready for that royal time?

Stan. They are; and wants but nomination.

Ely. To-morrow then I judge a happy day.

Buck. Who knows the lord protector's mind herein?

Who is most inward* with the noble duke?

Ely. Your grace, we think, should soonest know his mind.

Buck. We know each other's faces: for our hearts,—

He knows no more of mine, than I of yours;

Nor I, of his, my lord, than you of mine:—

Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love.

Hast. I thank his grace, I know he loves me well;

But, for his purpose in the coronation,

I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd

His gracious pleasure any way therein:

But you, my noble lord, may name the time;

And in the duke's behalf I'll give my voice,

Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part.

Enter GLOSTER.

Ely. In happy time, here comes the duke himself.

Glo. My noble lords and cousins, all, good morrow:

I have been long a sleeper; but, I trust,

My absence doth neglect no great design,

Which by my presence might have been concluded.

Buck. Had you not come upon your cue, my lord, [part.—

William lord Hastings had pronounc'd your I mean, your voice,—for crowning of the king.

Glo. Than my lord Hastings, no man might be bolder;

His lordship knows me well, and loves me well.—

My lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborn,

I saw good strawberries in your garden there;
I do beseech you send for some of them.

Ely. Marry, and will, my lord, with all my heart. [Exit ELY.]

Glo. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you. [Takes him aside.]

Catesby hath sounded Hastings in our business;

And finds the testy gentleman so hot,
That he will lose his head, ere give consent.

His master's child, as worshipfully he terms it,
Shall lose the royalty of England's throne.

Buck. Withdraw yourself awhile, I'll go with you.

[Exeunt GLOSTER and BUCKINGHAM.]

Stan. We have not yet set down this day of triumph.

To-morrow, in my judgement, is too sudden;
For I myself am not so well provided,

As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

* Intimate

Enter Bishop of ELY.

Is my lord protector? I have these strawberries.
He looks cheerfully and smoothly;
He is not so other likes him well,
He bid good morrow with such

Lov. Come, come, despatch; 'tis bootless to exclaim.

Hast. O, bloody Richard!—miserable England!

I prophesy the fearful'st time to thee,
That ever wretched age hath look'd upon.—
Come, lead me to the block, bear him my head;
They smile at me, who shortly shall be dead.
[Exit.

SCENE V.—The same.—The Tower-walls.

Enter GLOSTER and BUCKINGHAM, in rusty armour, marvellous ill-favour'd.

Glo. Come, cousin, canst thou quake, and change thy colour?
Murder thy breath in middle of a word,—
And then again begin, and stop again,
As if thou wert distraught, and mad with terror?

Buck. Tut, I can counterfeit the deep tragedian;

Speak, and look back, and pry on every side,
Tremble and start at wagging of a straw,
Intending deep suspicion: ghastly looks
Are at my service, like enforced smiles;
And both are ready in their offices,
At any time, to grace my stratagems.
But what, is Catesby gone?

Glo. He is; and, see, he brings the mayor along.

Enter the LORD MAYOR and CATESBY.

Buck. Let me alone to entertain him.—Lord mayor,—

Glo. Look to the draw-bridge there.

Buck. Hark, hark! a drum.

Glo. Catesby, o'erlook the walls.

Buck. Lord mayor, the reason we have sent for you,—

Glo. Look back, defend thee, here are enemies.

Buck. God and our innocence defend and guard us!

Enter LOVEL and RATCLIFF, with HASTINGS' head.

Glo. Be patient, they are friends; Ratcliff, and Lovel.

Lov. Here is the head of that ignoble traitor, The dangerous and unsuspected Hastings.

Glo. So dear I lov'd the man, that I must weep.

I took him for the plainest harmless't creature,
That breath'd upon the earth a Christian;
Made him my book, wherein my soul recorded
The history of all her secret thoughts: [virtue,
So smooth he daub'd his vice with show of
That, his apparent open guilt omitted,—
I mean, his conversation with Shore's wife,—
He liv'd from all attainder of suspect.

Buck. Well, well, he was the covert'st shelter'd traitor

That ever liv'd.—Look you, my lord mayor,
Would you imagine, or almost believe,
(Were't not, that by great preservation
We live to tell it you,) the subtle traitor
This day had plotted in the council-house,
To murder me, and my good lord of Gloster?

May. What! had he so?

Glo. What! think you we are Turks, or infidels?

Or that we would, against the form of law,
Proceed thus rashly in the villain's death;
But that the extreme peril of the case,

* Pretending.

The peace of England, and our persons' safety,
Enforc'd us to this execution?

May. Now, fair befall you! he deserv'd his death;

And your good graces both have well proceeded,
To warn false traitors from the like attempts.
I never look'd for better at his hands,
After he once fell in with mistress Shore.

Buck. Yet had we not determin'd he should Until your lordship came to see his end; [die,
Which now the loving haste of these our friends, [ed:

Somewhat against our meaning, hath prevent-
Because, my lord, we would have had you heard
The traitor speak, and timorously confess
The manner and the purpose of his treasons;
That you might well have signified the same
Unto the citizens, who, haply, may Misconstrue us in him, and wail his death.

May. But, my good lord, your grace's word shall serve,

As well as I had seen, and heard him speak:
And do not doubt, right noble princes both,
But I'll acquaint our duteous citizens
With all your just proceedings in this case.

Glo. And to that end we wish'd your lordship
here,
To avoid the censures of the carping world.

Buck. But since you came too late of our intent,

Yet witness what you hear we did intend:
And so, my good lord mayor, we bid farewell.
[Exit LORD MAYOR.

Glo. Go after, after, cousin Buckingham.
The mayor towards Guildhall hies him in all post:—

There, at your meetest vantage of the time,
Infer the bastardy of Edward's children:
Tell them, how Edward put to death a citizen,
Only for saying—he would make his son
Heir to the crown; meaning, indeed his house,
Which, by the sign thereof, was termed so.
Moreover, urge his hateful luxury,
And bestial appetite in change of lust;
Which stretch'd unto their servants, daughters,
wives,

Even where his raging eye, or savage heart,
Without control, list'd to make his prey.
Nay, for a need, thus far come near my person:— [child

Tell them, when that my mother went with
Of that insatiate Edward, noble York,
My princely father, then had wars in France;
And, by just computation of the time,
Found, that the issue was not his begot;
Which well appeared in his lineaments,
Being nothing like the noble duke my father:
Yet touch this sparingly, as 'twere far off;
Because, my lord, you know, my mother lives.

Buck. Doubt not, my lord; I'll play the orator,

As if the golden fee, for which I plead,
Were for myself: and so, my lord, adieu.

Glo. If you thrive well, bring them to Bay-nard's castle;
Where you shall find me well accompanied,
With reverend fathers, and well-learned bishops.

Buck. I go; and, towards three or four o'clock,
Look for the news that the Guild-hall affords.
[Exit BUCKINGHAM.

Glo. Go, Lovel, with all speed to doctor
Shaw,— [both

Go thou [To CATE.] to friar Penker;—bid them
Meet me. within this hour, at Baynard's castle.
[Exeunt LOVEL and CATESBY.]

Now will I in, to take some privy order
To draw the brats of Clarence out of sight;
And to give notice, that no manner of person
Have, any time, recourse unto the princes.
[Exit]

SCENE VI.—A Street.

Enter a SCRIVENER.

Scriv. Here is the indictment of the good lord
Hastings;
Which in a set hand fairly is engross'd,
That it may be to-day read o'er in Paul's.
And mark how well the sequel hangs together:—

Eleven hours I have spent to write it over,
For yesternight by Catesby was it sent me;
The precedent* was full as long a doing:
And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd,
Untainted, unexamin'd, free, at liberty.
Here's a good world the while!—Who is so
That cannot see this palpable device? [gross,
Yet who so bold, but says—he sees it not?
Bad is the world; and all will come to nought,
When such bad dealing must be seen in thought. [Exit]

SCENE VII.—The same.—Court of Baynard's Castle.

Enter GLOSTER and BUCKINGHAM, meeting.

Glo. How now, how now? what say the citizens?

Buck. Now by the holy mother of our Lord,
The citizens are mum, say not a word.

Glo. Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's children?

Buck. I did; with his contract with Lady
Lucy,

And his contract by deputy in France:
The insatiate greediness of his desires,
And his enforcement of the city wives;
His tyranny for trifles; his own bastardy,—
As being got, your father then in France;
And his resemblance, being not like the duke.
Withal, I did infer your lineaments,—
Being the right idea of your father,
Both in your form and nobleness of mind:
Laid open all your victories in Scotland,
Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace.
Your bounty, virtue, fair humility;
Indeed, left nothing, fitting for your purpose.
Untouch'd, or slightly handled, in discourse.
And, when my oratory grew to an end,
I bade them, that did love their country's good,
Cry—God save Richard, England's royal king!

Glo. And did they so?

Buck. No, so God help me, they spake not a word;

But, like dumb statues, or breathless stones.
Star'd on each other, and look'd deadly pale.
Which when I saw, I reprehended them;
And ask'd the mayor, what meant this wilful
silence:

His answer was,—the people were not us'd
To be spoke to, but by the recorder.
Then he was urg'd to tell my tale again:
Thus saith the duke, thus hath the duke inferr'd:
But nothing spoke in warrant from himself.
When he had done, some followers of mine
own,

At lower end o'the hall, hurl'd up their caps,
And some ten voices cried, God save king Richard!

And thus I took the vantage of the few,—
Thanks, gentle citizens, and friends, quoth I;

* Original draft.

*This general applause, and cheerful shout,
Argues your wisdom, and your love to Richard:
And even here broke off and came away.*

Glo. What tongueless blocks were they;
Would they not speak? [come?]

Will not the mayor then, and his brethren,

Buck. The mayor is here at hand; intend some fear;

Be not you spoke with, but by mighty suit:
And look you get a prayer-book in your hand,
And stand between two churchmen, good my
lord;

For on that ground I'll make a holy descant:
And be not easily won to our requests;
Play the maid's part, still answer nay, and take it.

Glo. I go; And if you plead as well for
As I can say nay to thee for myself, [them,
No doubt we'll bring it to a happy issue.

Buck. Go, go, up to the leads; the lord mayor knocks. [Exit GLOSTER.

Enter the LORD MAYOR, Aldermen, and Citizens.

Welcome, my lord; I dance attendance here;
I think, the duke will not be spoke withal.—

Enter, from the Castle, CATESBY.

Now, Catesby! what says your lord to my request?

Cate. He doth entreat your grace, my noble
To visit him to-morrow, or next day: [lord,
He is within, with two right reverend fathers,
Divinely bent to meditation;
And in no worldly suit would he be mov'd,
To draw him from his holy exercise.

Buck. Return, good Catesby, to the gracious
duke;

Tell him, myself, the mayor, and aldermen,
In deep designs, in matter of great moment,
No less importing than our general good,
Are come to have some conference with his grace.

Cate. I'll signify so much unto him straight.
[Exit.

Buck. Ah, ha, my lord, this prince is not an Edward!

He is not lolling on a lewd day-bed,†
But on his knees at meditation;
Not dallying with a brace of courtezans,
But meditating with two deep divines;
Not sleeping, to engross‡ his idle body,
But praying, to enrich his watchful soul:
Happy were England, would this virtuous
prince

Take on himself the sovereignty thereof:
But, sure, I fear, we shall ne'er win him to it.

May. Marry, God defend, his grace should say us nay!

Buck. I fear, he will: Here Catesby comes again;—

Re-enter CATESBY.

Now, Catesby, what says his grace?

Cate. He wonders to what end you have assembled

Such troops of citizens to come to him,
His grace not being warn'd thereof before,
He fears, my lord, you mean no good to him.

Buck. Sorry I am, my noble cousin should Suspect me, that I mean no good to him:
By heaven, we come to him in perfect love;
And so once more return and tell his grace.

[Exit CATESBY.

When holy and devout religious men
Are at their beads, 'tis hard to draw them
So sweet is zealous contemplation. [thence;

Enter GLOSTER, in a Gallery above, between two Bishops. CATESBY returns.

May. See, where his grace stands 'tween two clergymen!

Buck. Two props of virtue for a Christian
To stay him from the fall of vanity: [prince,
And, see, a book of prayer in his hand;
True ornaments to know a holy man.—
Famous Plantagenet, most gracious prince,
Lend favourable ear to our requests;
And pardon us the interruption
Of thy devotion, and right-Christian zeal.

Glo. My lord, there needs no such apology;
I rather do beseech you pardon me,
Who, earnest in the service of my God,
Neglect the visitation of my friends.

But, leaving this, what is your grace's pleasure?
Buck. Even that, I hope, which pleaseth God
above,

And all good men of this ungovern'd isle.

Glo. I do suspect, I have done some offence,
That seems disgracious in the city's eye;
And that you come to reprehend my ignorance.

Buck. You have, my lord; Would it might please your grace,
On our entreaties to amend your fault!

Glo. Else wherefore breathe I in a Christian
land?

Buck. Know, then, it is your fault, that you resign

The supreme seat, the throne majestic,
The sceptred office of your ancestors,
Your state of fortune, and your due of birth,
The lineal glory of your royal house,
To the corruption of a blemish'd stock:
Whilst, in the mildness of your sleepy thoughts,
(Which here we waken to our country's good,)
The noble isle doth want her proper limbs;
Her face defac'd with scars of infamy,
Her royal stock graft with ignoble plants,
And almost shoulder'd* in the swallowing gulf
Of dark forgetfulness and deep oblivion.
Which to recure,† we heartily solicit
Your gracious self to take on you the charge
And kingly government of this your land:
Not as protector, steward, substitute,
Or lowly factor for another's gain:
But as successively from blood to blood,
Your right of birth, your empery,‡ your own.
For this, consorted with the citizens,
Your very worshipful and loving friends,
And by their vehement instigation,
In this just suit come I to move your grace.

Glo. I cannot tell, if to depart in silence,
Or bitterly to speak in your reproof,
Best fitteth my degree, or your condition:
If not to answer,—you might haply think,
Tongue-tied ambition, not replying, yielded
To bear the golden yoke of sovereignty,
Which fondly you would here impose on me;
If to reprove you for this suit of yours,
So season'd with your faithful love to me,
Then, on the other side, I check'd my friends.
Therefore,—to speak, and to avoid the first;
And, then in speaking, not to incur the last,— Definitively thus I answer you.

Your love deserves my thanks; but my desert
Unmeritable, shuns your high request.
First, if all obstacles were cut away,
And that my path were even to the crown,
As the ripe revenue and due of birth;
Yet so much is my poverty of spirit,
So mighty, and so many, my defects, [ness,—
That I would rather hide me from my great-
Being a bark to brook no mighty sea,—

* Pretend.

† A couch.

‡ Fatten.

* Thrust into.

† Recover.

‡ Impire

Than in my greatness covet to be hid,
And in the vapour of my glory smother'd,
But, God be thank'd, there is no need of me;
(And much I need* to help you, if need were;)

The royal tree hath left us royal fruit,
Which, mellow'd by the stealing hours of time,
Will well become the seat of majesty,
And make, no doubt, us happy by his reign.
On him I lay what you would lay on me,
The right and fortune of his happy stars,—
Which, God defend, that I should wring from
him!

Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in
your grace;
But the respects thereof are nicet and trivial,
All circumstances well considered.
You say, that Edward is your brother's son;
So say we too, but not by Edward's wife:
For first he was contract to lady Lucy,
Your mother lives a witness to his vow;
And afterwards by substitute betroth'd
To Bona, sister to the king of France.
These both put by, a poor petitioner,
A care-craz'd mother to a many sons,
A beauty-waning and distressed widow,
Even in the afternoon of her best days,
Made prize and purchase of his wanton eye,
Seduc'd the pitch and height of all his thoughts
To base declension and loath'd bigamy:
By her, in his unlawful bed, he got [prince.
This Edward, whom our manners call—the
More bitterly could I expostulate,
Save that, for reverence to some alive,
I give a sparing limit to my tongue.
Then, good my lord, take to your royal self
This proffer'd benefit of dignity:
If not to bless us and the land withal,
Yet to draw forth your noble ancestry
From the corruption of abusing time,
Unto a lineal true-derived course.

May. Do, good my lord; your citizens entreat you.

Buck. Refuse not, mighty lord, this proffer'd love.

Cate. O, make them joyful, grant their lawful suit.

Glo. Alas, why would you heap those cares on me?

I am unfit for state and majesty:—
I do beseech you, take it not amiss;
I cannot, nor I will not, yield to you.

Buck. If you refuse it,—as in love and zeal,
Loath to depose the child, your brother's son;
As well we know your tenderness of heart,
And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse,†
Which we have noted in you to your kindred,
And equally, indeed, to all estates,—
Yet know, wher you accept our suit or no,
Your brother's son shall never reign our king;
But we will plant some other in your throne,
To the disgrace and downfall of your house.
And, in this resolution, here we leave you;
Come, citizens, we will entreat no more.

[Exeunt BUCKINGHAM and Citizens.]

Cate. Call them again, sweet prince, accept their suit;

If you deny them, all the land will rue it.

Glo. Will you enforce me to a world of cares?

Well, call them again; I am not made of stone,
But penetrable to your kind entreaties,

[Exit CATESBY.]

Albeit against my conscience and my soul.—

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM and the rest.

Cousin of Buckingham,—and sage, grave
men,—

Since you will buckle fortune on my back,
To bear her burden, wher I will, or no,
I must have patience to endure the load:
But if black scandal, or foul-fac'd reproach,
Attend the sequel of your imposition.
Your mere enforcement shall acquittance me
From all the impure blots and stains thereof:
For God he knows, and you may partly see.
How far I am from the desire of this.

May. God bless your grace! we see it, and will say it.

Glo. In saying so, you shall but say the truth.

Buck. Then I salute you with this royal title,—

Long live king Richard, England's worthy [king
All. Amen!

Buck. To-morrow may it please you to be crown'd?

Glo. Even when you please, since you will have it so.

Buck. To-morrow then we will attend your
grace;

And so, most joyfully we take our leave.

Glo. Come, let us to our holy work again:—
[To the Bishop,

Farewell, good cousin;—farewell, gentle friends. [Exeunt

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Before the Tower.

Enter on one side, Queen ELIZABETH, Duchess of YORK, and Marquis of DORSET; on the other, ANNE, Duchess of GLOSTER, leading Lady MARGARET PLANTAGENET, CLARENCE's young Daughter.

Duch. Who meets us here?—my niece Plantagenet

Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloster:
Now, for my life, she's wand'ring to the Tower.
On pure heart's love, to greet the tender
prince.—

Daughter, well met.

Anne. God give your graces both

A happy and a joyful time of day!

Q. Eliz. As much to you, good sister! Whither away?

Anne. No further than the Tower; and, as
I guess,

Upon the like devotion as yourselves,
To gratulate the gentle princes there.

Q. Eliz. Kind sister, thanks; we'll enter all together:

Enter BRAKENBURY.

And, in good time, here the lieutenant comes.—
Master lieutenant, pray you, by your leave,
How doth the prince, and my young son of York?

Brak. Right well, dear madam: By your patience,

I may not suffer you to visit them;

The king hath strictly charg'd the contrary.

Q. Eliz. The king! who's that?

Brak. I mean, the lord protector.

Q. Eliz. The Lord protect him from that kingly title! [Exit

Hath he set bounds between their love, and I am their mother, who shall bar me from them?

* Want ability.

† Minute.

‡ Pity.

Duch. I am their father's mother, I will see them.

Anne. Their aunt I am in law, in love their mother:

[blame,
Then bring me to their sights; I'll bear thy
And take thy office from thee, on thy peril.

Brak. No, madam, no, I may not leave it so;

I am bound by oath, and therefore pardon me.
[Exit BRAKENBURY.

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. Let me but meet you, ladies, one hour hence,

And I'll salute your grace of York as mother,
And reverend looker-on of two fair queens.—
Come, madam, you must straight to Westminster. [To the Duchess of GLOSTER.
There to be crowned Richard's royal queen.

Q. Eliz. Ah, cut my lace asunder! [beat,
That my pent heart may have some scope to
Or else I swoon with this dead-killing news.

Anne. Despiteful tidings! O unpleasing news!

Dor. Be of good cheer:—Mother, how fares your grace?

Q. Eliz. O Dorset, speak not to me, get thee gone,

Death and destruction dog thee at the heels;
Thy mother's name is ominous to children:
If thou wilt outstrip death, go cross the seas,
And live with Richmond, from the reach of hell.

[house,
Go, hie thee, hie thee, from this slaughter—
Lest thou increase the number of the dead;
And make me die the thrall of Margaret's curse,—

Nor mother, wife, nor England's counted queen.

Stan. Full of wise care is this your counsel, madam:—

Take all the swift advantage of the hours;
You shall have letters from me to my son
In your behalf, to meet you on the way:
Be not ta'en tardy by unwise delay.

Duch. O ill-dispersing wind of misery!—
O my accursed womb, the bed of death;
A cockatrice* hast thou hatch'd to the world,
Whose unavowed eye is murderous!

Stan. Come, madam, come; I in all haste was sent.

Anne. And I with all unwillingness will go.—

O, would to God, that the inclusive verge
Of golden metal,† that must round my brow,
Were red-hot steel, to sear† me to the brain!
Anointed let me be with deadly venom;
And die, ere men can say—God save the queen!

Q. Eliz. Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy glory;
To feed my humour, wish thyself no harm.

Anne. No! why?—When he, that is my husband now,
Came to me, as I follow'd Henry's corse;
When scarce the blood was well wash'd from his hands,
Which issu'd from my other angel husband,
And that dead saint which then I weeping follow'd;

O, when, I say, I look'd on Richard's face,
This was my wish,—*He thou, quoth I, accurs'd,
For making me, so young, so old a widow!*
And, when thou wad'st, let sorrow haunt thy bed;
And be thy wife, (if any be so mad)

*More miserable by the life of thee,
Than thou hast made me by my dear lord's death!*
Lo, ere I can repeat this curse again,
Even in so short a space, my woman's heart
Grossly grew captive to his honey words,
And prov'd the subject of mine own soul's curse:

Which ever since hath held mine eyes from
For never yet one hour in his bed [rest;
Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep,
But with his timorous dreams was still awak'd.
Besides, he hates me for my father Warwick;
And will, no doubt, shortly be rid of me.

Q. Eliz. Poor heart, adieu; I pity thy complaining.

Anne. No more than with my soul I mourn for yours.

Dor. Farewell, thou woeful welcomer of glory!

Anne. Adieu, poor soul, that tak'st thy leave of it!

Duch. Go thou to Richmond, and good fortune guide thee!— [To DORSET.
Go thou to Richard, and good angels tend thee!— [To ANNE.

Go thou to sanctuary, and good thoughts possess thee! [To Q. ELIZABETH.
I to my grave, where peace and rest lie with Eighty odd years of sorrow have I seen, [me.
And each hour's joy wreck'd with a week of teen.*

Q. Eliz. Stay yet; look back, with me, unto the Tower.—

Pity, you ancient stones, those tender babes,
Whom envy hath immur'd within your walls!
Rough cradle for such little pretty ones!
Rude ragged nurse! old sullen play-fellow
For tender princes, use my babies well!
So foolish sorrow bids your stones farewell.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room of State in the Palace.

Flourish of Trumpets. RICHARD, as King upon his Throne; BUCKINGHAM, CATESBY, a PAGE, and others.

K. Rich. Stand all apart.—Cousin of Buckingham,—

Buck. My gracious sovereign.

K. Rich. Give me thy hand. Thus high, by thy advice,

And thy assistance, is king Richard seated:—
But shall we wear these glories for a day?
Or shall they last, and we rejoice in them?

Buck. Still live they, and for ever let them last!

K. Rich. Ah, Buckingham, now do I play the touch,†

To try if thou be current gold, indeed:—
Young Edward lives;—Think now what I would speak.

Buck. Say on, my loving lord.

K. Rich. Why, Buckingham, I say, I would be king.

Buck. Why, so you are, my thrice-renowned liege.

K. Rich. Ha! am I king? 'Tis so: but Edward lives.

Buck. True, noble prince.

K. Rich. O bitter consequence,
That Edward still should live,—true, noble prince!—

Cousin, thou wast not wont to be so dull:—
Shall I be plain? I wish the bastards dead:
And I would have it suddenly perform'd.

* A serpent supposed to originate from a cock's egg.

† Touchstone.

What say'st thou now! speak suddenly, be brief.

Buck. Your grace may do your pleasure.

K. Rich. Tut, tut, thou art all ice, thy kindness freezes:

Say, have I thy consent, that they shall die?

Buck. Give me some breath, some little pause, dear lord,

Before I positively speak in this:

I will resolve your grace immediately.

[Exit BUCKINGHAM.]

Cate. The king is angry; see, he gnaws his lip.

K. Rich. I will converse with iron-witted fools, [Aside. Descends from his Throne.]

And unrespective* boys: none are for me,

That look into me with considerate eyes;—

Page. My lord.

K. Rich. Know'st thou not any, whom corrupting gold

Would tempt unto a close exploit of death?

Page. I know a discontented gentleman, Whose humble means match not his haughty

Gold were as good as twenty orators, [mind: And will, no doubt, tempt him to any thing.]

K. Rich. What is his name?

Page. His name, my lord, is—Tyrrel.

K. Rich. I partly know the man; Go, call him hither, boy.— [Exit PAGE.]

The deep-revolving witty Buckingham

No more shall be the neighbour to my counsels:

Hath he so long held out with me untir'd,

And stops he now for breath?—well, be it so.—

Enter STANLEY.

How now, lord Stanley? what's the news?

Stan. Know, my loving lord, The marquis Dorset, as I hear, is fled To Richmond, in the parts where he abides.

K. Rich. Come hither, Catesby: rumour it abroad,

That Anne, my wife, is very grievous sick; I will take order for her keeping close.

Inquire me out some mean-born gentleman, Whom I will marry straight to Clarence's daughter:—

The boy is foolish, and I fear not him.—

Look, how thou dream'st!—I say again, give out,

That Anne my queen is sick, and like to die: About it; for it stands me much upon,†

To stop all hopes, whose growth may damage me.— [Exit CATESBY.]

I must be married to my brother's daughter, Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass:—

Murder her brothers, and then marry her!

Uncertain way of gain! But I am in

So far in blood, that sin will pluck on sin.

Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye.—

Re-enter PAGE, with TYRREL.

Is thy name—Tyrrel?

Tyr. James Tyrrel, and your most obedient subject.

K. Rich. Art thou, indeed?

Tyr. Prove me, my gracious lord.

K. Rich. Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine?

Tyr. Please you; but I had rather kill two enemies.

K. Rich. Why, then thou hast it; two deep enemies, [turns,

Foes to my rest, and my sweet sleep's dis- Are they that I would have thee deal* upon: Tyrrel, I mean these bastards in the Tower.

Tyr. Let me have open means to come to them,

And soon I'll rid you from the fear of them.

K. Rich. Then sing'st sweet music. Hark, come hither, Tyrrel;

Go, by this token:—Rise, and lend thine ear: [Whisper.]

There is no more but so:—Say, it is done,

And I will love thee, and prefer thee for it.

Tyr. I will despatch it straight. [Exit.]

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. My lord, I have consider'd in my mind

The late demand that you did send me in,

K. Rich. Well, let that rest. Dorset is fled to Richmond.

Buck. I hear the news, my lord.

K. Rich. Stanley, he is your wife's son:— Well, look to it.

Buck. My lord, I claim the gift, my due by promise, [purs'd;

For which your honour and your faith is The earldom of Hereford, and the marches,

Which you have promised I shall possess.

K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife; if she convey Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it.

Buck. What says your highness to my just request?

K. Rich. I do remember me,—Henry the sixth Did prophesy, that Richmond should be king, When Richmond was a little peevish boy.

A king!—perhaps—

Buck. My lord,—

K. Rich. How chance, the prophet could not at that time, [him?

Have told me, I being by, that I should kill Buck. My lord, your promise for the earldom,—

K. Rich. Richmond!—When last I was at Exeter,

The mayor, in courtesy, show'd me the castle. And call'd it—Rouge-mont: at which name, I started; Because a bard of Ireland told me once, I should not live long after I saw Richmond.

Buck. My lord,—

K. Rich. Ay, what's o'clock?

Buck. I am thus bold [me. To put your grace in mind of what you promis'd

K. Rich. Well, but what is't o'clock?

Buck. Upon the stroke Of ten.

K. Rich. Well, let it strike.

Buck. Why, let it strike?

K. Rich. Because that, like a Jack,† thou keep'st the stroke

Betwixt thy begging and my meditation. I am not in the giving vein to-day.

Buck. Why, then resolve me whe'r you will or no.

K. Rich. Thou troublest me; I am not in the vein.

[Exeunt King RICHARD, and Train.]

Buck. And is it thus? repays he my deep service

With such contempt? made I him king for this?

SCENE III.—The same.

Enter TYRREL.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody act is done;
The most arch deed of piteous massacre,
That ever yet this land was guilty of.
Dighton, and Forrest, whom I did suborn
To do this piece of ruthless butchery,
Albeit they were flesh'd villains, bloody dogs,
Melting with tenderness and mild compassion,
Wept like two children, in their death's sad story.

O thus, quoth Dighton, lay the gentle babes,—
Thus, thus, quoth Forrest, girdling one another
Within their alabaster innocent arms :

Their lips were four red roses on a stalk,
Which, in their summer beauty, kiss'd each other.
A book of prayers on their pillow lay ; [mind ;

That, from the prime creation, e'er she fram'd.—
Hence both are gone ; with conscience and remorse,

They could not speak ; and so I left them both,
To bear this tidings to the bloody king.

Enter King RICHARD.

And here he comes :—All health, my sovereign
lord !

K. Rich. Kind Tyrrel ! am I happy in thy news ?

Tyr. If to have done the thing you gave in charge

Beget your happiness, be happy, then,
For it is done.

K. Rich. But didst thou see them dead ?

Tyr. I did, my lord.

K. Rich. And buried, gentle Tyrrel ?

Tyr. The chaplain of the Tower hath buried
them ;

But where, to say the truth, I do not know.

K. Rich. Come to me, Tyrrel, soon, at after supper,

When thou shalt tell the process of their death.
Mean time, but think how I may do thee good,
And be inheritor of thy desire.

Farewell, till then.

Tyr. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.

Enter CATESBY.

Cate. My lord,—

K. Rich. Good news or bad, that thou com'st in so bluntly !

Cate. Bad news, my lord : Morton‡ is fled to Richmond ;

And Buckingham, back'd with the hardy
Welshmen,

Is in the field, and still his power encreaseth.

* His castle in Wales.

SCENE IV.—The same.—Before the Palace.

Enter Queen MARGARET.

Q. Mar. So, now prosperity begins to mellow,
And drop into the rotten mouth of death.

Here in these confines sily have I lurk'd,
To watch the waning of mine enemies.

A dire induction* am I witness to,
And will to France ; hoping, the consequence
Will prove as bitter, black, and tragical.
Withdraw thee, wretched Margaret ! who comes here ?

Enter Queen ELIZABETH and the Duchess of YORK.

Q. Eliz. Ah, my poor princes ! ah, my tender babes !

My unblown flowers, new-appearing sweets !
If yet your gentle souls fly in the air,
And be not fix'd in doom perpetual,
Hover about me with your airy wings,
And hear your mother's lamentation !

Q. Mar. Hover about her ; say, that right for right

Hath dimm'd your infant morn to aged night.

Duch. So many miseries have craz'd my voice, [mute,—

That my woe-wearied tongue is still and
Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead ?

Q. Mar. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet,
Edward for Edward pays a dying debt.

Q. Eliz. Wilt thou, O God, fly from such gentle lambs,

And throw them in the entrails of the wolf ?
When didst thou sleep, when such a deed was
done ?

Q. Mar. When holy Harry died, and my sweet son.

Duch. Dead life, blind sight, poor mortal-living ghost,

Woe's scene, world's shame, grave's due by life usurp'd,

Brief abstract and record of tedious days,
Rest thy unrest on England's lawful earth,
[Sitting down.

Unlawfully made drunk with innocent blood !
Q. Eliz. Ah, that thou would'st as soon afford a grave,

As thou canst yield a melancholy seat ;
Then would I hide my bones, not rest them
here !

Ah, who has any cause to mourn, but we ?
[Sitting down by her.

Q. Mar. If ancient sorrow be most reverent,
Give mine the benefit of seniority,†

And let my griefs frown on the upper hand.
If sorrow can admit society,

[Sitting down with them.

Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine :—
I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him ;

I had a husband, till a Richard kill'd him :
Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill'd

him ;
Thou hadst a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him.

* Introduction.

† Seniority.

Duch. I had a Richard too, and thou did'st kill him;

I had a Rutland too, thou help'st to kill him.

Q. Mar. Thou had'st a Clarence too, and Richard kill'd him.

From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept
A hell-hound, that doth hunt us all to death:
That dog, that had his teeth before his eyes,
To worry lambs, and lap their gentle blood;
That foul defacer of God's handy-work;
That excellent grand tyrant of the earth,
That reigns in galled eyes of weeping souls,
Thy womb let loose, to chase us to our graves.—

O upright, just, and true-disposing God,
How do I thank thee, that this carnal cur
Preys on the issue of his mother's body,
And makes her paw-fellow^a with others' meat!

Duch. O, Harry's wife, triumph not in my woes;

God witness with me, I have wept for thine.

Q. Mar. Bear with me, I am hungry for revenge,

And now I cloy me with beholding it. [ward;

Thy other Edward dead, to quit my Edward;

The adulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan,
Untimely smother'd in their dusky graves.

Richard yet lives, hell's black intelligencer;
Only reserv'd their factor, to buy souls,

And send them thither: But at hand, at hand,
Easnes his piteous and unpitied end: [pray,
Earth gapes, hell burns, fiends roar, saints

To have him suddenly convey'd from hence:—
Cancel his bond of life, dear God, I pray,

That I may live to say, The dog is dead!

Q. Eliz. O, thou didst prophesy, the time would come,

That I should wish for thee to help me curse
That bottled spider, that foul bunch-back'd

[snake]

Q. Mar. I call'd thee then, vain flourish of my fortune;

I call'd thee then, poor shadow, painted queen;
The presentation of but what I was,

The flattering index of a direful pageant,
One heav'd a high, to be hurl'd down below:

A mother only mock'd with two fair babes;
A dream of what thou wast; a garish flag,

To be the aim of every dangerous shot;
A sign of dignity, a breath, a bubble;

A queen in jest, only to fill the scene.
Where is thy husband now? Where be thy brothers? [joy!

Where be thy two sons? Wherein dost thou

Who sues, and kneels, and says—God save the queen?

Where be the beuding peers that flatter'd thee?
Where be the thronging troops that follow'd

thee?

Decline all this, and see what now thou art.
For happy wife, a most distressed widow;

For joyful mother, one that wails the name;
For one being sued to, one that humbly sues;

For queen, a very caitiff crown'd with care;
For one that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of me;

For one being fear'd of all, now fearing one;

For one commanding all, obey'd of none.

Thus hath the course of justice wheel'd about,
And left thee but a very prey to time; [wail,
Having no more but thought of what thou

To torture thee the more, being what thou art.
Thou didst usurp my place, And dost thou not

Usurp the just proportion of my sorrow?
Now thy proud neck bears half my husband's yoke;

From which even here I slip my wounded hand,

And leave the burden of it all on thee.
Farewell, York's wife,—and queen of sad mis-chance,— [Faint.

These English woes shall make me sick in

Q. Eliz. O thou well skill'd in curses, stay a while,

And teach me how to curse mine enemies.

Q. Mar. Forbear to sleep the night, and fast
the day;

Compare dead happiness with living war;
Think that thy babes were fairer than they were,

And he, that slew them, fouler than he is:

Bettering thy loss makes the bad-cancer worse;
Revolving this will teach thee how to curse.

Q. Eliz. My words are dull, O, quicken them with thine!

Q. Mar. Thy woes will make them sharp, and pierce like mine.

[Exit Q. MARRIAGE.]

Duch. Why should calamity be full of woe?
Q. Eliz. Windy attorneys to their client woes,

Airy succeders of intestate joys,
Poor breathing orators of miseries! [Import

Let them have scope: though what they do
Help nothing else, yet do they ease the heart.

Duch. If so, then be not tongue-ty'd: go
with me,

And in the breath of bitter words let's smother
My damped son, that thy two sweet sons

I hear his drum,—be copious in exclaims.

Enter King RICHARD, and his Train, marching.

K. Rich. Who intercepts me in my expedition?

Duch. O, she, that might have intercepted
thee,

By strangling thee in her accursed womb,
From all the slaughters, wretch, that thou hast done.

Q. Eliz. Hid'st thou that forehead with a golden crown, [right,

Where should be branded, if that right were
The slaughter of the prince that ord'rd^a that crown, [there!

And the dire death of my poor sons, and bro-

Tell me, thou villain-slave, where are my chil-

Duch. Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy brother Clarence?

And little Ned Plantagenet, his son?

Q. Eliz. Where is the gentle Rivers, Vanghan, Grey?

Duch. Where is kind Hastings?

K. Rich. A flourish, trumpets!—strike alarum, drums!

Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women
Rail on the Lord's anointed: Strike, I say.—

[Flourish. Alarum.
Either be patient, and entreat me fair,

Or with the clamorous report of war
Thus will I drown your exclamations.

Duch. Art thou my son?

K. Rich. Ay; I thank God, my father, and yourself.

Duch. Then patiently hear my impatience.

K. Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition,*

That cannot brook the accent of reproof.

Duch. O, let me speak.

K. Rich. Do, then; but I'll not hear.

Duch. I will be mild and gentle in my words.

K. Rich. And brief, good mother; for I am in haste.

Duch. Art thou so hasty? I have staid for thee,

God knows, in torment and in agony.

K. Rich. And came I not at last to comfort you?

Duch. No, by the holy rood,† thou know'st it well,

Thou cam'st on earth to make the earth my hell.

A grievous burden was thy birth to me;

Tetchy‡ and wayward was thy infancy;

Thy school-days, frightful, desperate, wild, and furious; [turous;

What comfortable hour canst thou name,

That ever grac'd me in thy company?

K. Rich. 'Faith, none, but Humphrey Hour, that call'd your grace

To breakfast once, forth of my company.

If I be so disgracious in your sight,

Let me march on, and not offend you, madam.—Strike up the drum.

Duch. I pr'ythee, hear me speak.

K. Rich. You speak too bitterly.

Duch. Hear me a word;

For I shall never speak to thee again.

K. Rich. So.

Duch. Either thou wilt die, by God's just ordinance,

Ere from this war thou turn a conqueror;

(Or I with grief and extreme age shall perish,

And never look upon thy face again.

Therefore, take with thee my most heavy curse;

Which, in the day of battle, tire thee more,

Than all the complete armour that thou wear'st!

My prayers on the adverse party fight;

And there the little souls of Edward's children

Whisper the spirits of thine enemies,

And promise them success and victory.

Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end;

Shame serves thy life, and doth thy death attend. [Exit.

Q. Eliz. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse

Abides in me; I say Amen to her. [Going.

K. Rich. Stay, madam, I must speak a word with you.

Q. Eliz. I have no more sons of the royal blood,

For thee to murder: for my daughters, Richard,— [queens;

They shall be praying nuns, not weeping And therefore level not to hit their lives.

K. Rich. You have a daughter call'd—Eliza—Virtuous and fair, royal and gracious. [beth,

Q. Eliz. And must she die for this? O, let her live,

And I'll corrupt her manners, stain her beauty; Slander myself, as false to Edward's bed;

Throw over her the veil of infamy: [ter;

So she may live unscarr'd of bleeding slaughter. I will confess she was not Edward's daughter.

K. Rich. Wrong not her birth, she is of royal blood.

Q. Eliz. To save her life, I'll say—she is not so.

K. Rich. Her life is safest only in her birth.

Q. Eliz. And only in that safety died her brothers.

K. Rich. Lo, at their births good stars were opposite.

Q. Eliz. No, to their lives bad friends were contrary.

K. Rich. All unavoided* is the doom of destiny.

Q. Eliz. True, when avoided grace makes destiny:

My babes were destin'd to a fairer death,

If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life.

K. Rich. You speak, as if that I had slain my cousins.

Q. Eliz. Cousins, indeed; and by their uncle cozen'd

Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life.

Whose hands soever lanc'd their tender hearts,

Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction:

No doubt the murderous knife was dull and blunt,

Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart,

To revel in the entrails of my lambs.

But that still† use of grief makes wild grief tame, [boys,

My tongue should to thy ears not name my

Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine eyes;

And I, in such a desperate bay of death,

Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling rest,

Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom.

K. Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprise,

And dangerous success of bloody wars,

As I intend more good to you and yours,

Then ever you or yours by me were harm'd!

Q. Eliz. What good is cover'd with the face of heaven,

To be discover'd, that can do me good?

K. Rich. The advancement of your children, gentle lady.

Q. Eliz. Up to some scaffold, there to lose their heads?

K. Rich. No, to the dignity and height of fortune,

The high imperial type of this earth's glory.‡

Q. Eliz. Flatter my sorrows with report of it;

Tell me, what state, what dignity, what honour, Canst thou demise§ to any child of mine?

K. Rich. Even all I have; ay, and myself and all,

Will I withal endow a child of thine;

So in the Lethe of thy angry soul [wrongs,

Thou drown the sad remembrance of those

Which, thou supposest, I have done to thee.

Q. Eliz. Be brief, lest that the process of thy kindness

Last longer telling than thy kindness' date.

K. Rich. Then know, that, from my soul, I love thy daughter.

Q. Eliz. My daughter's mother thinks it with her soul.

K. Rich. What do you think?

Q. Eliz. That thou dost love my daughter, from thy soul:

So, from thy soul's love, didst thou love her brothers; [it.

And, from my heart's love, I do thank thee for

K. Rich. Be not so hasty to confound my meaning:

I mean, that with my soul I love thy daughter, And do intend to make her queen of England.

* Disposition. † Cross. ‡ Touchy, fretful.

* Unavoidable. † Constant. ‡ A crown. § Bequeath.

Q. Eliz. Well then, who dost thou mean shall be her king?

K. Rich. Even he, that makes her queen: Who else should be?

Q. Eliz. What, thou?

K. Rich. Even so: What think you of it, madam?

Q. Eliz. How canst thou woo her?

K. Rich. That I would learn of you, As one being best acquainted with her humour.

Q. Eliz. And wilt thou learn of me?

K. Rich. Madam, with all my heart.

Q. Eliz. Send to her, by the man that slew her brothers,
A pair of bleeding hearts; thereon engrave, Edward, and York, then, haply,* will she weep: Therefore present to her,—as sometime Margaret Did to thy father, steep'd in Rutland's blood,— A handkerchief; which, say to her, did drain The purple sap from her sweet brother's body, And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withal. If this inducement move her not to love, Send her a letter of thy noble deeds; Tell her, thou mad'st away her uncle Clarence, Her uncle Rivers; ay, and, for her sake, Mad'st quick conveyance with her good aunt Anne.

K. Rich. You mock me, madam; this is not the way To win your daughter.

Q. Eliz. There is no other way; Unless thou could'st put on some other shape, And not be Richard that hath done all this.

K. Rich. Say, that I did all this for love of her.

Q. Eliz. Nay, then indeed, she cannot choose but have thee, Having bought love with such a bloody spoil.

K. Rich. Look, what is done cannot be now amended:
Men shall deal unadvisedly sometimes, Which after-hours give leisure to repent. If I did take the kingdom from your sons, To make amends, I'll give it to your daughter. If I have kill'd the issue of your womb, To quicken your increase, I will beget Mine issue of your blood upon your daughter. A grandam's name is little less in love, Than is the doting title of a mother; They are as children, but one step below, Even of your mettle, of your very blood; Of all one pain,—save for a night of groans Endur'd of her, for whom you bid like sorrow. Your children were vexation to your youth, But mine shall be a comfort to your age. The loss you have, is but—a son being king, And, by that loss, your daughter is made queen.

I cannot make you what amends I would, Therefore accept such kindness as I can. Dorset, your son, that, with a fearful soul, Leads discontented steps in foreign soil, This fair alliance quickly shall call home To high promotions and great dignity: [wife, The king, that calls your beauteous daughter,— Familiarly shall call thy Dorset—brother; Again shall you be mother to a king, And all the ruins of distressful times Repair'd with double riches of content. What! we have many goodly days to see: The liquid drops of tears that you have shed, Shall come again, transform'd to orient pearl; Advantaging their loan, with interest Of ten-times-double gain of happiness.

* Perhaps.

Go then, my mother, to thy daughter go; Make bold her bashful young with your experience;
Prepare her ears to hear a wooer's tale; Put in her tender heart the smiling flame Of golden sovereignty; augment the pleasure With the sweet silent hours of marriage joys: And when this arm of mine hath chastised The petty rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham, Bound with triumphant garlands will I come, And lead thy daughter to a conqueror's bed; To whom I will retail my conquest won, And she shall be sole victress, Caesar's wife.

Q. Eliz. What were I best to say? her father's brother Would be her lord? Or shall I say, her uncle? Or, he that slew her brothers, and her uncle? Under what title shall I woo for thee, That God, the law, my honour, and her love, Can make seem pleasing to her tender youth?

K. Rich. Infer fair England's peace by the alliance.

Q. Eliz. Which she shall purchase with all lasting war.

K. Rich. Tell her, the king, that may command, entreats.

Q. Eliz. That at her hands, which the king's King forbids.*

K. Rich. Say, she shall be a high and mighty queen.

Q. Eliz. To wait the title, as her mother doth.

K. Rich. Say, I will love her everlastingly.

Q. Eliz. But how long shall that title, ever, last?

K. Rich. Sweetly in force unto her fair life's end.

Q. Eliz. But how long fairly shall her sweet life last?

K. Rich. As long as heaven, and nature lengthens it.

Q. Eliz. As long as hell, and Richard, like of it.

K. Rich. Say, I, her sovereign, am her subject now.

Q. Eliz. But she, your subject, loaths such sovereignty.

K. Rich. Be eloquent in my behalf to her.

Q. Eliz. An honest tale speeds best, being plainly told.

K. Rich. Then, in plain terms, tell her my loving tale.

Q. Eliz. Plain, and not honest, is too harsh a style.

K. Rich. Your reasons are too shallow and too quick.

Q. Eliz. O, no, my reasons are too deep and dead;— Too deep and dead, poor infants, in their graves.

K. Rich. Harp not on that string, madam; that is past.

Q. Eliz. Harp on it still shall I, till heart-strings break.

K. Rich. Now by my George, my garter, and my crown,—

Q. Eliz. Profan'd, dishonour'd, and the third usurp'd.

K. Rich. I swear.

Q. Eliz. By nothing; for this is no oath. Thy George, profan'd, hath lost his holy honour; Thy garter, blemish'd, pawn'd his knightly [virtue; Thy crown, usurp'd, disgrac'd his kingly glory; If something thou would'st swear to be believ'd,

How now? what news?

Enter RATCLIFF; CATESBY following.

Rat. Most mighty sovereign, on the western coast

Rideth a puissant navy; to the shore
Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends,
Unarm'd, and unresolv'd to beat them back:
'Tis thought, that Richmond is their admiral;
And there they hull, expecting but the aid
Of Buckingham, to welcome them ashore.

K. Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the duke of Norfolk:—

Ratcliff, thyself,—or Catesby; where is he?

Cate. Here, my good lord.

K. Rich. Catesby, fly to the duke.

Cate. I will, my lord, with all convenient haste.

K. Rich. Ratcliff, come hither; Post to Salisbury;

When thou com'st thither,—Dull unmindful villain, [To CATESBY.

Why stay'st thou here, and go'st not to the duke?

Cate. First, mighty liege, tell me your highness' pleasure.

What from your grace I shall deliver to him.

K. Rich. O, true, good Catesby;—Bid him levy straight

The greatest strength and power he can make,
And meet me suddenly at Salisbury.

Cate. I go. [Exit.

Rat. What, may it please you, shall I do at Salisbury?

K. Rich. Why, what would'st thou do there, before I go?

Rat. Your highness told me, I should post
before.

Enter STANLEY.

K. Rich. My mind is chang'd.—Stanley, what news with you?

Stan. None good, my liege, to please you with the hearing;

Nor none so bad, but well may be reported.

K. Rich. Heyday, a riddle! neither good nor bad!

What need'st thou run so many miles about,
When thou may'st tell thy tale the nearest way?

Once more what news?

Stan. Richmond is on the seas.

K. Rich. There let him sink, and be the seas on him!

White-liver'd runagate, what doth he there?

Stan. I know not, mighty sovereign, but by guess.

K. Rich. Well, as you guess?

Stan. Stirr'd up by Dorset, Buckingham, and Morton, [crown.

He makes for England, here to claim the K. Rich. Is the chair empty? is the sword unsway'd?

Is the king dead? The empire unpossess'd?

What heir of York is there alive, but we?

And who is England's king, but great York's heir?

Then, tell me, what makes he upon the seas?

Stan. Unless for that, my liege, I cannot guess.

K. Rich. Unless for that he comes to be your liege, [comes.

You cannot guess wherefore the Welshman
Thou wilt revolt, and fly to him, I fear.

Stan. No, mighty liege; therefore mistrust me not.

K. Rich. Where is thy power then, to beat him back?

Where be thy tenants, and thy followers?
Are they not now upon the western shore,
Safe-conducting the rebels from their ships?

Stan. No, my good lord, my friends are in the north.

K. Rich. Cold friends to me: what do they in the north, [west?

Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty king:

Pleaseth your majesty to give me leave,
I'll muster up my friends; and meet your grace,
Where, and what time, your majesty shall please.

K. Rich. Ay, ay, thou wouldst be gone to join with Richmond:

I will not trust you, Sir.

Stan. Most mighty sovereign,
You have no cause to hold my friendship doubtful;

I never was, nor never will be, false.

K. Rich. Well, go, muster men. But, hear you, leave behind

Your son, George Stanley; look your heart be
Or else his head's assurance is but frail. [firm,

Stan. So deal with him, as I prove true to you. [Exit STANLEY.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. My gracious sovereign, now in Devonshire,

As I by friends am well advertized,
Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughty prelate,
Bishop of Exeter, his elder brother,
With many more confederates, are in arms.

Enter another MESSENGER.

Enter another MESSENGER.

3 Mess. My lord, the army of great Buckingham—

K. Rich. Out on ye, owls! nothing but songs of death? [He strikes him.

There, take thou that, till thou bring better news.

3 Mess. The news I have to tell your majesty,

Is,—that, by sudden floods and fall of waters,
Buckingham's army is dispers'd and scatter'd;
And he himself wander'd away alone,
No man knows whither.

K. Rich. O, I cry you mercy:

There is my purse to cure that blow of thine.
Hath any well-advised friend proclaim'd
Reward to him that brings the traitor in?

3 Mess. Such proclamation hath been made, my liege.

Enter another MESSENGER.

4 Mess. Sir Thomas Lovel, and lord marquis Dorset,

'Tis said, my liege, in Yorkshire are in arms.
But this good comfort bring I to your highness,—

The Bretagne navy is dispers'd by tempest:
Richmond, in Dorsetshire, sent out a boat

Unto the shore, to ask those on the banks,
If they were his assistants, yea, or no;
Who answer'd him, they came from Bocking:
Upon his party: he, mistrusting them, [him
Hois'd sail, and made his course again for Bretagne.

K. Rich. March on, march on, since we are up in arms;

If not to fight with foreign enemies,
Yet to beat down these rebels here at home.

Enter CATHERINE.

Cate. My liege, the duke of Buckingham is taken, [and

That is the best news; That the earl of Rich-
Is with a mighty power* landed at Milford,
Is colder news, but yet they must be told.

K. Rich. Away towards Salisbury; while we reason here,

A royal battle might be won and lost:—
Some one take order, Buckingham be brought To Salisbury;—the rest march on with me. [Exit

SCENE V.—A Room in Lord Stanley's House.

Enter STANLEY and Sir CHRISTOPHER UNSWICK.†

Stan. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from me:—

That, in the sty of this most bloody hour,
My son George Stanley is frank'd† up in halt;
If I revolt, off goes young George's head;
The fear of that withholds my present aid.
But, tell me, where is princely Richmond now?

Chris. At Pembroke, or at Harford-west, in Wales.

Stan. What men of name resort to him?

Chris. Sir Walter Herbert, a renowned soldier;

Sir Gilbert Talbot, Sir William Stanley;
Oxford, redoubted Pembroke, Sir James Blunt,
And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant crew;
And many other of great fame and worth:
And towards London do they bend their course,
If by the way they be not fought withal.

Stan. Well, hie thee to thy lord; commend me to him;

Tell him, the queen hath heartily consented
He shall espouse Elizabeth her daughter.
These letters will resolve him of my mind.
Farewell. [Gives papers to Sir CHRISTOPHER. [Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Salisbury.—An open place.

Enter the SHERIFF, and Guard, with BUCKINGHAM, led to execution.

Buck. Will not king Richard let me speak with him?

Sher. No, my good lord; therefore be patient.

Buck. Hastings, and Edward's children Rivers, Grey,

Holy king Henry, and thy fair son Edward,
Vaughan, and all that have miscarried
By underhand corrupted foul injustice;
If that your moody discontented souls
Do through the clouds behold this present hour,
Even for revenge mock my destruction!
This is All-Souls' day, fellows, is it not?

Sher. It is, my lord.

Buck. Why, then All-Souls' day is my body's doomsday.

his is the day, which, in king Edward's time,
 I wish'd might fall on me, when I was found
 False to his children, or his wife's allies :
 This is the day, wherein I wish'd to fall
 By the false faith of him whom most I trusted ;
 This, this All-Souls' day to my fearful soul,
 Is the determin'd respite of my wrongs.*
 That high All-seer which I dallied with,
 Hath turned my feigned prayer on my head,
 And given in earnest what I begg'd in jest.
 Thus doth he force the swords of wicked men
 To turn their own points on their masters' blame. [Exeunt BUCKINGHAM, &c.

SCENE II.—Plain near Tamworth.

Enter, with drum and colours, RICHMOND, OXFORD, Sir JAMES BLUNT, Sir WALTER HERBERT, and others, with forces, marching.

Richm. Fellows in arms, and my most loving friends,
 Bruis'd underneath the yoke of tyranny,
 Thus far into the bowels of the land
 Have we march'd on without impediment ;
 And here receive we from our father Stanley
 Lines of fair comfort and encouragement.
 The wretched, bloody, and usurping boar,
 That spoil'd your summer fields, and fruitful
 vines,

Swills your warm blood like wash, and makes his trough

In your embowell'd bosoms, this foul swine
 Lies now even in the centre of this isle,
 Near to the town of Leicester, as we learn :
 From Tamworth thither, is but one day's march.
 In God's name, cheerly on, courageous friends,
 To reap the harvest of perpetual peace
 By this one bloody trial of sharp war.

Oxf. Every man's conscience is a thousand swords,
 To fight against that bloody homicide.

Herb. I doubt not, but his friends will turn to us.

Blunt. He hath no friends, but who are friends for fear ;
 Which, in his dearest need, will fly from him.

Richm. All for our vantage. Then, in God's name, march : [wings,
 True hope is swift, and flies with swallow's
 Kings it makes gods, and meaner creatures kings. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Bosworth Field.

Enter King RICHARD, and forces ; the Duke of NORFOLK, Earl of SURREY, and others.

K. Rich. Here pitch our tents, even here in Bosworth field.—

My lord of Surrey, why look you so sad ?

Sur. My heart is ten times lighter than my looks.

K. Rich. My lord of Norfolk,—

Nor. Here, most gracious liege.

K. Rich. Norfolk, we must have knocks ;
 Ha ! must we not ?

Nor. We must both give and take, my loving lord.

K. Rich. Up with my tent : Here will I lie
 to-night ;

[Soldiers begin to set up the king's tent.
 But where, to-morrow ?—Well, all's one for
 that.—

Who hath descried the number of the traitors ?
 Nor. Six or seven thousand is their utmost
 power.

K. Rich. Why, our battalia trebles that account :

Besides, the king's name is a tower of strength,
 Which they upon the adverse faction want.

Up with the tent.—Come, noble gentlemen,

Let us survey the vantage of the ground ;—

Call for some men of sound direction :—

Let's want no discipline, make no delay ;

For, lords, to morrow is a busy day. [Exeunt.

Enter, on the other side of the field, RICHMOND,
 Sir WILLIAM BRANDON, OXFORD, and other Lords. Some of the soldiers pitch RICHMOND'S tent.

Richm. The weary sun hath made a golden
 And, by the bright track of his fiery car, [set,
 Gives token of a goodly day to-morrow.—

Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my standard.—

Give me some ink and paper in my tent ;—

I'll draw the form and model of our battle,

Limit* each leader to his several charge,

And part in just proportion our small power.

My lord of Oxford,—you, Sir William Brandon,—

And you, Sir Walter Herbert, stay with me :

The earl of Pembroke keeps† his regiment ;—

Good captain Blunt, bear my good night to
 him,

And by the second hour in the morning

Desire the earl to see me in my tent :—

Yet one thing more, good captain, do for me ;

Where is lord Stanley quarter'd, do you know ?

Blunt. Unless I have mista'en his colours
 much,

(Which, well I am assur'd, I have not done,)

His regiment lies half a mile at least

South from the mighty power of the king.

Richm. If without peril it be possible,

Sweet Blunt, make good some means to speak
 with him,

And give him from me this most needful note.

Blunt. Upon my life, my lord, I'll undertake
 it ;

And so, God give you quiet rest to-night !

Richm. Good night, good captain Blunt.

Come, gentlemen,

Let us consult upon to-morrow's business ;

In to my tent, the air is raw and cold.

[They withdraw into the Tent

Enter, to his Tent, King RICHARD, NORFOLK, RATCLIFF, and CATESBY.

K. Rich. What is't o'clock ?

Cate. It's supper time, my lord :

It's nine o'clock.

K. Rich. I will not sup to-night.—

Give me some ink and paper.—

What, is my beaver easier than it was ?—

And all my armour laid into my tent ?

Cate. It is, my liege ; and all things are in readiness.

K. Rich. Good Norfolk, hie thee to thy
 charge ;

Use careful watch, choose trusty sentinels.

Nor. I go, my lord.

* Injurious practices.

* Appoint.

† Remains with.

K. Rich. Stir with the lark to-morrow, gentle Norfolk.

Nor. warrant you, my lord. [Exit.]

K. Rich. Ratcliff,——

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. Send out a pursuivant at arms To Stanley's regiment; bid him bring his power

Before sun-rising, lest his son George fall Into the blind cave of eternal night.—

Fill me a bowl of wine.—Give me a watch:— [To CATSBY.]

Saddle white Surrey for the field to-morrow.— Look that my staves be sound, and not too heavy.

Ratcliff.——

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. Saw'st thou the melancholy lord Northumberland?

Rat. Thomas the earl of Surrey, and himself, Much about cock-shut time, from troop to troop, [diers.]

K. Rich. I am satisfied. Give me a bowl of wine:

I have not that alacrity of spirit, Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to have.— So, set it down.—Is ink and paper ready?

Rat. It is, my lord.

K. Rich. Bid my guard watch; leave me. About the mid of night, come to my tent And help to arm me.—Leave me, I say.

[King RICHARD retires into his Tent. Enter RATCLIFF and CATSBY.]

RICHMOND'S Tent opens, and discovers him, and his officers, &c.

Enter STANLEY.

Stan. Fortune and victory sit on thy helm!

Richm. All comfort that the dark night can afford,

Be to thy person, noble father-in-law!

Tell me, how fares our loving mother?

Stan. I, by attorney, bless thee from thy mother,

Who prays continually for Richmond's good; So much for that.—The silent hours steal on, And flaky darkness breaks within the east.

In brief, for so the season bids us be, Prepare thy battle early in the morning;

And put thy fortune to the arbitrement Of bloody strokes, and mortal-staring war.

I, as I may, (that which I would, I cannot,) With best advantage will deceive the time,

And aid thee in this doubtful shock of arms: But on thy side I may not be too forward,

Lest, being seen, thy brother, tender George Be executed in his father's sight:

Farewell: The leisure and the fearful time Cuts off the ceremonious vows of love,

And ample interchange of sweet discourse, Which so long sunder'd friends should dwell upon;

God give us leisure for these rites of love!

Once more, adieu:—Be valiant, and speed well!

Richm. Good lords, conduct him to his regiment; [nap;

I'll strive, with troubled thoughts, to take a Last leaden slumber peise me down to-morrow,

When I should mount with wings of victory:

Once more good night, kind lords and gentlemen.

[Enter LORNS, &c. with STANLEY.]

O Thou! whose captain I account myself, Look on my forces with a gracious eye;

Put in their hands thy bruising arms of wrath,

That they may crush down with a heavy fall

The usurping helmets of our adversaries!

Make us thy ministers of chastisement,

That we may praise thee in thy victory!

To Thee I do commend my watchful soul,

Ere I let fall the windows of mine eyes;

Sleeping, and waking, O, defend me still!

[Sleeps.]

The GHOST of Prince EDWARD, son to HENRY the sixth, rises between the two tents.

Ghost. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow! [To King RICHARD.]

Think, how thou stab'dst me in my prime of youth

At Tewksbury; Despair therefore, and die!

Be cheerful, Richmond; for the wronged soul

Of butcher'd princes fight in thy behalf:

King Henry's issue, Richmond, comforts thee.

The GHOST of King HENRY the sixth rises.

Ghost. When I was mortal, my anointed body [To King RICHARD.]

By thee was punched full of deadly holes:

Think on the Tower, and me; Despair, and die;

Harry the sixth bids thee despair and die.—

Virtuous and holy, be thou conqueror!

[To RICHMOND.]

Harry, that prophesy'd thou should'st be king, Doth comfort thee in thy sleep; Live, and flourish!

The GHOST of CLARENCE rises.

Ghost. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow! [To King RICHARD.]

I, that was wash'd to death with false wine,

Poor Clarence, by thy guile betray'd to death! To-morrow in the battle think on me,

And fall thy edgeless sword; Despair, and die!—

Thou offspring of the house of Lancaster,

[To RICHMOND.]

The wronged heirs of York do pray for thee;

Good angels guard thy battle! Live, and flourish!

The GHOSTS of RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN, rise.

Riv. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow, [To King RICHARD.]

Rivers, that died at Pomfret! Despair, and die!

Grey. Think upon Grey, and let thy soul despair! [To King RICHARD.]

Vaugh. Think upon Vaughan; and, with guilty fear,

Let fall thy lance! Despair, and die!—

[To King RICHARD.]

All. Awake! and think, our wrongs in Richard's bosom [To RICHMOND.]

Will conquer him;—awake, and win the day!

The GHOST of HASTINGS rises.

Ghost. Bloody and guilty, guiltily awake;

[To King RICHARD.]

And in a bloody battle end thy days!

* A watch-light. † Wood of the lances. ‡ Twilight.
§ Deputation. ¶ Weigh.

Think on lord Hastings; and despair, and die!—

Quiet untroubled soul, awake, awake!

[To RICHMOND.]

Arm, fight, and conquer, for fair England's sake!

The GHOSTS of the two young PRINCES rise.

Ghosts. Dream on thy cousins smother'd in the Tower;

Let us be lead within thy bosom, Richard,
And weigh thee down to ruin, shame, and death!

Thy nephews' souls bid thee despair, and die.—
Sleep, Richmond, sleep in peace, and wake in joy;

Good angels guard thee from the boar's annoy!
Live, and beget a happy race of kings!
Edward's unhappy sons do bid thee flourish.

The GHOST of Queen ANNE rises.

Ghost. Richard, thy wife, that wretched Anne thy wife,

That never slept a quiet hour with thee,
Now fills thy sleep with perturbations:
To-morrow in the battle think on me,
And fall thy edgeless sword; Despair, and die!—

Thou, quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep;

[To RICHMOND.]

Dream of success and happy victory;
Thy adversary's wife doth pray for thee.

The GHOST of BUCKINGHAM rises.

Ghost. The first was I, that help'd thee to the crown;

The last was I that felt thy tyranny:
O, in the battle think on Buckingham,
And die in terror of thy guiltiness!

Dream on, dream on, of bloody deeds and death;

[breath!—

Fainting, despair; despairing, yield thy I died for hope, ere I could lend thee aid:

[To RICHMOND.]

But cheer thy heart, and be thou not dismay'd:
God, and good angels, fight on Richmond's side;

And Richard falls in height of all his pride.

[The GHOSTS vanish. King RICHARD starts out of his dream.]

K. Rich. Give me another horse,—bind up my wounds,—

Have mercy, Jesu!—Soft; I did but dream.—
O coward conscience, how dost thou afflict me!—

[night.]

The lights burn blue.—It is now dead mid-
Cold fearful drops stand on my trembling flesh.
What do I fear? myself? there's none else by:
Richard loves Richard; that is, I am I.

Is there a murderer here? No;—Yes; I am:
Then fly,—What, from myself? Great reason:
Why?

Lest I revenge. What? Myself on myself?
I love myself. Wherefore? for any good,
That I myself have done unto myself?

O, no: alas, I rather hate myself,
For hateful deeds committed by myself.

I am a villain: Yet I lie, I am not.

[ter.]

Fool, of thyself speak well:—Fool, do not flatter—
My conscience hath a thousand several tongues,
And every tongue brings in a several tale,
And every tale condemns me for a villain.

Perjury, perjury, in the high'st degree,
Murder, stern murder, in the dir'st degree;
All several sins, all us'd in each degree;

Throng to the bar, crying all,—Guilty! guilty
I shall despair.—There is no creature loves me;

And, if I die, no soul will pity me:—

Nay, wherefore should they? since that I myself
Find in myself no pity to myself.

[self]

Methought, the souls of all that I had murder'd
Came to my tent: and every one did threat
To-morrow's vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter RATCLIFF.

Rat. My lord,—

K. Rich. Who's there?

Rat. Ratcliff, my lord; 'tis I. The early village cock

Hath twice done salutation to the morn;
Your friends are up, and buckle on their armour.

K. Rich. O, Ratcliff, I have dream'd a fearful dream!

[true?

What thinkest thou? will our friends prove all
Rat. No doubt, my lord.

K. Rich. Ratcliff, I fear, I fear,—

Rat. Nay, good my lord, be not afraid of shadows.

K. Rich. By the apostle Paul, shadows to-night

Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard,
Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers,

Armed in proof, and led by shallow Richmond.
It is not yet near day. Come, go with me;

Under our tents I'll play the eaves-dropper,
To hear, if any mean to shrink from me.

[Exit King RICHARD and RATCLIFF.]

RICHMOND wakes. Enter OXFORD and others.

Lords. Good morrow, Richmond.

Richm. 'Cry mercy, lords, and watchful gentlemen,

That you have ta'en a tardy sluggard here.

Lords. How have you slept, my lord?

Richm. The sweetest sleep, and fairest-boding dreams,

That ever enter'd in a drowsy head,
Have I since your departure had, my lords.
Methought, their souls, whose bodies Richard murder'd,

Came to my tent, and cried—On! victory!

I promise you, my heart is very jocund

In the remembrance of so fair a dream.

How far into the morning is it, lords?

Lords. Upon the stroke of four.

Richm. Why, then 'tis time to arm, and give direction.—[He advances to the troops.]

More than I have said, loving countrymen,
The leisure and enforcement of the time
Forbids to dwell on. Yet remember this,—

God, and our good cause, fight upon our side;
The prayers of holy saints, and wronged souls,
Like high-rear'd bulwarks, stand before our faces;

Richard except, those, whom we fight against,
Had rather have us win, than him they follow.

For what is he they follow? truly, gentlemen,
A bloody tyrant, and a homicide;

[blish'd;

One rais'd in blood, and one in blood esta-
One that made means to come by what he hath,

And slaughter'd those that were the means to help him;

A base foul stone, made precious by the foil
Of England's chair,* where he is falsely set;
One that hath ever been God's enemy:

Then, if you fight against God's enemy,
God will, in justice, ward you as his soldiers;

If you do sweat to put a tyrant down,
You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain;
If you do fight against your country's foes,
Your country's fat shall pay your pains the hire;

If you do fight in safeguard of your wives,
Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors;

If you do free your children from the sword,
Your children's children quit* it in your age.
Then in the name of God, and all these rights,
Advance your standards, draw your willing swords;

For me, the ransom of my bold attempt
Shall be this cold corpse on the earth's cold
But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt [face;
The least of you shall share his part thereof.
Sound, drums and trumpets, boldly and cheerfully;

God, and Saint George! Richmond, and victory!
[Exeunt.]

Re-enter King RICHARD, RATCLIFF, Attendants, and Forces.

K. Rich. What said Northumberland, as touching Richmond?

Rat. That he was never trained up in arms.

K. Rich. He said the truth: And what said Surrey then?

Rat. He smil'd and said, the better for our purpose.

K. Rich. He was i'the right; and so, indeed, it is.
[Clock strikes.]

Tell the clock there.—Give me a calendar.—
Who saw the sun to-day?

Rat. Not I, my lord.

K. Rich. Then he disdains to shine; for, by the book,

He should have brav'd† the east an hour ago:
A black day will it be to somebody.—

Ratcliff,—

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. The sun will not be seen to-day;
The sky doth frown and lour upon our army.
I would, these dewy tears were from the ground.
Not shine to-day! Why, what is that to me,
More than to Richmond? for the self-same heaven,

That frowns on me, looks sadly upon him.

Enter NORFOLK.

Nor. Arm, arm, my lord; the foe vaunts in the field.

K. Rich. Come, bustle, bustle;—Caparison my horse;—

Call up lord Stanley, bid him bring his power:—
I will lead forth my soldiers to the plain,
And thus my battle shall be ordered.

My foreward shall be drawn out all in length,
Consisting equally of horse and foot;

Our archers shall be placed in the midst:
John duke of Norfolk, Thomas earl of Surrey,
Shall have the leading of this foot and horse.

They thus directed, we ourself will follow
In the main battle; whose puissance on either side

Shall be well winged with our chiefest horse.
This, and Saint George to boot!—What think'st thou, Norfolk?

Nor. A good direction, warlike sovereign.—
This found I on my tent this morning.

[Giving a scroll.]

K. Rich. Jocky of Norfolk, be not too bold,

[reads.]

For Dickont thy master is bought and sold.

* Requite.

† Made it splendid.

‡ The ancient familiarization of Richard.

A thing devised by the enemy.—

Go, gentlemen, every man unto his charge:
Let not our babbling dreams affright our souls
Conscience is but a word that cowards use,
Devis'd at first to keep the strong in awe;
Our strong arms be our conscience, swords our law.

March on, join bravely, let us to't pell-mell;
If not to heaven, then hand in hand to hell.

What shall I say more than I have infer'd
Remember whom you are to cope withal;—
A sort* of vagabonds, rascals, and run-aways.
A scum of Breagnes, and base lackey peasants.
Whom their o'er-cloyed country vomits forth
To desperate ventures and assur'd destruction
You sleeping safe, they bring you to unrest;
You having lands, and bless'd with beautiful

wives,
They would restrain the one, distain the other.
And who doth lead them, but a paltry fellow,
Long kept in Bretagne at our mother's cost?
A milk-sop, one that never in his life
Felt so much cold as over shoes in snow?

Let's whip these stragglers o'er the seas again;
Lash hence these over-weening rags of France,
These famish'd beggars, weary of their lives;
Who, but for dreaming on this fond exploit,
For want of means, poor rats, had hang'd themselves:

If we be conquer'd, let men conquer us,
And not these bastard Breagnes; whom our fathers

[thump'd] Have in their own land beaten, bobb'd, and
And, on record, left them the heirs of shame.
Shall these enjoy our lands? lie with our wives?
Ravish our daughters?—Hark, I hear their drum.

[Drum afar off.] Fight, gentlemen of England! fight, bold yeomen!

Draw, archers, draw your arrows to the head
Spur your proud horses hard, and ride in blood:
Amaze the welkin with your broken staves!

Enter a MESSENGER.

What says lord Stanley? will he bring his power?

Mess. My lord, he doth deny to come.

K. Rich. Off instantly with his son George's head.

Nor. My lord, the enemy is pass'd the marsh:
After the battle let George Stanley die.

K. Rich. A thousand hearts are great with my bosom:

Advance our standards, set upon our toes:
Our ancient word of courage, fair Saint George,

Inspire us with the spleen of fiery dragons:
Upon them! Victory sits on our helmets.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Another part of the field.

Alarm: Excursions. Enter NORFOLK, and Forces; to him CATESBY.

Cate. Rescue, my lord of Norfolk, rescue, rescue!

The king enacts more wonders than a man,
Daring an opposite to every danger;
His horse is slain, and all on foot he fights.
Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death
Rescue, fair lord, or else the day is lost!

Alarm. Enter King RICHARD.

K. Rich. A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

* Company.

† Fight the skies with the shivers of your lances.

Cate. Withdraw, my lord, I'll help you to a horse.

K. Rich. Slave, I have set my life upon a And I will stand the hazard of the die: [cast, I think, there be six Richmonds in the field; Five have I slain to day, instead of him:— A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse! [Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter King RICHARD and RICHMOND; and exeunt fighting. Retreat, and flourish. Then enter RICHMOND, STANLEY, bearing the crown, with divers other Lords, and Forces.

Richm. God, and your arms, be prais'd, victorious friends;

The day is ours, the bloody dog is dead.

Stan. Courageous Richmond, well hast thou acquit thee!

Lo, here, this long-usurped royalty, From the dead temples of this bloody wretch Have I pluck'd off, to grace thy brows withal; Wear it, enjoy it, and make much of it.

Richm. Great God of heaven, say, Amen, to all:— [ing?

But tell me first, is young George Stanley liv-

Stan. He is, my lord, and safe in Leicester town;

Whither, if it please you, we may now withdraw us.

Richm. What men of name are slain on either side?

Stan. John duke of Norfolk, Walter lord Ferrers,

Sir Robert Brakenbury, and Sir William Bran-

Richm. Inter their bodies as becomes their births.

Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers fled, That in submission will return to us; And then, as we have ta'en the sacrament, We will unite the white rose with the red:— Smile heaven upon this fair conjunction, That long hath frown'd upon their enmity!— What traitor hears me, and says not,—Amen? England hath long been mad, and scarr'd herself;

The brother blindly shed the brother's blood, The father rashly slaughter'd his own son, The son, compell'd, been butcher to the sire:— All this divided York and Lancaster, Divided, in their dire division.—

O, now, let Richmond and Elizabeth, The true succeeders of each royal house, By God's fair ordinance conjoin together! And let their heirs, (God, if thy will be so,) Enrich the time to come with smooth-fac'd peace,

With smiling plenty, and fair prosperous days! Abate the edge of traitors, gracious Lord, That would reduce these bloody days again, And make poor England weep in streams of blood!

Let them not live to taste this land's increase, That would with treason wound this fair land's peace!

Now civil wounds are stopp'd, peace lives again;

That she may long live here, God say—Amen.

[Exeunt.

PROLOGUE.

I COME no more to make you laugh; things
now,

That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe.
Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow,
We now present. Those that can pity, here
May, if they think it well, let fall a tear;
The subject will deserve it. Such, as give Their money out of hope they may believe,
May here find truth too. Those, that come to
Only a show or two, and so agree, [see
The play may pass; if they be still, and willing,
I'll undertake, may see away their shilling Richly in two short hours. Only they,
That come to hear a merry, bawdy play,
A noise of targets; or to see a fellow
In a long motley coat, guarded* with yellow,
Will be deceiv'd: for, gentle hearers, know,
To rank our chosen truth with such a show
As foot and fight is, beside forfeiting
Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring,
(To make that only true we now intend,†)
Will leave us never an understanding friend.
Therefore, for goodness' sake, and as you are known

The first and happiest hearers of the town,
Be sad, as we would make ye: Think, ye see
The very persons of our noble story,
As they were living; think, you see them great,
And follow'd with the general throng, and sweat,
Of thousand friends; then, in a moment, see
How soon this mightiness meets misery!
And, if you can be merry then, I'll say,
A man may weep upon his wedding day.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London.—An Ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter the Duke of NORFOLK, at one door; at the other, the Duke of BUCKINGHAM, and the Lord ABERGAVENNY.

Buck. Good morrow, and well met. How have you done,
Since last we saw in France?

Nor. I thank your grace:
Healthful; and ever since a fresh admirer
Of what I saw there.

Buck. An untimely ague
Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber, when
Those suns of glory, those two lights of men,
Met in the vale of Arde.

Nor. Twixt Guynes and Arde:
I was then present, saw them salute on horseback; [clap
Beheld them, when they lighted, how they
In their embracement, as they grew together;
Which had they, what four thron'd ones could

Such a compounded one?

Buck. All the whole time
I was my chamber's prisoner.

Nor. Then you lost
The view of earthly glory: Men might say, Till this time, pomp was single; but now married

To one above itself. Each following day
Became the next day's master, till the last

Nor. 'Like it your grace,
The state takes notice of the private difference
Betwixt you and the cardinal. I advise you, (And take it from a heart that wishes towards
you

Honour and plenteous safety,) that you read
The cardinal's malice and his potency
Together: to consider further, that
What his high hatred would effect, wants not
A minister in his power: You know his nature,

That he's revengeful; and I know, his sword Hath a sharp edge: it's long, and, it may be said,

It reaches far; and where 'twill not extend,
Thither he darts it. Bosom up my counsel, You'll find it wholesome. Lo, where comes that rock,

That I advise your shunning.

Enter Cardinal WOLSEY, (the purse borne before him,) certain of the guard, and two SECRE-TARIES with papers. The Cardinal in his passage fixeth his eye on BUCKINGHAM, and BUCK-INGHAM on him, both full of disdain.

Wol. The duke of Buckingham's surveyor?

Where's his examination?

Wol. Is he in person ready?

1 Secr. Ay, please your grace.

Wol. Well, we shall then know more; and Buckingham

Shall lessen this big look.

Nor. What, are you chaf'd?
Ask God for temperance; that's the appliance only,

Which your disease requires.

Buck. I read in his looks
Matter against me; and his eye revell'd
Me, as his abject object: at this instant
He bores^a me with some trick: He's gone to
the king;

I'll follow, and out-stare him.

Nor. Stay, my lord,
And let your reason with your choler question
What 'tis you go about: To climb steep hills,
Requires slow pace at first: Anger is like
A full-hot horse; who being allow'd his way,
Self-mettle tires him. Not a man in England
Can advise me like you: be to yourself
As you would to your friend.

Buck. I'll to the king;
And from a mouth of honour quite cry down
This Ipswich fellow's insolence; or proclaim,
There's difference in no persons.

Nor. Be advis'd;
Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot
That it do singe yourself: We may outrun,
By violent swiftness, that which we run at,
And lose by over-running. Know you not,
The fire, that mounts the liquor till it run
o'er,
In seeming to augment it, wastes it? Be advis'd:

I say again, there is no English soul
More stronger to direct you than yourself;
If with the sap of reason you would quench,
Or but allay, the fire of passion.

Buck. Sir,
I am thankful to you; and I'll go along
By your prescription:—but this top-proud fellow,
(Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but
From sincere motions,) by intelligence,
And proofs as clear as founts in July, when
We see each grain of gravel, I do know
To be corrupt and treasonous.

Nor. Say not, treasonous.

Buck. To the king I'll say't; and make my vouch as strong
As shore of rock. Attend. This holy fox,
Or wolf, or beth, (for he is equal ravenous,
As he is subtle; and as prone to mischief,
As able to perform it: his mind and place

That swallow'd so much treasure, and like a
Did break i' the rinsing. [glass]

Nor. 'Faith, and so it did.

Buck. Pray, give me favour, Sir. This cunning cardinal
The articles o' the combination drew,
As himself pleas'd; and they were ratified,
As he cried, Thus let it be: to as much end,
As give a crutch to the dead: But our count-
cardinal [sey,

Has done this, and 'tis well; for worthy Wol-
Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows, (Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy
To the old dam, treason,)—Charles the emperor,

Under pretence to see the queen his aunt,
(For 'twas, indeed, his colour; but he came To whisper Wolsey,) here makes visitation:

His fears were, that the interview, betwixt England and France, might, through the unity,

Breed him some prejudice; for from the league

Peep'd harme that menac'd him: He mildly
Deals with our cardinal; and, as I traw,—
Which I do well; for, I am sure, the emperor Paid ere he promis'd; whereby his suit was granted,

Ere it was ask'd;—but when the way was
made,
And pay'd with gold, the emperor that slept,—

That he would please to alter the king's count
And break the aforesaid peace. Let the king
know,

(As soon he shall by me,) that thus the card
Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases,
And for his own advantage.

Nor. I am sorry
To hear this of him; and could wish, he were Something mistaken in't.

Buck. No, not a syllable;
I do pronounce him in that very shape,
He shall appear in proof.

Enter BRANDON; a SERGEANT at Arms bids him, and two or three of the guard.

Brax. Your office, sergeant; execute it.

Serg. Sir,
My lord the duke of Buckingham, and earl
Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I
Arrest thee of high treason, in the name
Of our most sovereign king.

Buck. Lo you, my lord,
The net has fallen upon me; I shall perish
Under device and practice.*

Brax. I am sorry
To see you ta'en from liberty, to look on
The business present: 'Tis his highness' plea
You shall to the Tower.

Buck. It will help me nothing,
To plead mine innocence; for that disease Which makes my whitest part black. The will of heaven

Be done in this and all things!—I obey.—
O my lord Aberg'any, fare you well.

Brax. Nay, he must bear you company:
The king [To ABERGAVENY.]

The will of heaven be done, and the king's pleasure

By me obey'd.
Brax. Here is a warrant from
The king, to attach lord Montacute; and his bodies

Of the duke's confessor, John de la Court,
One Gilbert Peck, his chancellor,—

Buck. So, so;
These are the limbs of the plot: no more, I
hope.

Brax. A monk o' the Chartreux.

Buck. O, Nicholas Hopkins?

Brax. He.

Buck. My surveyor is false; the o'er great cardinal [ready:
Hath show'd him gold: my life is spann'd; al-
I am the shadow of poor Buckingham;
Whose figure even this instant clouds put on.
By dark'ning my clear sun.—My lord, fare-

SCENE II.—The Council-Chamber.

Cornets. Enter King HENRY, Cardinal WOLSEY, the Lords of the Council, Sir THOMAS LOVELL, Officers, and Attendants. The KING enters, leaning on the CARDINAL's shoulder.

K. Hen. My life itself, and the best heart of it, [level

Thanks you for this great care: I stood i'the Of a full-charg'd confederacy, and give thanks To you that chok'd it.—Let be call'd before us That gentleman of Buckingham's: in person I'll hear him his confessions justify; And point by point the treasons of his master He shall again relate.

The KING takes his state. The Lords of the Council take their several places. The CARDINAL places himself under the KING's feet on his right side.*

A noise within, crying, Room for the Queen. Enter the QUEEN, ushered by the Dukes of NORFOLK and SUFFOLK: she kneels. The KING riseth from his state, takes her up, kisses, and placeth her by him.

Q. Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel; I am a suitor.

K. Hen. Arise, and take place by us:—Half your suit

Never name to us; you have half our power: The other moiety, ere you ask, is given; Repeat your will, and take it.

Q. Kath. Thank your majesty. That you would love yourself; and, in that love, Not unconsider'd leave your honour, nor The dignity of your office, is the point Of my petition.

K. Hen. Lady, mine!—proceed.

Q. Kath. I am solicited, not by a few, And those of true condition, that your subjects Are in great grievance: there hath been commissions [heart

Sent down among them, which have flaw'd the Of all their loyalties:—wherein, although, My good lord cardinal, they vent reproaches Most bitterly on you, as putter-on Of these exactions, yet the king our master, (Whose honour heaven shield from soil!) even he escapes not

Language unmannerly, yea, such which breaks The sides of loyalty, and almost appears In loud rebellion.

Nor. Not almost appears, It doth appear; for, upon these taxations, The clothiers all, not able to maintain The many to them 'longing, have put off The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who, Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger And lack of other means, in desperate manner Daring the event to the teeth, are all in uproar, And danger serves among them.

K. Hen. Taxation! [nal, Wherein? and what taxation?—My lord cardinal, You that are blam'd for it alike with us, Know you of this taxation?

Wol. Please you, Sir, I know but of a single part, in aught Pertains to the state; and front but in that file† Where others tell steps with me.

Q. Kath. No, my lord, You know no more than others: but you frame Things, that are known alike; which are not wholesome [must

To those which would not know them, and yet

Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions, [are

Whereof my sovereign would have note, they Most pestilent to the hearing; and, to bear them,

The back is sacrifice to the load. They say, They are devis'd by you; or else you suffer Too hard an exclamation.

K. Hen. Still exaction! The nature of it? In what kind, let's know Is this exaction?

Q. Kath. I am much too venturous In tempting of your patience; but am bolden'd Under your promis'd pardon. The subject's grief

Comes through commissions, which compel from each

The sixth part of his substance, to be levied Without delay; and the pretence for this Is nam'd, your wars in France: This makes bold mouths: [freeze

Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts Allegiance in them; their curses now, Live where their prayers did; and it's come to pass,

That tractable obedience is a slave To each incensed will. I would, your highness Would give it quick consideration, for There is no primer business.

K. Hen. By my life, This is against our pleasure.

Wol. And for me, I have no farther gone in this, than by A single voice; and that not pass'd me, but By learned approbation of the judges. If I am traduc'd by tongues, which neither My faculties, nor person, yet will be [know The chronicles of my doing,—let me say, 'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake* That virtue must go through. We must not Our necessary actions, in the fear [stint† To cope‡ malicious censurers; which ever, As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow That is new trimm'd; but benefit no further Than vainly longing. What we oft do best, By sick interpreters, once§ weak ones, is Not ours, or not allow'd;|| what worst, as oft, Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up For our best act. If we shall stand still, In fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at, We should take root here where we sit, or sit State statues only.

K. Hen. Things done well, And with a care, exempt themselves from fear; Things done without example, in their issue Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent Of this commission? I believe, not any.

We must not rend our subjects from our laws, And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each? A trembling contribution! Why, we take, From every tree, lop, bark, and part o the timber; [hack'd,

And, though we leave it with a root, thus The air will drink the sap. To every county, Where this is question'd, send our letters, with Free pardon to each man that has denied The force of this commission: Pray, look to't; I put it to your care.

Wol. A word with you.

Q. Kath. I am sorry, that the duke of Buck-
Is run in your displeasure. [Ingham]

K. Hen. It grieves many: [speaker,
The gentleman is learn'd, and a most rare

That he may furnish and instruct great teach-

They turn to vicious forms, ten times more Than ever they were fair. This man so complete, [we,

Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders, and when Almost with ravish'd list'ning, could not find
His hour of speech a minute; he, my lady,
Hath into monstrous habits put the graces
That once were his, and is become as black As if besmear'd in hell. Sit by us; you shall hear

(This was his gentleman in trust,) of him
Things to strike honour sad.—Bid him recount
The fore-recited practices; whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much.

Wol. Stand forth; and with bold spirit relate what you,
Most like a careful subject, have collected
Out of the Duke of Buckingham.

K. Hen. Speak freely.

Surv. First, it was usual with him, every day
It would infect his speech, That if the king
Should without issue die, he'd carry† it so
To make the sceptre his: These very words
I have heard him utter to his son-in-law,
Lord Aberga'ny; to whom by oath he menac'd
Revenge upon the cardinal.

Wol. Please your highness, note
This dangerous conception in this point.
Not friended by his wish, to your high person
His will is most malignant; and it stretches
Beyond you, to your friends.

Q. Kath. My learn'd lord cardinal,
Deliver all with charity.

K. Hen. Speak on:
How grounded he his title to the crown,
Upon our fail; to this point hast thou heard
At any time speak aught? [him

Surv. He was brought to this
By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Hopkins.

K. Hen. What was that Hopkins?

Surv. Sir, a Chartreux friar,
His confessor; who fed him every minute
With words of sovereignty.

K. Hen. How know'st thou this?

Surv. Not long before your highness sped to France,

The duke being at the Rose,‡ within the parish
Saint Lawrence Poultney, did of me demand
What was the speech amongst the Londoners
Concerning the French journey: I replied,
Men fear'd, the French would prove perfidious,
To the king's danger. Presently the duke Said, 'Twas the fear, indeed; and that he doubted,

'Twould prove the verity of certain words
Spoke by a holy monk; That oft, says he,
Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
John de la Court, my chaplain, a choice hour
To hear from him a matter of some moment:

To gain the love of the commonalty; the duke
Shall govern England.

You were the duke's surveyor, and lost your

On the complaint o' the tenants: Take heed
You charge not in your spleen a noble person,
And spoil your nobler soul! I say, take heed;
Yes, heartily beseech you.

K. Hen. Let him on:—
Go forward.

Surv. On my soul, I'll speak but truth.
I told my lord the duke, By the devil's illusions
The monk might be deceiv'd; and that 'twas dang'rous for him,

To ruminate on this so far, until [Hev'd,
It forg'd him some design, which, being be-
It was much like to do: He answer'd, That!
It can do me no damage: adding further,
That, had the king in his last sickness fall'd,
The cardinal's and Sir Thomas Lovell's heads
Should have gone off.

K. Hen. Ha! what, so rank? Ah, ha!
There's mischief in this man:—Canst thou say further?

Surv. I can, my liege.

K. Hen. Proceed.

Surv. Being at Greenwich,
After your highness had reprov'd the duke
About Sir William Blomer,—

K. Hen. I remember,
Of such a time:—Being my servant sworn,
The duke retain'd him his.—But on; What
hence?

Surv. If, quoth he, I for this had been committed,

As to the Tower, I thought,—I would have play'd
The part my father meant to act upon
The usurper Richard: who, being at Salisbury, Made suit to come in his presence; which if
granted,

As he made semblance of his duty, would
Have put his knife into him.

K. Hen. A giant traitor!

Wol. Now, madam, may his highness live in freedom,

And this man out of prison?

Q. Kath. God mend all!

Let him not seek't of us: By day and night,
He's traitor to the height. [Exeunt.

ward Bohan:

Yet I am richer than my base accusers,
That never knew what truth meant: I now
seal it;

And with that blood will make them one day
green for't.

My noble father, Henry of Buckingham,
Who first rais'd head against usurping Richard,
Flying for succour to his servant Banister,
Being distress'd, was by that wretch betray'd,
And without trial fall; God's peace be with
him!

Henry the seventh succeeding, truly pitying
My father's loss, like a most royal prince,
Restor'd me to my honour, and, out of ruins,
Made my name once more noble. Now his
son,

Henry the eighth, life, honour, name, and all
That made me happy, at one stroke has taken
For ever from the world. I had my trial,
And must needs say, a noble one; which makes me

A little happier than my wretched father:
Yet thus far we are one in fortune,—Both Fall by our servants, by those men we lov'd most;

A most unnatural and faithless service! [me,
Heaven has an end in all: yet you that hear
This from a dying man receive as certain:
Where you are liberal of your loves, and counsels, [friends,

Be sure, you be not loose; for these you make
And give your hearts to, when they once perceive

The least rub in your fortunes, fall away
Like water from ye, never found again
But where they mean to sink ye. All good people, [hour

Pray for me! I must now forsake ye; the last
Of my long weary life is come upon me.
Farewell: [and,

And when you would say something that is Speak how I fell.—I have done; and God forgive me!

[Exeunt BUCKINGHAM and Train.

1 Gent. O, this is full of pity!—Sir, it calls,
I fear, too many curses on their heads,
That were the authors.

2 Gent. If the duke be guiltless,
'Tis full of woe: yet I can give you talking
Of an ensuing evil, if it fall,
Greater than this.

1 Gent. Good angels keep it from us! [Sir?
Where may it be? You do not doubt my faith,

2 Gent. This secret is so weighty, 'twill re-
A strong faith^e to conceal it. [quire

1 Gent. Let me have it;
I do not talk much.

2 Gent. I am confident;
You shall, Sir: did you not of late days hear
A buzzing, of a separation
Between the king and Katharine?

1 Gent. Yes, but it held not:
For when the king once heard it, out of anger
He sent command to the lord mayor, straight
To stop the rumour, and allay those tongues
That durst disperse it.

2 Gent. But that slander, Sir,
Is found a truth now: for it grows again
Fresher than e'er it was; and held for certain,
The king will venture at it. Either the cardinal,

Or some about him near, have, out of malice

* Great fidelity

To the good queen, 'possess'd him with a scruple

That will make her: To confirm this too,
Cardinal Campeius is arriv'd, and lately;
As all think, for this business.

1 Gent. 'Tis the cardinal;
And merely to revenge him on the emperor,
For not bestowing on him, at his asking,
The archbishoprick of Toledo, this is purport.

2 Gent. I think you have hit the mark: [He is't not cruel,
That she should feel the smart of this? The cardinal

Will have his will, and she must fall.

1 Gent. 'Tis woful.
We are too open here to argue this;
Let's think in private more. [Revet

SCENE II.—An Ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter the Lord CHAMBERLAIN, reading a letter.

Cham. My lord,—The horses your lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I saw selected, ridden, and furnished. They were young and handsome; and of the best breed in the world.
When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my lord cardinal's, by commission, of main power, took 'em from me; with thisness,
—His master would be served before a night,
if not before the king: which stopp'd our money,
Sir.

I fear, he will, indeed: Well, let him look
He will have all, I think. [Exit

Enter the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk.

Nor. Well met, my good Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good day to both your graces.

Suf. How is the king employ'd?

Cham. I left him private,

Full of sad thoughts and troubles.

Nor. What's the cause?

Cham. It seems, the marriage with his sister's wife

Has crept too near his conscience.

Suf. No, his conscience

Has crept too near another lady.

Nor. 'Tis so;

This is the cardinal's doing, the king-cardinal
That blind priest, like the eldest son of his tune,

Tunes what he lists. The king will know his one day.

Suf. Pray God, he do! he'll never know himself else.

Nor. How holily he works in all his business!

And with what zeal! For now he has crack'd
the league

Between us and the emperor, the queen's great nephew,

He dives into the king's soul, and then scatters

Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience,
Fears, and despairs, and all these for his marriage:

And, out of all these to restore the king,
He counsels a divorce: a loss of her
That, like a jewel, has hung twenty years
About his neck, yet never lost her lustre;
Of her that loves him with that excellence
That angels love good men with; even of her
That, when the greatest stroke of fortune falls,
Will bless the king: and is not this course pious?

Keep me from such counsel!

Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you, do me right and justice;

And to bestow your pity on me: for

I am a most poor woman, and a stranger,

Born out of your dominions; having here

No judge indifferent, nor no more assurance

Of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas

Sir,

In what have I offended you? what cause

Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure,

That thus you should proceed to put me off,

And take your good grace from me? Heaven

witness,

I have been to you a true and humble wife,

At all times to your will conformable:

Ever in fear to kindle your dislike,

Yea, subject to your countenance; glad, or

sorry,

As I saw it inclin'd. When was the hour,

I ever contradicted your desire,

Or made it not mine too? Or which of your friends

Have I not strove to love, although I knew

He were mine enemy? what friend of mine

That had to him deriv'd your anger, did I

Continue in my liking? nay, gave notice

He was from thence discharg'd? Sir, call to mind

That I have been your wife in this obedience,

Upward of twenty years, and have been bless'd

With many children by you: If, in the course

And process of this time, you can report,

And prove it too, against mine honour aught,

My bond to wedlock, or my love and duty,

Against your sacred person, in God's name,

Turn me away; and let the foul'st contempt

Shut door upon me, and so give me up [Sir,

To the sharpest kind of justice. Please you,

The king, your father, was reputed for

A prince most prudent, of an excellent

And unmatched wit and judgement: Fer-

My father, king of Spain, was reckon'd one

The wisest prince, that there had reign'd by many

A year before: It is not to be question'd

That they had gather'd a wise council to them

Of every realm, that did debate this business,

Who deem'd our marriage lawful: Wherefore

I humbly

Beseech you, Sir, to spare me, till I may

Be by my friends in Spain advis'd; whose counsel

I will implore: if not; i'the name of God,

Your pleasure be fulfill'd!

cardinal,

The willing'st sin I ever yet committed,
May be absolv'd in English.

So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant.

SCENE II.—Ante-chamber to the King's Apartment.

*Enter the Duke of NORFOLK, the Duke of SUR-
FOLK, the Earl of SURREY, and the Lord CHAMBERLAIN.*

Nor. If you will now unite in your complaints,
And force them with a constancy, the cardinal
Cannot stand under them: if you omit
The offer of this time, I cannot promise,
But that you shall sustain more new disgraces,
With these you bear already.

Sar. I am joyful
To meet the least occasion, that may give me
Remembrance of my father-in-law, the duke,
To be reveng'd on him.

Suf. Which of the peers
Have uncontain'd gone by him, or at least
Strangely neglected? when did he regard
The stamp of nobleness in any person,
Out of himself?

Cham. My lords, you speak your pleasures:
What he deserves of you and me, I know;
What we can do to him, (though now the time Gives way to us,) I much fear. If you cannot Bar his access to the king, never attempt
Any thing on him; for he bath a witchcraft
Over the king in his tongue.

Nor. O, fear him not;
His spell in that is out: the king hath found
Matter against him, that for ever mars
The honey of his language. No, he's settled,
Not to come off, in his displeasure.

Sar. Sir,
I should be glad to hear such news as this Once every hour.

Nor. Believe it, this is true.
In the divorce, his contrary proceedings
Are all unfolded; wherein he appears,
As I could wish mine enemy.

Sar. How came
His practices to light?

Suf. Most strangely.

Sar. O, how, how?

Suf. The cardinal's letter to the pope miscarried,
And came to the eye o'the king: wherein was read,

How that the cardinal did entreat his holiness
To stay the judgement o'the divorce: for if
It did take place, I do, quoth he, perceive
My king is tangled in affection to

A creature of the queen's, lady Anne Bullen.

Sar. Has the king this?

Suf. Believe it.

Sar. Will this work?

Cham. The king in this perceives him, how he coasts,
And hedges his own way. But in this point
All his tricks founder, and he brings his physic

After his patient's death: the king already Hath married the fair lady.

Sar. Would he had!

Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my
For, I profess, you have it. [lord?]

Sar. Now all my joy

Trace* the conjunction!

Suf. My amen to't!

Nor. All men's.

Suf. There's order given for her coronation:
Marry, this is yet but young,† and may be left
To some ears unrecounted.—But, my lords,
She is a gallant creature, and complete
In mind and feature: I persuade me, from her
Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall
In it be memoriz'd.‡

Sar. But, will the king
Digest this letter of the cardinal's?
The Lord forbid!

Nor. Marry, amen!

Suf. No, no;

There be more wasps that buzz about his nose,
Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal Campeius.

Is stolen away to Rome; hath ta'en no leave;
Has left the cause o'the king unhandled; and
Is posted, as the agent of our cardinal,
To second all his plot. I do assure you
The king cry'd, ha! at this.

Cham. Now, God incense him,
And let him cry ha, louder!

Nor. But, my lord,
When returns Cranmer?

Suf. He is return'd, in his opinions; which
Have satisfied the king for his divorce,
Together with all famous colleges
Almost in Christendom: shortly, I believe,
His second marriage shall be publish'd, and
Her coronation. Katharine no more
Shall be call'd, queen; but princess dowager,
And widow to prince Arthur.

Nor. This same Cranmer's
A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain
In the king's business.

Suf. He has; and we shall see him
For it, an archbishop.

Nor. So I hear.

Suf. 'Tis so.

The cardinal—

Enter WOLSEY and CROMWELL.

Nor. Observe, observe, he's moody.

Wol. The packet, Cromwell, gave it you
the king?

Crom. To his own hand, in his bed-chamber.

Wol. Look'd he o'the inside of the paper?

Crom. Presently

He did unseal them: and the first he view'd,
He did it with a serious mind; a heed
Was in his countenance: You, he bade
Attend him here this morning.

Wol. Is he ready

To come abroad?

Crom. I think, by this he is.

Wol. Leave me a while.—

The French king's sister: he shall marry her.—

We have seen him set himself.

K. Hen. It may well be; There is a mutiny in his mind. This morning Papers of state he sent me to peruse, As I requir'd; And, wot† you, what I found There; on my conscience, put unwittingly? Forsooth, an inventory, thus importing,— The several parcels of his plate, his treasure, Rich stuffs, and ornaments of household; which I find at such proud rate, that it out-speaks Possession of a subject.

Nor. It's heaven's will; Some spirit put this paper in the packet, To bless your eye withal.

K. Hen. If we did think His contemplation were above the earth, And fix'd on spiritual object, he should still Dwell in his musings: but I am afraid, His thinkings are below the moon, not worth His serious considering.

[He takes his seat, and whispers LOVELL, who goes to WOLSEY.

Of your best graces in your mind; the which You were now running o'er; you have some time

To steal from spiritual leisure a brief span, To keep your earthly audit: sure, in that I deem you an ill husband; and am glad To have you therein my companion.

Wol. Sir,

For holy offices I have a time; a time To think upon the part of business, which I bear i' the state; and nature does require Her times of preservation, which, perforce, I, her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal, Must give my tendance to.

SCENE I.—A Street in Westminster.

Enter two GENTLEMEN, meeting.

2 Gent. And so are you.

1 Gent. You come to take your stand here,

The lady Anne pass from her coronation?

2 Gent. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter,

The duke of Buckingham came from his trial.

1 Gent. 'Tis very true: but that time offer'd

This general joy.

2 Gent. 'Tis well: The citizens,

I am sure, have shown at full their royal minds;
As, let them have their rights, they are ever

In celebration of this day with shows,
Pageants, and sights of honour.

1 Gent. Never greater,

2 Gent. May I be bold to ask what that con-
That paper in your hand? [tains,

1 Gent. Yes; 'tis the list
Of those, that claim their offices this day,
By custom of the coronation.
The duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims
To be high steward; next, the duke of Norfolk,
He to be earl marshal; you may read the rest.

2 Gent. I thank you, Sir; had I not known those customs,
I should have been beholden to your paper.
But, I beseech you, what's become of Katharine,

The princess dowager! how goes her business?

1 Gent. That I can tell you too. The archbishop

Of Canterbury, accompanied with other
Learned and reverend fathers of his order,
Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off
From Ampthill, where the princess lay; to which

She oft was cited by them, but appear'd not:

And, to be short, for not appearance, and
The king's late scruple, by the main assent
Of all these learned men she was divorc'd,
And the late marriage* made of none effect:
Since which, she was removed to Kimbolton,
Where she remains now, sick.

2 Gent. Alas, good lady!— [Trumpets.
The trumpets sound: stand close, the queen is coming.

THE ORDER OF THE PROCESSION.

A lively flourish of Trumpets; then enter

1. Two Judges.
2. The Lord Chancellor, with the purse and mace before him.
3. Choristers singing. [Music.
4. Mayor of London bearing the mace. Then Garter, in his coat of arms, and on his head, a gilt copper crown.
5. Marquis Dorset, bearing a sceptre of gold, on his head a demi-coronal of gold. With him, the earl of Surrey, bearing the rod of silver with the dore, crowned with an earl's coronet. Collars of SS.
6. Duke of Suffolk, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as high-steward. With him, the duke of Norfolk, with the rod of marshalship, a coronet on his head. Collars of SS.
7. A canopy borne by four of the Cinque-ports;
under it, the Queen in her robe; in her hair richly adorned with pearl, crowned. On each side of her, the bishops of London, and Winchester.
8. The old duchess of Norfolk, in a coronal of gold, wrought with flowers, bearing the Queen's train.
9. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circlets of gold without flowers.

2 Gent. A royal train, believe me.—These I
know;—

Who's that, that bears the sceptre?

1 Gent. Marquis Dorset:

And that the earl of Surrey, with the rod.

2 Gent. A bold brave gentleman: And that should be

The duke of Suffolk.

1 Gent. 'Tis the same; high-steward.

2 Gent. And that my lord of Norfolk?

1 Gent. Yes.

2 Gent. Heaven bless thee!

[Looking on the Queen.

Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on.—

† By short

Tied all the kingdom: simony was fair play;
His own opinion was his law: I'the presence*
He would say untruths; and be ever double,
Both in his words and meaning: He was never,
But where he meant to ruin, pitiful:
His promises were, as he then was, mighty;
But his performance, as he is now, nothing.
Of his own body he was ill, and gave
The clergy ill example.

Grif. Noble madam,
Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues
We write in water. May it please your high-
To hear me speak his good now? [ness

Kath. Yes, good Griffith;
I were malicious else.

Grif. This cardinal,
Though from an humble stock, undoubtedly Was fashion'd tot much honour. From his cradle,

He was a scholar, and a ripe, and good one;
Exceeding wise, fair spoken, and persuading:
Lofty, and sour, to them that lov'd him not;
But, to those men that sought him, sweet as summer.

And though he were unsatisfied in getting,
(Which was a sin,) yet in bestowing, madam,
He was most princely: Ever witness for him
Those twins of learning, that he rais'd in you, Ipswich, and Oxford! one of which fell with
him,

Unwilling to outlive the good that did it;
The other, though unfinish'd, yet so famous,
So excellent in art, and still so rising,
That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue.
His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him;
For then, and not till then, he felt himself,
And found the blessedness of being little:
And, to add greater honours to his age
Than man could give him, he died, fearing God.

Kath. After my death I wish no other he-
No other speaker of my living actions, [rald,
To keep mine honour from corruption,
But such an honest chronicler as Griffith.
Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me,
With thy religious truth, and modesty,
Now in his ashes honour: Peace be with
him!—

Patience, he near me still; and set me lower:
I have not long to trouble thee.—Good Griffith,
Cause the musicians play me that sad note
I nam'd my knell, whilst I sit meditating
On that celestial harmony I go to.

Sad and solemn music.

Grif. She is asleep: Good wench, let's sit down quiet,
For fear we wake her;—Softly, gentle Patience.

The Vision. Enter, solemnly tripping one after another, six Personages, clad in white robes, securing on their heads garlands of bays, and golden rizards on their faces; branches of myrs, or palm, in their hands. They first congee unto her, then dance; and, at certain changes, the first two hold a spare garland over her head; at which, the other four make reverend court'sies;
then the two that held the garland, deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head: which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order: at which, (as it were by inspiration,) she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven:

and so in their dancing they vanish, carrying the garland with them. The music continues.

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone?

And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye?

Grif. Madam, we are here.

Kath. It is not you I call for:

Saw ye none enter, since I slept?

Grif. None, madam.

Kath. No? Saw you not, even now, a blessed troop

Invite me to a banquet; whose bright faces
Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun?
They promis'd me eternal happiness;
And brought me garlands, Griffith, which I
I am not worthy yet to wear: I shall, [feel Assuredly.

Grif. I am most joyful, madam, such good
Possess your fancy. [dreams

Kath. Bid the music leave,
They are harsh and heavy to me.

[Music ceases.

Pat. Do you note,
How much her grace is alter'd on the sudden?
How long her face is drawn? How pale she looks,

And of an earthy cold? Mark you her eyes?

Grif. She is going, wench; pray, pray.

Pat. Heaven comfort her!

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. An't like your grace,—

Deserve we no more reverence?

But poverty could never draw them from me;—
That they may have their wages duly paid

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Gallery in the Palace.

Enter GARDINER Bishop of Winchester, a PAGE with a torch before him, met by Sir THOMAS LOVELL.

Gar. It's one o'clock, boy, is't not?

Boy. It hath struck.

Gar. These should be hours for necessities,

Gar. Not yet, Sir Thomas Lovell. What's
the matter?

It seems you are in haste: an if there be
No great offence belongs to't, give your friend
Some touch of your late business: Affairs, Sir,

(As, they say, spirits do,) at midnight, have
In them a wilder nature, than the business
That seeks despatch by day.

Lov. My lord, I love you;
And durst commend a secret to your ear
Much weightier than this work. The quest's in labour,

They say, in great extremity; and fear'd,
She'll with the labour end.

I pray for heartily; that it may find
Good time, and live: but for the stock, Sir Thomas,

I wish it grubb'd up now.

Lov. Methinks, I could
Cry the amen; and yet my conscience says:
She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does
Deserve our better wishes.

Gar. But, Sir, Sir,—
Hear me, Sir Thomas: You are a gentleman
Of mine own way; I know you wise, reli-

K. Hen. Now, by thy looks
I guess thy message. Is the queen deliver'd?
Say, ay; and of a boy.

Lady. Ay, ay, my liege;
And of a lovely boy: The God of heaven
Both now and ever bless him!—'tis a girl,
Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger; 'tis as like you,
As cherry is to cherry.

K. Hen. Lovell,—

Enter Lovell.

Lov. Sir.

K. Hen. Give her a hundred marks. I'll to the queen. [Exit King.]

Lady. A hundred marks! By this light,
I'll have more.

An ordinary groom is for such payment.
I will have more, or send it out of him.
Said I for this, the girl is like to him?
I will have more, or else won't; and now
While it is hot, I'll put it to the issue. [Exit Lady.]

SCENE II.—Lobby before the Council-Chamber.

Enter CRANMER; SERVANTS, DOOR-KEEPER, &c. attending.

Cran. I hope, I am not too late; and yet the gentlemen, [to me]
That was sent to me from the council, pray'd
To make great haste. All fast? what means this?—Hua!

Who waits there?—Sure, you know me?

D. Keep. Yes, my lord;

But yet I cannot help you.

Cran. Why?

D. Keep. Your grace must wait, till you be call'd for.

Enter Doctor Butts.

Cran. So.

Butts. This is a piece of malice. I am glad,
I came this way so happily: The king
Shall understand it presently. [Exit Butts.]

Cran. [Aside.] 'Tis Butts,
The king's physician; As he past along,
How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me!
Pray heaven, he sound not my disgrace! For certain,

This is of purpose laid, by some that hate me, (God turn their hearts! I never sought their malice.)

To quench mine honour: they would shame to make me

Wait else at door; a fellow counsellor, Among boys, grooms, and lackeys. But their pleasures

Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

Enter at a window above, the KING and BUTTS.

Butts. I'll show your grace the strangest sight,—

K. Hen. What's that, Butts?

Butts. I think, your highness saw this many a day.

K. Hen. Body o'me, where is it?

Butts. There, my lord: [bury;

The high promotion of his grace of Canter-
Who holds his state at door, 'mongst pursui-
Pages, and footboys. [vants,

K. Hen. Ha! 'Tis he, indeed:

Is this the honour they do one another?

'Tis well, there's one above them yet. I had thought,

They had parted so much honesty among them
(At least, good manners,) as not thus to sell
A man of his place, and so near our favor,
To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures,

And at the door too, like a post with pain
By holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery.

Let them alone, and draw the curtain close.
We shall hear more anon.— [Exit.]

THE COUNCIL-CHAMBER.

*Enter the Lord CHANCELLOR, the Duke of FOLK, Earl of SURREY, Lord CHAMBERLAIN,
GARDINER, and CROMWELL.* The Chancellor places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand; a seat being left void above him, as for the Archbishop of CANTERBURY. He rests seat themselves in order on each side
CROMWELL at the lower end, as secretary.

Chan. Speak to the business, master secretary.
Why are we met in council?

Crom. Please your honours,

The chief cause concerns his grace of Canter-

Ger. Has he had knowledge of it?

Crom. Yes.

Nor. Who waits there?

D. Keep. Without, my noble father?

Ger. Yes.

D. Keep. My lord archbishop;

And has done half an hour, in his pleasures.

Chan. Let him come in.

D. Keep. Your grace may enter now.

[CRANMER approaches the Council-table.]

Chan. My good lord archbishop, I am very sorry

To sit here at this present, and behold

That chair stand empty: But we all are men.

In our own natures frail; and capable

Of our flesh, few are angels: out of which frailty,

And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us,

Have misdeem'd yourself, and not a little

Toward the king first, then his laws, in filling

The whole realm by your teaching, and your chaplains,

(For so we are inform'd,) with new opinions

Divers, and dangerous; which are heresies,

And, not reform'd, may prove pernicious.

Ger. Which reformation must be sudden in.

My noble lords: for those, that tame wild horses,

Pace them not in their hands to make them
But stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur them,

Till they obey the manage. If we suffer

(Out of our easiness, and childish pity

To one man's honour) this contagious sickness

Farewell, all physic: And what follows that?

Commotions, uproars, with a general taint

Of the whole state: as, of late days, our neighbor

hours,

The upper Germany, can dearly witness,

Yet freshly pitied in our memories.

Cran. My good lords, hitherto, is all the progress

Both of my life and office, I have labour'd,

And with no little study, that my teaching

And the strong course of my authority,

Might go one way, and safely; and the end

Was ever, to do well: nor is there living

(I speak it with a single heart,* my lords.)
 A man, that more detests, more stirs against,
 Both in his private conscience, and his place,
 Defacers of a public peace, than I do.
 'Pray heaven, the king may never find a heart
 With less allegiance in it! Men, that make Envy, and crooked malice, nourishment, Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships,
 That, in this case of justice, my accusers,
 Be what they will, may stand forth face to face,
 And freely urge against me.

Suf. Nay, my lord,
 That cannot be; you are a counsellor,
 And, by that virtue, no man dare accuse you.

Gar. My lord, because we have business of more moment,
 We will be short with you. 'Tis his highness'
 pleasure,
 And our consent, for better trial of you,
 From hence you be committed to the Tower;
 Where, being but a private man again,
 You shall know many dare accuse you boldly,
 More than, I fear, you are provided for.

Cran. Ah, my good lord of Winchester, I thank you, [pass,
 You are always my good friend; if your will
 I shall both find your lordship judge and juror,
 You are so merciful: I see your end,
 'Tis my undoing: Love, and meekness, lord,
 Become a churchman better than ambition;
 Win straying souls with modesty again,
 Cast none away. That I shall clear myself,
 Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience,
 I make as little doubt, as you do conscience,
 In doing daily wrongs. I could say more,
 But reverence to your calling makes me modest.

Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a sectary,
 That's the plain truth; your painted gloss discovers, [ness.
 To men that understand you, words and weak-

Crom. My lord of Winchester, you are a little,
 By your good favour, too sharp; men so noble,
 However faulty, yet should find respect
 For what they have been: 'tis a cruelty,
 To load a falling man.

Gar. Good master secretary,
 I cry your honour mercy; you may, worst
 Of all this table, say so.

Crom. Why, my lord?

Gar. Do not I know you for a favourer
 Of this new sect? ye are not sound.

Crom. Not sound?

Gar. Not sound, I say.

Crom. 'Would you were half so honest!
 Men's prayers then would seek you, not their fears.

Gar. I shall remember this bold language.

Crom. Do.

Remember your bold life too.

Chan. This is too much;
 Forbear, for shame, my lords.

Gar. I have done.

Crom. And I.

Chan. Then thus for you, my lord,—It stands agreed,

I take it, by all voices, that forthwith
 You be convey'd to the Tower a prisoner;
 There to remain, till the king's further pleasure
 Be known unto us: Are you all agreed, lords?

All. We are.

Cran. Is there no other way of mercy,
 But I must needs to the Tower, my lords?

Gar. What other
 Would you expect? You are strangely trouble-
 Let some o'the guard be ready there. [some!

Enter Guard.

Cran. For me?
 Must I go like a traitor thither?

Gar. Receive him,
 And see him safe i'the Tower.

Cran. Stay, good my lords,
 I have a little yet to say. Look there, my lords;
 By virtue of that ring, I take my cause
 Out of the gripes of cruel men, and give it
 To a most noble judge, the king my master.

Chan. This is the king's ring.

Sur. 'Tis no counterfeit.

Suf. 'Tis the right ring, by heaven: I told ye all, [ing,
 When we first put this dangerous stone a roll-
 'Twould fall upon ourselves.

Nor. Do you think, my lords,
 The king will suffer but the little finger
 Of this man to be vex'd?

Chan. 'Tis now too certain:
 How much more is his life in value with him?
 'Would I were fairly out on't.

Crom. My mind gave me,
 In seeking tales, and informations,
 Against this man, (whose honesty the devil
 And his disciples only envy at,)
 Ye blew the fire that burns ye: Now have at ye.

Enter KING, frowning on them; takes his scat.

Gar. Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to heaven
 In daily thanks, that gave us such a prince;
 Not only good and wise, but most religious:
 One that, in all obedience, makes the church
 The chief aim of his honour; and, to strengthen
 That holy duty, out of dear respect,
 His royal self in judgement comes to hear
 The cause betwixt her and this great offender.

K. Hen. You were ever good at sudden commendations,
 Bishop of Winchester. But know, I come not
 To hear such flattery now, and in my presence,
 They are too thin and base to hide offences.
 To me you cannot reach, you play the spaniel,
 And think with wagging of your tongue to win
 me;

But, whatsoe'er thou tak'st me for, I am sure,
 Thou hast a cruel nature, and a bloody.— Good man, [To CRANMER.] sit down. Now let me see the proudest
 He, that dares most, but wag his finger at thee:
 By all that's holy, he had better starve,
 Than but once think his place becomes thee
 not.

Sur. May it please your grace,—

K. Hen. No, Sir, it does not please me.
 I had thought, I had had men of some understanding

And wisdom, of my council; but I find none.
 Was it discretion, lords, to let this man,
 This good man, (few of you deserve that title,)
 This honest man, wait like a lowly toothboy
 At chamber door? and one as great as you are?
 Why, what a shame was this? Did my commission

Bid ye so far forget yourselves? I gave ye Power as he was a counsellor to try him,
 Not as a groom; There's some of ye, I see,
 More out of malice than integrity,
 Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean;
 Which ye shall never have, while I live.

Chm. Thus far,
My most dread sovereigns, may it like your grace [you'd
To let my tongue express all. What was per-Concerning his imprisonment, was rather (If there be faith in men,) meant for his trial,
And fair purgation to the world, than malice;
I am sure, in me.

K. Hen. Well, well, my lords, respect him;
Take him, and use him well, he's worthy of it.
I will say thus much for him, If a prince
May be beholden to a subject, I
Am, for his love and service, so to him.
Make me no more ado, but all embrace him;
Be friends, for shame, my lords.—My lord of Canterbury.

I have a suit which you must not deny me;
This is, a fair young maid that yet wants happiness,
You must be godfather, and answer for her.

Crn. The greatest monarch now alive may glory

In such an honour; How may I deserve it,
That out a poor and humble subject to you?

K. Hen. Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your speech; * you shall have Two noble partners with you; the old duchess of Norfolk, [you?

And lady marquis Dorset; Will these please
Once more, my lord of Winchester, I charge
Embrace, and love this man. [you,

Ger. With a true heart,
And brother-love, I do it.

Crn. And let heaven
Witness, how dear I hold this confirmation.

K. Hen. Good man, these joyful tears show thy true heart.

The common voice, I see, is verified [bury
Of thee, which says thus, Do my lord of Canterbury a shroud turn, and he is your friend for ever.—
Come, lords, we trifle time away; I long
To have this young one made a Christian.
As I have made ye one, lords, one remain;
So I grow stronger, you more honour gain.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Palace Yard.

Noise and tumult within. Enter PORTER and his MAN.

Port. You'll leave your noise anon, ye rascals: Do you take the court for Paris-garden? ye rude slaves, leave your gaping.

[Within.] Good master porter, I belong to the garden.

Port. Belong to the gallows, and be hanged, you rogue: Is this a place to roar in?—Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones;
these are but switches to them.—I'll scratch your heads: You must be seeing christenings?
Do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals?

Man. Pray, Sir, be patient; 'tis as much impossible [cannons, (Unless we sweep them from the door with
To smother them, as 'tis to make them sleep
On May-day morning; which will never be:
We may as well push against Paul's, as stir
them.

Port. How got they in, and be hang'd?

Man. Alas, I know not; How gets the tide
As much as one sound cudgel of four foot [in?
(You see the poor remainder) could distribute,
I made no spare, Sir.

* It was an ancient custom for squires to present spoons to their god-children.

† The four gates on the South-side. ‡ Roaring.

Port. You did nothing, Sir.

Man. I am not Samson, nor Sir Guy, or Colbrand,* to mow them down before me: but If I spared any, that had a head to hit, either young or old, he or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker, let me never hope to see a chase again, and that I would not for a cow. God save us.

[Within.] Do you hear, master Porter?

Port. I shall be with you presently, not master puppy.—Keep the door close, Sarah.

Man. What would you have me do?

Port. What should you do, but knock the down by the dozens? Is this Moorfield master in? or have we some strange idle with the great tool come to court, the worse beings us? Bless me, what a fry of fellows is at door! On my Christian conscience, to see christening will begot a thousand to will be father, godfather, and all together.

Man. The spoons will be the bigger. Is There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazer by his face, for, as you recolence, twenty of the dog-days now reign seen; all that stand about him are under line, they need no other penance: That in-drake did I hit three times on the head, at three times was his nose discharged, and me; he stands there, like a mortar-piece, to blow us. There was a haberdasher's wife small wit near him, that railed upon me for her pink'd porridge; fell off her head, in kindling such a combustion in the state. I miss'd the meteor once, and hit that woman, who cried out, clink! when I might as well
for some forty truncheoners draw to her re-cour, which were the hope of the Strand, who she was quartered. They fell on; I made good my place, at length they came to the best staff with me, I defied them still; when suddenly a file of boys behind them, leapt out, delivered such a shower of pebbles, that I was fain to draw mine honour in, and let them on the work. The devil was amongst them, I feel surely.

Port. These are the youths that thunder at play-house, and fight for bitten apples; but no audience, but the Tribulation of Tower-hill or the limbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers are able to endure. I have some of them Lime Patrum,† and there they are like to dance these three days; besides the running banquet of two headles,‡ that is to come.

Enter the Lord CHAMBERLAIN.

Chm. Mercy o'mo, what a multitude we here! [coming.

They grow still too, from all parts they are
As if we kept a fair here! Where are the porters,

These lazy knaves!—Ye have made a fine band, fellows.

There's a trim rabble let in: Are all these Your faithful friends o'the suburbs? We shall have [indign.

Great store of room, no doubt, left for the
When they pass back from the christening.

Port. An't please your honour
We are but men; and what so many may do.
Not being torn a piece, we have done:
An army cannot rule them.

Chm. As I live,
If the king blame me for't, I'll lay ye all
By the heels, and suddenly; and on your heads

* Guy of Warwick, now Colbrand the Danish giant.

† Pink'd cup.

‡ Piece of entertainment.

† The hearse.

‡ A sort of whipping.

Clap round fines, for neglect: You are lazy knaves;
 And here ye lie baiting of bumbards,* when Ye should do service. Hark, the trumpets
 sound;
 They are come already from the christening:
 Go, break among the press, and find a way out
 To let the troop pass fairly; or I'll find A Marshalsea, shall hold you play these two months.

Port. Make way there for the princess.

Man. You great fellow, stand close up, or I'll make your head ache.

Port. You i'the camblet, get up o'the rail;
 I'll pickt you o'er the pales else. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Palace.†

*Enter Trumpets, sounding; then two Aldermen, Lord Mayor, Garter, Cranmer, Duke of Norfolk, with his Marshal's Staff, Duke of Suffolk, two Noblemen bearing great standing-bowls for the christening gifts; then four Noblemen bearing a canopy, under which the Duchess of Norfolk, godmother, bearing the child richly habited in a mantle, &c. Train borne by a Lady; then follows the Marchioness of Dorset, the other godmother, and Ladies.
 The Troop pass once about the stage, and GAR-TER speaks.*

Gart. Heaven from thy endless goodness, send prosperous life, long, and ever happy, to the high and mighty princess of England, Elizabeth!

Flourish. Enter KING, and Train.

Cran. [Kneeling.] And to your royal grace,
 and the good queen,
 My noble partners, and myself, thus pray:—
 All comfort, joy, in this most gracious lady,
 Heaven ever laid up to make parents happy,
 May hourly fall upon ye!

K. Hen. Thank you, good lord archbishop;
 What is her name?

Cran. Elizabeth.

K. Hen. Stand up, lord.—

[The KING kisses the child.

With this kiss take my blessing: God protect
 Into whose hands I give thy life. [thee!]

Cran. Amen.

K. Hen. My noble gossips, ye have been too prodigal:

I thank ye heartily; so shall this lady,
 When she has so much English.

Cran. Let me speak, Sir, [utter
 For heaven now bids me; and the words I Let none think flattery, for they'll find them truth. [her!]

This royal infant, (heaven still move about
 Though in her cradle, yet now promises
 Upon this land a thousand thousand blessings,
 Which time shall bring to ripeness: She shall be

(But few now living can behold that goodness,)
 A pattern to all princes living with her,
 And all that shall succeed: Sheba was never
 More covetous of wisdom, and fair virtue,
 Than this pure soul shall be: all princely graces,

That mould up such a mighty piece as this is,
 With all the virtues that attend the good, [her,
 Shall still be doubled on her: truth shall nurse
 Holy and heavenly thoughts still counsel her:
 She shall be lov'd and fear'd: Her own shall bless her:

Her foes shake like a field of beaten corn,

* Black leather vessels to hold beer.

† At Greenwich.

† Rich.

And hang their heads with sorrow: Good grows with her:

In her days, every man shall eat in safety
 Under his own vine, what he plants; and sing
 The merry songs of peace to all his neighbours:
 God shall be truly known; and those about her
 From her shall read the perfect ways of honour, [blood.

And by those claim their greatness, not by [Nor* shall this peace sleep with her: But as when

The bird of wonder dies, the maiden phoenix,
 Her ashes new create another heir.

As great in admiration as herself;
 So shall she leave her blessedness to one,
 (When heaven shall call her from this cloud of darkness,)

Who, from the sacred ashes of her honour,
 Shall star-like rise, as great in fame as she was,
 And so stand fix'd: Peace, plenty, love, truth,
 terror,

That were the servants to this chosen infant,
 Shall then be his, and like a vine grow to him;
 Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine,
 His honour and the greatness of his name Shall be, and make new nations: He shall flourish,

And, like a mountain cedar, reach his branches
 To all the plains about him:—Our children's children

Shall see this, and bless heaven.

K. Hen. Thou speakest wonders.]

Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of England,

An aged princess; many days shall see her,
 And yet no day without a deed to crown it.
 'Would I had known no more! but she must die, [gin,

She must, the saints must have her; yet a vir-
 A most unspotted lily shall she pass [her.
 To the ground, and all the world shall mourn

K. Hen. O lord archbishop,
 Thou hast made me now a man; never, before
 This happy child, did I get any thing:
 This oracle of comfort has so pleas'd me,
 That, when I am in heaven, I shall desire
 To see what this child does, and praise my Maker.—

I thank ye all,—To you, my good lord mayor,
 And your good brethren, I am much beholden;
 I have receiv'd much honour by your presence,
 And ye shall find me thankful. Lead the way,
 lords;— [ye,

Ye must all see the queen, and she must thank
 She will be sick else. This day, no man think
 He has business at his house; for all shall stay,
 This little one shall make it holiday. [Exeunt.]

EPILOGUE.

'Tis ten to one, this play can never please
 All that are here: Some come to take their ease,

And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear,
 We have frighted with our trumpets; so, 'tis clear, [city

They'll say, 'tis naught: others, to hear the Abus'd extremely, and to cry,—that's witty!
 Which we have not done neither: that, I fear,

All the expected good we are like to hear
 For this play at this time, is only in
 The merciful construction of good women;
 For such a one we show'd them; If they smile,
 And say, 'twill do, I know, within a while
 All the best men are ours; for 'tis ill hap,
 If they hold, when their ladies bid them clap.

Fools on both sides! Helen must needs be fair
When with your blood you daily paint her

It is too starv'd a subject for my sword.
But Pandarus—O gods, how do you plagu-

I cannot come to Cressid, but by Pandar;
And he's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo,

As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit.
Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love,

What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we?
Her bed is India; there she lies, a pearl:

For womanish it is to be from thence.

What news, Aeneas, from the field to-day?

Aene. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

Tro. By whom, Aeneas?

Aene. Troilus, by Menelaus.

Tro. Let Paris bleed: 'tis but a scar to SCENE II.—The same.—A Street.

Enter CRESSIDA and ALEXANDER.

Cres. Who were those went by?

Alex. Queen Hecuba, and Helen.

Cres. And whither go they?

Alex. Up to the eastern tower,
Whose height commands as subject all the vale,

To see the battle. Hector, whose patience is, as a virtue, fix'd, to-day was mov'd:

He chid Andromache, and struck his ar-

mourer;

And, like as there were husbandry in war,

Before the sun rose, he was harness'd light,

And to the field goes he; where every flower

Did, as a prophet, weep what it foresaw

In Hector's wrath.

Cres. What was his cause of anger?

Alex. The noise goes, this: There is among the Greeks

A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector;

They call him, Ajax.

Cres. Good; And what of him?

Alex. They say he is a very man per se,†

And stands alone.

Cres. So do all men; unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.

Alex. This man, lady, hath robbed many beasts of their particular additions;‡ he is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow

as the elephant: a man into whom nature hath so crouded humours, that his valour is crushed§ into folly, his folly sauced with discretion:

without cause, and merry against the hair :^{*} He hath the joints of every thing ; but every thing so out of joint, that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use ; or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight.

Cres. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry ?

Alex. They say, he yesterday coped Hector in the battle, and struck him down ; the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking.

Enter PANDARUS.

Cres. Who comes here ?

Alex. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Cres. Hector's a gallant man.

Alex. As may be in the world, lady.

Pan. What's that ? what's that ?

Cres. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.

Pan. Good morrow, cousin Cressid : What do you talk of ?—Good morrow, Alexander.—How do you, cousin ? When were you at Ilium ?

Cres. This morning, uncle.

Pan. What were you talking of, when I came ? Was Hector armed, and gone, ere ye came to Ilium ? Helen was not up, was she ?

Cres. Hector was gone ; but Helen was not up.

Pan. E'en so ; Hector was stirring early.

Cres. That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pan. Was he angry ?

Cres. So he says here.

Pan. True, he was so ; I know the cause too ; he'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that : and there is Troilus will not come far behind him ; let them take heed of Troilus ; I can tell them that too.

Cres. What, is he angry too ?

Pan. Who, Troilus ? Troilus is the better man of the two.

Cres. O, Jupiter ! there's no comparison.

Pan. What, not between Troilus and Hector ? Do you know a man if you see him ?

Cres. Ay ; if ever I saw him before, and knew him.

Pan. Well, I say, Troilus is Troilus.

Cres. Then you say as I say ; for, I am sure, he is not Hector.

Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus, in some degrees.

Cres. 'Tis just to each of them ; he is himself.

Pan. Himself ? Alas, poor Troilus ! I would, he were,——

Cres. So he is.

Pan. ——'Condition, I had gone barefoot to India.

Cres. He is not Hector.

Pan. Himself ? no, he's not himself.—'Would 'a were himself ! Well, the gods are above ; Time must friend, or end : Well, Troilus, well, —I would, my heart were in her body !—No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus.

Cres. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cres. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. The other's not come to't ; you shall tell me another tale, when the other's come to't. Hector shall not have his wit this year.

Cres. He shall not need it, if he have his own.

Pan. Nor his qualities ;——

Cres. No matter.

Pan. Nor his beauty.

Cres. 'Twould not become him, his own's better.

Pan. You have no judgement, niece : Helen —'If swore the other day, that Troilus, for a brown favour, (for so 'tis, I must confess,)—Not brown neither.

Cres. No, but brown.

Pan. Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown.

Cres. To say the truth, true and not true.

Pan. She prais'd his complexion above Paris.

Cres. Why, Paris hath colour enough.

Pan. So he has.

Cres. Then, Troilus should have too much : if she praised him above, his complexion is higher than his ; he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a jewel for a good complexion. I had as lief, Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose.

Pan. I swear to you, I think, Helen loves him better than Paris.

Cres. Then she's a merry Greek, indeed.

Pan. Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him the other day into a compass'd^{*} window, —and, you know, he has not past three or four hairs on his chin.

Cres. Indeed, a tapster's arithmetic[†] may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.

Pan. Why, he is very young : and yet will he, within three pound, lift as much as his brother Hector.

Cres. Is he so young a man, and so old a lifter ?

Pan. But, to prove to you that Helen loves him ;—she came, and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin,——

Cres. Juno have mercy !—How came it cloven ?

Pan. Why, you know, 'tis dimpled : I think, his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.

Cres. O, he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Does he not ?

Cres. O yes, an 'twere a cloud in autumn.

Pan. Why, go to then :—But to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus,——

Cres. Troilus will stand to the proof, if you'll prove it so.

Pan. Troilus ? why, he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.

Cres. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens i'the shell.

Pan. I cannot choose but laugh, to think how she tickled his chin ;—Indeed, she has a marvellous white hand, I must needs confess.

Cres. Without the rack.

Pan. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.

Cres. Alas, poor chin ! many a wart is richer.

Pan. But, there was such laughing ;—Queen Hecuba laughed, that her eyes ran o'er.

Cres. With mill-stones.†

Pan. And Cassandra laughed.

Cres. But there was a more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes ;—Did her eyes run o'er too ?

Pan. And Hector laughed.

Cres. At what was all this laughing ?

Pan. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troilus' chin.

Cres. An't had been a green hair, I should have laughed too.

Pan. They laughed not so much at the hair, as at his pretty answer.

Cres. What was his answer ?

Pan. Quoth she, Here's but one and fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white.

Cres. This is her question.

 Greece.

Cres. There is among the Greeks, Achilles;
 a better man than Troilus.

Pan. Achilles? a drayman, a porter, a very camel.

Cres. Well, well.

Pan. Well, well!—Why, have you any discretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like,
 the spice and salt that season a man?

Cres. Ay, a minced man: and then to be baked with no date^c in the pye,—for then the man's date is out.

Pan. You are such a woman! one knows not at what ward^d you lie.

Cres. Upon my back, to defend my belly;

 secrecy, to defend mine honesty; my mask,
 to defend my beauty; and you, to defend all these: and at all these wards I lie, at a thou-

Pan. Say one of your watches.

Cres. Nay, I'll watch you for that; and that's one of the chiefest of them too: if I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow;
 unless it swell past hiding, and then it is past

Yet good Achilles still cries, Excellent!

And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age
Must be the scene of mirth; to cough, and spit,
And with a palsy-fumbling on his gorget,
Shake in and out the rivet:—and at this sport,
Sir Valour dies; cries, O!—enough, Patro-

Or give me ribs of steel! I shall split all
In pleasure of my spleen. And in this fashion,
All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,
Severals and generals of grace exact,
Achievements, plots, orders, preventions,
Excitements to the field, or speech for truce,
Success, or loss, what is, or is not, serves
As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.

Ther. No, I warrant you; for a fool's will shame it.

Patr. Good words, Thersites.

Achil. What's the quarrel?

Ajax. I bade the vile owl, go learn me the tenour of the proclamation, and he rails upon me.

Ther. I serve thee not.

Ajax. Well, go to, go to.

Ther. I serve here voluntary.†

Achil. Your last service was sufferance, 'twas not voluntary; no man is beaten voluntary; Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress.

Ther. Even so!—a great deal of your wit too lies in your sinews, or else there be liars. Hector shall have a great catch, if he knock out either of your brains; a' were as good crack a fusty nut with no kernel.

Achil. What, with me too, Thersites?

Ther. There's Ulysses, and old Nestor,—whose wit was mouldy ere your grandsires had nails on their toes,—yoke you like draught oxen, and make you plough up the wars.

Achil. What, what?

Ther. Yes, good sooth; To, Achilles! to, Ajax! to!

Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue.

Ther. 'Tis no matter; I shall speak as much as thou, afterwards.

Patr. No more words, Thersites; peace.

Ther. I will hold my peace when Achilles' brach† bids me, shall I?

Achil. There's for you, Patroclus.

Ther. I will see you hanged, like clotpoles, ere I come any more to your tents; I will keep where there is wit stirring, and leave the faction of fools.

[Exit.]
Patr. A good riddance.

Achil. Marry, this, Sir, is proclaim'd through all our host:

That Hector, by the first hour of the sun, Will, with a trumpet, 'twixt our tents and Troy,

To-morrow morning call some knight to arms, That hath a stomach; and such a one, that dare

Maintain—I know not what; 'tis trash: Fare-Ajax. Farewell. Who shall answer him?

Achil. I know not, it is put to lottery; otherwise, He knew his man.

Ajax. O, meaning you:—I'll go learn more of it.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—Troy.—A Room in PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter PRIAM, HECTOR, TROILUS, PANDARUS, and HELENUS.

Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches spent,

Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks; Deliver Helen, and all damage else—

As honour, loss of time, travel, expence, Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consum'd

In hot digestion of this cormorant war,—

Shall be struck off:—Hector, what say you to't?

Hect. Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I,

As far as toucheth my particular, yet, Dread Priam,

There is no lady of more softer bowels, More spongy to suck in the sense of fear, More ready to cry out—Who knows what follows?

Than Hector is: The wound of peace is surety, Surety secure; but modest doubt is call'd The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches To the bottom of the worst. Let Helen go: Since the first sword was drawn about this question,

Every tithe soul, 'mongst many thousand dimes,*

Hath been as dear as Helen; I mean, of ours: If we have lost so many tenths of ours, To guard a thing not ours; not worth to us, Had it our name, the value of one ten; What merits in that reason, which denies The yielding of her up?

Tro. Fie, fie, my brother!

Weigh you the worth and honour of a king, So great as our dread father, in a scale Of common ounces? will you with counter The past-proportion of his infinite? [see] And buckle-in a waist most fathomless, With spans and inches so diminutive As fears and reasons? fie, for godly shame!

Hel. No marvel, though you bite so sharp at reasons,

You are so empty of them. Should not our father [see] Bear the great sway of his affairs with reason? Because your speech hath none, that tells him so?

Tro. You are for dreams and slumbers, brother priest,

You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your reasons:

You know, an enemy intends you harm; You know, a sword employ'd is perilous, And reason flies the object of all harm: Who marvels then, when Helenus beholds A Grecian and his sword, if he do set The very wings of reason to his heels; And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove, Or like a star disorb'd?—Nay, if we talk of reason,

Let's shut our gates, and sleep: Manhood and honour

Should have hare hearts, would they but fit their thoughts

With this cramm'd reason: reason and respect Make livers pale, and lustihood defect.

Hect. Brother, she is not worth what she doth cost

The holding.

Tro. What is aught, but as 'tis valued?

* The membrane that protects the brain.

† Voluntarily.

‡ Bitch, hound.

* Tenths.

† Caution.

Hect. But value dwells not in particular
It holds his estimate and dignity [will;
As well wherein 'tis precious of itself
As in the prizer: 'tis mad idolatry,
To make the service greater than the god;
And the will dotes, that is attributive
To what infectiously itself affects,
Without some image of the affected merit.

Tro. I take to-day a wife, and my election
Is led on in the conduct of my will;
My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,
Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores
Of will and judgement: How may I avoid,
Although my will distaste what it elected,
The wife I chose? there can be no evasion
To blench* from this, and to stand firm by honour:

We turn not back the silks upon the merchant,
When we have soil'd them; nor the remainder viands

We do not throw in unrespective sieve,†
Because we now are full. It was thought meet,
Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks:
Your breath with full consent bellied his sails;
The seas and winds (old wranglers) took a truce,

And did him service: he touch'd the ports de-
And, for an old aunt,‡ whom the Greeks held captive,

He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and freshness [ing.

Wrinkles Apollo's, and makes pale the morn-
Why keep we her? the Grecians keep our aunt:

Is she worth keeping? why, she is a pearl,
Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships,

And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants.
If you'll avouch, 'twas wisdom Paris went,
(As you must needs, for you all cried—Go, go,)

If you'll confess, he brought home noble prize,
(As you must needs, for you all clapp'd your hands,

And cried—Inestimable!) why do you now
The issue of your proper wisdoms rate;
And do a deed that fortune never did,
Beggard the estimation which you priz'd
Richer than sea and land? O theft most base;
That we have stolen what we do fear to keep!
But, thieves, unworthy of a thing so stolen,
That in their country did them that disgrace,
We fear to warrant in our native place!

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans, cry!

Pri. What noise? what shriek is this?

Tro. 'Tis our mad sister, I do know her voice.

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans!

Hect. It is Cassandra.

Enter CASSANDRA, raving.

Cas. Cry, Trojans, cry! lend me ten thousand eyes,
And I will fill them with prophetic tears.

Hect. Peace, sister, peace.

Cas. Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled elders,

Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry,
Add to my clamours! let us pay betimes
A moiety of that mass of moan to come.

Cry, Trojans, cry! practise your eyes with tears!

Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilion stand;
Our fire-brand brother, Paris, burns us all.

Cry, Trojans, cry! a Helen, and a woe:
Cry, cry! Troy burns, or else let Helen go.

[Exit.

Hect. Now youthful Troilus, do not these high strains

Of divination in our sister work
Some touches of remorse? or is your blood
So madly hot, that no discourse of reason,
Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
Can qualify the same?

Tro. Why, brother Hector,
We may not think the justness of each act
Such and no other than event doth form it;
Nor once deject the courage of our minds,
Because Cassandra's mad: her brain-sick raptures

Cannot distaste* the goodness of a quarrel,
Which hath our several honours all engag'd
To make it gracious.† For my private part,
I am no more touch'd than all Priam's sons:
And Jove forbid, there should be done amongst us

Such things as might offend the weakest spleen
To fight for and maintain!

Par. Else might the world convince‡ of levity
As well my undertakings, as your counsels:
But I attest the gods, your full consent
Gave wings to my propension, and cut off
All fears attending on so dire a project.

For what, alas, can these my single arms?
What propugnation§ is in one man's valour,
To stand the push and enmity of those
This quarrel would excite? Yet, I protest,
Were I alone to pass the difficulties,
And had as ample power as I have will,
Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done,
Nor faint in the pursuit.

Pri. Paris, you speak
Like one besotted on your sweet delights:
You have the honey still, but these the gall;
So to be valiant, is no praise at all.

Par. Sir, I propose not merely to myself
The pleasures such a beauty brings with it;
But I would have the soil of her fair rape
Wip'd off, in honourable keeping her.

What treason were it to the ransack'd queen,
Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to
Now to deliver her possession up, [me,

On terms of base compulsion? Can it be,
That so degenerate a strain as this, [soms?

Should once set footing in your generous bosom?
There's not the meanest spirit on our party,
Without a heart to dare, or sword to draw,

When Helen is defended; nor none so noble,
Whose life were ill bestow'd, or death unfam'd,
Where Helen is the subject: then, I say,

Well may we fight for her, whom, we know well,
The world's large spaces cannot parallel.

Hect. Paris, and Troilus, you have both said well:

And on the cause and question now in hand
Have glaz'd,||—but superficially; not much
Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
Unfit to hear moral philosophy:

The reasons you allege, do more conduce
To the hot passion of distemper'd blood,
Than to make up a free determination

'Twixt right and wrong; For pleasure, and revenge,

Have ears more deaf than adders to the voice
Of any true decision. Nature craves,
All dues be render'd to their owners; Now
What nearer debt in all humanity,

* Shrink, or fly off.

† Basket.

‡ Priam's sister, Hecione.

* Corrupt, change to a worse state.

† Convict.

‡ Defence.

§ To set it off.

|| Commented

Thus wife is to the husband? If this law
Of nature be corrupted through affection;
And that great minds, of partial indulgence
To their humbled wills, resist the same;
There is a law in each well-order'd nation,
To curb those raging appetites that are
Most disobedient and refractory.
If Helen then be wife to Sparta's king,—
As it is known she is,—these moral laws
Of nature, and of nations, speak aloud
To have her back return'd: Thus to persist
In doing wrong, extenuates not wrong.
But makes it much more heavy. Hector's
opinion

Is this in way of truth: yet notwithstanding,
My spritely brethren, I propound to you
In resolution to keep Helen still;
For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependence
Upon our joint and several dignities.

Tro. Why, there you touch'd the life of our design:

Wert it not glory that we more affected
Than the performance of our heaving spleens,
I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood
Spent more in her defence. But, worthy
Hector,

She is a theme of honour and renown;
A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds;
Whose present courage may beat down our
foes,

And hence, in time to come, canonize us;
For, I presume, brave Hector would not lose
So rich advantage of a promis'd glory,
As smiles upon the forehead of this action,
For the wide world's revenue.

Hec. I am yours,
You valiant offspring of great Priamus.—
I have a roisting challenge sent amongst
The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks,
Will strike amendment to their drowsy spirits:
I was advertis'd, their great general slept,
Whilst emulation in the army crept;
This, I presume, will wake him. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp.—Before ACHILLES' Tent.

Enter THESSITES.

Ther. How now, Thersites? what, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury? Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? he beats me, and I rail at him:
O worthy satisfaction! 'would, it were otherwise; that I could beat him, whilst he railed at me: 'Bfoot, I'll learn to conjure and raise devils, but I'll see some issue of my spiteful execrations. Then there's Achilles,—a rare engraver. If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove the king of gods; and, Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy Caduceus; if ye take not that little little less-than-little wit from them that they have, which short-armed ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce, it will not in circumvention deliver a fly from a spider, without drawing their massy irons, and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp! or, rather, the bone-ache for that, mo-thinks, is the curse dependent on those that war for a placket. I have said my prayers; and devil, envy, say Amen. What, ho! my lord Achilles!

o Through. † Inclines to, as a question of honour.

Enter PATROCLUS.

Patr. Who's there? Thersites? Good! Thessites, come in and rail.

Ther. If I could have remembered a counterfeit, thou wouldest not have slipped out of my contemplation: but it is no matter. Thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in good revenue! heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy heart be thy direction till thy death! then if she, the lays thee out, says—thou art a fair cove, I'll be sworn and sworn upon't, she never shew'd any butlers. Amen.—Where's Achilles?

Patr. What, art thou devout? what's thy prayer?

Ther. Ay; The heavens hear me!

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Thersites, my lord.

Achil. Where, where?—Art thou come?
Why, my chere, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals? Come, what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy commander, Achilles.—Then tell me, Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites; Then tell me, I pray thee, what's thyself?

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus; Then tell me,
Patroclus, what art thou?

Patr. Thou mayest tell, that knowest.

Achil. O, tell, tell.

Ther. I'll decline the whole question. Ag-amemnon commands Achilles; Achilles is my lord, I am Patroclus' knower; and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. You rascal!

Ther. Peace, fool; I have not done.

Achil. He is a privileged man.—Peace,
Thersites.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool; Achilles is a fool, Thersites is a fool; and, as aforeaid, Patroclus is a fool.

Achil. Derive this; come.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles, Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool; and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr. Why am I a fool?

Ther. Make that demand of the prover.—It suffices me, thou art. Look you, who comes here!

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, and AJAX.

Achil. Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody:—
Come in with me, Thersites. [Exit.

Ther. Here is such patchery, such juggling, and such knavery! all the argument is a cuckold, and a whore; A good quarrel, to draw emulous factions, and bleed to death upon. Now the dry arryges on the subject and war, and lechery, confound all! [Exit.

Agam. Where is Achilles?

Patr. Within his tent; but till dispos'd, my
lord.

Agam. Let it be known to him that we are Agam. No question.

Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought, and say—he is?

Agam. No, noble Ajax; you are as strong, as valiant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable.

Ajax. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what pride is.

Agam. Your mind's the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues the fairer. He that is proud, eats up himself: pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle; and whatever praises itself but in the deed, devours the deed in the praise.

Ajax. I do hate a proud man, as I hate the engendering of toads.

Nest. And yet he loves himself: Is it not strange? [Aside.

Ulyss. Achilles will not to the field to-morrow.

Agam. What's his excuse?

Ulyss. He doth rely on none;
But carries on the stream of his dispose,
Without observance or respect of any,

'Tis said, he holds you well; and will be led,
At your request, a little from himself.

Ulyss. O Agamemnon, let it not be so!
We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes
When they go from Achilles: Shall the proud
lord,

That bastes his arrogance with his own seam;*
And never suffers matter of the world

And ruminate himself,—shall he be worshipp'd

No, this thrice worthy and right valiant lord
Must not so stale his palm, nobly acquir'd;
Nor, by my will, assubjugate his merit,
As amply titled as Achilles is,
By going to Achilles:

That were to enlard his fat-already pride;
And add more coals to Cancer,† when he burns

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Troy.—A Room in PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter PANDARUS and a SERVANT.

Pan. Friend! you! pray you, a word: Do not you follow the young lord Paris?
 Serv. Ay, Sir, when he goes before me.
 Pan. You do depend upon him, I mean?
 Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the lord.
 Pan. You do depend upon a noble gentleman; I must needs praise him.
 Serv. The lord be praised!
 Pan. You know me, do you not?
 Serv. 'Faith, Sir, superficially.
 Pan. Friend, know me better; I am the lord Pandarus.
 Serv. I hope, I shall know your honour better.
 Pan. I do desire it.
 Serv. You are in the state of grace. [Music within.
 Pan. Grace! not so, friend; honour and lordship are my titles:—What music is this?
 Serv. I do but partly know, Sir; it is new in parts.
 Pan. Know you the musicians?
 Serv. Wholly, Sir.
 Pan. Who play they to?
 Serv. To the hearers, Sir.
 Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?
 Serv. At mine, Sir, and theirs that love music.
 Pan. Command, I mean, friend.
 Serv. Who shall I command, Sir?
 Pan. Friend, we understand not one another; I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning: At whose request do these men play?
 Serv. That's to't, indeed, Sir: Marry, Sir, at the request of Paris my lord, who is there in person; with him, the mortal Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul,— Pan. Who, my cousin, Cressida?
 Serv. No, Sir, Helen; Could you not find out that by her attributes?
 Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the prince Troilus: I will make a complimentary assault upon him, for my business seeths.*
 Serv. Sudden business! there's a stew phrase, indeed!

Enter PARIS and HELEN, attended.

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all the fair company! fair desires, in all fair measure, fairly guide them! especially to you fair queen! fair thoughts be your fair pillow!

Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen; that's a sweet queen, i'faith.

Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad, is a sour offence.

Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn; that shall it not, in truth, la. Nay, I care not for such words; no, no.—And, my lord, he desires you, that, if the king call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.

Helen. My lord Pandarus,—

Pan. What says my sweet queen,—my very very sweet queen?

Par. What exploit's in hand? where sups he to-night?

Helen. Nay, but my lord,—

Par. I'll lay my life, with my disposer Cressida.

Pan. No, no, no such matter, you are wide;† come, your disposer is sick.

Par. Well, I'll make excuse.

Pan. Ay, good my lord. Why should you say—Cressida? no, your poor disposer's sick.

Par. I spy.

Pan. You spy! what do you spy?—Come, give me an instrument.—Now, sweet queen.

Helen. Why, this is kindly done.

Pan. My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen.

Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my lord Paris.

Pan. He! no, she'll none of him; they two are twain.

Helen. Falling in, after falling out, may make them three.

Pan. Come, come, I'll hear no more of this; I'll sing you a song now.

Helen. Ay, ay, pr'ythee now. By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead.

Pan. Ay, you may, you may.

Helen. Let thy song be love: this love will undo us all. O, Cupid, Cupid, Cupid!

Pan. Love! ay, that it shall, i'faith.

Par. Ay, good now, love, love, nothing but love.

Pan. In good troth, it begins so:

Love, love, nothing but love, still more!

*For, oh, love's bow
Shoots buck and doe:
The shaft confounds,
Not that it wounds
But tickles still the sore.*

These lovers cry—Oh! oh! they die!

*Yet that which seems the wound to kill,
Doth turn oh! oh! to ha! ha! he!*

So dying love lives still:

Oh! oh! a while, but ha! ha! ha!

Oh! oh! groans out for ha! ha! ha!

Hey ho!

Helen. In love, i'faith, to the very tip of the nose.

Par. He eats nothing but doves, love; and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love,

Pan. Is this the generation of love? hot blood, hot thoughts, and hot deeds?—Why, they are vipers: Is love a generation of vipers? Sweet lord, who's a-field to-day?

Par. Hector, Deiphobus, Helenus, Antenor, and all the gallantry of Troy: I would fain have armed to-night, but my Nell would not have it so. How chance my brother Troilus went not?

Helen. He hangs the lip at something;—you know all, lord Pandarus.

Pan. Not I, honey-sweet queen,—I long to hear how they sped to-day.—You'll remember your brother's excuse?

Par. To a hair.

Pan. Farewell, sweet queen.

Helen. Commend me to your niece.

Pan. I will, sweet queen. [Exit.

[A Retreat sounded.

Par. They are come from field: let us to Priam's hall,

To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen, I must woo you

To help unarm our Hector: his stubborn buckles, [touch'd,

With these your white enchanting fingers Shall more obey, than to the edge of steel,

Or force of Greekish sinews; you shall do more Than all the island kings, disarm great Hector.

Helen. 'Twill make us proud to be his servant, Paris:

Yea, what he shall receive of us in duty, Give us more palm in beauty than we have;

Yea, overshines ourself.

Par. Sweet, above thought I love thee.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same. PANDARUS' Orchard.

Enter PANDARUS and a SERVANT, meeting.

Pan. How now? where's thy master? at my cousin Cressida's?

Serv. No, Sir; he stays for you to conduct him thither.

Enter TROILUS.

Pan. O, here he comes.—How now, how now?

Tro. Sirrah, walk off. [Exit SERVANT.

Pan. Have you seen my cousin?

Tro. No, Pandarus: I stalk about her door, Like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks Staying for waftage. O, be thou my Charon, And give me swift transportance to those fields, Where I may wallow in the lily beds,

* Parts of a song.

† Wide of your mark.

Proper'd for the destroyer! O gentle Pandarus,
From Cupid's shoulder pluck his painted wings,
And fly with me to Creusa!

Pan. Walk here to the orchard; I'll bring her straight. [Exit PANDARUS.]

Tro. I am giddy; expectation whisks me
The imaginary relish is so sweet [round.
That it enchants my sense; What will it be,
When that the watery palate tastes indeed Love's thrice-reputed nectar? death, I fear
me;

Sweeping destruction; or some joy too fine,
Too subtle-potent, too'd too sharp in sweetness,
For the capacity of my ruder powers:
I fear it much; and I do fear besides,
That I shall lose distinction in my joys;
As doth a battle, when they charge on heaps
The enemy flying.

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Pan. She's making her ready, she'll come straight: you must be witty now. She does so blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were frayed with a spite: I'll fetch her.
It is the prettiest villain:—she fetches her breath as short as a new-born sparrow.

[Exit PANDARUS.]

Tro. Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom:

My heart beats thicker than a feverous pulse;
And all my powers do their bestowing here,
Like vassalage at unwearied encountering
The eye of majesty.

Enter PANDARUS and CRESSIDA.

Pan. Come, come, what need you blush!
Shame's a baby.—Here she is now: swear the oaths now to her, that you have sworn to me.
—What, are you gone again? you must be watched ere you be made tame, must you?
Come your ways, come your ways; as you draw backward, we'll put you in the bills.*—
Why do you not speak to her?—Come, draw this curtain, and let's see your picture. Alas the day, how loath you are to offend daylight!
as 'twere dark, you'd close sooner. So, so;
rub on, and kiss the mistress.† How now, a kiss in fee-farm! build there, carpenter; the air is sweet. Nay, you shall fight your hearts out, ere I part you. The falcon as the tassel,‡ for all the ducks in the river: go to, go to.

Tro. You have bereft me of all words, lady.

Pan. Words pay no debts, give her deeds:
but she'll bereave you of the deeds too, if she call your activity in question. What, billing again? Here's—In witness whereof the parties interchangeably—Come in, come in; I'll go get a fire. [Exit PANDARUS.]

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Tro. O Cressida, how often have I wished me thus?

Cres. Wished my lord?—The gods grant!—
O my lord!

Tro. What should they grant? what makes this pretty abruption? What too curious dreg espies my sweet lady in the fountain of our
love?

Cres. More dregs than water, if my fears have eyes.

Tro. Fears make devils cherubins; they never see truly.

Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads,

* Shifts of a carriage.

† The allusion is to howling; what is now called the jack was formerly termed the mistress.

‡ The tassel is the male and the falcon the female hawk.

finds safer footing than blind reason, stumbling without fear: To fear the worst, oft proves the worst.

Tro. O, let my lady apprehend no fear: in all Cupid's pagant there is presented no monster.

Cres. Nor nothing monstrous neither?

Tro. Nothing, but our undertakings; who we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat nails, tame tigers, thinking it harder for our utters to devise imposition enough, than firm to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstrosity in love, lady,—that the will is infinite, and the execution confined; that the desire is boundless, and the act a short limit.

Cres. They say, all lovers strain-mangeformances than they are able; and yet assume an ability that they never perform; saying more than the perfection of ten, and disappointing less than the tenth part of one. They do have the voice of lions, and the act of lambs, are they not monsters?

Tro. Are there such? such are not we:
Praise us as we are rated, allow ourselves;
our head shall go bare, till merit crown it: no perfection in reversion shall have a prize in present: we will not name desert, before its birth; and, being born, his addition shall be humble. Few words to fair truth: Truth shall be such to Cressida, as what says on say worst, shall be a mock for his truth;—and what truth one speak truest, not true the Troians.

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Pan. What, blushing still? have you not done talking yet?

Cres. Well, uncle, what folly I count, I dedicate to you.

Pan. I thank you for that; if my lord get boy of you, you'll give him me: Be true to my lord: if he pinch, chide me for it.

Tro. You know now your hostages; my uncle's word, and my firm faith.

Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for his too.
our kindred, though they be long ere they be wooded, they are constant, being won: they are bars, I can tell you; they'll stick when they are thrown.

Cres. Boldness comes to me now, and helps me heart:—

Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day
For many weary months.

Tro. Why was my Cressida then so hard to win?

Cres. Hard to seem won; but I was won
my lord,

With the first glance that ever—Pardon me—
If I confess much, you will play the tyrant.
I love you now; but not, till now, as much.
But I might master it:—in faith, I lie.
My thoughts were like unbridled children grown

Too headstrong for their mother: See, now
Why have I blabb'd? who shall be true to us
When we are so unsecret to ourselves?

But, though I lov'd you well, I woo'd you not.
And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man.
Or that we women had men's privilege Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue;

For, in this rapture, I shall surely speak

a Troian

The thing I shall repent. See, see, your silence, [draws Cunning in dumbness, from my weakness
My very soul of counsel: Stop my mouth.

Tro. And shall, albeit sweet music issues thence.

Pan. Pretty, i'faith.

Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me; 'Twas not my purpose, thus to beg a kiss: I am ashamed;—O heavens! what have I done?—

For this time will I take my leave, my lord.

Tro. Your leave, sweet Cressid?

Pan. Leave! an you take leave till to-morrow morning,—

Cres. Pray you, content you.

Tro. What offends you, lady?

Cres. Sir, mine own company.

Tro. You cannot shun Yourself.

Cres. Let me go and try:

I have a kind of self resides with you;
But an unkind self, that itself will leave,
To be another's fool. I would be gone:
Where is my wit? I know not what I speak.

Tro. Well know they what they speak, that speak so wisely.

Cres. Perchance, my lord, I show more craft than love;

And fell so roundly to a large confession,
To angle for your thoughts: But you are wise;
Or else you love not; For to be wise, and love,
Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above.

Tro. O, that I thought it could be in a woman,
(As, if it can, I will presume in you,)
To feed for aye * her lamp and flames of love;
To keep her constancy in plight and youth,
Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind
That doth renew swifter than blood decays!
Or, that persuasion could but thus convince
That my integrity and truth to you [me,—
Might be affronted † with the match and weight
Of such a winnow'd purity in love;
How were I then uplifted! but, alas,
I am as true as truth's simplicity,
And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cres. In that I'll war with you.

Tro. O virtuous fight,
When right with right wars who shall be most right!

True swains in love shall, in the world to come,
Approve their truths by Troilus: when their rhymes,

Full of protest, of oath, and big compare, ‡
Want similes, truth tir'd with iteration,—
As true as steel, as plantage to the moon,
As sun to day, as turtle to her mate,
As iron to adamant, as earth to the centre,—
Yet, after all comparisons of truth,
As truth's authentic author to be cited,
As true as Troilus shall crown up § the verse,
And sanctify the numbers.

Cres. Prophet may you be!

If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth,
When time is old and hath forgot itself,
When waterdrops have worn the stones of Troy,

And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up,
And mighty states characterless are grated
To dusty nothing; yet let memory,
From false to false, among false maids in love,
Upbraid my falsehood! when they have said
—as false

As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth,

* Ever.

† Met with and equalled.

‡ Comparison.

§ Conclude it.

As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf,
Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son;
Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of false—
As false as Cressid. [hood,

Pan. Go to, a bargain made: seal it, seal it; I'll be the witness.—Here I hold your hand; here, my cousin's. If ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers-between be called to the world's end after my name, call them all—Pandars; let all constant men be Troiluses, all false women Cressids, and all brokers-between Pandars! say, amen.

Tro. Amen.

Cres. Amen.

Pan. Amen. Whereupon I will show you a chamber and a bed, which bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press it to death: away.

And Cupid grant all tongue-tied maidens here,
Bed, chamber, Pandar to provide this geer!

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp.

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, DIOMEDES, NESTOR, AJAX, MENELAUS, and CALCHAS.

Cal. Now, princes, for the service I have done you,
The advantage of the time prompts me aloud
To call for recompense. Appear it to your mind,
That, through the sight I bear in things, to Jove

I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession,
Incurr'd a traitor's name; expos'd myself,
From certain and possess'd conveniences,
To doubtful fortunes; sequest'ring from me all
That time, acquaintance, custom, and condition,

Made tame and most familiar to my nature;
And here, to do you service, am become
As new into the world, strange, unacquainted:
I do beseech you, as in way of taste,
To give me now a little benefit,
Out of those many register'd in promise,
Which, you say, live to come in my behalf.

Agam. What would'st thou of us, Trojan? make demand.

Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd Antenor,
Yesterday took; Troy holds him very dear.
(Oft have you, (often have you thanks there-fore,)

Desir'd my Cressid in right great exchange,
Whom Troy hath still denied: But this Antenor,

I know, is such a wrest * in their affairs.
That their negotiations all must slack,
Wanting his manage; and they will almost
Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam,
In change of him: let him be sent, great princes, [sence

And he shall buy my daughter; and her pre-
Shall quite strike off all service I have done,
In most accepted pain.

Agam. Let Diomedes bear him, [have
And bring us Cressid hither: Calchas shall
What he requests of us.—Good Diomed,
Furnish you fairly for this interchange:
Withal, bring word—if Hector will to-morrow
Be answer'd in his challenge: Ajax is ready.

Dio. This shall I undertake; and 'tis a burden
Which I am proud to bear. [den

[Exeunt DIOMEDES and CALCHAS.

* An instrument for tuning harps, &c

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS, before their Tent.

Ulyss. Achilles stands i'the entrance of his tent:—

Please it our general to pass strangely^{[him,} by
As if he were forgot; and, princes all,
Lay negligent and loose regard upon him:
I will come last: 'Tis like, he'll question me,
Why 'such unplausive eyes are bent, why
turn'd on him:

If so, I have derision med'cinable,
To use between your strangeness and his pride,
Which his own will shall have desire to drink;
It may do good: pride hath no other glass
To show itself, but pride; for supple knees
Feed arrogance, and are the proud man's fees.

Agam. We'll execute your purpose, and put on

A form of strangeness as we pass along;—
So do each lord; and either greet him not,
Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him
more

Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way.

Achil. What, comes the general to speak
with me?

You know my mind, I'll fight no more 'gainst
Troy.

Agam. What says Achilles? would he ought
with us?

Nest. Would you, my lord, aught with the general?

Achil. No.

Nest. Nothing, my lord.

Agam. The better.

[Exeunt AGAMEMNON and NESTOR.]

Achil. Good day, good day.

Men. How do you? how do you?

[Exit MENELAUS.]

Achil. What, does the cuckold scorn me?

Ajax. How now, Patroclus?

Achil. Good morrow, Ajax.

Ajax. Ha?

Achil. Good morrow.

Ajax. Ay, and good next day too.

[Exit AJAX.]

Achil. What mean these fellows? Know they not Achilles?

Patr. They pass by strangely: they were us'd to bend,

To send their smiles before them to Achilles;
To come as humbly, as they us'd to creep
To holy altars.

Achil. What, am I poor of late?

'Tis certain, greatness, once fallen out with
fortune,

Must fall out with men too: What the declin'd^{[is,}
He shall as soon read in the eyes of others,

As feel in his own fall: for men, like butterflies,

Show not their mealy wings, but to the sun^{[mer;}
And not a man, for being simply man,

Hath any honour; but honour for those honours

That are without him, as place, riches, favour,
Prizes of accident as oft as merit:

Which when they fall, as being slippery standers,

The love that lean'd on them as slippery too,
Do one pluck down another, and together

Die in the fall. But 'tis not so with me:
Fortune and I are friends; I do enjoy

At ample point all that I did possess,
Save these men's looks; who do, methinks,

find out
Something not worth in me such rich behold-^{[ing}

As they have often given. Here is Ulysses;
I'll interrupt his reading.—

How now, Ulysses?

Ulyss. Now great Thetis' son?

Achil. What are you reading?

Ulyss. A strange fellow here

Writes me, That man—how dearly ever part-^{[ed,}
How much in having, or without, or in,—
Cannot make boast to have that which he hath,
Nor feels not what he owes, but by reflection;
As when his virtues shining upon others
Heat them, and they retort that heat again
To the first giver.

Achil. This is not strange, Ulysses.

The beauty that is borne here in the face
The bearer knows not, but commends itself
To others' eyes: nor doth the eye itself
(That most pure spirit of sense,) behold itself,
Not going from itself; but eye to eye oppos'd
Salutes each other with each other's form.
For speculation turns not to itself,
Till it hath travell'd, and is married there
Where it may see itself: this is not strange at all.

Ulyss. I do not strain at the position,
It is familiar; but at the author's drift:
Who, in his circumstance,† expressly proves—
That no man is the lord of any thing, (Though in and of him there be much cosisting,)

Till he communicate his parts to others:
Nor doth he of himself know them for aught
Till he behold them form'd in the applause
Where they are extended; which, like an arch, reverberates

The voice again; or like a gate of steel
Fronting the sun, receives and renders back His figure and his heat. I was much rapt in
this;

And apprehended here immediately

The unknown Ajax.

Heavens, what a man is there! a very horse,
That has he knows not what. Nature, what things there are,

Most abject in regard, and dear in use!
What things again most dear in the esteem.
And poor in worth! Now shall we see tomorrow,

An act that very chance doth throw upon him.
Ajax renown'd. O heavens, what some men
While some men leave to do!

How some men creep in skittish fortune's hall,^{[do,}
Whiles others play the idiots in her eyes!

How one man eats into another's pride,
While pride is fasting in his wantonness!

To see these Grecian lords!—why, even already

They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder;
As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast,
And great Troy shrinking.

Achil. I do believe it: for they pass'd by me,
As misers do by beggars: neither gave to me
Good word, nor look: What, are my deeds forgot?

Ulyss. Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his Wherein he puts alms for oblivion,^{[back,}
A great-sized monster of ingratitude:
Those scraps are good deeds past: which are devour'd

As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done: Perséverance, dear my lord, Keeps honour bright: To have done, is to hang

Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail ^{[way;}
In monumental mockery. Take the instant

Patr. To this effect, Achilles, have I mov'd
 A woman impudent and mannish grown [you:
 Is not more loath'd than an effeminate man
 In time of action. I stand condemn'd for this;
 They think, my little stomach to the war,
 And your great love to me, restrains you thus:
 Sweet, rouse yourself; and the weak wanton
 Cupid

Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,
 And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,
 Be shook to air,

Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector?

Patr. Ay; and, perhaps, receive much honour by him.

Achil. I see, my reputation is at stake;
 My fame is shrewdly gor'd.

Patr. O, then beware;

 Seals a commission to a blank of danger;
 And danger, like an ague, subtly taints
 Even then when we sit idly in the sun.

Achil. Go call Thersites hither, sweet Patro-clus:

I'll send the fool to Ajax, and desire him
 To invite the Trojan lords after the combat,
 To see us here unarm'd: I have a woman's
 An appetite that I am sick withal, [longing,
 To see great Hector in his weeds of peace;
 To talk with him, and to behold his visage,
 Even to my full of view. A labour sav'd!

Enter THERSITES.

Ther. A wonder!

Achil. What?

Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field, asking for himself.

Achil. How so?

Ther. He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector; and is so prophetically proud of an heroical cudgelling, that he raves in saying nothing.

Achil. How can that be?

Ther. Why, he stalks up and down like a peacock, a stride, and a stand: ruminates, like an hostess, that hath no arithmetic but her brain to set down her reckoning: bites his lip with a politic regard, as who should say—there were wit in this head, an 'twould out; and so there is; but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking.
 The man's undone for ever; for if Hector break not his neck i'the combat, he'll break it himself in vainglory. He knows not me: I said,
 Good-morrow, Ajax; and he replies, Thanks,
 Agamemnon. What think you of this man, that takes me for the general? He is grown a very land-fish, languageless, a monster. A plague of opinion! a man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin.

Achil. Thou must be my ambassador to him,
 Thersites.

Ther. Who, I? why, he'll answer nobody;
 he professes not answering; speaking is for beggars; he wears his tongue in his arms. I will put on his presence; let Patroclus make demands to me, you shall see the pageant of Ajax.

Achil. To him, Patroclus: Tell him,—I humbly desire the valiant Ajax, to invite the most valorous Hector to come unarmed to my tent; and to procure safe conduct for his person, of the magnanimous, and most illustrious, six-or-seven-times-honoured captain general of the Grecian army, Agamemnon. Do this Patr. Jove bless great Ajax.

Ther. Humph!

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

I come from the worthy Achilles,—
Ha!
Who most humbly desires you, to in-tor to his tent!—
Humph!
And to procure safe conduct from non?
Agamemnon?
Ay, my lord.
Ha!
What say you to't?
God be wi' you, with all my heart.
Your answer, Sir.
If to-morrow be a fair day, by eleven
t will go one way or other; howsoever, pay for me ere he has me.
Your answer, Sir.
Fare you well, with all my heart.
Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?
No, but he's out o'tune thus. What ll be in him when Hector has knocked brains, I know not: But, I am sure, less the fiddler Apollo get his sinews

SCENE I.—Troy.—A Street.

*At one side, ÆNEAS and SERVANT, with a

, DIOMEDES, and others, with torches.*
See, ho! who's that there?
Tis the lord Æneas.
Is the prince there in person?—

Par. I know what 'tis to love; And 'would, as I shall pity, I could help!— Please you, walk in, my lords. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The same.—A Room in PANDARUS' House.

Enter PANDARUS and CRESSIDA.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.

Cres. Why tell you me of moderation? The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste, And violenteth in a sense as strong As that which causeth it: How can I moderate it?

If I could temporize with my affection, Or brew it to a weak and colder palate, The like allayment could I give my grief: My love admits no qualifying dross: No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Enter TROILUS.

Pan. Here, here, here he comes.—Ah sweet ducks!

Cres. O Troilus! Troilus! [Embracing him.

Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here! Let me embrace too: O heart,—as the goodly saying is,—

———O heart, O heavy heart,
Why sigh'st thou without breaking?

where he answers again,

Because thou canst not ease thy smart,
By friendship, nor by speaking.

There never was a truer rhyme. Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse; we see it, we see it.—How now, lams?

Tro. Cressid, I love thee in so strain'd a purity, That the bless'd gods—as angry with my fancy, More bright in zeal than the devotion which Cold lips blow to their deities,—take thee from me.

Cres. Have the gods envy?

Pan. Ay, ay, ay, ay; 'tis too plain a case.

Cres. And is it true, that I must go from Troy?

Tro. A hateful truth.

Cres. What, and from Troilus too?

Tro. From Troy, and Troilus.

Cres. Is it possible?

Cres. I must then to the Greeks?

Tro. No remedy.

Cres. A woeful Cressid 'mongst the many When shall we see again? [Goes!]

Tro. Hear me, my love: Be then but true heart,—

Cres. I true! how now? what wicked dream is this?

Tro. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly. For it is parting from us:

I speak not, be thou true, as fearing thee; For I will throw my glove to death himself, That there's no maculation[†] in thy heart: But be thou true, say I, to fashion in My sequent[‡] protestation; be thou true, And I will see thee.

Cres. O, you shall be expos'd, my lord, to dangers

As infinite as imminent! but, I'll be true.

Tro. And I'll grow friend with danger. Wear this sleeve.

Cres. And you this glove. When shall I see you?

Tro. I will corrupt the Grecian sentinels, To give thee nightly visitation. But yet, be true.

Cres. O heavens!—be true again?

Tro. Hear why I speak it, love; The Grecian youths are full of quality;† They're loving, well compos'd, with gifts of nature flowing,

And swelling o'er with arts and exercise; How novelty may move, and parts with person. Alas, a kind of godly jealousy (Which I beseech you, call a virtuous sin,) Makes me afraid.

Cres. O heavens! you love me not.

Tro. Die I a villain then!

In this I do not call your faith in question, So mainly as my merit: I cannot sing, Nor heel the high lavolt,^{} nor sweeten talk. Nor play at subtle games; fair virtues all, To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant:

But I can tell, that in each grace of these There lurks a still and dumb-discouraging devil, That tempts most cunningly: but be not trust- ed.

Cres. Do you think I will?

Tro. No.

But something may be done, that we will at: And sometimes we are devils to ourselves, When we will tempt the frailty of our powers, Presuming on their changeable potency.

 He rises on the toe: that spirit of his
 In aspiration lifts him from the earth.

Agam. Is this the lady Cressid?

Dis. Even she.

Agam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet lady.

Nest. Our general doth salute you with a

Ulyss. Yet is the kindness but particular;
 Twere better, she were kiss'd in general.

Nest. And very courtly counsel: I'll begin.—
 So much for Nestor.

Achil. I'll take that winter from your lips, fair lady:

Achilles bids you welcome.

Men. I had good argument for kissing once.

Petr. But that's no argument for kissing
 now:

For thus popp'd Paris in his hardiment;

For which we lose our heads to gild his horns.

Petr. Both take and give.

Cres. I'll make my match to live,

The kiss you take is better than you give

Therefore no kiss.

Men. I'll give you boot, I'll give you three for one.

Cres. You're an odd man; give even, or give none.

Men. An odd man, lady? every man is odd.

Cres. No, Paris is not; for, you know, 'tis
 true,

That you are odd, and he is even with you.

Men. You flipp me o'the head.

Cres. No, I'll be sworn.

Ulyss. It were no match, your nail against

May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you?

Cres. You may.

Ulyss. I do desire it.

Cres. Why, beg then.

Ulyss. Why then, for Venus' sake, give me

When Helen is a maid again, and his.

Cres. I am your debtor, claim it when 'tis due.

Ulyss. Never's my day, and then a kiss on
 you.

Dis. Lady, a word;—I'll bring you to your father. [Diomed leads out CRESSIDA.

All. The Trojan's trumpet.

Agam. Yonder comes the troop.

A victor shall be known? will you, the knights
Shall to the edge of all extremity
Pursue each other; or shall they be divided
By any voice or order of the field?

Hector bids ask.

Agam. Which way would Hector have it?

Æne. He cares not, he'll obey conditions.

Achil. 'Tis done like Hector; but securely
done.

A little proudly, and great deal misprising
The knight oppos'd.

Æne. If not Achilles, Sir,

What is your name?

Achil. If not Achilles, nothing.

Æne. Therefore Achilles: But, what's'er, know this:—

In the extremity of great and little,
Valour and pride excels themselves in Hector;
The one almost as infinite as all,
The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well,
And that, which looks like pride, is courtesy.
This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood:
In love whereof, half Hector stays at home;
Halfheart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek
This blooded knight, half Trojan, and half Greek.

Achil. A maiden battle then?—O, I perceive
you.

Re-enter DIOMEDES.

Agam. Here is Sir Diomed:—Go, gentle
knight,

Stand by our Ajax: as you and lord Æneas

So be it; either to the uttermost,
Or else a breath;† the combatants being kin,
Half stints‡ their strife before their strokes

[AJAX and HECTOR enter the lists.

Ulyss. They are oppos'd already.

Agam. What Trojan is that same that looks so heavy?

Ulyss. The youngest son of Priam, a true
knight;

Not yet mature, yet matchless; firm of word;
Speaking in deeds, and deedless§ in his tongue;
Not soon provok'd, nor, being provok'd, soon
calm'd:

His heart and hand both open, and both free;
For what he has, he gives, what thinks, he

Ajax. I am not warm yet, let us fight again.

His insolence draws folly from my lips;

But I'll endeavour deeds to match these words,
Or may I never—

Ajax. Do not chafe thee, cousin;—
And you, Achilles, let these threats alone,
Till accident or purpose bring you to't:

You may have every day enough of Hector,
If you have stomach;§ the general state, I fear,
Can scarce entreat you to be odd with him.

Hect. I pray you, let us see you in the field;
We have had pelting|| wars, since you refus'd
The Grecians' cause.

Achil. Dost thou entreat me, Hector?
To-morrow, do I meet thee, fell as death;
To-night, all friends.

Hect. Thy hand upon that match.

Agam. First, all you peers of Greece go to my tent;

There in the full convive¶ we: afterwards,
As Hector's leisure and your bounties shall Concur together, severally entreat him.—
Beat loud the tabourines, let the trumpets blow,

That this great soldier may his welcome know.
[Exeunt all but TROILUS and ULYSSES.

Tro. My lord Ulysses, tell me, I beseech you,
In what place of the field doth Calchas keep?

Ulyss. At Menelaus' tent, most princely Troilus:

* Imperial. † Singular, not common. ‡ Heretofore.
§ Fallen. || Lacedaemon.

* Observed. † Forename.
‡ Stithy, is a smith's shop § Inclination. || Petty.

There Diomed doth feast with him to-night;
Who neither looks upon the heaven, nor earth,
But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view
On the fair Cressid.

Tro. Shall I, sweet lord, be bound to you so
much,

After we part from Agamemnon's tent,
To bring me thither?

Ulyss. You shall command me, Sir.
As gentle tell me, of what honour was
This Cressida in Troy? Had she no lover there
That waits her absence?

Tro. O, Sir, to such as boasting show their scorn,

A mock is due. Will you walk on, my lord?
She was lov'd, she lov'd; she is, and doth:
But, still, sweet love is food for fortune's tooth.
[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Grecian Camp.—Before
ACHILLES' Tent.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. I'll heat his blood with Greekish wine
to-night,
Which with my scimitar I'll cool to-morrow.—
Patroclus, let us feast him to the height.

Petr. Here comes Thersites.

Enter THERSITES.

Achil. How now, thou core of envy?
Thou crusty batch of nature, what's the news?
Ther. Why, thou picture of what thou seem-est, and idol of idiot-worshippers, here's a letter for thee.

Achil. From whence, fragment?

Ther. Why, thou fall dish of fool, from Troy.

Petr. Who keeps the tent now?

Ther. The surgeon's box, or the patient's wound.

Petr. Well said, Adversity!* and what need these tricks?

Ther. Prythee be silent, boy; I profit not by thy talk: thou art thought to be Achilles' male variet.

Petr. Male variet, you rogue! what's that?

Ther. Why, his masculinise whore. Now the rotten diseases of the south, the guts-griping, ruptures, catarrhs, loads o' gravel i'the back, lethargies, cold palsies, raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, bladders full of impossible humours, sciaticas, limekilns i'the palm, incurable bone-ache, and the rivalled fee-simple of the tetter; take and take again such preposterous discoveries!

Petr. Why thou damnable box of envy, thou, what meanest thou to curse thus?

Ther. Do I curse thee?

Petr. Why, no, you rascous butt; you whore-son indistinguishable cur, no.

Ther. No? why art thou then exasperate, thou idle immaterial skein of silken silk, thou green sarcenet flap for a sore eye, thou tassel of a prodigal's purse, thou? Ah, how the poor world is pestered with such water-flies, di-minutives of nature!

Petr. Out, gall!

Ther. Pinch egg!

Achil. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite

From my great purpose in to-morrow's battle.
Here is a letter from queen Hecuba;
A token from her daughter, my fair love;

Both taxing me, and gaging me to keep [it:
An oath that I have sworn. I will not break Fall, Greeks; fall, fame; honour, or go, or stay;

My major vow lies here, this I'll obey.—
Come, come, Thersites, help to trim my tent.
This night in banqueting must all be spent.
Away, Patroclus.

[Exeunt ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.]

Ther. With too much blood, and too little brain, these two may run mad; but if with too much brain, and too little blood, they do, I'll be a curer of madmen. Here's Agamemnon, —an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails;† but he has not so much brain as ear-wax: And the goodly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull,—the primitive statue, and oblique memorial of cuckoldry; a thrifty sheeving-horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg,—to what form, but that he is, should wit larded with malice, and malice forced; with wit, turn him to? To an ass, were nothing; he is both ass and ox: to an ox were nothing; he is both ox and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a stitchew,‡ a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a roe,
I would not care: but to be Menelaus,—I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites; for I care not to be the loose of a leazar,§ so I were not Menelaus.—Hoy-day! spirits and fires!

Enter HECTOR, TROILUS, AJAX, AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, MENELAUS, and DIOMEDES, with Lights.

Agam. We go wrong, we go wrong.

Ajax. No, yonder 'tis;

There, where we see the lights.

Hect. I trouble you.

Ajax. No, not a whit.

Ulyss. Here comes himself to guide you.

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Welcome, brave Hector; welcome, princes all.

Agam. So now, fair prince of Troy, I bid
good night.

Ajax commands the guard to tend on you.

Hect. Thanks, and good night, to the Greeks'
general.

Men. Good night, my lord.

Hect. Good night, sweet Menelaus.

Ther. Sweet draught:¶ Sweet, quoth 'a! sweet sink, sweet sewer.

Achil. Good night,

And welcome, both to those that go, or tarry.

Agam. Good night.

[Exeunt AGAMEMNON and MENELAUS.]

Achil. Old Nestor tarries; and you too, Dioness, [Hector.

Hect. Give me your hand.

Ulyss. Follow his torch, he goes

To Calchas' tent; I'll keep you company.

[Aside to TROILUS.]

Tro. Sweet Sir, you honour me.

Hect. And so good night.

[Exit DIOMEDES; ULYSSES and TROILUS following.]

Achil. Come, come, enter my tent.

[Exeunt ACHILLES, HECTOR, AJAX, and NESTOR.]

* Harlots.

† Follies.

‡ Menelaus.

¶ Stuffed.

‡ Priety.

* Contumely.

† Came, unwrought.

Ther. That same Diomed's a false-hearted rogue, a most unjust knave; I will no more trust him when he leers, than I will a serpent when he hisses: he will spend his mouth, and promise, like Brabier the hound; but when he performs, astronomers foretell it; it is prodigious,* there will come some change; the sun borrows of the moon, when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector, than not to dog him: they say, he keeps a Trojan drab, and uses the traitor Calchas' tent: I'll after.—Nothing but lechery! all incontinent varlets! [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The same.—Before CALCHAS' Tent.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. What are you up here, ho? speak.

Cal. [Within.] Who calls?

Dio. Diomed.—Calchas, I think.—Where's your daughter?

Cal. [Within.] She comes to you.

Enter TROILUS and ULYSSES, at a distance; after them THESBITES.

Ulys. Stand where the torch may not discover us.

Enter CRESSIDA.

Tro. Cressid come forth to him!

Dio. How now, my charge?

Cres. Now, my sweet guardian!—Hark! a word with you. [Whispers.]

Tro. Yea, so familiar!

Ulys. She will sing any man at first sight.

Ther. And any man may sing her, if he can take her cliff;† she's noted.

Dio. Will you remember?

Cres. Remember? yes.

Dio. Nay, but do then;

And let your mind be coupled with your words.

Tro. What should she remember?

Ulys. List!

Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to folly.

Ther. Roguery!

Dio. Nay, then,—

Cres. I'll tell you what:

Dio. Pho! pho! come, tell a pin: You are forsworn.—

Cres. In faith, I cannot: What would you have me do?

Ther. A juggling trick, to be—secretly open.

Dio. What did you swear you would bestow on me?

Cres. I pr'ythee, do not hold me to mine oath; Bid me do any thing but that, sweet Greek.

Dio. Good night.

Tro. Hold, patience!

Ulys. How now, Trojan?

Cres. Diomed,—

Dio. No, no, good night: I'll be your fool no more.

Tro. Thy better must.

Cres. Hark! one word in your ear.

Tro. O plague and madness!

Ulys. You are mov'd, prince; let us depart, I pray you,

Lest your displeasure should enlarge itself To wrathful terms: this place is dangerous; The time right deadly; I beseech you, go.

Tro. Behold, I pray you!

Ulys. Now, good my lord, go off:

You flow to great destruction; come, my lord.

Tro. I pr'ythee, stay.

Ulys. You have not patience; come.

Tro. I pray you, stay; by hall, and all hall's torments,

I will not speak a word.

Dio. And so, good night.

Cres. Nay, but you part in anger.

Tro. Doth that grieve thee?

O wither'd truth!

Ulys. Why, how now, lord?

Tro. By Jove,

I will be patient.

Cres. Guardian!—why, Greek!

Dio. Pho, pho! adieu; you palter.*

Cres. In faith, I do not; come hither once again.

Ulys. You shake, my lord, at something; will you go?

You will break out.

Tro. She strokes his cheek!

Ulys. Come, come.

Tro. Nay, stay; by Jove, I will not speak a word:

There is between my will and all offences

A guard of patience:—stay a little while.

Ther. How the devil luxury, with his fat rump, and potatoe finger, tickles these together? Fry, lechery, fry!

Dio. But will you then?

Cres. In faith, I will, la; never trust me else.

Dio. Give me some token for the surety of it.

Cres. I'll fetch you one. [Exit.]

Ulys. You have sworn patience.

Tro. Fear me not, my lord;

I will not be myself, nor have cognition

Of what I feel; I am all patience.

Re-enter CRESSIDA.

Ther. Now the pledge; now, now, now!

Cres. Here, Diomed, keep this sleeve.

Tro. O beauty! where's thy faith?

Ulys. My lord,—

Tro. I will be patient; outwardly I will.

Cres. You look upon that sleeve; Behold it well.—

He loved me—O false wench!—Giv't me again.

Dio. Who was't?

Cres. No matter, now I hav't again.

I will not meet with you to-morrow night:

I pr'ythee Diomed, visit me no more.

Ther. Now she sharpens;—Well said, whetstone.

Dio. I shall have it.

Cres. What, this?

Dio. Ay, that.

Cres. O, all you gods!—O pretty pretty pledge!

Thy master now lies thinking in his bed

Of thee, and me; and sighs, and takes my glove,

And gives memorial dainty kisses to it, [me; As I kiss thee,—Nay, do not snatch it from

He, that takes that, must take my heart withal.

Dio. I had your heart before, this follows it.

Tro. I did swear patience.

Cres. You shall not have it, Diomed; 'faith you shall not;

I'll give you something else.

Dio. I will have this; Whose was it?

Cres. 'Tis no matter.

Dio. Come, tell me whose it was.

Cres. 'Twas one's that loved me better than you will.

But, now you have it, take it.

Dio. Who's was it?

* Fortuitous, ominous.

† Key.

• Shullo.

† Knowledge.

Cres. By all Diana's waiting-women yonder,*
And by herself, I will not tell you where.

And grieve his spirit that dares not challenge it.

Tro. Wert thou the devil, and wert'st on thy Cres. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past;—And yet it is not;

I will not keep my word.

Dis. Why then, farewell;

Thou never shalt mock Diomed again.

Cres. You shall not go:—One cannot speak
a word,

But it straight starts you.

Dis. I do not like this fooling.

Tro. Nor I, by Pluto: but that that likes not you, pleases me best.

Dis. What, shall I come? the hour?

Cres. Ay, come:—O Jove!

Do come:—I shall be plagu'd

Dis. Farewell till then.

Cres. Good night. I prythee, come.—

[Exit DIOMEDES.]

Troilus, farewell! one eye yet looks on thee;
But with my heart the other eye doth see.

Ah! poor our sex! this fault in us I find,

The error of our eye directs our mind:

What error leads, must err; O then, conclude,
Minds, sway'd by eyes, are full of turpitude.

[Exit CRESSIDA.]

Tro. A proof of strength she could not publish more,

Unless she said, My mind is now turn'd whore.

Ulyss. All's done, my lord.

Tro. It is.

Ulyss. Why stay we then?

Tro. To make a recordation to my soul

Of every syllable that here was spoke.

But, if I tell how these two did co-act

Shall I not lie in publishing a truth?

Both; yet there is a credence in my heart,

An esperance so obstinately strong,

That doth invert the attest of eyes and ears;

As if those organs had deceptions functions,

Created only to calumniate.

Was Cressid here?

Ulyss. I cannot conjure, Trojan.

Tro. She was not sure.

Ulyss. Most sure she was.

Tro. Why, my negation hath no taste of madness.

Ulyss. Normine, my lord: Cressid was here but now.

Tro. Let it not be believ'd for womanhood!††
Think, we had mothers; do not give advantage

To stubborn critics;‡—apt, without a theme,
For depravation,—to square the general sex

By Cressid's rule: rather think this not Cressid.

Ulyss. What hath she done, prince, that can sell our mothers?

Tro. Nothing at all, unless that this were
she.

Tro. Will he swagger himself out on's own eyes?

Tro. This she! no, this is Diomed's Cressid.

If beauty have a soul, this is not she; [aside:]
If souls guide vows, if vows be sanctimony,

If sanctimony be the gods' delight,

If there be rule in unity itself,

This was not she. O madness of discourse,

That cause sets up with and against itself!

Bifold authority! where reason can revolt

Without perdition, and less name all reason
Without revolt; this is, and is not, Cressid!

Within my soul there doth commence a fight
Of this strange nature, that a thing inseparable

Divides more wider than the sky and earth;
And yet the spacious breadth of this division

Admits no orifice for a point, as subtle
As is Arachne's broken web, to enter.

Instance, O instance! strong as Pluto's gates;
Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of hem-

yon:

Instance, O instance! strong as heaven itself;
The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd,

and loos'd;

And with another knot, five-finger tied,
The fractions of her faith, orts of her love,

The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy
reliques

Of her o'er-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed.

Ulyss. May worthy Troilus be half attach'd
With that which here his passion doth express!

Tro. Ay, Greek; and that shall be divulged
In characters as red as Mars his heart [well]

inflam'd with Venus: never did young man fancy*

With so eternal and so fix'd a soul.
Hark, Greek;—As much as I do Cressid here,

So much by weight hate I her Diomed:
That sleeve is mine, that he'll bear on his helm;

Were it a conquest compos'd by Vulcan's skill,
My sword should bite it: not the dreadful spout,

Which shimmers do the hurricane call
Constring'd; in mass by the almighty sun,

Shall dixy with more clamour Neptune's ear
In his descent, than shall my prompted sword

Falling on Diomed.

Tro. He'll tickle it for his concupiscence.†

Tro. O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false, false!

Let all untruths stand by thy stained name,
And they'll seem glorious.

Ulyss. O, contain yourself;
Your passion draws ears hither.

Enter AENEAS.

Aes. I have been seeking you this hour,
my lord:

Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy;
Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home.

Tro. Have with you, prince:—My court-maiden [lord salutes]

Farewell, revolted fair!—and, Diomed,
Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head!

Ulyss. I'll bring you to the gates.

Tro. Accept distracted thanks.

[Exit TROILUS, AENEAS, and ULYSSES.]

Tro. 'Would, I could meet that rogue Dio-med! I would croak like a raven; I would bode, I would bode. Patroclus will give me any thing for the intelligence of this whore:

the parrot will not do more for an almond,
than he for a commodious drab. Lechery, lechery; still, wars and lechery; nothing else holds fashion: A burning devil take them!

[Exit.]

Am like a prophet suddenly enrapt,
To tell thee—that this day is ominous:
Therefore, come back.

Hect. Aeneas is a-field;
And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks,
Even in the faith of valour, to appear
This morning to them.

Pri. But thou shalt not go.
Hect. I must not break my faith.
You know me dutiful; therefore, dear Sir,
Let me not shame respect; but give me leave
To take that course by your consent and voice,
Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam.

Cas. O Priam, yield not to him.

forth!

Behold, destruction, frenzy, and amazement,
Like witless antics, one another meet,
And all cry—Hector! Hector's dead! O
Hector!

Tro. Away!—Away!

my leave:
Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive.

SCENE IV.—Between Troy and the Grecian Camp.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter THERSITES.

Ther. Now they are clapper-clawing one another; Ill go look on. That dissembling abominable varlet, Diomed, has got that same scurvy doting foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy there, in his helm. I would fain see them meet, that that same young Trojan ass, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whoremasterly villain, with the sleeve, back to the dissembling luxurious drab, on a sleeveless errand. O' the other side, The policy of those crafty swearing rascals,—that stale old mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor; and that same dog-fox, Ulysses,—is not proved worth a blackberry:—They set me up, in policy, that mongrel cur, Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles: and now is the cur Ajax prouder than the cur Achilles, and will not arm to-day: whereupon the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill opinion. Soft! here come sleeve, and t'other.

Enter DIOMEDES, TROILUS following.

Tro. Fly not; for, should'st thou take the river Styx,
I would swim after.

Dio. Thou dost miscall retire:
I do not fly; but advantageous care
Withdrew me from the odds of multitude:
Have at thee!

Ther. Hold thy whore, Grecian!—now for thy whore, Trojan!—now the sleeve, now the sleeve!

[Exeunt TROILUS and DIOMEDES, fighting.

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. What art thou, Greek? art thou for Hector's match?
Art thou of blood, and honour?

Ther. No, no:—I am a rascal; a scurvy railing knave; a very filthy rogue.

Hect. I do believe thee,—live. [Exit.

Ther. God-a-mercy, that thou wilt believe me; But a plague break thy neck, for frightening me! What's become of the wenching rogues? I think, they have swallowed one another: I would laugh at that miracle. Yet, in a sort, lechery eats itself. I'll seek them. [Exit.

Tro. Let me read.

Pan. A whoreson ptinick, a whoreson rascally ptinick so troubles me, and the foolish fortune of this girl; and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o' these days: And I have a rheum in mine eyes too; and such an ache in my bones, that, unless a man were cursed, I cannot tell what to think on't.—What says she there?

Tro. Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart; [Tearing the letter.] The effect doth operate another way.—Go, wind, to wind, there turn and change together.—

My love with words and errors still she feeds; But edifies another with her deeds.

[Exeunt severally.]

SCENE IV.—Between Troy and the Grecian Camp.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter THRASTES.

Thr. Now they are clapper-clawing one another; Ill go look on. That dissembling abominable varlet, Diomed, has got that same scurvy doting foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy there, in his helm: I would fain see them meet; that that same young Trojan ass, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whoremasterly villain, with the sleeve, back to the dissembling luxurious drab, on a sleeveless errand. O' the other side, The policy of those crafty swearing rascals,—that stale old mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor; and that same dog-fox, Ulysses,—is not proved worth a blackberry:—They set me up, in policy, that mongrel cur, Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles: and now is the cur Ajax prouder than the cur Achilles, and will not arm to-day: whereupon the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill opinion. Soft! here come sleeve, and t'other.

Enter DIOMEDES, TROILUS following.

Tro. Fly not; for, should'st thou take the river Styx, I would swim after.

Di. Thou dost miscall retire: I do not fly; but advantageous care Withdrew me from the odds of multitude: Have at thee!

Thr. Hold thy whore, Grecian!—now for thy whore, Trojan!—now the sleeve, now the sleeve!

[Exeunt TROILUS and DIOMEDES, fighting.]

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. What art thou, Greek? art thou for Hector's match?

Art thou of blood, and honour?

Thr. No, no:—I am a rascal; a scurvy railing knave; a very filthy rogue.

Hect. I do believe thee;—live. [Exit.]

Thr. God-a-mercy, that thou wilt believe me; But a plague break thy neck, for frightening me! What's become of the wenching rogues? I think, they have swallowed one another: I would laugh at that miracle. Yet, in a sort, lechery eats itself. I'll seek them. [Exit.]

SCENE V.—The same.

Enter DIOMEDES and a SERVANT.

Di. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus' horse; Present the fair steed to my lady Cressid:

Fellow, commend my service to her beauty; Tell her, I have chastis'd the unsex'd Trojan, And am her knight by proof.

Serv. I go, my lord. [Exit SERVANT.]

Enter AGAMEMNON.

Agam. Renew, renew! The flames Polydorus Hath beat down Menon: bastard Menegeus Hath downy poison'd;

And stands column-wise, waving his helm,* Upon the pashed corns of the kings; Epistrophus and Cedius: Polixenus is slain; Amphimachus, and Thoon, dromedary hunt; Patroclus ta'en, or slain; and Palamedes Sore hurt and bruised: the dreadful Sagarus Appeals our numbers; haste we, Diomed, To reinforcement, or we perish all.

Enter NESTOR.

Nest. Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achilles; And bid the snail-pac'd Ajax arm for shame.— There is a thousand Hectors in the field: Now here he fights on Galathea his horse, And there lacks work, anon, he's there shot, And there they fly, or die, like scaled scuttles Before the belching whale; then is he yonder, And there the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge, Fall down before him, like the mower's swath: Here, there, and every where, he leaves, and dexterly so obeying appetite, [Exit.] That what he will, he does; and does to such, That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter ULYSSES.

Ulys. O, courage, courage, prison! gnat Achilles [groans:] Is arming, weeping, cuning, vowing vengeance: Patroclus' wounds have roas'd his downy blood,

Together with his mangled Myrmidons, That noseless, headless, hack'd and chipp'd come to him,

Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend, And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd, and at it,

Roaring for Troilus; who hath done to-day Mad and fantastic execution; Engaging and redeeming of himself, With such a careless force, and forceless care, As if that luck, in very spite of cunning, Bade him win all.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus! thou coward Troilus! [Exit.]

Di. Ay, there, there.

Nest. So, so, we draw together.

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Where is this Hector?

Come, come, thou boy-queller, show thy face, Know what it is to meet Achilles angry. Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector. [Exit.]

SCENE VI.—Another part of the Field.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show thy head!

Mar. Turn, slave, and fight.

Ther. What art thou?

Mar. A bastard son of Priam's.

Ther. I am a bastard too; I love bastards: I am a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard in mind, bastard in valour, in every thing illegitimate. One bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one bastard? Take heed, the quarrel's most ominous to us: if the son of a whore fight for a whore, he tempts judgement:
Farewell, bastard.

To close the day up, Hector's life is done.

Tro. Hector is slain.

And linger not our sure destructions on!

Æne. My lord, you do discomfort all the host.

Tro. You understand me not, that tell me so:
I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death;
But dare all imminence, that gods and men,
Address their dangers in. Hector is gone!
Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba?
Let him that will a screech-owl eye* be call'd,
Go in to Troy, and say there—Hector's dead:
There is a word will Priam turn to stone;
Make wells and Niobes of the maids and wives,
Cold statues of the youth; and, in a word,
Scare Troy out of itself. But, march, away:
Hector is dead; there is no more to say.
Stay yet;—You vile abominable tents,
Thus proudly pight upon our Phrygian plains,
Let Titan rise as early as he dare,
I'll through and through you!—And thou,

side, PANDARUS.

Pan. But hear you, hear you!

Tro. Hence, broker lackey! ignominy* and Pursue thy life, and live aye† with thy name!

[Exit TROILUS.]

Pan. A goodly med'cine for my aching bones!—O world! world! world! thus is the poor agent despised! O traitors and bawds, how earnestly are you set a' work, and how ill requited! Why should our endeavour be so loved, and the performance so loathed? what verse for it? what instance for it?—Let me
see:—

Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing,
Till he hath lost his honey and his sting;
And being once subdued in armed tail,
Sweet honey and sweet notes together fall.—
Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths.†

As many as be here of pander's hall,
Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall:
Or, if you cannot weep, yet give some groan,
Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.
Brethren, and sisters, of the hold-door trade,
Some two months hence my wall shall here be
made;

It should be now, but that my fear is this,—
Some galled goose of Winchester would hiss:
Till then I'll sweat, and seek about for cress;
And, at that time, bequeath you my distress.
[Exit.]

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome.—A Street.

Enter a Company of mutinous CITIZENS, with Staves, Clubs, and other Weapons.

1 Cit. Before we proceed any further, hear me speak.

Cit. Speak, speak. [Several speaking at once.]

1 Cit. You are all resolved rather to die, than to famish?

Cit. Resolved, resolved.

1 Cit. First you know, Caius Marcius is chief enemy to the people.

Cit. We know't, we know't.

1 Cit. Let us kill him, and we'll have corn at our own price. Is't a verdict?

Cit. No more talking on't; let it be done:
 away, away.

2 Cit. One word, good citizens.

1 Cit. We are accounted poor citizens; the patricians, good: What authority surfeits on, would relieve us; If they would yield us but the superfluity, while it were wholesome, we might guess, they relieved us humanely; but they think, we are too dear: the leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is as an inventory to particularize their abundance; our sufferance is a gain to them.—Let us revenge this with our pikes, ere we become rakes:† for the gods know, I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge.

1 Cit. Would you proceed especially against Caius Marcius?

Cit. Against him first; he's a very dog to the commonalty.

2 Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country?

1 Cit. Very well; and could be content to give him good report for't, but that he pays himself with being proud.

2 Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously.

1 Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done famously, he did it to that end: though soft conscienc'd men can be content to say, it was for his country, he did it to please his mother, and to be partly proud; which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue.

2 Cit. What he cannot help in his nature, you account a vice in him: You must in no way say, he is covetous.

1 Cit. If I must not, I need not be barren of accusations; he hath faults, with surplus, to tire in repetition. [Shouts within.] What shouts are these? The other side o'the city is risen: Why stay we prating here? to the Capitol!

Cit. Come, come.

1 Cit. Soft; who comes here?

Enter MENENIUS AGRIPPA.

2 Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa; one that hath always loved the people.

1 Cit. He's one honest enough; 'Would, all the rest were so!

Men. What work's, my countrymen, in hand?
 Where go you

With bats and clubs? The matter? Speak, I pray you.

1 Cit. Our business is not unknown to the senate; they have had inkling, this fortnight, what we intend to do, which now we'll show
 'em in deeds. They say, poor suitors have strong breaths; they shall know, we have strong arms too.

Men. Why, masters, my good friends, mine honest neighbours,

Will you undo yourselves?

1 Cit. We cannot, Sir, we are undone already.

4 N

* Rich.

† Thin as rakes.

Men. I tell you, friends, most charitable care
Have the patricians of you. For your wants,
Your suffering in this dearth, you may as well
Strike at the heaven with your staves, as lift
them

Against the Roman state; whose course will
The way it takes, cracking ten thousand curbs
Of more strong link asunder, than can ever
Appear in your impediment: For the dearth,
The gods, not the patricians, make it; and
Your knees to them, not arms, must help.

Alack,
You are transported by calamity [slander
Thither where more attends you; and you
The helms o' the state, who care for you like
When you curse them as enemies. [slanders,

1 Cit. Care for us!—True, indeed!—They ne'er cared for us yet. Suffer us to famish, and their store-houses crammed with grain; make edicts for usury, to support usurers: repeal daily any wholesome act established against the rich; and provide more piercing statutes daily, to chain up and restrain the poor. If the wars eat us not up, they will; and there's all the love they bear us.

Men. Either you must Confess yourselves wondrous malicious,
Or be accus'd of folly. I shall tell you
A pretty tale; it may be, you have heard it;
But, since it serves my purpose, I will venture
To scale't a little more.

1 Cit. Well, I'll hear it, Sir; yet you must not think to fob off our disgraces with a tale:
but, an't please you, deliver.

Men. There was a time, when all the body's members

Rebell'd against the belly; thus accus'd it:—
That only like a gulf it did remain
I'the midst o' the body, idle and inactive,
Still cupboarding the viand, never bearing
Like labour with the rest; where the other instruments

Did see, and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel,
And, mutually participate, did minister
Unto the appetite and affection common
Of the whole body. The belly answered,—

1 Cit. Well, Sir, what answer made the belly?

Men. Sir, I shall tell you.—With a kind of smile, [thus,
Which ne'er came from the lungs, but even (For, look you, I may make the belly smile,
As well as speak,) it tauntingly replied
To the discontented members, the mutinous parts

That envied his receipt; even so most flily
As you malign our senators, for that
They are not such as you.

1 Cit. Your belly's answer: What?
The kingly-crowned head, the vigilant eye,
The counsellor heart, the arm our soldier,
Our steed the leg, the tongue our trumpeter,
With other muniments and petty helps
In this our fabric, if that they—

Men. What then?—
'Fore me, this fellow speaks!—what then?
what then?

1 Cit. Should by the cormorant belly be restrain'd,
Who is the sink o' the body,—

Men. Well, what then?

1 Cit. The former agents, if they did com-
What could the belly answer? [plain,

Men. I will tell you;

If you'll bestow a small (of what you have little,)

Patience, a while, you'll hear the belly's an-1 Cit. You are long about it.

Men. Note me this, good friend;
Your most grave belly was deliberate,
Not rash like his accusers, and thus answer'd.
True is it, my incorporate friends, growth he,
That I receive the general food at first,
Which you do live upon: and fit it is;
Because I am the store-house, and the shop
Of the whole body: But if you do remember,
I send it through the rivers of your blood,
Even to the court, the heart,—to the seat o' the brain;

And, through the cranks and offices of man,
The strongest nerves, and small inferior veins,
From me receive that natural competency
Whereby they live: And though that oft it may,
You, my good friends, (this says the belly,)

mark me,—

1 Cit. Ay, Sir; well, well.

Men. Though oft it may
Set what I do deliver out to each;
Yet I can make my credit up, that oft,
From me do back receive the flour of all,
And leave me but the bran. What say you to't?

1 Cit. It was an answer: How apply you
this?

Men. The senators of Rome are this good
belly,

And you the mutinous members: For examine Their counsels, and their courses; digest things rightly,

Touching the weal o' the common? you shall
No public benefit which you receive,
But it proceeds, or comes, from them to you,
And no way from yourselves.—What do you think?

You the great toe of this assembly?

1 Cit. I the great toe? Why the great toe?

Men. For that being one o' the lowest, basest, poorest,

Of this most wise rebellion, thou go'st fore-
Thou rascal, that art worst in blood, to run
Lead'st first to win some vantage.—

But make you ready your stiff bats and clubs;
Rome and her rats are at the point of battle,
The one side must have bail: Hail, noble
Marcius!

Enter CAIUS MARCIUS.

Men. Thanks.—What's the matter, you dissentious rogues,
That rubbing the poor itch of your opinion,
Make yourselves scabs?

1 Cit. We have ever your good word.

Men. He that will give good words to thee,

That like nor peace, nor war? the one affrights
The other makes you proud. He that trusts

matter,

That in these several places of the city
You cry against the noble senate, who,
Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else
Would feed on one another?—What's their

Men. For corn at their own rates; whereof,
they say,
The city is well stor'd.

Mar. Hang 'em! They say?
They'll sit by the fire, and presume to know

And feebling such as stand not in their liking, Below their cobbled shoes. They say, there's 1 Sen. Marcius, 'tis true, that you have lately told us;

The Volces are in arms.

Mar. They have a leader,
Tullus Aufidius, that will put you to't.
I sin in envying his nobility:

Bru. Mark'd you his lip, and eyes?

Sic. Nay, but his taunts.

Bru. Being mov'd, he will not spare to gird‡

SCENE II.—Corioli.—The Senate-House.

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, and certain SENATORS.

1 Sen. So, your opinion is, Aufidius,
That they of Rome are enter'd in our counsels,
And know how we proceed.

Auf. Is it not yours?
What ever hath been thought on in this state,
That could be brought to bodily act ere Rome
Had circumvention! * 'Tis not four days gone, Since I heard thence; these are the words: I
think,

I have the letter here; yes, here it is: [Reads.
They have press'd a power, but it is not known
Whether for east, or west: The death is great;
The people mutinous: and it is rumour'd,
Cominius, Marcius your old enemy,
(Who is of Rome worse hated than of you,)
And Titus Lartius, a most valiant Roman,
These three lead on this preparation
Whither 'tis bent: most likely, 'tis for you:
Consider of it.

1 Sen. Our army's in the field:
We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready
To answer us.

Auf. Nor did you think it folly,
To keep your great pretences veil'd, till when They needs must show themselves; which in the hatching,

It seem'd, appear'd to Rome. By the discovery,
We shall be shorten'd in our aim; which was,
To take in† many towns, ere, almost, Rome
Should know we were afoot.

2 Sen. Noble Aufidius,
Take your commission; hie you to your hands:
Let us alone to guard Corioli:
If they set down before us, for the remove Bring up your army; but, I think, you'll find
They have not prepar'd for us.

Auf. O, doubt not that;
I speak from certainties. Nay, more.
Some parcels of their powers are forth already,
And only hitherward. I leave your honours.
If we and Caius Marcius chance to meet,
'Tis sworn between us, we shall never strike
Till one can do no more.

All. The gods assist you!
Auf. And keep your honours safe!

1 Sen. Farewell.
2 Sen. Farewell.
All. Farewell. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Rome.—An Apartment in MARCUS' House.

Enter VOLUMNIA, and VIRGILIA: They sit down on two low stools, and sew.

Val. I pray you, daughter, sing; or express yourself in a more comfortable sort: If my son were my husband, I should freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour, than in the embracements of his bed, where he would show most love. When yet he was but tender-bodied, and the only son of my womb; when youth with comeliness plucked all gaze his way;‡ when, for a day of kings' entreaties, a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding; I,—considering how honour would become such a person; that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall, if renown made it not stir,—was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him; from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak. I tell thee, daughter,—I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child, than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man.

Vir. But had he died in the business, madam!
how then?

Val. Then his good report should have been my son; I therein would have found issue.
Hear me profess sincerely: Had I a dozen sons,—each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Marcius,—I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country, than one voluptuously surfeit out of action.

Enter a GENTLEWOMAN.

Gent. Madam, the lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Vir. Beseech you, give me leave to retire myself.

Val. Indeed, you shall not.
Methinks, I hear hither your husband's drum;
See him pluck Aufidius down by the hair;
As children from a bear the Volscians shunning
him:

Methinks, I see him stamp thus, and call thus,—
Come on, you cowards, you were got in fear,
Though you were born in Rome: His bloody brow

With his mail'd hand then wiping, forth he
Like to a harvest-man, that's task'd to mow
Or all, or lose his hire.

Vir. His bloody brow! O, Jupiter, no blood!

Val. Away, you fool! it more becomes a
man,

Than gilt his trophy: The breasts of Hecuba,
When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier
Than Hector's forehead, when it spit forth
blood

At Grecian swords' contending.—Tell Valeria,
We are fit to bid her welcome. [Exit GENT.

Vir. Heavens bless my lord from fell Aufidius!

Val. He'll beat Aufidius' head below his
And tread upon his neck. [Knock,

Re-enter GENTLEWOMAN, with VALERIA and her USHER.

Val. My ladies both, good day to you.

Val. Sweet madam,—

Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship.

Val. How do you both? you are manifest house-keepers. What, are you sewing here!
A fine spot,† in good faith.—How does your little son?

Vir. I thank your ladyship; well, good madam.

Val. He had rather see the swords, and hear a drum, than look upon his school-master.

Val. O' my word, the father's son: I'll swear, 'tis a very pretty boy. O' my troth, I looked upon him o' Wednesday half an hour together: he has such a confirmed countenance.
I saw him run after a gilded butterfly; and when he caught it, he let it go again; and after it again; and over and over he comes, and up again; caught it again: or whether his fall enraged him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth, and tear it; O, I warrant, how he man-mocked‡ it!

Val. One of his father's moods.

Val. Indeed so, 'tis a noble child.

Vir. A crack,§ madam.

Val. Come, lay aside your stitchery; I must

As you have been ; that's for my country :
He, that has but effected his good will,
Hath overta'en mine act.

Com. You shall not be
The grave of your deserving ; Rome must know
The value of her own : 'twere a concealment
Worse than a theft, no less than a traduce-
ment,

To hide your doings ; and to silence that,
Which to the spire and top of praises vouch'd,
Would seem but modest : Therefore, I beseech
(In sign of what you are, not to reward [you,
What you have done,) before our army hear
me.

Mar. I have some wounds upon me, and they smart

Com. Take it: 'tis yours.—What is't?

Cor. I sometime lay, here in Corioli,
At a poor man's house; he us'd me kindly:
He cried to me; I saw him prisoner;
But then Aufidius was within my view,
And wrath o'erwhelm'd my pity: I request

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rome.—A Public Place.

Enter MENENIUS, SICINIUS, and BAURUS.

Men. The augurer tells me, we shall have news to-night.

Bur. Good, or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Marcius.

Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their friends.

Men. Pray you, who does the wolf love?

Sic. The lamb.

Men. Ay, to devour him; as the hungry plebeians would the noble Marcius.

Bur. He's a lamb indeed, that bears like a
bear.

Men. He's a bear indeed, that lives like a lamb. You two are old men; tell me one thing that I shall ask you.

Both Trib. Well, Sir.

Men. In what enormity is Marcius poor, that you two have not in abundance?

Bru. He's poor in no one fault, but stored with all.

Sir. Especially, in pride.

Bru. And topping all others in boasting.

Men. This is strange now: Do you two know how you are censured here in the city, I mean of us o'the right hand side? Do you?

Both Trib. Why, how are we censured?

Men. Because you talk of pride now,—Will you not be angry?

Both Trib. Well, well, Sir, well.

Men. Why 'tis no great matter; for a very little thief of occasion will rob you of a great deal of patience. Give your disposition the reins, and be angry at your pleasures; at the least, if you take it as a pleasure to you, in being so. You blame Marcius for being proud?

Bru. We do it not alone, Sir.

Men. I know, you can do very little alone; for your helps are many; or else your actions would grow wondrous single: your abilities are too infant-like, for doing much alone. You talk of pride. O, that you could turn your eyes towards the napes^a of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves! O, that you could!

Bru. What then, Sir?

Men. Why, then you should discover a trace of unmeriting, proud, violent, tasty magistrates, (alias, fools,) as any to Rome.

Sir. Menenius, you are known well enough too.

Men. I am known to be a humorous patrician, and one that loves a cup of hot wine with not a drop of allaying Tybalt in't; said to be something imperfect, in favouring the first complaint: hasty, and tender-like, upon too trivial motion one that converses more with the buttock of the night, than with the forehead of the morning. What I think, I utter; and spend my malice in my breath: Meeting two such weals;—men as you are, (I cannot call you Lyrurgues^b) if the drink you gave me, touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it. I cannot say, your worship have delivered the matter well, when I find the ass in compound with the major part of your syllables. And though I must be content to bear with those that say you are revered grave men, yet they lie deadly, that tell, you have good faces. If you see this in the map of my microcosm,^c follows it, that I am known well enough too? What harm can your blazon^d conspectives glean out of this character, if I be known well enough too?

Bru. Come, Sir, come, we know you well enough.

Men. You know neither me, yourselves, nor any thing. You are ambitious for poor knaves' caps and legs,^e you wear out a good wholesome forenoon, in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a sunset-oriller; and then re-journ the controversy of three-pence to a second day of audience.—When you are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be pinched with the choice, you make faces like mummings, set up the bloody flag against all patience, and, in rearing for a chamber-pot, dismiss the controversy bleeding, the more entangled by your hearing: all the peace you make in their cause, is, calling both the parties knaves. You are a pair of strange ones.

Bru. Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter glutton for the table, than a necessary boucher in the Capitol.

Men. Our very priests must become mockers, if they shall encounter such ridiculous subjects as you are. When you speak best unto the purpose, it is not worth the wagging of your beards; and your beards deserve not so honourable a grave, as to stuff a butcher's cushion, or to be entombed in an ass' pack-saddle. Yet you must be saying, Marcius is proud; who, in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors, since Deucalion; though, peradventure, some of the best of them were hereditary hangmen. Good e'en to your worship; more of your conversation would infect my brain, being the hardiness of the beastly plebeians: I will be bold to take my leave of you.

[Bru. and Sir. retire to the back of the Scene.

Enter VOLUNUS, VIRGILIA, and VALERIA, &c.

How now, my as fair as noble ladies, (and the mean, were she earthly, no nobler,) whither do you follow your eyes so fast?

Vol. Honourable Menenius, my boy Marcius approaches; for the love of Juno, let's go.

Men. Ha! Marcius coming home?

Vol. Ay, worthy Menenius, and with most prosperous appuraisers.

Men. Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee;—Hoo! Marcius coming home?

Two Ladies. Nay, 'tis true.

Vol. Look, here's a letter from him; the state hath another, his wife another; and, I think, there's one at home for you.

Men. I will make my very house reel to-night:—A letter for me?

Vir. You, certain, there's a letter for you; I saw it.

Men. A letter for me? It gives me an estate of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician. the most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empiricistie, and, to this preservative, of no better report than a horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded.

Vir. O, no, no, no.

Vol. O, he is wounded, I thank the gods for't.

Men. So do I too, if it be not too much:—Brings 'a victory in his pocket!—The wounds become him.

Vol. On's brows, Menenius: he comes the third time home with the oak leaf garland.

Men. Has he disciplined Aufidius soundly?

Vol. Titus Lartius writes,—they fought together, but Aufidius got off.

Men. And 'twas time for him too, I'll warrant him that: as he had staid by him, I would not have been so abused for all the chests in Corioli, and the gold that's in them. Is the senate possessed^f of this?

Vol. Good ladies, let's go:—Yea, yes, you: the senate has letters from the general, wherein he gives my son the whole name of the war: he hath in this action outdone his former deeds doubly.

Vol. In truth, there's wondrous things spoke of him.

Men. Wondrous? ay, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Vir. The gods grant them true!

Vol. True! paw, wow.

Men. True! I'll be sworn they are true:—

^a Nape. ^b Water of the Tiber. ^c Figure.
^d Whole man. ^e Sifted. ^f Obscured.

^g Truly victorious.

Where is he wounded?—God save your good worships! [To the Tribunes, who come forward.]
 Marcius is coming home: he has more cause to be proud.—Where is he wounded?

Vol. I'the shoulder, and i'the left arm: There will be large cicatrices to show the people, when he shall stand for his place. He received in the repulse of Tarquin, seven hurts i'the body.

Men. One in the neck, and two in the thigh,—there's nine that I know.

Vol. He had, before this last expedition, twenty-five wounds upon him.

Men. Now it's twenty-seven: every gash was an enemy's grave. [A Shout, and Flourish.]
 Hark! the trumpets.

Vol. These are the ushers of Marcius: before him

He carries noise, and behind him he leaves Death, that dark spirit, in's nerry arm doth lie; Which being advanc'd, declines; and then men die.

A. Sennet.* Trumpets sound. Enter COMINIUS and TITUS LARTIUS; between them, CORIOLANUS, crowned with an oaken Garland: with Captains, Soldiers, and a Herald.

Her. Know, Rome, that all alone Marcius did fight

Within Corioli's gates: where he hath won, With fame, a name to Caius Marcius; these In honour follows, Coriolanus:

Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

Cor. No more of this, it does offend my heart; Pray now, no more.

Com. Look, Sir, your mother,——

Cor. O!

You have, I know, petition'd all the gods For my prosperity.

Vol. Nay, my good soldier, up; My gentle Marcius, worthy Caius, and By deed-achieving honour newly nam'd. What is it? Coriolanus, must I call thee? But O, thy wife,——

Cor. My gracious silence, hail! Would'st thou have laugh'd, had I come coffin'd home, That weep'st to see me triumph? Ah, my dear, Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear, And mothers that lack sons.

Men. Now the gods crown thee!

Cor. And live you yet?—O my sweet lady, pardon.

Vol. I know not where to turn:—O welcome home;

And welcome, general;—And you are welcome all.

Men. A hundred thousand welcomes: I could weep,

And I could laugh; I am light, and heavy: A curse begin at very root of his heart,

That is not glad to see thee!—You are three, That Rome should dote on: yet, by the faith of men,

We have some old crab-trees here at home, that will not

Be grafted to your relish. Yet welcome, war: We call a nettle, but a nettle; and

The faults of fools, but folly.

Com. Ever right.

Cor. Menenius, ever, ever.

Her. Give way there, and go on.

Cor. Your hand, and yours:

[To his Wife and Mother.]
 Here in our own house I do shade my head, The good patricians must be visited; From whom I have received not only greetings, But with these changes of honours.

Vol. I have lived To see inherited my very wishes, And the buildings of my fancy: only there Is one thing wanting, which I doubt not, but Our Rings will cost upon thee.

Cor. Know, good mother, I had rather be their servant in my way, Than sway with them in theirs.

Com. On, to the Capitol.

[Flourish. Cornets. Enter an edict, as before. The Tribunes remain.]

Bru. All tongues speak of him, and the bleared sights

Are spectacles to see him: Your prating wife Into a rapture lets her baby cry, While she chats him: the kitchen maids sing Her richest lockram bout her trencher's neck. Chambering the walls to eye him: stalls, bells, windows,

Are another'd up, heads studd, and ridges heard With variable complexions; all agreeing In earnestness to see him: selling shows famous

Do press among the popular throngs, and puff To win a vulgar station:—our val'd dames Commit the war of white and damask, in Their nicely-gawdied cheeks, to the wanton spoil

Of Phœbus' burning kisses: such a pother, As if that whatsoever god, who lends him, Were slyly crept into his human powers, And gave him graceful posture.

Sic. On the sudden,

I warrant him consul.

Bru. Then our office may,

During his power, go sleep.

Sic. He cannot temperately transport his honours

From where he should begin, and end; but Lose those that he hath won.

Bru. In that there's comfort.

Sic. Doubt not, the commoners, for whom we stand,

But they, upon their ancient malice, will Forget, with the least cause, these his new honours;

Which that he'll give them, make as little quest-As he is proud to do't.

Bru. I heard him swear,

Were he to stand for consul, never would he Appear i'the market-place, nor on him put

The napless vesture of humility; Nor, showing (as the manner is) his wounds

To the people, beg their stinking breaths.

Sic. 'Tis right.

Bru. It was his word: O, he would miss it, rather Than carry it, but by the suit o'the gentry to And the desire of the nobles.

Sic. I wish no better, Than have him hold that purpose, and to put it In execution.

Bru. 'Tis most like, he will.

Sic. It shall be to him then, as our good will A sure destruction.

Bru. So it must fall out To him, or our authorities. For an end,

* Fl. † Maid ‡ Best linen § Dressed with sweat and smoke. ¶ Scoldom. † Prisms.

 Common standing-place. †† Adorned.
 ‡ Turned into.

* Flourish on cornets.

† Gracious.

We must suggest* the people, in what hatred
He still hath held them; that, to his power, he would

Have made them mules, silenced their pleaders,
Disproportioned their freedoms: holding them,
In human action and capacity,

(Of no more soul, nor fitness for the world,
Than camels in their war; who have their provand†

Only for bearing burdens, and sore blows
For sinking under them.

Sic. This, as you say, suggested
At some time when his soaring insolence Shall teach the people, (which time shall not want,

If he be put upon't; and that's as easy,
As to set dogs on sheep,) will be his fire
To kindle their dry stubble; and their blaze
Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Bru. What's the matter?

Mess. You are sent for to the Capitol. 'Tis
thought,

That Marcius shall be consul: I have seen
The dumb men throng to see him, and the blind

To hear him speak: The matrons flung their Ladies and maids their scarfs and handkerchiefs,

Upon him as he pass'd: the nobles bended,
As to Jove's statue; and the commons made
A shower, and thunder, with their caps, and
I never saw the like. [shouts:

Bru. Let's to the Capitol;
And carry with us ears and eyes for the time,
But hearts for the event.

Sic. Have with you. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same.—The Capitol.

Enter two OFFICERS, to lay Cushions.

1 Off. Come, come, they are almost here:
How many stand for consulships?

2 Off. Three, they say: but 'tis thought of every one, Coriolanus will carry it.

1 Off. That's a brave fellow; but he's vengeance proud, and loves not the common people.

2 Off. Faith, there have been many greatmen that have flatter'd the people, who ne'er loved them; and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore: so that, if they love
they know not why, they hate upon no better a ground: Therefore, for Coriolanus neither to care whether they love or hate him, manifests
the true knowledge he has in their disposition;
and, out of his noble carelessness, let's them plainly see't.

1 Off. If he did not care whether he had their love, or no, he waded indifferently 'twixt doing them neither good, nor harm; but he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him; and leaves nothing undone, that may fully discover him their opposite.† Now, to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people, is as bad as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their love.

2 Off. He hath deserved worthily of his country: And his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those, who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonnetted,‡ without any further deed to heave them at all into their estimation and report: but he hath so planted his honours in their eyes, and his actions in their hearts, that for their tongues to be silent, and not confess so much, were a kind of in-grateful injury; to report otherwise were a malice, that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard it.

1 Off. No more of him; he is a worthy man:
Make way, they are coming.

*A Sennet. Enter, with LICTORS before them, Co-MINIUS, the Consul, MENENIUS, CORIOLANUS, many other SENATORS, SICINIUS, and BRUTUS.
The SENATORS take their places; the TRIBUNES take theirs also by themselves.*

Men. Having determin'd of the Volces, and
To send for Titus Lartius, it remains,
As the main point of this our after-meeting,
To gratify his noble service, that Hath thus stood for his country: Therefore,
please you,

Most reverend and grave elders, to desire
The present consul, and last general
In our well-found successes, to report
A little of that worthy work perform'd
By Caius Marcius Coriolanus; whom
We meet here, both to thank, and to remember
With honours like himself.

1 Sen. Speak, good Cominius:
Leave nothing out for length, and make us
think,

Rather our state's defective for requital,
Than we to stretch it out. Masters o'the people,

We do request your kindest ears: and, after,
Your loving motion toward the common body
To yield what passes here.

Sic. We are contented
Upon a pleasing treaty; and have hearts
Inclinable to honour and advance
The theme of our assembly.

Bru. Which the rather
We shall be bless'd to do, if he remember
A kinder value of the people, than
He hath hereto priz'd them at.

Men. That's off, that's off,*
I would you rather had been silent: Please you
To hear Cominius speak?

Bru. Most willingly:
But yet my caution was more pertinent,
Than the rebuke you give it.

Men. He loves your people;
But tie him not to be their bedfellow.—
Worthy Cominius, speak.—Nay, keep your place.

[CORIOLANUS rises, and offers to go away.

1 Sen. Sit, Coriolanus; never shame to hear
What you have nobly done.

Cor. Your honours' pardon;
I had rather have my wounds to heal again,
Than hear say how I got them.

Bru. Sir, I hope,
My words disbench'd you not.

Cor. No, Sir: yet oft, [words.
When blows have made me stay, I fled from
You sooth'd not, therefore hurt not: But, you
I love them as they weigh. [people.

Men. Pray now, sit down.

Cor. I had rather have one scratch my head
i'the sun,
When the alarm were struck,† than idly sit
To hear my nothings monster'd.

[Exit CORIOLANUS.

Men. Masters o'the people,
Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter,

* Inform.
; Adversary

† Provender.
; Take off caps

* Nothing to the purpose.

† Remembrance to battle.

(That's thousand to one good one,) when you now see,

He had rather venture all his limbs for honour,
Than die of his own to hear it?—Proceed, Co-rinius.

Cor. I shall lack voice: the deeds of Coriolanus

Should not be utter'd feebly.—It is hold,
That valour is the chiefest virtue, and
Most dignifies the liver:—If it be,
The man I speak of cannot in the world
Be singly counterpois'd. At sixteen years,
When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he slight

Beyond the mark of others: our then dictator,
Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight,
When with his Amazonian chin he drove
The bristled lips before him: he bestrode
An o'erpress'd Roman, and the consul's view
Saw three opponents: Tarquin's self he met,
And struck him on his knee: in that day's fight,

When he might not the woman in the scene,
He prov'd best man I like said, and for his deeds

Was brow-beat with the oak. His pupil eye
Men-our'd then, he waxed like a sun;
And, in the heat of seventeen battles since,
He lov'd't all swords o'the garland. For this Shame and in Corioli, let me say, [last,
I cannot speak him home: He stopp'd the flow;

And, by his rare example, made the coward
Turn terror into sport: as waves before
A vessel under sail, so men obey'd, [stomach,
And fell below his stem: his sword (death)
Where it did mark, it took; from knee to foot
He was a thing of blood, whose every motion
Was timed with dying cries: alone he en-
ter'd

The mortal gate o'the city, which he painted
With shrewd destiny, and lions came off,
And with a sudden re-enforcement struck
Corioli, like a planet: now all's his:
When by and by the din of war 'gan pierce
His ready senses: then straight his doubled

spirit
Re-quicken'd what in flesh was fatigued;†
And to the battle came he; where he did Run reeking o'er the lives of men, as if 'Twere a perpetual spoil: and, till we call'd
Both field and city ours, he never stood
To ease his breast with panting.

Men. Worthy man!
1 Sen. He cannot but with measure fit the
Which we devise him. [honour

Cor. Our spoils he kick'd at;
And look'd upon things precious, as they were
The common muck o'the world: he covets less
Than misery;‡ itself would give; rewards
His deeds with doing them; and is content
To spend the time, to end it.

Men. He's right noble;
Let him be call'd for.

1 Sen. Call for Coriolanus.
Off. He doth appear.

Re-enter CORIOLANUS.

Men. The senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd
To make thee consul.

Cor. I do owe them still
My life, and services.

o. Forward. † Without a beard. ‡ Banded.
§ Smooth-faced enough to eat a woman's part.
|| Stood. ¶ Wen. oo. Surber.
||| Withstand. ||| Went. ||| Answer.

Men. Is then coming,
That you do speak to the people.

Cor. I do beseech you,
Let me o'erstep that custom; for I cannot Put on the gown, stand naked, and entreat

them,
For my wounds' sake, to give their suffrage:
please you,
That I may pass this doing.

Men. Sir, the people
Must have their voices; neither will they let
One jot of courtesy.

Men. Put them not to't:—
Pray you, go fit you to the custom; and Take to you, as your predecessors have,
Your honour with your staff.

Cor. It is a part
That I shall break in eating, and might well
Be taken from the people.

Men. Mark you that!
Cor. To bring unto them,—Then I did, and

thus;—
Show them the unmaking scars which I should
As if I had received them for the like [sake,
Of their breath only:—

Men. Do not stand upon't:—
We recommend to you, tribunes of the people
Our purpose to them;—and to our noble consul
With all joy and honour.

Men. To Coriolanus come all joy and honour!
[Flourish. Then cannot I answer.

Men. You see how he intends to use the people.

Men. May they perceive his intent! He that will require them,

As if he did custom what he requested
Should be in them to give.
Men. Come, we'll inform them
Of our proceedings here: on the market-place,
I know, they do attend us. [March.

SCENE III.—The same.—The Forum.

Enter several CITIZENS.

1 Cit. Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him.

2 Cit. We may, Sir, if we will.

3 Cit. We have power in ourselves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do:
for if he show us his wounds, and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into these wounds, and speak for them; so, if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our voluntary acceptance of them. Ingratitude is man-nious: and for the multitude to be ingrateful, were to make a monster of the multitude; of the which, we, being members, should bring ourselves to be monstrous members.

1 Cit. And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve: for once, when we stood up about the corn, he himself stuck out to call us the many-headed multitude.

2 Cit. We have been called so of many; not that our heads are some brown, some black, some anburn, some bald, but that our wits are so diversely coloured: and truly I think, if all our wits were to issue out of one skull, they would fly east, west, north, south; and their consent of one direct way should be at once to all the points o'the compass.

2 Cit. Think you so? Which way, do you judge, my wit would fly?

3 Cit. Nay, your wit will not so soon out as another man's will, 'tis strongly wedged up in a block-head: but if it were at liberty, 'twould go, southward.

2 Cit. Why that way?

3 Cit. To lose itself in a fog; where being three parts melted away with rotten dews, the fourth would return for conscience sake, to help to get thee a wife.

3 Cit. You are never without your tricks:—You may, you may.

3 Cit. Are you all resolved to give your voices? But that's no matter, the greater part carries it. I say, if he would incline to the people, there was never a worthier man.

Enter CORIOLANUS and MENENIUS.

Here he comes, and in the gown of humility; mark his behaviour. We are not to stay altogether, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes. He's to make his requests by particulars: wherein every one of us has a single honour, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues: therefore follow me, and I'll direct you how you shall go by him.

All. Content, content. [Exeunt.]

Men. O, Sir, you are not right: have you not known

The worthiest men have done it?

Cor. What must I say?

I pray, Sir,—Plague upon't! I cannot bring my tongue to such a pace:—Look, Sir;—

my wounds;—I got them in my country's service, when some certain of your brethren rear'd, and ran from the noise of our own drums.

Men. O me, the gods! [them]

You must not speak of that; you must desire to think upon you.

Cor. Think upon me? Hang 'em!

I would they would forget me, like the virtues which our divines lose by them.

Men. You'll mar all;

I'll leave you: Pray you, speak to them, I pray you, in wholesome manner. [Exit.]

Enter two CITIZENS.

Cor. Bid them wash their faces, And keep their teeth clean.—So, here comes a brace,

You know the cause, Sir, of my standing here.

1 Cit. We do, Sir; tell us what hath brought you to't.

Cor. Mine own desert.

2 Cit. Your own desert?

Cor. Ay, not

Mine own desire.

1 Cit. How! not your own desire?

Cor. No, Sir:

'Twas never my desire yet, To trouble the poor with begging.

1 Cit. You must think, if we give you any We hope to gain by you. [thing.]

Cor. Well then, I pray, your price o'the consulship?

1 Cit. The price is, Sir, to ask it kindly.

Cor. Kindly?

Sir, I pray let me ha't: I have wounds to show you, Which shall be yours in private.—Your good voice, Sir;

What say you?

2 Cit. You shall have it, worthy Sir.

Cor. A match, Sir:—

There is in all two worthy voices begg'd:—I have your alms; adieu.

1 Cit. But this is something odd.

2 Cit. An 'twere to give again,—But 'tis no matter. [Exeunt two CITIZENS.]

Enter two other CITIZENS.

Cor. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices, that I may be consul, I have here the customary gown.

2 Cit. You have deserved nobly of your country, and you have not deserved nobly.

Cor. Your enigma?

2 Cit. You have been a scourge to her enemies, you have been a rod to her friends; you have not, indeed, loved the common people.

Cor. You should account me the more virtuous, that I have not been common in my love. I will, Sir, flatter my sworn brother the people, to earn a dearer estimation of them; 'tis a condition they account gentle: and since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my hat than my heart, I will practise the insinuating nod, and be off to them most counterfeitedly; that is, Sir, I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some popular man, and give it bountifully to the desirers. Therefore, beseech you, I may be consul.

4 Cit. We hope to find you our friend; and therefore give you our voices heartily.

3 Cit. You have received many wounds for your country.

Cor. I will not seal your knowledge with showing them. I will make much of your voices, and so trouble you no further.

Both Cit. The gods give you joy, Sir, heartily! [Exeunt.]

Cor. Most sweet voices!—

Better it is to die, better to starve, Than crave the hire which first we do deserve. Why in this woolvish gown should I stand here,

To beg of Hob and Dick, that do appear, Their needless vouches: Custom calls me to't:— [do't:]

What custom wills, in all things should, we The dust on antique time would lie unwept, And unsunsplendoured error be too highly heap'd For truth to over-peer.—Rather than fool it let the high office and the honour go [so,] To one that would do thus.—I am half through; The one part suffer'd, the other will I do.

Enter three other CITIZENS.

Here come more voices,—

Your voices: for your voices I have fought; Watch'd for your voices; for your voices, bear Of wounds two dozen odd; battles thrice six, I have seen and have heard of; for your voices, Done many things, some less, some more: your voices:

Indeed, I would be consul.

5 Cit. He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man's voice.

6 Cit. Therefore let him be consul: The gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people!

All. Amen, Amen.—

God save thee, noble consul! [Exeunt CITIZENS.]

Cor. Worthy voices!

Re-enter MENENIUS, with BRUTUS, and SICINIUS.

Men. You have stood your limitation; and Endue you with the people's voice: Remains, That, in the official marks invested, you Anon do meet the senate.

a Overlook.

Cor. Is this done?

Sic. The custom of request you have dishonour'd:

The people do admit you; and are wonten'd To meet anon, upon your approbation.

Cor. Where? at the senate-house?

Sic. There, Coriolanus.

Cor. May I then change these garments?

Sic. You may, Sir.

Cor. That I'll straight do; and, knowing myself again,
Repair to the senate-house.

Sic. I'll keep you company.—Will you along?

Bru. We stay here for the people.

Sic. Fare you well.

[Exit CORIOL. and SENECA.]

He has it now; and by his looks, methinks,
Is warm at his heart.

Bru. With a proud heart he wore
His humble weeds: Will you dismiss the people?

Re-enter CITIZENS.

Sic. How now, my masters? have you chose this man?

1 Cit. He has our voices, Sir.

Bru. We pray the gods, he may deserve your loves.

2 Cit. Amen, Sir: To my poor unworthy notice,

He mock'd us, when he begg'd our voices.

3 Cit. Certainly,

He flouted us downright.

1 Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech, he did not mock us.

3 Cit. Not one amongst us save yourself, but says,

He us'd us scornfully: he should have show'd His marks of merit, wounds receiv'd for his country.

Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure.

Cit. No; no man saw 'em. [Secretly speak.]

3 Cit. He said, he had wounds, which he could show in private;

And with his hat, thus waving it in scorn,

I would be consul, says he: aged custom,

But by your voices, will not so permit me;

Your voices therefore: When we granted that,
Here was,—I thank you for your voices,—thank you,—

Your most sweet voices:—now you have left your I have no further with you:—Was not this mockery?

Sic. Why, either, you were ignorant to see't! Or, seeing it, of such childish friendliness To yield your voices?

Bru. Could you not have told him, As you were lesson'd,—When he had no power, But was a petty servant to the state, He was your enemy; ever spake against Your liberties, and the charters that you bear I the body of the weal: and now, arriving A place of potency, and sway o' the state, If he should still malignantly remain Fast foe to the plebeii,* your voices might Be curses to yourselves! You should have said, That, as his worthy deeds did claim no less Than what he stood for; so his gracious nature Would think upon you for your voices, and Translate his malice towards you into love, Standing your friendly lord.

Sic. Thus to have said,

As you were fore-advis'd, had touch'd his spirit,

And tried his inclination; from him pluck'd

* Plebeians, common people.

Either his gracious position, which you might, As cause had call'd you up, have held him, Or else it would have gall'd his surly nature, Which easily endures not article

Tying him to aught; so, putting him to sleep, You should have ta'en the advantage of his And pass'd him unelected. [Exit.]

Bru. Did you perceive, He did solicit you in free contempt, [Think] When he did need your loves; and do you That his contempt shall not be bruising tryon, When he hath power to crush? Why, had you bodies

No heart among you? Or had you tongues, to Against the rectorship of judgement? [Exit]

Sic. Have you, Ere now, denied the asker? and, now again, On him, that did not ask, but mock, have You said-for tongues?

3 Cit. He's not confirm'd, we may deny him yet.

2 Cit. And will deny him:

I'll have five hundred voices of that sound.

1 Cit. I twice five hundred, and their flesh to piece 'em.

Bru. Get you hence instantly; and tell these friends,—

They have chose a consul, that will from them Their liberties; make them off no more voice Than dogs, that are as often beat for barking, As therefore kept to do so.

Sic. Let them assemble; And, on a safer judgement, all revoke Your ignorant election: Enforce* his will, And his old hate unto you: besides, forget not With what contempt he wore the humble weed, How in his suit he scorn'd you: but your loves, Thinking upon his services, took from you The apprehension of his present portance,† Which glibly, ungravelly he did fashion After the inveterate hate he bears you.

Bru. Lay

A fault on us, your tribunes; that we labour'd (No impediment between) but that you must Cast your election on him.

Sic. Say, you chose him More after our commandment, than as guided By your own true affections: and that, your minds

Pre-occupied with what you rather must do Than what you should, made you against the grain

To voice him consul: Lay the fault on us.

Bru. Ay, spare us not. Say, we read lectures to you,

How youngly he began to serve his country, How long continued: and what stock he springs of,

The noble house o' the Marcians; from whence That Ancus Marcius, Numa's daughter's son, Who, after great Hostilius, here was king: Of the same house Publius and Quintus were, That our best water brought by conduits hither, And Censorinus, darling of the people, And nobly nam'd so, being Censor twice, Was his great ancestor.

Sic. One thus descended, That hath beside well in his person wrought To be set high in place, we did commend To your remembrances: but you have found, Scaling‡ his present bearing with his past, That he's your fixed enemy, and revoke Your sudden approbation.

Bru. Say, you ne'er had done't, (Harp on that still,) but by our putting on:‡

* Object. † Carriage. ‡ Weighing. § Incitation.

And presently, when you have drawn your Repair to the Capitol, [number,

Cit. We will so: almost all [Several speak.
Repent in their election. [Exeunt CITIZENS.

Bru. Let them go on;
This mutiny were better put in hazard,
Than stay, past doubt, for greater:
If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refusal, both observe and answer
The vantage* of his anger.

Sic. To the Capitol: [people;
Come; we'll be there before the stream o'the
And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own,
Which we have goaded† onward. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The same.—A Street.

Cornets. Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, COMINIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, SENATORS, and PATRICIANS.

Cor. Tullus Aufidius then had made new head?

Lart. He had, my lord; and that it was,
which caus'd

Our swifter composition.

Cor. So then the Volces stand but as at first;
Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make
Upon us again. [road

Com. They are worn, lord consul, so,
That we shall hardly in our ages see
Their banners wave again.

Cor. Saw you Aufidius?

Lart. On safe-guard‡ he came to me; and did curse

Against the Volces, for they had so vilely
Yielded the town: he is retir'd to Antium.

Cor. Spoke he of me?

Lart. He did, my lord.

Cor. How? what?

Lart. How often he had met you, sword to
sword:

That, of all things upon the earth, he hated
Your person most: that he would pawn his fortunes

To hopeless restitution, so he might Be call'd your vanquisher.

Cor. At Antium lives he?

Lart. At Antium.

Cor. I wish, I had a cause to seek him there,
To oppose his hatred fully.—Welcome home.
[To LARTIUS.

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Behold! these are the tribunes of the people,
The tongues o'the common mouth. I do despise them;

For they do prank§ them in authority,
Against all noble sufferance.

Sic. Pass no farther.

Cor. Ha! what is that?

Bru. It will be dangerous to Go on; no farther.

Cor. What makes this change?

Men. The matter?

Com. Hath he not pass'd the nobles, and the commons?

Bru. Cominius, no.

Cor. Have I had children's voices?

1 Sen. Tribunes, give way; he shall to the market-place.

Bru. The people are incens'd against him.

Sic. Stop,
Or all will fall in broil.

Cor. Are these your herd?—

Must these have voices, that can yield them
now,

And straight disclaim their tongues?—What are your offices?

You being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth?

Have you not set them on?

Men. Be calm, be calm.

Cor. It is a purpos'd thing, and grows by
To curb the will of the nobility:— [plot,

Suffer it, and live with such as cannot rule,
Nor ever will be rul'd.

Bru. Call't not a plot:

The people cry, you mock'd them; and, of late,
When corn was given them gratis, you re-
pin'd;

Scandal'd the suppliants for the people;
call'd them

Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to nobleness.

Cor. Why, this was known before.

Bru. Not to them all.

Cor. Have you inform'd them since?

Bru. How! I inform them!

Cor. You are like to do such business.

Bru. Not unlike,

Each way to better yours.

Cor. Why then should I be consul? By you clouds,

Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me
Your fellow-tribune.

Sic. You show too much of that,

For which the people stir: If you will pass
To where you are bound, you must inquire your way,

Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit;

Or never be so noble as a consul,

Nor yoke with him for tribune.

Men. Let's be calm.

Com. The people are abus'd:—Set on.—
This palt'ring*

Becomes not Rome; nor has Coriolanus
Deserv'd this so dishonour'd rub, laid falsely†
I'the plain way of his merit.

Cor. Tell me of corn!

This was my speech, and I will speak't again;—

Men. Not now, not now.

1 Sen. Not in this heat, Sir, now.

Cor. Now, as I live, I will.—My nobler
I crave their pardons:— [friends,

For the mutable, rank-scented many,‡ let Regard me as I do not flatter, and [them

Therein behold themselves: I say again,
In soothing them, we nourish 'gainst our senate

The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition,
Which we ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd

and scatter'd, [ber;

By mingling them with us, the honour'd num-
Who lack not virtue, no, nor power, but that

Which they have given to beggars.

Men. Well, no more.

1 Sen. No more words, we beseech you.

Cor. How! no more?

As for my country I have shed my blood,
Not fearing outward force, so shall my lungs Coin words till their decay, against those meazels§

Which we disdain should tetter|| us, yet sought
The very way to catch them.

Bru. You speak o'the people,
As if you were a god to punish, not
A man of their infirmity.

* Advantage.
‡ With a guard.

† Driven.
§ Flume, deck.

* Shuffling.
‡ Lepers.

† Treacherously.

‡ Populace.
|| Scab.

Sic. 'Twere well,
We let the people know't.

Men. What, what? his choler?

Cor. Choler!

Were I as patient as the midnight sleep,
By Jove, 'twould be my mind.

Sic. It is a mind,
That shall remain a poison where it is,
Not poison any further.

Cor. Shall remain!—

Hear you this Triton of the minnows? mark
His absolute shall? [you

Com. 'Twas from the canon.†

Cor. Shall!

O good, but meet unwise patricians, why,
You grave, but reckless senators, have you
thus

Given Hydra here to choose an officer,
That with his peremptory shall, being but
The horn and noise o' the monsters, wants not spirit

To say, he'll turn your current in a ditch,
And make your channel his? If he have
power,

Then veil your ignorance: if none, awake
Your dangerous lenity. If you are learned,
Be not as common fools; if you are not,
Let them have cushions by you. You are plebeians,

If they be senators: and they are no less,
When both your voices blended, the greatest taste [gistrate;

Most palates theirs. They choose their man—
And such a one as he, who puts his shall,
His popular shall, against a graver bench
Than ever frown'd in Greece! By Jove himself,

It makes the consuls base: and my soul akes,
To know, when two authorities are up,
Neither supreme, how soon confusion
May enter 'twixt the gap of both, and take
The one by the other.

Com. Well—on to the market-place.

Cor. Whoever gave that counsel, to give
forth

The corn o' the storehouse gratis, as 'twas us'd
Sometime in Greece,——

Men. Well, well, no more of that.

Cor. (Though there the people had more absolute power,)

I say, they nourish'd disobedience, fed
The ruin of the state.

Br. Why, shall the people give
One, that speaks thus, their voice?

Cor. I'll give my reasons,
More worthier than their voices. They know,
the corn

Was not our recompence; resting well assur'd
They ne'er did service for't: Being press'd to the war,

Even when the navel of the state was touch'd,
They would not thread the gates: this kind of service

Did not deserve corn gratis: being i' the war,
Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they show'd [tion

Most valour, spoke not for them: The accusa-Which they have often made against the senate,

All cause unborn, could never be the native||
Of our so frank donation. Well, what then?
How shall this bosom multiplied digest
The senate's courtesy? Let deeds express

What's like to be their words:—We did request it;

We are the greater gill,* and in true fear
They gave us our demands:—Thus we debate
The nature of our seats, and make the rabble
Call our cares, fears: which will in time break ope

The locks o' the senate, and being in the more
To peck the eagles.—

Men. Come, enough.

Br. Enough, with over-measure.

Cor. No, take more: [men,

What may be sworn by, both divine and ho-seal what I end withal!—This double worship,— [other

Where one part does disdain with cause, the Insult without all reason; where gentry, like,
wisdom

Cannot conclude, but by the yea and no
Of general ignorance,—it must enail
Real necessities, and give way the while
To unstable slightness: purpose no har'd, it follows,

Nothing is done to purpose: Therefore, beseech you,—

You that will be less fearful than distrust;
That love the fundamental part of state,
More than you doubt the change o' it; that prefer

A noble life before a long, and wish
To jump a body with a dangerous physic
That's sure of death without it,—at once pluck out

The multitudinous tongue, let them not lick,
The sweet which is their poison: your dishonour [state

Mangles true judgement, and berews the
Of that integrity which should become it;
Not having the power to do the good it would,
For the ill which doth control it.

Br. He has said enough.

Sic. He has spoken like a traitor, and shall answer

As traitors do.

Cor. Thou wretch! despite o'erwhelm thee!—
What should the people do with these bald tribunes?

On whom depending, their obedience fails
To the greater bench: In a rebellion,
When what's not meet, but what must be,
was law,

Then were they chosen; in a better hour,
Let what is meet, be said it must be meet,
And throw their power i' the dust.

Br. Manifest treason.

Sic. This a consul? no.

Br. The Ædiles, ho!—Let him be apprehended.

Sic. Go, call the people; [Exit BRUTUS.] in whose name, myself

Attach thee, as a traitorous innovator,
A foe to the public weal: Obey, I charge thee,
And follow to thine answer.

Cor. Hence, old goat!

Sen. & Pat. We'll surety him.

Com. Aged Sir, hands off.

Cor. Hence, rotten thing, or I shall shake thy bones

Out of thy garments.

Sic. Help, ye citizens.

Re-enter BRUTUS, with the ÆDILES, and a Rabble of CITIZENS.

Men. On both sides more respect.

* Small fish.

† According to law.

‡ Careless.

§ Pass through.

|| Motive, no doubt was Shakespeare's word.

* Number.

† Fear

‡ Risk.

Sic. Here's he, that would Take from you all your power.

Bru. Seize him, Ædiles.

Cit. Down with him, down with him!

[Several speak.

2 Sen. Weapons, weapons, weapons!

[They all bustle about CORIOLANUS.
Tribunes, patricians, citizens!—what ho!
Sicinius, Brutus, Coriolanus; citizens!

Cit. Peace, peace, peace; stay, hold, peace!

Men. What is about to be?—I am out of
breath;

Confusion's near: I cannot speak:—You, tribunes, to the people,—Coriolanus, patience:—
Speak, good Sicinius.

Sic. Hear me, people;—Peace.

Cit. Let's hear our tribune:—Peace. Speak, speak, speak.

Sic. You are at point to lose your liberties:
Marcius would have all from you; Marcius,
Whom late you have nam'd for consul.

Men. Fie, fie, fie!

This is the way to kindle, not to quench.

1 Sen. To unbuild the city, and to lay all flat.

Sic. What is the city, but the people?

Cit. True,

The people are the city.

Bru. By the consent of all, we were estab-lish'd
The people's magistrates.

Cit. You so remain.

Men. And so are like to do.

Cor. That is the way to lay the city flat;
To bring the roof to the foundation;
And bury all, which yet distinctly ranges,
In heaps and piles of ruins.

Sic. This deserves death.

Bru. Or let us stand to our authority,
Or let us lose it:—We do here pronounce,
Upon the part o'the people, in whose power
We were elected theirs, Marcius is worthy
Of present death.

Sic. Therefore, lay hold of him; [thence Bear him to the rock Tarpeian,* and from
Into destruction cast him.

Bru. Ædiles, seize him.

Cit. Yield, Marcius, yield.

Men. Hear me one word.

'Beseech you, tribunes, hear me but a word.

Ædi. Peace, peace.

Men. Be that you seem, truly your country's friend,
And temperately proceed to what you would
Thus violently redress.

Bru. Sir, those cold ways, [ous
That seem like prudent helps, are very poison-
Where the disease is violent:—Lay hands upon
And bear him to the rock. [him,

Cor. No; I'll die here. [Drawing his Sword.
There's some among you have beheld me fighting; [me.

Come, try upon yourselves what you have seen

Men. Down with that sword;—Tribunes, withdraw a while.

Bru. Lay hands upon him.

Men. Help, Marcius! help.

You that be noble; help him, young, and old!

Cit. Down with him, down with him!

[In this Mutiny, the TRIBUNES, the ÆDILES, and the People are all beat in.

Men. Go, get you to your house; be gone,
All will be naught else. [away,

2 Sen. Get you gone.

Cor. Stand fast;

We have as many friends as enemies.

Men. Shall it be put to that?

1 Sen. The gods forbid!

I pry'thee, noble friend, home to thy house;
Leave us to cure this cause.

Men. For 'tis a sore upon us, [you.
You cannot tent yourself: Be gone, 'beseech
Com. Come, Sir, along with us.

Cor. I would they were barbarians, (as they are,

Though in Rome litter'd,) not Romans, (as they are not,

Though calv'd i'the porch o'the Capitol,)—

Men. Be gone;
Put not your worthy rage into your tongue;
One time will owe another.

Cor. On fair ground,
I could beat forty of them.

Men. I could myself
Take up a brace of the best of them; yea, the two tribunes.

Com. But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetic;
And manhood is call'd foolery, when it stands
Against a falling fabric.—Will you hence,
Before the tag* return? whose rage doth rend
Like interrupted waters, and o'erbear
What they are used to bear.

Men. Pray you, be gone:
I'll try whether my old wit be in request
With those that have but little; this must be
With cloth of any colour. [patch'd

Com. Nay, come away.

[Exeunt Cor. Com. and others.

1 Pat. This man has marr'd his fortune.

Men. His nature is too noble for the world:
He would not flatter Neptune for his trident,
Or Jove for his power to thunder. His heart's his mouth: [vent;

What his breast forges, that his tongue must
And, being angry, does forget that ever
He heard the name of death. [A noise within.
Here's goodly work!

2 Pat. I would they were a-bed!

Men. I would they were in Tyber!—What,
the vengeance,
Could he not speak them fair?

Re-enter BRUTUS and SICINIUS, with the Rabble.

Sic. Where's this viper,
That would depopulate the city, and
Be every man himself?

Men. You worthy tribunes,—

Sic. He shall be thrown down the Tarpeian rock

With rigorous hands; he hath resisted law,
And therefore law shall scorn him further trial
Than the severity of the public power,
Which he so sets at nought.

1 Cit. He shall well know,
The noble tribunes are the people's mouths,
And we their hands.

Cit. He shall sure on't.†

[Several speak together.

Men. Sir,—

Sic. Peace.

Men. Do not cry, havoc,‡ where you should but hunt

With modest warrant.

Sic. Sir, how comes it, that you
Have help to make this rescue?

Men. Hear me speak:—
As I do know the consul's worthiness,
So can I name his faults:—

Sic. Consul!—what consul?

Men. The consul Coriolanus.

Bru. He a consul!

Cit. No, no, no, no, no.

* From whence criminal: were thrown, and dashed to pieces.

† The lowest of the populace, tag, rag, and outcast.
‡ Be sure on't. † The signal for slaughter.

Men. If, by the tribunes' leave, and yours, good people, I may be heard, I'd crave a word or two; The which shall turn you to no further harm, Than so much loss of time.

Sic. Speak briefly then; For we are peremptory, to despatch This viperous traitor: to eject him hence, Were but one danger; and, to keep him here, Our certain death; therefore it is decreed, He dies to-night.

Men. Now the good gods forbid, That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude Towards her deserved* children is enroll'd In Jove's own book, like an unnatural dam Should now eat up her own!

Sic. He's a disease, that must be cut away.

Men. O, he's a limb, that has but a disease; Mortal, to cut it off; to cure it, easy. What has he done to Rome, that's worthy death?

Killing our enemies? The blood he hath lost, (Which, I dare vouch, is more than that he hath,

[try: By many an ounce,] he dropp'd it for his country. And, what is left, to lose it by his country, Were to us all, that do't, and suffer it, A brand to the end o'the world.

Sic. This is clean kam.†

Brn. Merely; awry: when he did love his It honour'd him. [country, Men. The service of the foot Being once gangren'd, is not then respected For what before it was?

Brn. We'll hear no more:— Pursue him to his house, and pluck him thence; Lest his infection, being of catching nature, Spread further.

Men. One word more, one word. This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find The harm of unscann'd‡ swiftness, will, too late, [process; Tie leaden pounds to his heels. Proceed by Lost parties (as he is belov'd) break out, And sack great Rome with Romans.

Brn. If it were so,—

Sic. What do ye talk? Have we not had a taste of his obedience? Our Ediles smote! ourselves resisted!— Come:—

Men. Consider this;—He has been bred i'the wars

Since he could draw a sword, and is ill school'd In boulded|| language; meal and bran together He throws without distinction. Give me leave, I'll go to him, and undertake to bring him Where he shall answer, by a lawful form, (In peace) to his utmost peril.

I Sen. Noble tribunes, It is the humane way: the other course Will prove too bloody; and the end of it Unknown to the beginning.

Sic. Noble Menenius, Be you then as the people's officer: Masters, lay down your weapons.

Brn. Go not home.

Sic. Meet on the market-place:—We'll attend you there. Where, if you bring not Marcia, we'll proceed In our first way.

Men. I'll bring him to you:— Let me desire your company. [To the SENATORS.] He must come, Or what is worst will follow.

I Sen. Pray you, let's to him. [Exeunt

SCENE II.—A Room in CORIOLANUS' House.

Enter CORIOLANUS, and PATRICIUS.

Cor. Let them pull all about mine ears; present me Death on the wheel, or at wild horses' heads; Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian rock, That the precipitation might down stretch Below the beam of sight, yet will I still Be thus to them.

Enter VOLUMNIA.

I Pat. You do the nobler.

Cor. I muse,* my mother Does not approve me further, who was wont To call them woollen vassals, things created To buy and sell with groats, to show bare heads

Why did you wish me sulder? Would you have me

False to my nature? Rather say, I play The man I am.

Vol. O, Sir, Sir, Sir, I would have had you put your power well on, Before you had worn it out.

Cor. Let go.

Vol. You might have been enough the man you are,

With striving less to be so: Lesser had been The thwartings of your dispositions, if You had not show'd them how you were ~~de-~~ Ere they lack'd power to cross you. [you'd

Cor. Let them hang.

Vol. Ay, and burn too.

Enter MENENIUS, and SENATORS.

Men. Come, come, you have been too rough, something too rough; You must return, and mend it.

I Sen. There's no remedy, Unless, by not so doing, our good city Cleave in the midst, and perish.

Vol. Pray be counsel'd: I have a heart as little apt as yours, But yet a brain, that leads my use of anger, To better vantage.

Men. Well said, noble woman: [that Before he should thus stoop to the herd, but The violent fit o'the time craves it as physic For the whole state, I would put mine armour Which I can scarcely bear. [on

Cor. What must I do?

Men. Return to the tribunes.

Cor. Well,

What then? what then?

Men. Repeat what you have spoke.

Cor. For them?—I cannot do it to the gods, Must I then do't to them?

Vol. You are too absolute; Though therein you can never be too noble, But when extremities speak. I have heard you say,

Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends, I'the war do grow together. Grant that, and tell me,

In peace, what each of them by th'other lose, That they combine not there.

Cor. Tush, tush!

* Deserving. † Quite awry. ‡ Absolutely. § Inconsiderate haste. || Fluctuating when.

* Wonder

† Rank.

Men. A good demand.

Vol. If it be honour, in your wars, to seem
The same you are not, (which, for your best ends,
You adopt your policy,) how is it less, or worse,
That it shall hold companionship in peace
With honour, as in war; since that to both
It stands in like request?

Cor. Why force* you this?

Vol. Because that now it lies you on to speak
To the people; not by our own instruction,
Nor by the matter which your heart prompts
you to,

But with such words that are but rotes in Your tongue, though but bastards, and syllables

Of no allowance, to your bosom's truth.
Now, this no more dishonours you at all,
Than to take in† a town with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune, and
The hazard of much blood.—

I would dissemble with my nature, where,
My fortunes, and my friends, at stake, requir'd,
I should do so in honour: I am in this,

Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles;
And you will rather show our general lowta†
How you can frown, than spend a fawn upon them, [guard

For the inheritance of their loves, and safe-
Of what that want might ruin.

Men. Noble lady!—

Come, go with us; speak fair: you may salve
so,

Not what is dangerous present, but the loss
Of what is past.

Vol. I prythee now, my son,
Go to them, with this bonnet in thy hand;
And thus far having stretch'd it, (here be with them,)

Thy knee bussing the stones, (for in such business [rant

More learned than the ears,) waving thy head,
Which often, thus, correcting thy stout heart,
That humble, as the ripest mulberry, [them,
Now will not hold the handling: Or, say to Thou art their soldier, and being bred in broils, Hast not the soft way, which, thou dost confess,

Were fit for thee to use, as they to claim,
In asking their good loves; but thou wilt frame

Thyself, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so far
As thou hast power, and person.

Men. This but done,
Even as she speaks, why, all their hearts were
yours:

For they have pardons, being ask'd, as free
As words to little purpose.

Vol. Prythee now,
Go, and be rul'd: although, I know, thou hadst rather

Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf, [nius.
Than flatter him in a bower. Here is Comi-

Enter COMINIUS.

Com. I have been i'the market-place: and,
Sir, tis fit

You make strong party, or defend yourself
By calmness, or by absence; all's in anger.

Men. Only fair speech.

Com. I think, 'twill serve, if he
Can thereto frame his spirit.

Vol. He must, and will:—
Prythee, now, say, you will, and go about it.

Cor. Must I go show them my unbarb'd sconce? Must I

With my base tongue, give to my noble heart
A lie, that it must bear? Well, I will do't:
Yet were there but this single plot to lose,
This mould of Marcius, they to dust should grind it, [place:—

And throw it against the wind.—To the market-
You have put me now to such a part, which I shall discharge to the life. [never

Com. Come, come, we'll prompt you.

Vol. I prythee now, sweet son; as thou hast said,

My praises made thee first a soldier, so,
To have my praise for this, perform a part
Thou hast not done before.

Cor. Well, I must do't:

Away, my disposition, and possess me
Some harlot's spirit! My throat of war be turn'd,

Which quired with my drum, into a pipe
Small as an eunuch, or the virgin voice
That babies lulls asleep! The smiles of knaves Tent† in my cheeks; and school-boys' tears take up

The glasses of my sight! A beggar's tongue
Make motion through my lips; and my arm'd knees,

Who bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his
That hath receiv'd an alms!—I will not do't:
Lest I surcease to honour mine own truth,
And, by my body's action, teach my mind
A most inherent baseness.

Vol. At thy choice then:

To beg of thee, it is my more dishonour,
Than thou of them. Come all to ruin; let Thy mother rather feel thy pride, than fear
Thy dangerous stoutness; for I mock at death
With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list.
Thy valiantness was mine, thou suck'dst it from
But owe† thy pride thyself. [me;

Cor. Pray, be content;

Mother, I am going to the market-place;
Chide me no more. I'll mountebank their loves, [belov'd
Cog their hearts from them, and come home
Of all the trades in Rome. Look, I am going:
Commend me to my wife. I'll return consul;
Or never trust to what my tongue can do
I'the way of flattery, further.

Vol. Do your will. [Exit.

Com. Away, the tribunes do attend you:
arm yourself

To answer mildly; for they are prepar'd
With accusations, as I hear, more strong
Than are upon you yet.

Cor. The word is, mildly:—Pray you, let us
Let them accuse me by invention, I [go;
Will answer in mine honour.

Men. Ay, but mildly.

Cor. Well, mildly be it then; mildly.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same.—The Forum.

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Bru. In this point charge him home, that he affects

Tyrannical power: If he invade us there,
Enforce him with his envy‡ to the people;
And that the spoil, got on the Antiates,
Was ne'er distributed.—

Enter an ÆDILE.

What, will he come?

* Unshaven head.

† Dwell.

‡ Own.

Object his hatred.

* Urge.

† Subdue.

‡ Common clowns.

Ed. He's coming.

Bru. How accompanied?

Ed. With old Menenius, and those senators
That always favour'd him.

Sic. Have you a catalogue
Of all the voices that we have procur'd
Set down by the poll?

Ed. I have; 'tis ready, here.

Sic. Have you collected them by tribes?

Ed. I have.

Sic. Assemble presently the people hither:
And when they hear me say, It shall be so I'the right and strength o'the commons, be it either

For death, for fine, or banishment, then let
If I say, fine, cry fine; if death, cry death;
Insisting on the old prerogative
And power i'the truth o'the cause.

Ed. I shall inform them.

Bru. And when such time they have begun to cry,

Let them not cease, but with a din confus'd
Enforce the present execution
Of what we chance to sentence.

Ed. Very well.

Sic. Make them be strong, and ready for this hint,

When we shall hap to give't them.

Bru. Go about it.—[Exit Ed.]

Put him to choler straight: He hath been so
Ever to conquer, and to have his worth Of contradiction. Being once chaf'd, he cannot

Be rein'd again to temperance; then he speaks
What's in his heart; and that is there, which
With us to break his neck. [looks

Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, COMINIUS, SENATORS, and PATRICIANS.

Sic. Well, here he comes.

Men. Calmly, I do beseech you.

Cor. Ay, as an ostler, that for the poorest piece
Will bear the knave* by the volume.—The honour'd gods

Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice Supplied with worthy men! plant love among us! [peace,

Throng our large temples with the shows of
And not our streets with war!

I Sen. Amen, amen!

Men. A noble wish.

Re-enter EDILE, with CITIZENS.

Sic. Draw near, ye people.

Ed. List to your tribunes; audience: Peace,
I say.

Cor. First, hear me speak.

Both Tri. Well, say.—Peace, ho.

Cor. Shall I be charg'd no farther than this present?

Must all determine here?

Sic. I do demand,

If you submit you to the people's voices,
Allow their officers, and are content
To suffer lawful censure for such faults
As shall be prov'd upon you?

Cor. I am content.

Men. Lo, citizens, he says, he is content:
The warlike service he has done, consider;
Think on the wounds his body bears, which Like graves i'the holy churchyard. [show

Cor. Scratches with briars,
Scars to move laughter only.

Men. Consider further,

That when he speaks not like a citizen,
You find him like a soldier: Do not take
His rougher accents for malicious words,
But, as I say, such as become a soldier,
Rather than envy* you.

Com. Well, well, no more.

Cor. What is the matter,

That being pass'd for consul with full voice,
I am so dishonour'd, that the very hour
You take it off again?

Sic. Answer to us.

Cor. Say then: 'tis true, I ought so.

Sic. We charge you, that you have contriv'd to take

From Rome all season'd office, and to wind
Yourself into a power tyrannical;

For which, you are a traitor to the people.

Cor. How! Traitor?

Men. Nay; temperately: Your promise.

Cor. The fires i'the lowest hell sold in the people's their traitor.—Thou injurious tribune!

Thine eyes sat twenty thousand deaths,

quids clutch'd; as many millions, in thy tongue both numbers, I would say, set, unto thee, with voice as free

as I, pray the gods.

Dark you this, people?

To the rock with him; to the rock with

him!

Sic. Peace.

We need not put new matter to his charge:

What you have seen him do, and heard him

speak,

Beating your officers, cursing yourselves,

Opposing laws with strokes, and here defying

Those whose great power must try him; even

So criminal, and in such capital kind, [this,

Deserves the extremest death.

Bru. But since he hath

Serv'd well for Rome,—

Cor. What do you prate of service?

Bru. I talk of that, that know it.

Cor. You?

Men. Is this

The promise that you made your mother?

Com. Know,

I pray you,—

Cor. I'll know no further:

Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian death,

Vagabond exile, slaying, pent to linger

But with a grain a day, I would not buy

Their mercy at the price of one fair word;

Nor check my courage for what they can give,

To have't with saying, Good morrow.

Sic. For that he has

(As much as in him lies) from time to time

Envied against the people, seeking means

To pluck away their power; as now at last

Given hostile strokes, and that not in the presence

Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers

That do distribute it; In the name o'the people,

And in the power of us the tribunes, we,

Even from this instant, banish him our city;

In peril of precipitation

From off the rock Tarpeian, never more

To enter our Rome gates: I'the people's name

I say, it shall be so.

Cit. It shall be so.

It shall be so; let him away: he's banish'd,

And so it shall be.

* Will bear being called a knave.

* Injures. † Of long-standing. ‡ Grudge.
§ That only.

Com. Hear me, my masters, and my common friends;—

Sic. He's sentenc'd: no more hearing.

Com. Let me speak:

I have been consul, and can show from^{*} Rome, Her enemies' marks upon me. I do love My country's good, with a respect more tender, More holy, and profound, than mine own life, My dear wife's estimate,† her womb's increase, And treasure of my loins; then if I would, Speak that—

Sic. We know your drift: Speak what?

Bru. There's no more to be said, but he is banish'd,

As enemy to the people, and his country: It shall be so.

Cit. It shall be so, it shall be so.

Cor. You common cry† of curs! whose breath I hate

As reek‡ o'the rotten fens, whose love I prize As the dead carcasses of unburied men That do corrupt my air, I banish you; And here remain with your uncertainty! Let every feeble rumour shake your hearts! Your enemies, with nodding of their plumes, Fan you into despair! Have the power still To banish your defenders; till, at length, Your ignorance, (which finds not, till it feels,) Making not reservation of yourselves,

Still your own foes,) deliver you, as most Abated|| captives, to some nation

That won you without blows! Despising, For you, the city, thus I turn my back:

There is a world elsewhere.

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS, COMINIUS, MENENIUS, SENATORS, and PATRICIANS.]

Æd. The people's enemy is gone, is gone!

Cit. Our enemy's banish'd! he is gone! Hoo! hoo!

[The People shout, and throw up their Caps.]

Sic. Go, see him out at gates, and follow him,

As he hath follow'd you, with all despite; Give him deserv'd vexation. Let a guard Attend us through the city.

Cit. Come, come, let us see him out at gates; come:—

The gods preserve our noble tribunes!—Come. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same.—Before a Gate of the City.

Enter CORIOLANUS, VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, MENENIUS, COMINIUS, and several young PATRICIANS.

Cor. Come, leave your tears; a brief farewell:—the beast¶ [ther,

And occupations perish!

Cor. Fare ye well:—

Come, my sweet wife, my dearest mother, and My friends of noble touch,|| when I am forth, Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you, come.

While I remain above the ground, you shall Hear from me still; and never of me aught But what is like me formerly.

Men. That's worthily

As any ear can hear.—Come, let's not weep.— If I could shake off but one seven years From these old arms and legs, by the good gods, I'd with thee every foot.

Cor. Give me thy hand:—

Come.

SCENE II.—The same.—A Street near the Gate.

Enter SICINIUS, BRUTUS, and an ÆDILE.

Sic. Bid them all home; he's gone, and we'll no farther.—

The nobility are vex'd, who, we see, have sided In his behalf.

Bru. Now we have shown our power, Let us seem humbler after it is done, Than when it was a doing.

Sic. Bid them home:

Say, their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength.

Bru. They have ta'en note of us:

Keep on your way.

o' the gods

Requite your love!

Men. Peace, peace; be not so loud.

Vol. If that I could for weeping, you should hear,—

Nay, and you shall hear some.—Will you be gone? [To BASTUS.

Sir, You shall stay too: [To SICIN] I would,
I had the power

To say so to my husband.

Sic. Are you mankind?

Vol. Ay, fool, is that a shame!—Note but this fool.—

Was not a man my father? Hadst thou foxship?
To banish him that struck more blows for Rome,
Than thou hast spoken words?

Sic. O blessed heavens!

Vol. More noble blows, than ever thou wise
words,

And for Rome's good.—I'll tell thee what;—
Yet go.—

Nay but thou shalt stay too:—I would my
son

Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him,
His good sword in his hand.

Sic. What then?

Sir. What then?

He'd make an end of thy posterity.

Vol. Bastards, and all.—

Good man, the wounds that he does bear for Rome!

Men. Come, come, peace.

Sic. I would he had continu'd to his coun-
As he began, and not unknit himself [try,
The noble knot he made.

Bru. I would he had.

Vol. I would he had! 'Twas you incens'd
the rabble:

Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth,
As I can of those mysteries which heaven
Will not have earth to know.

Bru. Pray, let us go.

Vol. Now, pray, Sir, get you gone:

You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear this

As far as doth the Capitol exceed
The meanest house in Rome: so far, my son,
(This lady's husband here, this, do you see,) Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you
all.

Bru. Well, well, we'll leave you.

Sic. Why stay we to be baited

With one that wants her wits?

Vol. Take my prayers with you.—

I would the gods had nothing else to do,

[Exeunt TRIBUNES.

But to confirm my curses! Could I meet them
But once a day, it would unclog my heart
Of what lies heavy to't.

Men. You have told them home,

And, by my troth, you have cause. You'll sup
with me?

Vol. Anger's my meat; I sup upon myself,
And so shall starve with feeding.—Come let's go:

Leave this faint pining, and lament as I do,
In anger, Juno-like. Come, come, come.

Men. Fie, fie, fie!

[Exeunt.

* Men coming.

SCENE III.—A highway between Rome and Antium.

Enter a ROMAN and a VOLCE, meeting.

Rom. I know you well, Sir, and you know me: your name I think, is Adrian.

Vol. It is, so, Sir, truly, I have forgot you.

Rom. I am a Roman; and my services are,
as you are, against them: Know you me yet?

Vol. Nicanor? No.

Rom. The same, Sir.

Vol. You had more beard, when I last saw you; but your favour* is well appeared by your tongue. What's the news in Rome? I have a note from the Volcian state, to find you at there: You have well saved me a day's journey

Rom. There hath been in Rome strange resurrection, the people against the senators, patricians, and nobles.

Vol. Hath been! Is it ended then? Over-think not so; they are in a most warlike prepare and hope to come upon them to the heat of their division.

Rom. The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again. For the nobles receive so to heart the banishment of that worthy Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe aptness, to take all power from the people, and to pluck from them their tribunes forever. This lies glowing, I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out.

Vol. Coriolanus banished?

Rom. Banished, Sir.

Vol. You will be welcome with this intelligence, Nicanor.

Rom. The day serves well for them now. I have heard it said, the fittest time to corrupt a man's wife, is when she's fallen out with her husband. Your noble Tullius Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opponent, Coriolanus, being now in no request of his country.

Vol. He cannot choose. I am most fortunate, thus accidentally to encounter you: You have eased my business, and I will merrily accompany you home.

Rom. I shall, between this and supper, tell you most strange things from Rome; all tending to the good of their adversaries. Have you an army ready, say you?

Vol. A most royal one: the centurions, and their charges, distinctly billeted, already in the entertainment,† and to be on foot at an hour's warning.

Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man, I think, that shall set them in present action. So, Sir, heartily well met, and most glad of your company.

Vol. You take my part from me, Sir; I have the most cause to be glad of yours.

Rom. Well, let us go together.

[Exeunt.

Cor. Prepare thy brow to frown: Know'st

Auf. I know thee not:—Thy name?

Cor. My name is Caius Marcius, who hath done

To thee particularly, and to all the Volces,
Great hurt and mischief; thereto witness may
My surname, Coriolanus: The painful service,
The extreme dangers, and the drops of blood
Shed for my thankless country, are requited
But with that surname; a good memory,†
And witness of the malice and displeasure
Which thou should'st bear me: only that name remains;

The cruelty and envy of the people,
Permitted by our dastard nobles, who
Have all forsook me, hath devour'd the rest;
And suffer'd me by the voice of slaves to be Whoop'd out of Rome. Now, this extremity Hath brought me to thy hearth; Not out of hope,

Mistake me not, to save my life; for if
I had fear'd death, of all the men i'the world
I would have voided thee: but in mere spite,
To be full quit of those my banishers,
Stand I before thee here. Then if thou hast

A heart of wreak* in thee, that will revenge Thine own particular wrongs, and stop these mainnet

Of shame seen through thy country, speed
these straight,

And make my misery serve thy turn; so use it,
That my revengeful services may prove
As benefits to thee; for I will fight Against my canker'd country with the spleen
Of all the underf fends. But if so be Thou dar'st not this, and that to prove more fortunes

Thou art tir'd, then, in a word, I also am
Longer to live most weary, and present
My throat to thee, and to thy ancient malice:
Which not to cut, would shew thee but a fool;
Since I have ever follow'd thee with hate,
Drawn thus of blood out of thy country's breast;
And cannot live but to thy shame, unless
It be to do thee service.

Ans. O, Marcius, Marcius,
Each word thou hast spoke hath wooed from
my heart

A rest of ancient envy. If Jupiter [say,
Should from yon cloud speak divine things, and
'Tis true: I'd not believe them more than thee,
All nobles Marcius.—O, let me twine
Mine arms about that body, where against
My grained ash an hundred times hath broke,
And scar'd the moon with splinters! Here I clip]

The anvil of my sword; and do contest,
As hotly and as nobly with thy love,
As ever in ambitious strength I did
Contend against thy valour. Know thou first,
I lov'd the maid I married; never man
Sigh'd truer breath; but that I see thee here,
Thou noble thing! more dances my rapt heart,
Than when I first my wedded mistress saw Bestride my threshold. Why, thou Mars! I tell thee,

We have a power on foot; and I had purpose
Once more to hew thy target from thy brawn,||
Or lose mine arm for't: Thou hast beat me
out!

Twelve several times, and I have nightly since Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thyself and me;
We have been down together in my sleep,
Unbuckling helms, fisting each other's throat,
And wak'd half dead with nothing. Worthy
Marcius,

Had we no quarrel else to Rome, but that Thou art thence banish'd, we would muster all
From twelve to seventy;  and, pouring war
Into the bowels of ungrateful Rome,
Like a bold flood o'er-beat. O, come, go in,
And take our friendly senators by the hands;
Who now are here, taking their leaves of me,
Who am prepar'd against your territories,
Though not for Rome itself.

Cor. You bless me, gods!

Ans. Therefore, most absolute Sir, if thou wilt have

The leading of thine own revenges, take
The one half of my commission; and set down,—
As best thou art experienc'd, since thou know'st
Thy country's strength and weakness,—thine own ways:

Whether to knock against the gates of Rome,
Or rudely visit them in parts remote,
To fright them, ere destroy. But come in:
Let me commend thee first to those, that shall Say, yea, to thy desires. A thousand welcomes!
And more a friend than e'er an enemy;

Yet, Marcius, that was much. Your hand!
Most welcome!

[Enter CORIOLANUS and ANTONIUS.]

1 Serv. [Advancing.] Here's a strange situation!

2 Serv. By my hand, I had thought to have struck him with a cudgel; and yet my mind gave me, his clothes made a false report of
him.

1 Serv. What an arm he had! He told me about with his finger and his thumb, now would not my a top.

2 Serv. Nay, I know by his face that there was something in him: He had, Sir, a kind of face, methought,—I cannot tell how to think

1 Serv. He had so: looking as it were,—
'Would I were hanged, but I thought there was more in him than I could think.

2 Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn: He is surely the rarest man i'the world.

1 Serv. I think, he is: but a greater soldier than he, you wot' one.

2 Serv. Who? my master?

1 Serv. Nay, it's no matter for that.

2 Serv. Worth six of him.

1 Serv. Nay, not so neither; but I take him to be the greater soldier.

2 Serv. Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that: for the defence of a town, or general is excellent.

1 Serv. Ay, and for an assault too.

Re-enter third SERVANT.

3 Serv. O, slaves, I can tell you news; news, you rascals.

1. 2. Serv. What, what, what? let's partake.

3 Serv. I would not be a Roman, of all nations; I had as lieve be a condemned man.

1. 2. Serv. Wherefore? wherefore?

3 Serv. Why, here's he that was wont to thwack our general,—Caius Marcius.

1 Serv. Why do you say thwack our general?

3 Serv. I do not say, thwack our general;
but he was always good enough for him.

2 Serv. Come, we are fellows, and friends:
he was ever too hard for him; I have heard him say so himself.

1 Serv. He was too hard for him directly, to say the truth on't: before Coriolani, he smothered him and notched him like a carbuncle.†

2 Serv. An he had been cannibally given, he might have broiled and eaten him too.

1 Serv. But, more of thy news?

3 Serv. Why, he is so made on here within, as if he were son and heir to Mars: set at upper end o'the table: no question asked him by any of the senators, but they stand bald before him: Our general himself makes a mistress of him; sanctifies himself with's hand, and turns up the white o'the eye to his discourse. But the bottom of the news is, our general is cut i'the middle, and but one half of what he was yesterday; for the other has half, by the co-treaty and grant of the whole table. He'll go, he says, and sowle† the porter of Rome gates by the ears: He will mow down all before him, and leave his passage polled.‡

2 Serv. And he's as like to do't, as any man
I can imagine.

3 Serv. Do't? he will do't: For, look you, Sir, he has as many friends as enemies: which friends, Sir, (as it were,) durst not (look you, Sir,) show themselves (as we term it,) his friends, whilst he's in directitude.

3 Serv. But when they shall see, Sir, his crest up again, and the man in blood,* they will out of their burrows, like conies after rain, and revel all with him.

1 Serv. But when goes this forward?

3 Serv. To-morrow; to-day; presently. You shall have the drum struck up this afternoon: 'tis, as it were, a parcel† of their feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips.

2 Serv. Why, then we shall have a stirring world again. This peace is nothing, but to rust iron, increase tailors, and breed ballad-makers.

1 Serv. Let me have war, say I; it exceeds peace, as far as day does night; it's spritely, waking, audible, and full of vent;‡ Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy: muffled,§ deaf, sleepy, insensible; a getter of more bastard children, than war's a destroyer of men.

2 Serv. 'Tis so: and as wars, in some sort, may be said to be a ravisher; so it cannot be denied, but peace is a great maker of cuckolds.

1 Serv. Ay, and it makes men hate one another.

3 Serv. Reason; because they then less need one another. The wars, for my money. I hope to see Romans as cheap as Volcians; They are rising, they are rising.

All. In, in, in, in. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Rome.—A public Place.

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Sic. We hear not of him, neither need we fear him;

His remedies are tame i'the present peace
And quietness o'the people, which before Were in wild hurry. Here do we make his friends [had,

Blush, that the world goes well; who rather
Though they themselves did suffer by't, behold Dissentious numbers pestering streets, than see [going

Our tradesmen singing in their shops, and
About their functions friendly.

Enter MENENIUS.

Bru. We stood to't in good time. Is this Menenius?

Sic. 'Tis he. 'tis he: O, he is grown most Of late.—Hail, Sir! [kind

Men. Hail to you both!

Sic. Your Coriolanus, Sir, is not much miss'd,
But with his friends; the common-wealth doth
stand;

And so would do, were he more angry at it.

Men. All's well; and might have been much better, if

He could have temporiz'd.

Sic. Where is he, hear you?

Men. Nay, I hear nothing; his mother and his wife

Hear nothing from him.

Enter Three or Four CITIZENS.

Cit. The gods preserve you both!

Sic. Good-e'en, our neighbours.

Bru. Good-e'en to you all, good-e'en to you
all.

1 Cit. Ourselves, our wives, and children,
on our knees,

Are bound to pray for you both.

Sic. Live, and thrive!

Bru. Farewell, kind neighbours: we wish Coriolanus

Had lov'd you as we did.

Cit. Now the gods keep you!

Both Tri. Farewell, farewell,

[Exeunt CITIZENS.]

Sic. This is a happier and more comely
time,

Than when these fellows ran about the street
Crying, Confusion.

Bru. Caius Marcius was

A worthy officer i'the war; but insolent,
O'ercome with pride, ambitious past all thinking
Self-loving,— [in]

Sic. And affecting one sole throne,
Without assistance.*

Men. I think not so.

Sic. We should by this, to all our lamentation,
If he had gone forth consul, found it so.

Bru. The gods have well prevented it, and Sits safe and still without him. [Rom]

Enter ÆDILE.

Æd. Worthy tribunes,

There is a slave, whom we have put in prison
Reports,—the Volces with two several powers
Are entered in the Roman territories;
And with the deepest malice of the war
Destroy what lies before them.

Men. 'Tis Aufidius,
Who, hearing of our Marcius' banishment,
Thrusts forth his horns again into the world
Which were inshell'd, when Marcius stood for Rome,

And durst not once peep out.

Sic. Come, what talk you
Of Marcius?

Bru. Go see this rumourer whipp'd. It cannot be,

The Volces dare break with us.

Men. Cannot be!

We have record, that very well it can;
And three examples of the like have been Within my age. But reason; with the fellow
Before you punish him, where he heard this Lest you should chance to whip your informant,

And beat the messenger who bids beware
Of what is to be dreaded.

Sic. Tell not me;

I know, this cannot be.

Bru. Not possible.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. The nobles, in great earnestness, are going

All to the senate house: some news is come
That turns their countenances.

Sic. 'Tis this slave;—

Go whip him 'fore the people's eyes:—his railing
Nothing but his report! [in]

Mess. Yes, worthy Sir,

The slave's report is seconded; and more,
More fearful is deliver'd.

Sic. What more fearful?

Mess. It is spoke freely out of many mouths
(How probable, I do not know,) that Marcius
Join'd with Aufidius, leads a power 'gainst
Rome;

And vows revenge as spacious, as between
The youngest and the oldest thing.

* Vigour.
† Softened

‡ Part § Softened

* Suffrage.
† Talk.

‡ Stood up in its debt § Changed

Sic. This is most likely!

Bru. Rais'd only, that the weaker sort may Good Marcius home again.

Sic. The very trick on't.

Men. This is unlikely:
He and Aufidius can no more atone,*
Than violentest contrariety.

Enter another MESSENGER.

Mess. You are sent for to the senate:
A fearful army, led by Caius Marcius,
Associated with Aufidius, rages
Upon our territories; and have already,
O'erborne their way, consum'd with fire, and What lay before them. [took

Enter COMINIUS.

Com. O, you have made good work!

Men. What news? what news?

Com. You have help to ravish your own daughters, and
To melt the city leads upon your pates;
To see your wives dishonour'd to your noses;—

Men. What's the news? what's the news?

Com. Your temples burn'd in their cement;
and
Your franchises, whereon you stood, confin'd
Into an augre's bore.†

Men. Pray now, your news?—
You have made fair work, I fear me:—Pray, your news?

If Marcius should be join'd with Volcians,—
Com. If!

He is their god; he leads them like a thing
Made by some other deity than nature,
That shapes man better: and they follow him,
Against us brats, with no less confidence,
Than boys pursuing summer butterflies,
Or butchers killing flies.

Men. You have made good work.
You, and your apron men; you that stood so
Upon the voice of occupation,‡ and [much
The breath of garlic-eaters!

Com. He will shake
Your Rome about your ears.

Men. As Hercules
Did shake down mellow fruit: You have made fair work!

Bru. But is this true, Sir?

Com. Ay; and you'll look pale
Before you find it other. All the regions
Do smilingly revolt;§ and, who resist,
Are only mock'd for valiant ignorance,
And perish constant fools. Who is't can blame
him?

Your enemies, and his, find something in him.

Men. We are all undone, unless
The noble man have mercy.

Com. Who shall ask it?
The tribunes cannot do't for shame; the people
Deserve such pity of him, as the wolf
Does of the shepherds: for his best friends, if they [even
Should say, Be good to Rome, they charg'd him
As those should do that had deserv'd his hate,
And therein show'd like enemies.

Men. 'Tis true:
If he were putting to my house the brand
That should consume it, I have not the face
To say, 'Beseech you, cease.—You have made fair hands,
You, and your crafts! you have crafted fair!

* Unite.

† A small round hole, an augre is a carpenter's tool.

‡ Mechanics.

§ Revolt with pleasure.

Com. You have brought

A trembling upon Rome, such as was never
So incapable of help.

Tri. Say not, we brought it.

Men. How! Was it we? We lov'd him; but,
like beasts, [then,

And cowardly nobles, gave way to your clamour—
Who did hoot him out o' the city.

Com. But, I fear,

They'll roar him in again. Tullus Aufidius,
The second name of men, obeys his points
As if he were his officer:—Desperation
Is all the policy, strength, and defence,
That Rome can make against them.

Enter a Troop of CITIZENS.

Men. Here come the clusters.—

And is Aufidius with him?—You are they
That made the air unwholesome, when you cast

Your stinking, greasy caps, in hooting at Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming;
And not a hair upon a soldier's head,
Which will not prove a whip; as many cockcombs,

As you threw caps up, will he tumble down.
And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter;
If he could burn us all into one coal.
We have deserv'd it.

Cit. 'Faith, we hear fearful news.

1 Cit. For mine own part,
When I said, banish him, I said, 'twas pity.

2 Cit. And so did I.

3 Cit. And so did I; and, to say the truth, so did very many of us: That we did, we did for the best: and though we willingly consented to his banishment, yet it was against our
will.

Com. You are goodly things, you voices!

Men. You have made Good work, you and your cry!*—Shall us to the Capitol?

Com. O, ay; what else?

[Exeunt COM. and MEN.

Sic. Go, masters, get you home, be not dis-may'd;

These are a side, that would be glad to have
This true, which they so seem to fear. Go
And show no sign of fear. [home.

1 Cit. The gods be good to us! Come, masters, let's home. I ever said, we were i'the wrong, when we banished him.

2 Cit. So did we all. But come, let's home.
[Exeunt CITIZENS.

Bru. I do not like this news.

Sic. Nor I.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol:—Would, half my wealth
Would buy this for a lie!

Sic. Pray, let us go.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—A Camp, at a small distance from Rome.

Enter AUFIDIUS, and his LIEUTENANT.

Auf. Do they still fly to the Roman?

Lieu. I do not know what witchcraft's in him; but

Your soldiers use him as the grace 'fore meat.
Their talk at table, and their thanks at end;
And you are darken'd in this action, Sir,
Even by your own.

* Pack, alluding to a pack of hounds.

Ant. I cannot help it now;
Unless, by using means, I leave the first
Of our design. He bears himself more proud-lier

Even to my person, than I thought he would,
When first I did embrace him: Yet his manner
Is that's so changeling; and I must excuse
What cannot be amended.

Lien. Yet I wish, Sir,
(I mean for your particular,) you had not Join'd in commission with him: but either
Had borne the action of yourself, or else
To him had left it solely.

Ant. I understand thee well; and he then
ours,

When he shall come to his account, he knows
What I can urge against him. Although it seems,

And so he thinks, and is no less apparent
To the vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly,

And shows good husbandry for the Volsians
Fight's dragon-like, and does achieve as soon
As draw his sword: yet he hath left undone
That, which shall break his neck, or hazard
Where'er we come to our account. (mine)

Lien. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry Rome?

Ant. All places yield to him ere he sits
And the nobility of Rome are his: (down;
The senators, and patricians, love him too:
The tribunes are no soldiers; and their people
Will be as rash in the repeal, as hasty
To expel him thence. I think, he'll be to Rome,

As is the cypress* to the fish, who takes it
By sovereignty of nature. First he was A noble servant to them; but he could not Carry his honour even: whether 'twas pride,
Which out of daily fortune ever taints
The happy man; whether defect of judgement,
To fail in the disposing of those chances
Which he was lord of; or whether nature,
Not to be other than one thing, not moving
From the casquet to the cushion,; but commanding peace

Even with the same austerity and garb
As he controll'd the war; but, one of these,
(As he hath spices of them all, not all,;
For I dare so far free him,) made him fear'd,
So hated, and so banish'd: But he has a merit,
To choke it in the utterance. So our virtues
Lie in the interpretation of the time:
And power, unto itself most commendable,
Hath not a tomb so evident as a chair
To extol what it hath done.

One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one nail;
Rights by rights foul'd, strengths by strengths
do fall. (thine)

Come, let's away. When, Caius, Rome is Thou art poor'st of all; then shortly art thou mine. (Rome)

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Rome.—A Public Place.

Enter MENENIUS, COMINIUS, SICIPIUS, BRUTUS, and others.

Men. No, I'll not go: you hear, what he hath said, (him
Which was sometime his general; who lov'd
In a most dear particular. He call'd me,
father:

* An eagle that preys on fish. † Misnomer.
‡ The chair of civil authority.
§ Metaphor for his fallaciousness.

But what o'that? Go, you that banish'd him,
A mile before his tent fall down, and kneel
The way into his mercy: Nay, if he say'd
To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home.

Com. He would not seem to know me.

Men. Do you hear?

Com. Yet one time he did call me by my name:

I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops
That we have shed together. Cominius
He would not answer to: forbade all names;
He was a kind of nothing, titleless.
Till he had forg'd himself a name 't' the fire
Of burning Rome.

Men. Why, so; you have made good work:
A pair of trivies that have rack'd^d for Rome,
To make coals cheap: A noble memory!

Com. I minded him, how royal 'twas to pardon

When it was less expected: He replied,
It was a bare petition of a state
To one whom they had punish'd.

Men. Very well:

Could he say less?

Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard
For his private friends: His answer to me was,
He could not stay to pick them in a pile
Of nonsense, musty chaff: He said, 'twas folly,
For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt,
And still to see the effluence.

Men. For one poor grain
Or two? I am one of these; his mother, wife,
His child, and this brave fellow too, we are the grains:

You are the musty chaff; and you are smelt
Above the mean: We must be burnt for you.

Sir. Nay, pray, be patient: If you refuse your aid

In this so never-headed help, yet do not (you Uphold us with our distress. But, sure, if Would be your country's plunder, your good
tongue,

Mere than the instant army we can make,
Might stop our countryman.

Men. No; I'll not meddle.

Sir. I pray you, go to him.

Men. What should I do?

Sir. Only make trial what your love can do
For Rome towards Marcius.

Men. Well, and say that Marcius

Return me, as Cominius is return'd,

Unheard; what then?

But as a discontented friend, grief-shot

With his unkindness? Say't he so?

Sir. Yet your good will Must have that thanks from Rome, after the measure

As you intended well.

Men. I'll undertake it:

I think, he'll hear me. Yet to bite his lip,
And hum at good Cominius, much unhear's me.
He was not taken well; he had not din'd:
The veins unfill'd, the blood is cold, and then
We post upon the morning, are unapt
To give or to forgive; but when we have stuff'd Those pipes and those conveyances of our
blood

With wine and feeding, we have suppler souls
Than in our priest-like fasts: therefore I'll watch him

Till he be distill'd to my request,

And then I'll set upon him.

Sir. You know the very road into his mind,
And cannot loose your way. (noise)

* Contaminated with things. † Unheard by without.
‡ Misnomer.

Men. Good faith, I'll prove him, Speed how it will. I shall ere long have knowledge
Of my success. [Exit.]

Com. He'll never hear him.

Sic. Not?

Com. I tell you, he does sit in gold, his eye
Red as 'twould burn Rome; and his injury
The jailer to his pity. I kneel'd before him;
'Twas very faintly he said, Rise; dismiss'd me Thus, with his speechless hand: What he would do, [not,
He sent in writing after me; what he could
Bound with an oath, to yield to his conditions:
So, that all hope is vain,
Unless his noble mother, and his wife;
Who, as I hear, mean to solicit him [hence,
For mercy to his country. Therefore, let's
And with our fair entreaties haste them on.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—*An advanced Post of the Volcian
Camp, before Rome. The GUARD at their Stations.*

Enter to them, MENENIUS.

1 G. Stay: Whence are you?

2 G. Stand, and go back.

Men. You guard like men; 'tis well; But,
by your leave,
I am an officer of state, and come
To speak with Coriolanus.

1 G. From whence?

Men. From Rome.

1 G. You may not pass, you must return:
our general
Will no more hear from thence.

2 G. You'll see your Rome embrac'd with fire before
You'll speak with Coriolanus.

Men. Good my friends,
If you have heard your general talk of Rome,
And of his friends there, it is lots* to blanks,
My name hath touch'd your ears: it is Menenius.

1 G. Be it so; go back: the virtue of your
Is not here passable. [name]

Men. I tell thee, fellow.
Thy general is my lover:† I have been
The book of his good acts, whence men have read

His fame unparallel'd, haply, amplified;
For I have ever verified‡ my friends,
(Of whom he's chief,) with all the size that verity§ [times,

Would without lapsing suffer: nay, some-
Like to a bowl upon a subtle|| ground,
I have tumbled past the throw; and in his praise

Have, almost, stamp'd the leasing:¶ Therefore, fellow,
I must have leave to pass.

1 G. 'Faith, Sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalf, as you have uttered words in your own, you should not pass here: no, though it were as virtuous to lie, as to live chastely.
Therefore, go back.

Men. Prythee, fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factionary on the party of your general.

2 G. Howsoever you have been his liar, (as you say, you have,) I am one that, telling true under him, must say, you cannot pass. Therefore, go back.

Men. Has he dined, can'st thou tell! for I would not speak with him till after dinner.

1 G. You are a Roman, are you?

Men. I am as thy general is.

1 G. Then you should hate Rome, as he does. Can you, when you have pushed out your gates the very defender of them, and, in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the easy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the pisied intercession of such a decayed datan† as you seem to be? Can you think to blow out the intended fire your city is ready to flame in with such weak breath as this? No, you are deceived; therefore, back to Rome, and prepare for your execution: you are condemned.
our general has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon.

Men. Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here, he would use me with estimation.

2 G. Come, my captain knows you not.

Men. I mean, thy general.

1 G. My general cares not for you. Back.
I say, go, lest I let forth your half pint of blood;—back,—that's the utmost of your having:—back.

Men. Nay, but fellow, fellow,—

Enter CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS.

Cor. What's the matter?

Men. Now, you companion,† I'll say an errand for you; you shall know now that I am in estimation; you shall perceive that a Jack:
guardant cannot office me from my son Coriolanus: guess, but by my entertainment with him, if thou stand'st not i' the state of hanging,
or of some death more long in spectatorship, and crueller in suffering; behold now presently, and swoon for what's to come upon thee.—
The glorious gods sit in hourly synod about my particular prosperity, and love thee no worse than thy old father Menenius does! O, my son! my son! thou art preparing fire for us:
look thee, here's water to quench it. I was hardly moved to come to thee; but being assured, none but myself could move thee, I have been blown out of your gates with sighs: and conjure thee to pardon Rome, and thy petitionary countrymen. The good gods assuage thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it upon this varlet here; this, who, like a block, hath denied my access to thee.

Cor. Away!

Men. How! away?

Cor. Wife, mother, child, I know not. My affairs

Are servanted to others: Though I owe
My revenge properly, my remission lies
In Volcian breasts. That we have been familiar,
Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison, rather Than pity note how much.—Therefore, be gone.

Mine ears against your suits are stronger, than Your gates against my force. Yet, for I lov'd
thee,

Take this along; I writ it for thy sake.

[Gives a Letter.]

And would have sent it. Another word, Menenius, [dies.]

I will not hear thee speak.—This man, Auf-
Was my beloved in Rome: yet thou behold'st—

Auf. You keep a constant temper.

You know the way home again.

1 G. Do you hear how we are shent* for keeping your greatness back?

2 G. What cause, do you think, I have to swoon?

Men. I neither care for the world, nor your general: for such things as you, I can scarce think there's any, you are so slight. He that hath a will to die by himself, fears it not from another. Let your general do his worst. For you, be that you are, long; and your misery increase with your age! I say to you, as I was said to, Away! [Exit.

SCENE III.—The Tent of CORIOLANUS.

Enter CORIOLANUS, AUFIDIUS, and others.

Cor. We will before the walls of Rome tomorrow

Set down our host.—My partner in this action,
You must report to the Volcian lords, how
I have borne this business. [plainly†

Auf. Only their ends

You have respected; stopp'd your ears against
The general suit of Rome; never admitted
A private whisper, no, not with such friends
That thought them sure of you.

Cor. This last old man, [Rome,
Whom with a crack'd heart I have sent to Lov'd me above the measure of a father;
Nay, godded me, indeed. Their latest refuge
Was to send him: for whose old love, I have (Though I show'd sourly to him,) once more offer'd

The first conditions, which they did refuse,
And cannot now accept, to grace him only,
That thought he could do more; a very little
I have yielded too: Fresh embassies, and suits, Nor from the state, nor private friends, hereafter

Will I lend ear to.—Ha! what shout is this?
[Shout within.
Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow
In the same time 'tis made? I will not.—

Enter in mourning habits, VIRGILIA, VOLUMNIA, leading young MARCIUS, VALERIA, and AT-TENDANTS.

My wife comes foremost; then the honour'd

Which can make gods forsworn?—I melt, and

Of stronger earth than others.—My mother
As if Olympus to a molehill should
In supplication nod: and my young boy
Hath an aspect of intercession, which Great nature cries, Deny not,—Let the Volces Plough Rome, and harrow Italy; I'll never
Be such a gosling‡ to obey instinct; but stand,
As if a man were author of himself,
And knew no other kin.

Vir. My lord and husband!

Cor. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.

Vir. The sorrow, that delivers us thus
Makes you think so. [chang'd,

Cor. Like a dull actor now,
I have forgot my part, and I am out,
Even to a full di grace. Best of my flesh,
Forgive my tyranny; but do not say,
For that, Forgive our Romans.—O, a kiss
Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge! [kiss
Now by the jealous queen* of heaven, that
I carried from thee, dear; and my true lip
Hath virgin'd it e'er since.—You gods! I prate,
And the most noble mother of the world
Leave unsaluted: Sink, my knee, i'the earth;

Of thy deep duty more impression show
Than that of common sons.

Vol. O, stand up bless'd!
Whilst, with no softer cushion than the flint,
I kneel before thee; and improperly Show duty, as mistaken all the while
Between the child and parent. [Kneels.

Cor. What is this?

Then let the pebbles on the hungry beach
Fillip the stars; then let the mutinous winds
Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery sun;
Murd'ring impossibility, to make
What cannot be, slight work.

Vol. Thou art my warrior;
I help to frame thee. Do you know this lady?

Cor. The noble sister of Publicola,
The moon of Rome; chaste as the icicle,
That's curd'd by the frost from purest snow,
And hangs on Dian's temple: Dear Valeria!

Vol. This is a poor epitome of yours,
Which by the interpretation of full time
May show like all yourself.

Cor. The god of soldiers,
With the consent of supreme Jove, inform Thy thoughts with nobleness; that thou may'st prove

To shame invulnerable, and stick i'the wars

Again with Rome's mechanics:—Tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural: Desire not
To allay my rages and revenges, with Your colder reasons.

Vol. O, no more, no more!
You have said, you will not grant us any thing;
For we have nothing else to ask, but that
Which you deny already: Yet we will ask;
That, if you fail in our request, the blame [us.

Making thy mother, wife, and child, to see
The son, the husband, and the father, tearing
His country's bowels out. And to poor we,
Thine country's most capital: then bar't us
Our prayers to the gods, which is a comfort
That all but we enjoy: For how can we,
Alas! how can we for our country pray,
Where we are bound; together with thy victory,

Where we are bound? Alack! or we must

Must, as a foreign recreant, be led
With manacles through our streets, or else

And bear the palm, for having bravely shed
Thy wife and children's blood. For myself,
I purpose not to wait on fortune, till {son,

Vol. Nay go not from us thus.
If it were so, that our request did tend
To save the Romans, thereby to destroy
The Voices whom you serve, you might condemn us,

As poisonous of your honour: No; our suit
Is, that you reconcile them: while the Voices
May say, This mercy we have show'd; the Romans,

This we receiv'd; and each in either side
Give the all-hail to thee, and cry, Be bless'd For making up this peace! Thou know'st, great
son,

The end of war's uncertain; but this certain,
That, if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
Which thou shalt thereby reap, is such a name,
Whose repetition will be dogg'd with curses,
Whose chronicle thus writ,—The man was noble,
But with his last attempt he wip'd it out;
Destroyed his country; and his name remains
To the coming age, abhor'd. Speak to me, son:
Thou hast affected the fine strains of honour,
To imitate the graces of the gods;
To tear with thunder the wide cheeks o'the air,
And yet to charge thy sulphur with a bolt
That should but rive an oak. Why dost not speak?

Think'st thou it honourable for a noble man
Still to remember wrongs?—Daughter, speak
you: {boy:

He cares not for your weeping.—Speak thou,
Perhaps, thy childishness will move him more

Thou art not honest, and the gods will plague
thee,

But kneels, and holds up hands, for fellowship,

And then I'll speak a little.

Cor. O mother, mother!
{Holding VOLUNNIA by the Hand, silent.
What have you done? Behold, the heavens do weep,

The gods look down, and this unnatural scene
They laugh at. O my mother, mother! O!
You have won a happy victory to Rome:
But, for your son,—believe it, O, believe it,
Most dangerously you have with him prevail'd,
If not most mortal to him. But, let it come:—
Aufidius, though I cannot make true wars,
I'll frame convenient peace. Now, good Au-fidius, {hand

Were you in my stead, nay, would you have
A mother less? or granted less, Aufidius?

Auf. I was mov'd withal.

Cor. I dare be sworn, you were:
And, Sir, it is no little thing, to make
Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But, good Sir, What peace you'll make, advise me; for my part, {you,

I'll not to Rome, I'll back with you; and pray
Stand to me in this cause.—O mother! wife!

Auf. I am glad, thou hast set thy mercy and thy honour

At difference in thee: out of that I'll work Myself a former fortune. {And.

Cor. Ay, by and by,

{To VOLUNNIA, VIRGILIA, &c.
But we will drink together; and you shall
bear

A better witness back than words, which we,
On like conditions, will have counter-seal'd.
Come, enter with us. Ladies, you deserve
To have a temple built you: all the swords
In Italy, and her confederate arms,
Could not have made this peace. {Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Rome.—A public Place.

Enter MENENIUS and SICINIUS.

Men. See you yond' coign o'the Capitol:
yond' corner stone?

Sic. Why, what of that?

Men. If it be possible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the adies of Rome, especially his mother, may prevail with him. But I say, there is no hope m't; our throats are sentenced, and stay* upon execution.

Sic. Is't possible, that so short a time can alter the condition of a man?

Men. There is differency between a grub, and a butterfly; yet your butterfly was a grub. This Marcius is grown from man to dragon: he has wings; he's more than a creeping thing.

Sic. He loved his mother dearly.

Men. So did he me: and he no more remembers his mother now, than an eight year old horse. The tartness of his face sours ripe grapes. When he walks, he moves like an engine, and the ground shrinks before his treading. He is able to pierce a coralet with his eye; talks like a knell, and his hum is a battery. He sits in his state,† as a thing made‡ for Alexander. What he bids be done, is finished with his bidding. He wants nothing of a god but eternity, and a heaven to throne in.

Sic. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

Men. I paint him in the character. Mark what mercy his mother shall bring from him: There is no more mercy in him, than there is milk in a male tiger; that shall our poor city find: and all this is long of you.

Sic. The gods be good unto us!

Men. No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banished him, we respected not them: and, he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Sir, if you'd save your life, fly to your house;

The plebeians have got your fellow-tribune, And hale him up and down; all swearing, if The Roman ladies bring not comfort home, They'll give him death by inches.

Enter another MESSENGER.

Sic. What's the news?

Mess. Good news, good news;—The ladies have prevail'd,

The Volces are dislodg'd, and Marcius gone: A merrier day did never yet greet Rome, No, not the expulsion of the Tarquins.

Sic. Friend,

Art thou certain this is true? is it most certain?

Mess. As certain as I know the sun is fire: Where have you lurk'd, that you make doubt of it?

Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blown As the recomforted through the gates. Why, hark you;

[Trumpets and Hautboys sounded, and Drums beaten, all together. Shouting also within.

The trumpets, sackbuts, psalteries, and fifes, Tabors, and cymbals; and the shouting Romans, Make the sun dance. Hark you!

[Shouting again.

Men. This is good news: I will go meet the ladies. This Volumnia Is worth of consuls, senators, patricians, A city full: of tribunes, such as you, [day; A sea and land full: You have pray'd well to— This morning, for ten thousand of your throats I'd not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy!

[Shouting and Music.

Sic. First, the gods bless you for their tidings: next,

Accept my thankfulness.

Mess. Sir, we have all

* Stay but for it. † Chair of state. ‡ To resemble

Great cause to give great thanks.

Sic. They are near the city?

Mess. Almost at point to enter.

Sic. We will meet them, And help the joy.

[Going.

Enter the Ladies, accompanied by SENATORS, PATRICIANS, and People. They pass over the Stage.

1 Sen. Behold our patroness, the life of Rome:

Call all your tribes together, praise the gods, And make triumphant fires; strew flowers before them:

Unshout the noise that banish'd Marcius, Repeal* him with the welcome of his mother; Cry,—Welcome, ladies, welcome!—

All. Welcome, ladies!

Welcome!

[A flourish with Drums and Trumpets.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Antium.—A Public Place.

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, with Attendants.

Auf. Go tell the lords of the city, I am here: Deliver them this paper: having read it, Bid them repair to the market-place; where I, Even in theirs and in the commons' ears, Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse, The city port† by this hath enter'd, and Intends to appear before the people, hoping To purge himself with words: Despatch.

[Exeunt Attendants.

Enter Three or Four CONSPIRATORS of AUFIDIUS' Faction.

Most welcome!

1 Con. How is it with our general?

Auf. Even so, As with a man by his own alms empoison'd, And with his charity slain.

2 Con. Most noble Sir, If you do hold the same intent wherein You wish'd us parties, we'll deliver you Of your great danger.

Auf. Sir, I cannot tell; We must proceed, as we do find the people.

3 Con. The people will remain uncertain, whilst

'Twixt you there's difference; but the fall of Makes the survivor heir of all. [either

Auf. I know it; And my pretext to strike at him admits A good construction. I rais'd him, and I pawn'd [ten'd,

Mine honour for his truth: Who being so heigh He water'd his new plants with dews of flattery, Seducing so my friends: and, to this end, He bow'd his nature, never known before But to be rough, unswayable, and free.

3 Con. Sir, his stoutness, When he did stand for consul, which he lost By lack of stooping,——

Auf. That I would have spoke of: Being banish'd for't he came unto my hearth; Presented to my knife his throat: I took him; Made him joint-servant with me; gave him way

In all his own desires; nay, let him choose Out of my files, his projects to accomplish, My best and freshest men; serv'd his designments

In mine own person; holp‡ to reap the same, Which he did end all his; and took some pride To do myself this wrong: till, at the last,

* Recall.

† Gates.

‡ Helped.

I seem'd his follower, not partner; and
He wag'd me with his countenance,* as if I had been mercenary.

1 Con. So he did, my lord:
The army marvell'd at it. And, in the last,
When he had carried Rome; and that we look'd
For no less spoil, than glory,—

Auf. There was it;—
For which my sinews shall be stretch'd upon
him.

At a few drops of women's rheum,† which are
As cheap as lies, he sold the blood and labour
Of our great action; Therefore shall he die,
And I'll renew me in his fall. But, hark!

[Drums and Trumpets sound, with great shouts of the People.]

1 Con. Your native town you enter'd like a post,

And had no welcomes home; but he returns,
Splitting the air with noise.

2 Con. And patient fools,
Whose children he hath slain, their base throats
tear,
With giving him glory.

3 Con. Therefore, at your vantage,
Ere he express himself, or move the people
With what he would say, let him feel your
sword,

Which we will second. When he lies along,
After your way his tale pronounc'd shall bury
His reasons with his body.

Auf. Say no more;
Here comes the lords.

Enter the LORDS of the City.

Lords. You are most welcome home.

Auf. I have not deserv'd it,
But, worthy lords, have you with heed perus'd
What I have written to you?

Lords. We have.

1 Lord. And grieve to hear it.
What faults he made before the last, I think,
Might have found easy fines: but there to end,

Where he was to begin; and give away
The benefit of our levies, answering us
With our own charge;‡ making a treaty, where
There was a yielding; This admits no excuse.

Auf. He approaches, you shall hear him.

Enter CORIOLANUS, with Drums and Colours; a Croud of CITIZENS with him.

Cor. Hail, lords! I am returned your soldier;

No more infected with my country's love,
Than when I parted hence, but still subsisting
Under your great command. You are to know,
That prosperously I have attempted, and
With bloody passage, led your wars, even to The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have brought home,

Do more than counterpoise, a full third part,
The charges of the action. We have made
peace,

With no less honour to the Antiates,§ Than shame to the Romans: And we here deliver,

Subscrib'd by the consuls and patricians,
Together with the seal o'the senate, what We have compounded on.

Auf. Read it not, noble lords;
But tell the traitor, in the highest degree
He hath abus'd your powers.

Cor. Traitor!—How now?

Auf. Ay, traitor, Marcius.

Cor. Marcius!

Auf. Ay, Marcius, Caius Marcius; but thou think
I'll grace thee with that robbery, thy stol'n
name

Coriolanus in Corioli!—

You lords and heads of the state, perfidiously
He has betray'd your business, and given up
For certain drops of salt,* your city Rome
(I say, your city,) to his wife and mother:
Breaking his oath and resolution, like
A twist of rotten silk; never admitting Counsel o'the war; but at his nurse's tear
He whin'd and roar'd away your victory;
That pages blush'd at him, and men of hear:
Look'd wondering each at other.

Cor. Hear'st thou, Mars?

Auf. Name not the god, thou boy of tears—

Cor. Ha!

Auf. No more.†

Cor. Measureless liar, thou hast made my heart

Too great for what contains it. Boy! O
slave!—

Pardon me, lords, 'tis the first time that ever
I was forc'd to scold. Your judgements, my grave lords,

Must give this cur the lie: and his own notice (Who wears my stripes impress'd on him; that must bear

My beating to his grave;) shall join to thrust
The lie unto him.

1 Lord. Peace, both, and hear me speak.

Cor. Cut me to pieces, Voices; men and lads,
Stain all your edges on me.—Boy! False hound!

If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there,
That like an eagle in a dove-cote, I
Flutter'd your voices in Corioli:
Alone I did it.—Boy!

Auf. Why, noble lords,
Will you be put in mind of his blind fortune,
Which was your shame, by this unholy braggart,

'Fore your own eyes and ears?

Con. Let him die for't. [Several speak at once.
Cit. [Speaking promiscuously.] Tear him to pieces, do it presently. He killed my son:—
my daughter;—He killed my cousin Marcus:—
He killed my father.—

2 Lord. Peace, ho;—no outrage;—peace.
The man is noble, and his fame tells in
This orb o'the earth.‡ His last offence to us
Shall have judicious hearing.—Stand, Auf.
And trouble not the peace.

Cor. O, that I had him,
With six Aufidiuses, or more, his tribe.
To use my lawful sword!

Auf. Insolent villain!

Con. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him.

[AUFIDIUS and the CONSPIRATORS draw, and kill CORIOLANUS, who falls, and AUFIDIUS stands on him.]

Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold.

Auf. My noble masters, hear me speak.

1 Lord. O Tullus,—

2 Lord. Thou hast done a deed whereat valour will weep.

3 Lord. Tread not upon him.—Masters all,
be quiet;
Put up your swords.

* Thought me rewarded with good looks. † Tears.
‡ Rewarding us with our own expenses
§ People of Antium.

* Drops of tears. † No more than a box of tears.
‡ His fame overspreads the world. § Judicial.

Auf. My lords, when you shall know (as in this rage,
provok'd by him, you cannot,) the great danger
which this man's life did owe you, you'll rejoice
that he is thus cut off. Please it your honours call me to your senate, I'll deliver myself your loyal servant, or endure your heaviest censure.
Lord. Bear from hence his body, and mourn you for him: let him be regarded as the most noble corse, that ever herald did follow to his urn.

2 Lord. His own impatience
Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame.
Let's make the best of it.

Auf. My rage is gone,
And I am struck with sorrow.—Take him up:
Help, three o'the chiefest soldiers; I'll be one.—
Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully:
Trail your steel pikes.—Though in this city he Hath widow'd and unchilded many a one,
Which to this hour bewail the injury,
Yet he shall have a noble memory.*—

NUS. A dead March sounded.*]

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome.—A Street.

Enter FLAVIUS, MARULLUS, and a Rabble of CITIZENS.

Flav. Hence; home, you idle creatures, get you home;

Is this a holiday? What! know you not,
Being mechanical, you ought not walk,
Upon a labouring day, without the sign
Of your profession?—Speak, what trade art
thou?

1 Cit. Why, Sir, a carpenter.

Mar. Where is thy leather apron, and thy rule?

What dost thou with thy best apparel on?—

You, Sir; what trade are you?

2 Cit. Truly, Sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.

Mar. But what trade art thou? Answer me directly.

2 Cit. A trade, Sir, that, I hope, I may use with a safe conscience; which is, indeed, Sir,
a mender of bad soals.

Mar. What trade, thou knave; thou naughty knave, what trade?

2 Cit. Nay, I beseech you, Sir, be not out with me: yet, if you be out, Sir, I can mend
you.

Mar. What meanest thou by that? Mend me, thou saucy fellow?

2 Cit. Why, Sir, cobble you.

Flav. Thou art a cobbler, art thou?

2 Cit. Truly, Sir, all that I live by is, with the awl: I meddle with no tradesman's matters, nor women's matters, but with awl. I am, indeed, Sir, a surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I recover them. As proper men as ever trod upon seats-leather, have gone upon my handy-work.

Flav. But wherefore art not in thy shop today? [streets?]

Why dost thou lead these men about the 2 Cit. Truly, Sir, to wear out their shoes, to get myself into more work. But, indeed, Sir, we make holiday to see Cesar, and to rejoice
in his triumph.

Mar. Wherefore rejoice? What conquest brings he home?

What tributaries follow him to Rome,
To grace in captive bonds his chariot wheels?
You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things!

O, you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome,
Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and oft
Have you climb'd up to walls and battlements,
To towers and windows, yea, to chimney-tops,
Your infants in your arms, and there have sat
The live-long day, with patient expectation,
To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome:
And when you saw his chariot but appear,
Have you not made a universal shout,
That Tyber trembled underneath her banks,
To hear the replication of your sounds,
Made in her concave shores?

And do you now put on your best attire?

And do you now cull out a holiday?

And do you now strew flowers in his way,
That comes in triumph over Pompey's blood?

Be gone;

Run to your houses, fall upon your knees,
Pray to the gods to intermit the plague
That needs must light on this ingratitude.

Flav. Go, go, good countrymen, and, for this fault,

Assemble all the poor men of your sort;*
Draw them to Tyber banks, and weep your
Into the channel, till the lowest stream [tears
Do kiss the most exalted shores of all.

[Exeunt CITIZENS.]

See, whe'r† their basest metal be not mov'd;
They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltiness.
Go you down that way towards the Capitol;
This way will I: Disrobe the images,
If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies.‡

Mar. May we do so?

You know, it is the feast of Lupercal.

Flav. It is no matter; let no images
Be hung with Cesar's trophies. I'll about,
And drive away the vulgar from the streets:
So do you too, where you perceive them thick.
These growing feathers pluck'd from Cesar's wing,

Will make him fly an ordinary pitch;
Who else would soar above the view of men,
And keep us all in servile fearfulness.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same.—A public Place.

Enter, in Procession, with Music, CESAR; ANTONY, for the course; CALPHURNIA, PORTIA, DECIUS, CICERO, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and CASCA, a great Crowd following, among them a SOOTHSAYER.

Ces. Calphurnia,—

Casca. Peace, ho! Cesar speaks.

[Music ceases.]

Ces. Calphurnia,—

Cal. Here, my lord.

Ces. Stand you directly in Antonius' way,
When he doth run his course.§—Antonius.

Ant. Cesar, my lord.

Ces. Forget not, in your speed, Antonius,
To touch Calphurnia: for our elders say,
The barren, touched in this holy chase,
Shake off their steril curse.

Ant. I shall remember:

When Cesar says, Do this, it is perform'd.

Ces. Set on; and leave no ceremony out.

[Music.]

Sooth. Cesar.

Ces. Ha! who calls?

Casca. Bid every noise be still:—Peace yet again.

[Music ceases.]

Ces. Who is it in the press,|| that calls on me?

I hear a tongue, shriller than all the music,
Cry, Cesar: Speak; Cesar is turn'd to hear.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

Ces. What man is that!

Brn. A soothsayer, bids you beware the ides of March.

Ces. Set him before me, let me see his face.

Cas. Fellow, come from the throng: Look upon Cesar.

Ces. What say'st thou to me now? Speak once again.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

Ces. He is a dreamer: let us leave him;—pass.

[Scenet.] Exeunt all but BRU. and CAS.

Cas. Will you go see the order of the course?

Brn. Not I.

Cas. I pray you, do.

Brn. I am not gamesome: I do lack some (Of that quick spirit that is in Antony. [part

Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires;
I'll leave you.

Cas. Brutus, I do observe you now of late:
I have not from your eyes that gentleness,
And show of love, as I was wont to have:
You bear too stubborn and too strange a hand
Over your friend that loves you.

Brn. Cassius,
Be not deceiv'd: if I have veil'd my look,
I turn the trouble of my countenance
Merely upon myself. Vexed I am,
Of late, with passions of some difference,
Conceptions only proper to myself,
Which give some soil, perhaps, to my behaviours: [griev'd;

But let not therefore my good friends be (Among which number, Cassius, be you one;)
Nor construe any further my neglect,
Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war,
Forgets the shows of love to other men.

Cas. Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion,*

By means whereof, this breast of mine hath buried

Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations.
Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face?

Brn. No, Cassius: for the eye sees not itself,
But by reflection, by some other things.

Cas. 'Tis just:

And it is very much lamented, Brutus,
That you have no such mirrors, as will turn
Your hidden worthiness into your eye,
That you might see your shadow. I have heard,
Where many of the best respect in Rome,
(Except immortal Cesar,) speaking of Brutus,
And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.

Brn. Into what dangers would you lead me,
Cassius,

That you would have me seek into myself
For that which is not in me?

Cas. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to
hear:

And, since you know you cannot see yourself
So well as by reflection, I, your glass,
Will modestly discover to yourself
That of yourself which you yet know not of.
And be not jealous of me, gentle Brutus:
Were I a common laughèr, or did use
To stale† with ordinary oaths my love
To every new protester; if you know
That I do fawn on men, and hug them hard,
And after scandal them; or if you know
That I profess myself in banqueting
To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.

[Flourish and shout.]

Brn. What means this shouting? I do fear, the people

Choose Cesar for their king.

Cas. Ay, do you fear it?

Then must I think you would not have it so.

Brn. I would not, Cassius; yet I love him
well:—

But wherefore do you hold me here so long?

What is it that you would impart to me?

If it be aught toward the general good,
Set honour in one eye, and death i' the other,
And I will look on both indifferently:

For, let the gods so speed me, as I love
The name of honour more than I fear death.

Cas. I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus,
As well as I do know your outward favour.
Well, honour is the subject of my story.—
I cannot tell, what you and other men
Think of this life; but, for my single self,

* The nature of your feelings.

¶ Flourish of instruments.

I had as lief not be, as live to be
In awe of such a thing as I myself.
I was born free as Cesar; so were you:
We both have fed as well; and we can both Endure the winter's cold, as well as he.
For once, upon a raw and gusty^a day,
The troubled Tyber chafing with her shores,
Cesar said to me, *Dar'st thou, Cassius, now
Leap in with me into this angry flood,
And swim to yonder point?* Upon the word,
Accouter'd as I was, I plunged in,
And bade him follow: so, indeed, he did.
The torrent roar'd; and we did buffet it
With lusty sinews; throwing it aside
And stemming it with hearts of controversy.
But ere we could arrive the point propos'd,
Cesar cried, Help me, Cassius, or I sink.
I, as Æneas, our great ancestor,
Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder
The old Anchises bear, so, from the waves of Tyber

Did I the tired Cesar: And this man
Is now become a god; and Cassius is
A wretched creature, and must bend his body,
If Cesar carelessly but nod on him.
He had a fever when he was in Spain,
And, when the fit was on him, I did mark
How he did shake: 'tis true, this god did shake:

His coward lips did from their colour fly;
And that same eye, whose bend doth awe the
world,

Did lose his lustre: I did hear him groan:
Ay, and that tongue of his, that bade the Romans

Mark him, and write his speeches in their Alas! it cried, Give me some drink, Titinius,
As a sick girl. Ye gods, it doth amaze me,
A man of such a feeble temper should
So get the start of the majestic world,
And bear the palm alone. [Shout. Flourish.]

Bru. Another general shout!

I do believe, that these applauses are
For some new honours that are heap'd on Cesar.

Cas. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world,

Like a Colossus; and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable graves.
Men at some time are masters of their fates:
The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings.
Brutus, and Cesar: What should be in that
Cesar?

Why should that name be sounded more than
yours?

Write them together, yours is as fair a name;
Sound them, it doth become the mouth as well;
Weigh them, it is as heavy; conjure them,
Brutus will start a spirit as soon as Cesar.

[Shout.]

Now in the names of all the gods at once,
Upon what meat doth this our Cesar feed,
That he is grown so great? Age, thou art
sham'd:

Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods!
When went there by an age, since the great flood,

[man?]

But it was fam'd with more than with one
When could they say, till now, that talk'd of Rome,

[man?]

That her wide walks encompass'd but one
Now is it Rome indeed, and room enough,
When there is in it but one only man.

O! you and I have heard our fathers say,

There was a Brutus^b once, that would not brook'd

The eternal devil to keep his state in Rome.
As easily as a king.

Bru. That you do love me, I am nothing jealous;

[am.]

What you would work me to, I have seen.
How I have thought of this, and of these
times,

I shall recount hereafter; for this present
I would not, so with love I might entreat you.
Be any further mov'd. What you have said
I will consider; what you have to say,
I will with patience hear: and find a time
Both meet to hear, and answer, such big things.

Till then, my noble friend, chew^c upon this:
Brutus had rather be a villager,
Than to repute himself a son of Rome
Under these hard conditions as this time
Is like to lay upon us.

Cas. I am glad, that my weak words
Have struck but this much show of fire from Brutus.

Re-enter CESAR, and his Train.

Bru. The games are done, and Cesar is returning.

Cas. As they pass by, pluck Casca by the sleeve;

And he will after his sour fashion, tell you
What hath proceeded, worthy note, to-day.

Bru. I will do so:—But, look you, Cassius,
The angry spot doth glow on Cesar's brow,
And all the rest look like a chidden train:
Calphurnia's cheek is pale; and Cicero
Looks with such ferret^d and such fiery eyes,
As we have seen him in the Capitol,
Being cross'd in conference by some senators.

Cas. Casca will tell us what the matter is.

Ces. Antonius.

Ant. Cesar.

Ces. Let me have men about me that are fat;

Sleek-headed men, and such as sleep o' nights:
Yond' Cassius has a lean and hungry look.

He thinks too much: such men are dangerous.

Ant. Fear him not, Cesar, he's not dangerous.
He is a noble Roman, and well given.

[low.]

Ces. 'Would he were fatter:—But I fear him not:

Yet if my name were liable to fear,
I do not know the man I should avoid
So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads
He is a great observer, and he looks [much] Quite through the deeds of men: he loves to plays,

As thou dost, Antony; he hears no music:
Seldom he smiles; and smiles in such a sort,
As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit:
That could be mov'd to smile at any thing.

Such men as he be never at heart's ease.
Whiles they behold a greater than themselves.
And therefore are they very dangerous.

I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd,
Than what I fear, for always I am Cesar.
Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf.
And tell me truly what thou think'st of him.

[Exeunt CESAR and his Train. CASCA stays behind.]

Casca. You pull'd me by the cloak; Would you speak with me?

Bru. Ay, Casca; tell us what hath chanc'd to-day.

^a Windy.

[†] Temperament, constitution.

^b Lucius Junius Brutus.

^c Chew.

^d Ruminant.

^e A ferret has red eyes.

That Caesar looks so sad.

Casca. Why you were with him, were you not?

Br. I should not then ask Casca what hath chanc'd.

Casca. Why, there was a crown offer'd him: and being offer'd him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus; and then the people fell a' shouting.

Br. What was the second noise for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Cas. They shouted thrice; What was the last cry for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Br. Was the crown offer'd him thrice?

Casca. Ay, marry, was't, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than other; and at every putting by, mine honest neighbours shouted.

Cas. Who offered him the crown?

Casca. Why, Antony.

Br. Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca.

Casca. I can as well be hanged, as tell the manner of it: it was mere foolery. I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown;—yet 'twas not a crown neither, 'twas one of these coronets;—and, as I told you, he put it by once; but, for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it. Then he offered it to him again; then he put it by again: but, to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offered it the third time, he put it the third time by: and still as he refused it, the rabblement hooted, and clapped their chopped hands, and threw up their sweaty night-caps, and uttered such a deal of stinking breath because Caesar refused the crown, that it had almost choked Caesar; for he swooned, and fell down at it: And for mine own part I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips, and receiving the bad air.

Cas. But, soft, I pray you: What? did Caesar swoon?

Casca. He fell down in the market-place, and foamed at mouth, and was speechless.

Br. 'Tis very like: he hath the falling-sickness.

Cas. No, Caesar hath it not; but you, and I, And honest Casca, we have the falling-sickness.

Casca. I know not what you mean by that; but, I am sure, Caesar fell down. If the tagging people did not clap him, and hiss him, according as he pleased, and displeased them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true^a man.

Br. What said he, when he came unto himself?

Casca. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceiv'd the common herd was glad he refused the crown, he plucked me ope his doublet, and offered them his throat to cut.—As I had been a man of any occupation,† if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues:—and so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, If he had done, or said, any thing amiss, he desired their workshops to think it was his infirmity. Three or four wenches, where I stood, cried, Alas, good soul!—and forgave him with all their hearts: But there's no heed to be taken of them; if Caesar had stabbed their mothers, they would have done no less.

Br. And after that, he came, thus sad, away?

Casca. Ay.

Cas. Did Cicero say any thing?

Casca. Ay, he spoke Greek.

Cas. To what effect?

Casca. Nay, as I tell you that, I'll no'er look you i' the face again: But those, that understood him, smiled at one another, and shook their heads; but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too: Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Caesar's images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more foolery yet, if I could remember it.

Cas. Will you sup with me to-night, Casca?

Casca. No, I am promised forth.

Cas. Will you dine with me to-morrow?

Casca. Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth eating.

Cas. Good: I will expect you.

Casca. Do so: Farewell, both.

[Exit CASCA.]

Br. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be?

He was quick mettle, when he went to school.

Cas. So is he now, in execution

Of any bold or noble enterprise, However he puts on this tardy form.

This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit, Which gives men stomach to digest his words With better appetite.

Br. And so it is. For this time I will leave you:

To-morrow if you please to speak with me, I will come home to you; or, if you will, Come home with me, and I will wait for you.

Cas. I will do so:—till then, think of the world.

[Exit BRUTUS.]

Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see, Thy honourable metal may be wrought From that it is dispos'd^a: Therefore 'tis meet That noble minds keep ever with their likes: For who so firm, that cannot be seduc'd? Caesar doth bear me hard;† but he loves Brutus:

If I were Brutus now, and he were Cassius, He should not humour me. I will this night, In several hands, in at the windows throw, As if they came from several citizens, Writings all tending to the great opinion That Rome holds of his name; wherein obscurely

Caesar's ambition shall be glanced at:

And, after this, let Caesar seat him sure;

For we will shake him, or worse days endure.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—The same.—A Street.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter, from opposite sides, CASCA, with his sword drawn, and CICERO.

Cic. Good even, Casca: Brought you Caesar home?

Why are you breathless? and why stare you so? Casca. Are you not mov'd, when all the sway of earth

Shakes, like a thing unfirm? O Cicero, I have seen tempests, when the scolding winds Have riv'd the knotty oaks; and I have seen The ambitious ocean swell, and rage, and foam, To be exalted with the threat'ning clouds: But never till to-night, never till now, Did I go through a tempest dropping fire. Either there is a civil strife in heaven;

^a Dispos'd to. † Was an unwelcome opinion of me.
; Capito. † Did you attend Caesar's words?

Or else the world, too saucy with the gods,
Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you any thing more wonderful?

Casca. A common slave (you know him well by sight,) [burn

Held up his left hand, which did flame, and
Like twenty torches join'd; and yet his hand,
Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd.

Besides, (I have not since put up my sword,)
Against the Capitol I met a lion,
Who glar'd upon me, and went surly by,
Without annoying me: And there were drawn Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women,
'Transformed with their fear; who swore they saw

Men, all in fire, walk up and down the streets.
And, yesterday, the bird of night did sit,
Even at noon-day, upon the market-place,
Hooting, and shrieking. When these prodigies
Do so conjointly meet, let not men say,
These are their reasons,—They are natural;
For, I believe, they are portentous things
Upon the climate that they point upon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time:
But men may construe things after their fashion,
Clean* from the purpose of the things themselves.

Comes Cesar to the Capitol to-morrow?

Casca. He doth; for he did bid Antonius
Send word to you, he would be there to-morrow.

Cic. Good night then, Casca: this disturbed
Is not to walk in. [sky

Casca. Farewell, Cicero. [Exit CICERO.

Enter CASSIUS.

Cas. Who's there?

Casca. A Roman.

Cas. Casca, by your voice.

Casca. Your ear is good. Cassius, what night is this?

Cas. A very pleasing night to honest men.

Casca. Who ever knew the heavens menace
so?

Cas. Those, that have known the earth so full of faults.

For my part, I have walk'd about the streets,
Submitting me unto the perilous night;
And thus embraced, Casca, as you see,
Have bar'd my bosom to the thunder-stone:
And, when the cross blue lightning seem'd to open

The breast of heaven, I did present myself
Even in the aim and very flash of it.

Casca. But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?

It is the part of men to fear and tremble,
When the most mighty gods, by tokens, send
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.

Cas. You are dull, Casca; and those sparks of life

That should be in a Roman, you do want,
Or else you use not: You look pale, and gaze,
And put on fear, and cast yourself in wonder,
To see the strange impatience of the heavens:
But if you would consider the true cause,
Why all these fires, why all these gliding
ghosts,

Why birds, and beasts, from quality and kind;
Why old men fools, and children calculate;
Why all these things change, from their ordinance,

Their natures and pre-formed faculties,

To monstrous quality; why, you shall find.
That heaven hath infus'd them with these spirits, [mc.

To make them instruments of fear, and warn-
Unto some monstrous state. Now could I,

Casca, [night:

Name to thee a man most like this dreadful
That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and
As doth the lion in the Capitol: [roars

A man no mightier than thyself, or me,
In personal action; yet prodigious* grows,
And fearful, as these strange eruptions are.

Casca. 'Tis Cesar that you mean: Is it not Cassius?

Cas. Let it be who it is: for Romans now
Have thews and limbs like to their ancestors:
But, woe the while! our fathers' minds are
dead,

And we are govern'd with our mothers' spirits:
Our yoke and sufferance show us womanish.

Casca. Indeed, they say, the senators to-mor-
Mean to establish Cesar as a king: [roar
And he shall wear his crown by sea, and land,
In every place, save here in Italy.

Cas. I know where I will wear this dagger
then;

Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius:
Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most
strong;

Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat:
Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit;
But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.

If I know this, know all the world besides.
That part of tyranny, that I do bear,
I can shake off at pleasure.

Casca. So can I:
So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.

Cas. And why should Cesar be a tyrant
then?

Poor man! I know, he would not be a wolf.
But that he sees the Romans are but sheep:
He were no lion, were not Romans hinds:
Those that with haste will make a mighty lion,
Begin it with weak straws: What trash is
Rome,

What rubbish, and what offal, when it serves
For the base matter to illuminate
So vile a thing as Cesar? But, O, grief!
Where hast thou led me? I, perhaps, speak
this

Before a willing bondman; then I know
My answer must be made: But I am arm'd.
And dangers are to me indifferent.

Casca. You speak to Casca; and to such a
man,

That is no fleeing tell-tale. Hold'st my hand:
Be factious|| for redress of all these griefs;
And I will set this foot of mine as far,
As who goes farthest.

Cas. There's a bargain made.
Now know you, Casca, I have mov'd already
Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans,
To undergo, with me, an enterprise
Of honourable-dangerous consequence;
And I do know, by this, they stay for me
In Pompey's porch: for now, this fearful night
There is no stir, or walking in the streets;
And the complexion of the element,
Is favour'd, like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible.

* Entirely.

+ Bold.

|| Why they deviate from quality and nature.

* Potentous.

+ Muscles.

: Derr.

|| Here: my hand.

* Active.

|| Miserable.

Enter CINNA.

Casca. Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste.

Cas. 'Tis Cinna, I do know him by his gait; * He is a friend.—Cinna, where haste you so?

Cin. To find out you: Who's that? Metellus Cimber?

Cas. No, it is Casca; one incorporate To our attempts. Am I not staid for, Cinna?

Cin. I am glad on't. What a fearful night is this? [sighs.]

There's two or three of us have seen strange

Cas. Am I not staid for, Cinna? Tell me.

Cin. Yes,

You are. O, Cassius, if you could but win The noble Brutus to our party—

Cas. Be you content: Good Cinna, take this paper,

And look you lay it in the prætor's chair, Where Brutus may but find it; and throw this In at his window: set this up with wax Upon old Brutus' statue: all this done, Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find us.

Is Decius Brutus, and Trebonius, there?

Cin. All but Metellus Cimber; and he's gone To seek you at your house. Well, I will hie, And so bestow these papers as you bade me.

Cas. That done, repair to Pompey's theatre. [Exit CINNA.]

Come, Casca, you and I will, yet, ere day, See Brutus at his house: three parts of him Is ours already; and the man entire, Upon the next encounter, yields him ours.

Casca. O, he sits high, in all the people's hearts:

And that, which would appear offence in us, His countenance, like richest alchymy, Will change to virtue, and to worthiness.

Cas. Him, and his worth, and our great need of him,

You have right well conceited. Let us go, For it is after midnight; and, ere day, We will awake him, and be sure of him. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same.—BRUTUS' Orchard.

Enter BRUTUS.

Bru. What, Lucius! ho!—

I cannot, by the progress of the stars, Give guess how near to day.—Lucius, I say!— I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly.— When, Lucius, when? † Awake, I say: What, Lucius!

Enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Call'd you, my lord?

Bru. Get me a taper in my study, Lucius: When it is lighted, come and call me here.

Luc. I will, my lord. [Exit.]

Bru. It must be by his death: and, for my part,

I know no personal cause to spurn at him, But for the general. He would be crown'd:— How that might change his nature, there's the question,

It is the bright day, that brings forth the adder; And that craves wary walking. Crown him?— That;—

And then, I grant, we put a sting in him, That at his will he may do danger with. The abuse of greatness is, when it disjoins

Remorse* from power: And, to speak truth of Cesar,

I have not known when his affections sway'd More than his reason. But 'tis a common proof, †

That lowliness is young ambition's ladder, Whereto the climber-upward turns his face: But when he once attains the upmost round, He then unto the ladder turns his back, Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees; By which he did ascend: So Cesar may; Then, lest he may, prevent. And, since the quarrel

Will bear no colour for the thing he is, Fashion it thus; that what he is, augmented, Would run to these, and these extremities: And therefore think him as a serpent's egg, Which, hatch'd, would, as his kind, § grow mischievous; And kill him in the shell.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. The taper burneth in your closet, Sir. Searching the window for a flint, I found This paper, thus seal'd up; and, I am sure, It did not lie there, when I went to bed.

Bru. Get you to bed again, it is not day. Is not to-morrow, boy, the ides of March?

Luc. I know not, Sir.

Bru. Look in the calendar, and bring me word.

Luc. I will, Sir. [Exit.]

Bru. The exhalations, whizzing in the air, Give so much light, that I may read by them. [Opens the Letter, and reads.]

Brutus, thou sleep'st; awake, and see thyself.

Shall Rome, &c. Speak, strike, redress!

Brutus, thou sleep'st; awake.—

Such instigations have been often dropp'd Where I have took them up.

Shall Rome, &c. Thus, must I piece it out; Shall Rome stand under one man's awe? What! Rome?

My ancestors did from the streets of Rome The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king. Speak, strike, redress!—Am I entreated then To speak, and strike? O Rome! I make thee promise,

If the redress will follow, thou receivest Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fourteen days.

[Knock within.]

Bru. 'Tis good. Go to the gate; somebody knocks. [Exit LUCIUS.]

Since Cassius first did whet me against Cesar, I have not slept.

Between the acting of a dreadful thing And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma, || or a hideous dream: The genius, and the mortal instruments, Are then in council; and the state of man, Like to a little kingdom, suffers then The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the door, Who doth desire to see you.

Bru. Is he alone?

Luc. No, Sir, there are more with him.

Bru. Do you know them?

Luc. No, Sir; their hats are pluck'd about their ears,

* Pity, tenderness.
† Nature.

† Experience.

‡ Low stage.
§ Voluntary.

* Air of walking. † An exclamation of impatience.

Luc. Here is a sick man, that would speak with you.

Bru. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake of.—

Boy, stand aside.—Caius Ligarius! how?

Lig. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble tongue.

Bru. O, what a time have you chose out, brave Caius, [sick!

To wear a kerchief? 'Would you were not

Lig. I am not sick, if Brutus have in hand Any exploit worthy the name of honour.

Bru. Such an exploit have I in hand, Ligarius,

Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.

Lig. By all the gods that Romans bow before,

I here discard my sickness. Soul of Rome!

Brave son, deriv'd from honourable loins!

Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjur'd up

My mortified spirit. Now bid me run,

And I will strive with things impossible;

Yea, get the better of them. What's to do?

Bru. A piece of work that will make sick men whole.

Lig. But are not some whole, that we must make sick?

Bru. That must we also. What it is, my Caius,

I shall unfold to thee, as we are going, To whom it must be done.

Lig. Set on your foot; And, with a heart new-fir'd, I follow you, To do I know not what: but it sufficeth, That Brutus leads me on.

Bru. Follow me then. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The same. A Room in CESAR'S Palace.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter CESAR, in his Night-gown.

Ces. Nor heaven, nor earth, have been at peace to-night:

Thrice hath Calphurnia in her sleep cried out, Help, ho! they murder Cesar!—Who's within?

Enter a SERVANT.

Serv. My lord?

Ces. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice, And bring me their opinions of success.

Serv. I will, my lord. [Exit.

Enter CALPHURNIA.

Cal. What mean you, Cesar? Think you to walk forth?

You shall not stir out of your house to-day.

Ces. Cesar shall forth: The things that threaten'd me, [see Ne'er look'd but on my back; when they shall The face of Cesar, they are vanished.

Cal. Cesar, I never stood on ceremonies,* Yet now they fright me. There is one within, Besides the things that we have heard and seen,

Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch. A lioness hath whelped in the streets;

And graves have yawn'd, and yielded up their dead:

Fierce fiery warriors fight upon the clouds, In ranks and squadrons, and right form of war,

Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol:

The noise of battle hurl'd† in the air,

Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan;

And ghosts did shriek, and squeal‡ about the streets,

* Never paid a regard to prodigies or omens.

† Encountered.

‡ Cry with pain.

(O Cesar! these things are beyond all use, And I do fear them.

Ces. What can be avoided, Whose end is purpos'd by the mighty gods? Yet Cesar shall go forth: for these predictions Are to the world in general, as to Cesar.

Cal. When beggars die, there are no comets seen;

The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.

Ces. Cowards die many times before their deaths;

The valiant never taste of death but once.

Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,

It seems to me most strange that men should

Seeing that death, a necessary end, [fear:

Will come, when it will come.

Re-enter a SERVANT.

What say the augurers?

Serv. They will not have you to stir forth to-day.

Plucking the entrails of an offering forth, They could not find a heart within the beast.

Ces. The gods do this in shame of cowardice:

Cesar should be a beast without a heart,

If he should stay at home to-day for fear.

No, Cesar shall not: Danger knows full well

That Cesar is more dangerous than he.

We were two lions litter'd in one day,

And I the elder and more terrible;

And Cesar shall go forth.

Cal. Alas, my lord,

Your wisdom is consum'd in confidence.

Do not go forth to-day: Call it my fear,

That keeps you in the house, and not your own.

We'll send Mark Antony to the senate-house:

And he shall say, you are not well to-day:

Let me upon my knee, prevail in this.

Ces. Mark Antony shall say, I am not well.

And, for thy humour, I will stay at home.

Enter DECIVS.

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.

Dec. Cesar, all hail! Good morrow, worthy Cesar:

I come to fetch you to the senate-house.

Ces. And you are come in very happy time.

To bear my greeting to the senators,

And tell them, that I will not come to-day:

Cannot, is false; and that I dare not, false;

I will not come to-day: Tell them so, Decius.

Cal. Say, he is sick.

Ces. Shall Cesar send a lie?

Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm so far,

To be afraid to tell grey-beards the truth!

Decius, go tell them, Cesar will not come.

Dec. Most mighty Cesar, let me know some cause,

Lest I be laugh'd at, when I tell them so.

Ces. The cause is in my will, I will not come.

That is enough to satisfy the senate.

But, for your private satisfaction,

Because I love you, I will let you know.

Calphurnia here, my wife, stays me at home:

She dreamt to-night she saw my statue,

Which like a fountain, with a hundred spouts,

Did run pure blood; and many lusty Romans

Came smiling, and did bathe their hands in it.

And these does she apply for warnings, portents,

And evils imminent; and on her knee

Hath begg'd, that I will stay at home to-day.

Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted;

It was a vision, fair and fortunate:

Your statue spouting blood in many pipes,

In which so many smiling Romans bath'd,
Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck
Reviving blood; and that great men shall press
For tinctures, stains, relics,* and cognizance.†
This by Calphurnia's dream is signified.

Ces. And this way have you well expounded it.

Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say:

And know it now; The senate have concluded
To give, this day, a crown to mighty Cesar.
If you shall send them word you will not come,
Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock

Apt to be render'd, for some one to say,
*Break up the senate till another time,
When Cesar's wife shall meet with better dreams.*
If Cesar hide himself, shall they not whisper,
Lo, Cesar is afraid?

Pardon me, Cesar; for my dear, dear love
To your proceeding bids me tell you this;
And reason to my love is liable.‡

Ces. How foolish do your fears seem now, Calphurnia?

I am ashamed I did yield to them.—
Give me my robe, for I will go:—

Enter PUBLIUS, BRUTUS, LIGARIUS, METELLUS, CASCA, TREBONIUS, and CINNA.

And look where Publius is come to fetch me.

Pub. Good morrow, Cesar.

Ces. Welcome, Publius.—

What, Brutus, are you stirr'd so early too?—
Good-morrow. Casca.—Caius Ligarius,
Cesar was ne'er so much your enemy,
As that same ague which hath made you
What is't o'clock? [lean.—

Brut. Cesar, 'tis stricken eight.

Ces. I thank you for your pains and courtesy.

Enter ANTONY.

See! Antony, that revels long o'nights,
Is notwithstanding up:—
Good morrow, Antony.

Ant. So to most noble Cesar.

Ces. Bid them prepare within:—

I am to blame to be thus waited for.—
Now, Cinna:—Now, Metellus:—What, Trebo-
I have an hour's talk in store for you; [nus!
Remember that you call on me to-day:
Be near me, that I may remember you.

Treb. Cesar, I will:—and so near will I be,
That your best friends shall wish I had been farther. [Aside.

Ces. Good friends, go in, and taste some wine with me;

And we, like friends, will straightway go together.

Brut. That every like is not the same, O Cesar,
The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon!
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same.—A Street near the Capitol.

Enter ARTEMIDORUS, reading a Paper.

Art. Cesar, beware of Brutus; take heed of Cassius; come not near Casca; have an eye to Cinna; trust not Trebonius; mark well Metellus Cimber; Decius Brutus loves thee not; thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Cesar. *If thou be'st not immortal, look about you:

Security gives way to conspiracy. The mighty gods defend thee! Thy lover,

Artemidorus.

Here will I stand, till Cesar pass along,
And as a suitor will I give him this.
My heart laments, that virtue cannot live
Out of the teeth of emulation.‡

If thou read this, O Cesar, thou may'st live;
If not, the fates with traitors do contrive.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.—The same.—Another part of the same Street before the House of BRUTUS.

Enter PORTIA and LUCIUS.

Por. I prythee, boy, run to the senate-
house;

Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone:
Why dost thou stay?

Luc. To know my errand, madam.

Por. I would have had thee there, and here again, [there.—

Ere I can tell thee what thou should'st do
O constancy, be strong upon my side!
Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and
tongue!

I have a man's mind, but a woman's might.
How hard it is for women to keep counsel!—
Art thou here yet?

Luc. Madam, what should I do?

Run to the Capitol, and nothing else?

And so return to you, and nothing else?

Por. Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well,

For he went sickly forth: And take good note,
What Cesar doth, what suitors press to him.
Hark, boy! what noise is that?

Luc. I hear none, madam.

Por. Prythee, listen well;

I heard a bustling rumour, like a fray,
And the wind brings it from the Capitol.

Luc. Sooth,‡ madam, I hear nothing.

Enter SOOTHSAYER.

Por. Come hither, fellow:

Which way hast thou been?

Sooth. At mine own house, good lady.

Por. What is't o'clock?

Sooth. About the ninth hour, lady.

Por. Is Cesar yet gone to the Capitol?

Sooth. Madam, not yet; I go to take my

Por. Why, knowest thou any harm's intended towards him?

Sooth. None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance. [row:

Good-morrow to you. Here the street is nar-
The throng that follows Cesar at the heels,
Of senators, of praetors, common suitors,
Will croud a feeble man almost to death:
I'll get me to a place more void, and there
Speak to great Cesar as he comes along. [Exit.

And bring me word what he doth say to thee.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The same.—The Capitol; the Senate sitting.

A Crowd of People in the Street leading to the Capitol; among them ARTEMIDORUS, and the SOOTHSAYER. Flourish. Enter CESAR, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, METELLUS, TREBONIUS, CINNA, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POPILIUS, PUBLIUS, and others.

Ces. The ides of March are come.

Sooth. Ay, Cesar; but not gone.

Art. Hail, Cesar! Read this schedule.

Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er-read, At your best leisure, this his humble suit.

Art. O, Cesar, read mine first; for mine's a suit
[Cesar,
That touches Cesar nearer: Read it, great

Ces. What touches us ourself, shall be last serv'd.

Art. Delay not, Cesar; read it instantly.

Ces. What, is the fellow mad?

Pub. Sirrah, give place.

Ces. What, urge you your petitions in the Come to the Capitol.
[street?

CESAR enters the Capitol, the rest following.

All the SENATORS rise.

Pop. I wish, your enterprise to-day may thrive.

Cas. What enterprise, Popilius?

Pop. Fare you well.
[Advances to CESAR.

Br. What said Popilius Lena?

Cas. He wish'd, to-day our enterprise might I fear, our purpose is discovered.
[thrive.

Br. Look, how he makes to Cesar: Mark him.

Cas. Casca, be sudden, for we fear prevention.—

Brutus, what shall be done? If this be known, Cassius or Cesar never shall turn back, For I will slay myself.

Br. Cassius, be constant:

Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes; For, look, he smiles, and Cesar doth not change.

Cas. Trebonius knows his time; for, look you, Brutus,

He draws Mark Antony out of the way.

[Exit ANTONY and TREBONIUS. CESAR and the SENATORS take their Seats.

Dec. Where is Metellus Cimber? Let him And presently prefer his suit to Cesar.
[go,

Br. He is address'd:* press near, and second him.

Cin. Casca, you are the first that rears your hand.

Ces. Are we all ready? what is now amiss, That Cesar, and his senate must redress?

Met. Most high, most mighty, and most puissant Cesar,

Metellus Cimber throws before thy seat An humble heart:—
[Kneeling.

Ces. I must prevent thee, Cimber.

These couchings, and these lowly courtesies, Might fire the blood of ordinary men; And turn pre-ordinance, and first decree, Into the law of children. Be not fond, To think that Cesar bears such rebel blood, That will be thaw'd from the true quality With that which melteth fools; I mean, sweet words, [ing.

Low-crook'd-curt'sies, and base spaniel fawn—Thy brother by decree is banished; If thou dost bend, and pray, and fawn for him,

* Ready.

I spurn thee like a cur out of my way.

Know, Cesar doth not wrong; nor without Will he be satisfied.
[cause.

Met. Is there no voice more worthy than my own,

To sound more sweetly in great Cesar's ear, For the repealing of my banish'd brother?

Br. I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery, Cesar;

Desiring thee, that Publius Cimber may Have an immediate freedom of repeal.

Ces. What, Brutus!

Cas. Pardon, Cesar; Cesar pardon: As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall, To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.

Ces. I could be well mov'd, if I were as you; If I could pray to move, prayers would move me:

But I am constant as the northern star, Of whose true-fix'd, and resting quality, There is no fellow in the firmament.

The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks. They are all fire, and every one doth shine;

But there's but one in all doth hold his place: So, in the world; 'Tis furnish'd well with men, [give;

And men are flesh and blood, and apprehen— Yet, in the number, I do know but one

That unassailable holds on his rank,* Unshak'd of motion:† and, that I am he,

Let me a little show it, even in this; [ish'd,
That I was constant, Cimber should be ban—

And constant do remain to keep him so.

Cin. O Cesar,—

Ces. Hence! Wilt thou lift up Olympus?

Dec. Great Cesar,—

Ces. Doth not Brutus bootless kneel?

Casca. Speak, hands, for me.

[CASCA stabs CESAR in the Neck. CESAR catches hold of his Arm. He is then stabbed by several other Conspirators, and at last by MARCUS BRUTUS.

Ces. Et tu, Brutus?—Then, fall, Cesar.

[Dies. The Senators and People retire in confusion.

Cin. Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead!—Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets.

Cas. Some to the common pulpits, and cry Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement! [out.

Br. People, and senators! be not affrighted;

Fly not; stand still:—ambition's debt is paid.

Casca. Go to the pulpit, Brutus.

Dec. And Cassius too.

Br. Where's Publius?

Cin. Here, quite confounded with this mutiny.

Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Cesar's

Should chance—

Br. Talk not of standing;—Publius, good cheer;

There is no harm intended to your person, Nor to no Roman else: so tell them, Publius.

Cas. And leave us, Publius; lest that the people, [chief.

Rushing on us, should do your age some mis—

Br. Do so;—and let no man abide this But we the doers.
[deed,

Re-enter TREBONIUS.

Cas. Where's Antony?

Tre. Fled to his house amaz'd:

* Intelligent. † Continues to hold it. ‡ Solicitation.
§ Unsuccessfully. || And thou, Brutus?

Men, wives, and children, stare, cry out, and
As it were doomsday. [run,

Bru. Fates! we will know your pleasures:—
That, we shall die, we know; 'tis but the time,
And drawing days out, that men stand upon.

Cas. Why, he that cuts off twenty years of life,
Cuts off so many years of fearing death.

Bru. Grant that, and then is death a benefit:
So are we Cesar's friends, that have abridg'd
His time of fearing death.—Stoop, Romans,
stoop,

And let us bathe our hands in Cesar's blood
Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords:
Then walk we forth, even to the market-place;
And, waving our red weapons o'er our heads,
Let's all cry, Peace! Freedom! and Liberty!

Cas. Stoop then, and wash.* How many ages
hence,
Shall this our lofty scene be acted over,
In states unborn, and accents yet unknown?

Bru. How many times shall Cesar bleed in sport,
That now on Pompey's basis lies along,
No worthier than the dust?

Cas. So oft as that shall be,
So often shall the knot of us be call'd
The men that gave our country liberty.

Dec. What, shall we forth?

Cas. Ay, every man away:
Brutus shall lead; and we will grace his heels
With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a SERVANT.

Bru. Soft, who comes here? A friend of Antony's.

Serr. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me
kneel;

Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down:
And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say.
Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest;
Cesar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving:
Say, I love Brutus, and I honour him;
Say, I fear'd Cesar, honour'd him, and lov'd
If Brutus will vouchsafe, that Antony [him.
May safely come to him, and be resolv'd
How Cesar hath deserv'd to lie in death,
Mark Antony shall not love Cesar dead
So well as Brutus living; but will follow
The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus,
Thorough the hazards of this untrod state,
With all true faith. So says my master Antony.

Bru. Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman; I never thought him worse. [man;
Tell him, so please him come unto this place,
He shall be satisfied; and, by my honour,
Depart untouch'd.

Serr. I'll fetch him presently. [Exit SERV.

Bru. I know, that we shall have him well to
friend.

Cas. I wish, we may: but yet have I a mind,
That fears him much; and my misgiving still Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Re-enter ANTONY.

Bru. But here comes Antony.—Welcome,
Mark Antony.

Ant. O mighty Cesar! Dost thou lie so low?
Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils, Shrunk to this little measure?—Fare thee
well.—

I know not, gentlemen, what you intend,

* In Cesar's blood.

Who else must be let blood, who else is rank:—
If I myself, there is no hour so fit
As Cesar's death hour; nor no instrument
Of half that worth, as those your swords, made rich

With the most noble blood of all this world.
I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard,
Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke,

Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,
I shall not find myself so apt to die:
No place will please me so, no mean of death,
As here by Cesar, and by you cut off,
The choice and master spirits of this age.

Bru. O Antony! beg not your death of us.
Though now we must appear bloody and cruel,
As, by our hands, and this our present act,
You see we do; yet see you but our hands,
And this the bleeding business they have done:
Our hearts you see not, they are pitiful;
And pity to the general wrong of Rome
(As fire drives out fire, so pity, pity,)

Hath done this deed on Cesar. For your part,
To you our swords have leaden points, Mark
Antony:

Our arms, in strength of malice, and our hearts,
Of brothers' temper, do receive you in
With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence.

Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as any
In the disposing of new dignities. [man's,

Bru. Only be patient, till we have appeas'd
The multitude, beside themselves with fear,
And then we will deliver you the cause,
Why I, that did love Cesar when I struck him,
Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom.
Let each man render me his bloody hand:
First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you:—
Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand;—
Now, Decius Brutus, yours;—now yours, Metellus;

Yours, Cinna;—and, my valiant Casca,
yours;— [Trebonius.

Though last, not least in love, yours, good
Gentlemen all,—alas! what shall I say?
My credit now stands on such slippery ground,
That one of two bad ways you must conceit
Either a coward or a flatterer.— [me,

That I did love thee, Cesar, O, 'tis true:
If then thy spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee, dearer than thy death,
To see thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,

Most noble! in the presence of thy corse?
Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,
It would become me better, than to close
In terms of friendship with thine enemies.

Pardon me, Julius!—Here wast thou bay'd,
brave hart; [stand,

Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters
Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy lethe.
O world! thou wast the forest to this hart;
And this, indeed, O world, the heart of thee.—
How like a deer, stricken by many princes,
Dost thou here lie?

Cas. Mark Antony,——

Ant. Pardon me, Caius Cassius:
The enemies of Cesar shall say this;
Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty.

Cas. I blame you not for praising Cesar so;
But what compact mean you to have with us?
Will you be prick'd in number of our friends
Or shall we on, and not depend on you?

* Grown too high for the public safety.

Ant. Therefore I took your hands; but was, indeed, [Cesar.] Sway'd from the point, by looking down on Friends as I with you all, and love you all;
Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons,
Why, and wherein, Cesar was dangerous.

Br. Or else were this a savage spectacle:
Our reasons are so full of good regard,
That were you Antony the son of Cesar,
You should be satisfied.

Ant. That's all I seek:
And am moreover suitor, that I may Produce his body to the market-place;
And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his funeral.

Br. You shall, Mark Antony.

Ces. Brutus, a word with you.—
You know not what you do; Do not consent,
That Antony speak in his funeral:
Know you how much the people may be mov'd
By that which he will utter? [Aside.]

Br. By your pardon;—
I will myself into the pulpit first,
And show the reason of our Cesar's death:
What Antony shall speak, I will protest
He speaks by leave and by permission;
And that we are contented, Cesar shall
Have all true rites, and lawful ceremonies.
It shall advantage more, than do us wrong.

Ces. I know not what may fall; I like it not.

Br. Mark Antony, here, take you Cesar's body.
You shall not in your funeral speech blame us,
But speak all good you can devise of Cesar;
And say, you do't by our permission;
Else shall you not have any hand at all
About his funeral: And you shall speak
In the same pulpit whereto I am going,
After my speech is ended.

Ant. Be it so;
I do desire no more.

Br. Prepare the body then, and follow us.
[Exeunt all but ANTONY.]

Ant. O, pardon me, thou piece of bleeding
earth,
That I am meek and gentle with these butchers!
Thou art the ruins of the noblest man,
That ever lived in the tide* of times.
Woe to the hand that shed this costly blood!
Over thy wounds now do I prophesy,— [lips,
Which, like dumb mouths, do ope their ruby
To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue;—
A curse shall light upon the limbs of men;
Domestic fury, and fierce civil strife,
Shall cumber all the parts of Italy;
Blood and destruction shall be so in use,
And dreadful objects so familiar,
That mothers shall but smile, when they behold
Their infants quarter'd with the hands of war;
All pity chok'd with custom of fell deeds:
And Cesar's spirit, ranging for revenge,
With Ate by his side, come hot from hell,
Shall in these confines, with a monarch's voice,
Cry Here, here; and let slip the dogs of war;
That this foul deed shall smell above the earth
With carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter a SERVANT.

You serve Octavius Cesar, do you not?

Serv. I do, Mark Antony.

Ant. Cesar did write for him to come to Rome.

Serv. He did receive his letters, and is coming:

And bid me say to you by word of mouth,—
O Cesar!— [Seeing the body.]

Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee apart and weep.

Passion, I see, is catching; for mine eyes,
Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine,
Began to water. Is thy master coming?

Serv. He lies to-night within seven leagues of Rome.

Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him
[Exit with Cesar's body.]

Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
No Rome of safety for Octavius yet;
Hie hence, and tell him so. Yet, stay a while:
Thou shalt not back, till I have borne this corpse
Into the market-place: there shall I try,
In my oration, how the people take
The cruel issue of these bloody men;
According to the which, thou shalt discourse
To young Octavius of the state of things.
Lend me your hand.

[Exeunt with CESAR'S BODY.]

SCENE II.—The same.—The Forum.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS, and a throng of CITIZENS.

Cit. We will be satisfied; let us be satisfied.
Br. Then follow me, and give me audience,
friends.—

Cassius, go you into the other street,
And part the numbers.— [here,
Those that will hear me speak, let them stay
Those that will follow Cassius, go with him,
And public reasons shall be rendered
Of Cesar's death.

1 Cit. I will hear Brutus speak.

2 Cit. I will hear Cassius; and compare their reasons.

When severally we hear them rendered.

[Exit CASSIUS, with some of the CITIZENS.]

BRUTUS goes into the Rostrum.

3 Cit. The noble Brutus is ascended: Silence!

Br. Be patient till the last.

Romans, countrymen, and lovers!—hear me for my cause; and be silent, that you may hear believe me for mine honour; and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe: censure me in your wisdom; and awake your senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Cesar's, to him I say, that Brutus' love to Cesar was no less than his. If then that friend demand, why Brutus rose against Cesar, thus is my answer,—
Not that I loved Cesar less, but that I loved Rome more.
Had you rather Cesar were living, and die all slaves, than that Cesar were dead, to live all free men? As Cesar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it, as he was valiant, I honour him: but, as he was ambitious, I slew him. There is tears, for his love; joy, for his fortune, honour, for his valour; and death, for his ambition. Who is here so base, that would be a bondman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude, that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile, that will not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

Cit. None, Brutus, none.

[Several speaking at once.]

Br. Then none have I offended. I have

* Courtes.

† The signal for giving no quarter.

‡ To let slip a dog at a deer, &c. was the technical phrase of Shakespeare's time.

done no more to Cesar, than you should do to Brutus. The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol: his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy; nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death.

Enter ANTONY and others, with CESAR's Body.

Here comes his body, mourned by Mark Antony: who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth; as which of you shall not? With this I depart; That, as I slew my best lover* for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

Cit. Live, Brutus, live! live!

1 Cit. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.

2 Cit. Give him a statue with his ancestors.

3 Cit. Let him be Cesar.

4 Cit. Cesar's better parts

Shall now be crown'd in Brutus.

1 Cit. We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours.

Br. My countrymen,—

2 Cit. Peace; silence! Brutus speaks.

1 Cit. Peace, ho!

Br. Good countrymen, let me depart alone, And, for my sake, stay here with Antony:

Do grace to Cesar's corpse, and grace his speech

Tending to Cesar's glories; which Mark Antony, By our permission, is allow'd to make.

I do entreat you, not a man depart, Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. [Exit.

1 Cit. Stay, ho! and let us hear Mark Antony.

3 Cit. Let him go up into the public chair; We'll hear him:—Noble Antony, go up.

Ant. For Brutus' sake, I am beholden to you.

4 Cit. What does he say of Brutus?

3 Cit. He says, for Brutus' sake, He finds himself beholden to us all.

4 Cit. 'Twere best he speak no harm of Brutus here.

1 Cit. This Cesar was a tyrant.

3 Cit. Nay, that's certain:

We are bless'd, that Rome is rid of him.

2 Cit. Peace; let us hear what Antony can say.

Ant. You gentle Romans,—

Cit. Peace, ho! let us hear him.

Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears;

I come to bury Cesar, not to praise him.

The evil, that men do, lives after them;

The good is oft interred with their bones;

So let it be with Cesar. The noble Brutus

Hath told you, Cesar was ambitious:

If it were so, it was a grievous fault;

And grievously hath Cesar answer'd it.

Here, under leave of Brutus, and the rest,

(For Brutus is an honourable man;

So are they all, all honourable men;)

Come I to speak in Cesar's funeral.

He was my friend, faithful and just to me:

But Brutus says, he was ambitious;

And Brutus is an honourable man.

He hath brought many captives home to Rome.

Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill:

Did this in Cesar seem ambitious? [wept:

When that the poor have cried, Cesar hath

Ambition should be made of sterner stuff:

Yet Brutus says, he was ambitious;

* Friend.

And Brutus is an honourable man.

You all did see, that on the Lupercal,

I thrice presented him a kingly crown, [tion?

Which he did thrice refuse. Was this ambi-

Yet Brutus says, he was ambitious;

And, sure, he is an honourable man.

I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,

But here I am to speak what I do know.

You all did love him once, not without cause;

What cause withholds you then to mourn for

him?

O judgement, thou art fled to brutish beasts,

And men have lost their reason!—Bear with

me;

My heart is in the coffin there with Cesar,

And I must pause till it come back to me.

1 Cu. Methinks, there is much reason in his sayings.

2 Cit. If thou consider rightly of the matter,

Cesar has had great wrong.

3 Cit. Has he, masters?

I fear, there will a worse come in his place.

4 Cit. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown;

Therefore, 'tis certain he was not ambitious.

1 Cit. If it be found so, some will dear abide

it.

2 Cit. Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire

with weeping.

3 Cit. There's not a nobler man in Rome, than Antony.

4 Cit. Now mark him, he begins again to speak.

Ant. But yesterday, the word of Cesar might Have stood against the world: now lies he

there,

And none so poor* to do him reverence.

O masters! if I were dispos'd to stir

Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage,

I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong,

Who, you all know, are honourable men:

I will not do them wrong; I rather choose

To wrong the dead, to wrong myself, and you,

Than I will wrong such honourable men.

But here's a parchment, with the seal of Cesar,

I found it in his closet, 'tis his will:

Let but the commons hear this testament,

(Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read,)

And they would go and kiss dead Cesar's

wounds,

And dip their napkins† in his sacred blood;

Yea, beg a hair of him for memory,

And, dying, mention it within their wills,

Bequeathing it, as a rich legacy,

Unto their issue.

4 Cit. We'll hear the will: Read it, Mark

Antony.

Cit. The will, the will; we will hear Cesar's

will.

Ant. Have patience, gentle friends, I must not read it;

It is not meet you know how Cesar lov'd you.

You are not wood, you are not stones, but

men;

And, being men, hearing the will of Cesar,

It will inflame you, it will make you mad:

'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs;

For if you should, O, what would come of it!

4 Cit. Read the will; we will hear it, An-

tony;

You shall read us the will; Cesar's will.

Ant. Will you be patient? Will you stay a while?

I have o'ershot myself, to tell you of it.

* The meanest man is now too high to do reverence to

It useth an enforced ceremony.

There are no tricks in plain and simple faith :
But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their mettle :
But when they should endure the bloody spur,
They fall their crests, and like deceitful jades,
Sink in the trial. Comes his army on ?

Lar. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd ;

The greater part, the horse in general,
Are come with Cassius. [March within.]

Bru. Hark, he is arriv'd :—
March gently on to meet him.

Enter CASSIUS and Soldiers.

Cas. Stand, ho !

Bru. Stand, ho ! Speak the word along.

Within. Stand.

Within. Stand.

Within. Stand.

Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me wrong.

Bru. Judge me, you gods ! Wrong I mine enemies ?

And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother ?

Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides
And when you do them— [wrongs ;

Bru. Cassius, be content, [well :—

Speak your griefs* softly,—I do know you
Before the eyes of both our armies here, [us,
Which should perceive nothing but love from
Let us not wrangle : Bid them move away ;
Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs,
And I will give you audience.

Cas. Pindarus,
Bid our commanders lead their charges off
A little from this ground.

Bru. Lucilius, do the like ; and let no man
Come to our tent, till we have done our conference.

Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door.
[Exit.]

SCENE III.—Within the tent of BRUTUS.—
LUCIUS and TITINIUS at some distance from it.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me, doth appear in this :

You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella,
For taking bribes here of the Sardians ;
Wherein, my letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, were slighted off.

Bru. You wrong'd yourself, to write in such a case.

Cas. In such a time as this, it is not meet
That every nicest offence should bear his comment.

Bru. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself
Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm
To sell and mart your offices for gold,
To undeservers.

Cas. I an itching palm ?
You know, that you are Brutus that speak this,
Or, by the gods, this speech were else your last.

Bru. The name of Cassius honours this corruption,
And chastisement doth therefore hide his head.

Cas. Chastisement !

Bru. Remember March, the ides of March
remember !

Did not great Julius bleed for justice' sake ?
What villain touch'd his body, that did stab,
And not for justice ? What, shall one of us,

That struck the foremost man of all this world.
But for supporting robbers ; shall we now
Contaminate our fingers with base bribes ?
And sell the mighty space of our large houses
For so much trash, as may be grasped thus ?—
I had rather be a dog, and bay* the moon,
Than such a Roman.

Cas. Brutus, bay not me,
I'll not endure it : you forget yourself,
To hedge me in ;† I am a soldier, I
Older in practice, abler than yourself
To make conditions.‡

Bru. Go to ; you're not, Cassius.

Cas. I am.

Bru. I say, you are not.

Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget myself :
Have mind upon your health, tempt me no further.

Bru. Away, slight man !

Cas. Is't possible ?

Bru. Hear me, for I will speak.
Must I give way and room to your rash choler ?
Shall I be frightened, when a madman stares ?

Cas. O ye gods ! ye gods ! Must I endure all this ?

Bru. All this ? ay, more : Fret till your proud heart break ;

Go, show your slaves how choleric you are,
And make your bondmen tremble. Must I budge ?

Must I observe you ? Must I stand and crouch
Under your testy humour ? By the gods,
You shall digest the venom of your spleen,
Though it do split you : for, from this day forth,
I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter,
When you are waspish.

Cas. Is it come to this ?

Bru. You say, you are a better soldier :
Let it appear so ; make your vanishing true,
And it shall please me well : For mine own
I shall be glad to learn of noble men. [par.]

Cas. You wrong me every way, you wrong me, Brutus ;

I said, an elder soldier, not a better :
Did I say, better ?

Bru. If you did, I care not.

Cas. When Cesar liv'd he durst not thus have mov'd me.

Bru. Peace, peace ; you durst not so have tempted him.

Cas. I durst not ?

Bru. No.

Cas. What ? durst not tempt him ?

Bru. For your life you durst not.

Cas. Do not presume too much upon me ;
I may do that I shall be sorry for. [love.]

Bru. You have done that you should be sorry for.

There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats :
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty,
That they pass by me, as the idle wind,
Which I respect not. I did send to you
For certain sums of gold, which you denied
me ;—

For I can raise no money by vile means :
By heaven, I had rather coin my heart,
And drop my blood for drachmas,§ than to wring [trash.]

From the hard hands of peasants their vile
By any indirection. I did send
To you for gold to pay my legions, [Cassius']
Which you denied me : Was that done like
Should I have answer'd Cains Cassius so ?
When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,
To lock such rascal counters from his friends,

* Grievances.

† Triumfing.

* Bait, bark at.

† Limit my authority.

‡ Terms, fit to confer the offices at my disposal.

§ Coins

Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts,
Dash him to pieces!

Cas. I denied you not.

Bru. You did.

Cas. I did not:—he was but a fool,
That brought my answer back.—Brutus hath riv'd* my heart:

A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Bru. I do not, till you practise them on me.

Cas. You love me not.

Bru. I do not like your faults.

Cas. A friendly eye could never see such faults.

Bru. A flatterer's would not, though they do appear

As huge as high Olympus.

Cas. Come, Antony, and young Octavius,
Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius! [come,
For Cassius is weary of the world:

Hated by one he loves; brav'd by his brother:
Check'd like a bondman; all his faults ob-
serv'd,

Set in a note-book, learn'd, and cons'd by
To cast unto my teeth. O, I could weep

My spirit from mine eyes!—There is my dagger,
And here my naked breast; within, a heart

Dearer than Plutus' mine, richer than gold:
If that thou be'st a Roman, take it forth,

I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart:
Strike, as thou didst at Cesar; for, I know,

When thou didst hate him worse, thou lov'dst him better

Than ever thou lov'dst Cassius.

Bru. Sheath your dagger:

Be angry when you will, it shall have scope;
Do what you will, dishonour shall be humour.

O Cassius, you are yoked with a lamb
That carries anger, as the flint bears fire;

Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark,
And straight is cold again.

Cas. Hath Cassius liv'd

To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,
When grief, and blood ill-temper'd, vexeth
him?

Bru. When I spoke that, I was ill-temper'd too.

Cas. Do you confess so much? Give me your
hand.

Bru. And my heart too.

Cas. O Brutus!

Bru. What's the matter?

Cas. Have you not love enough to bear with
me,

When that rash humour, which my mother gave me,

Makes me forgetful?

Bru. Yes, Cassius; and, henceforth,
When you are over-earnest with your Brutus,

He'll think your mother chides, and leave you
so. [Noise within.

Poet. [Within.] Let me go in to see the generals;

There is some grudge between them, 'tis not
They be alone. [meet

Luc. [Within.] You shall not come to them.

Poet. [Within.] Nothing but death shall stay
me.

Enter Port.

Cas. How now! What's the matter?

Poet. For shame, you generals; What do you mean? [be;

Love, and be friends, as two such men should
For I have seen more years, I'm sure, than ye.

* Hated.

Cas. Ha, ha; how vilely doth this cynic rhyme!

Bru. Get you hence, Sirrah; saucy fellow,
hence.

Cas. Bear with him, Brutus; 'tis his fashion.

Bru. I'll know his humour, when he knows his time:

What should the wars do with the jiggling fools?
Companion,* hence.

Cas. Away, away, be gone. [Exit Port.

Enter Lucilius and Titinius.

Bru. Lucilius and Titinius, bid the commanders

Prepare to lodge their companies to-night.
Cas. And come yourselves, and bring Mes-sala with you

Immediately to us. [Exit Lucilius and Titinius.

Bru. Lucius, a bowl of wine.

Cas. I did not think, you could have been so angry.

Bru. O Cassius, I am sick of many griefs.

Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use,
If you give place to accidental evils.

Bru. No man bears sorrow better:—Portia is dead.

Cas. Ha! Portia?

Bru. She is dead.

Cas. How scap'd I killing, when I cross'd you so!—

O insupportable and touching loss!—
Upon what sickness?

Bru. Impatient of my absence;
And grief, that young Octavius with Mark An-
tony

Have made themselves so strong;—for with her death

That tidings came;—With this she fell distract,
And, her attendants absent, swallow'd fire.

Cas. And died so?

Bru. Even so.

Cas. O ye immortal gods!

Enter Lucius, with Wine and Tapers.

Bru. Speak no more of her.—Give me a bowl of wine:—

In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius. [Drinks.

Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge:—

Fill, Lucius, till the wine o'erswell the cup;
I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love. [Drinks.

Re-enter Titinius, with Messala.

Bru. Come in, Titinius:—Welcome, good
Messala.—

Now sit we close about this taper here,
And call in question our necessities.

Cas. Portia, art thou gone?

Bru. No more, I pray you.—
Messala, I have here received letters,

That young Octavius, and Mark Antony,
Come down upon us with a mighty power,†

Bending their expedition toward Philippi.

Mess. Myself have letters of the self-same tenour.

Bru. With what addition?

Mess. That by proscription, and bills of out-
Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus, [lawry,

Have put to death a hundred senators.

Bru. Therein our letters do not well agree;

Mine speak of seventy senators, that died
By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.

* Fellow.

† Force.

Cæs. Cicero one?

Mess. Ay, Cicero is dead,
And by that order of prescription.—
Had you your letters from your wife, my lord?

Brut. No, Messala.

Mess. Nor nothing in your letters writ of her?

Brut. Nothing, Messala.

Mess. That, methinks, is strange.

Brut. Why ask you? Hear you aught of her in yours?

Mess. No, my lord.

Brut. Now, as you are a Roman, tell me
true.

Mess. Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell:
For certain she is dead, and by strange manner.

Brut. Why, farewell, Portia.—We must die,
Messala:

With meditating that she must die once,*
I have the patience to endure it now.

Mess. Even so great men great losses should endure.

Cæs. I have as much of this in art as you,
But yet my nature could not bear it so.

Brut. Well, to our work alive. What do you
Of marching to Philippi presently? [think]

Cæs. I do not think it good.

Brut. Your reason?

Cæs. This it is:

'Tis better, that the enemy seek us:
So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers,
Doing himself offence; whilst we, lying still,
Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness.

Brut. Good reasons must, of force, give place to better.

The people, 'twixt Philippi and this ground,
Do stand but in a forc'd affection;
For they have grudg'd us contribution:
The enemy, marching along by them,
By them shall make a fuller number up,
Come on refresh'd, new-added, and encour-
ag'd;

From which advantage shall we cut him off,
If at Philippi we do face him there,
These people at our back.

Cæs. Hear me, good brother.

Brut. Under your pardon.—You must note beside,

That we have tried the utmost of our friends,
Our legions are brim-full, our cause is ripe:
The enemy increaseth every day,
We, at the height, are ready to decline.
There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows, and in miseries.
On such a full sea are we now afloat;
And we must take the current when it serves,
Or lose our ventures.

Cæs. Then, with your will, go on; [lippi.
We'll along ourselves, and meet them at Phi-Brut. The deep of night is crept upon our
And nature must obey necessity; [talk,
Which we will niggard with a little rest.
There is no more to say?

Cæs. No more. Good night;
Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence.

Brut. Lucius, my gown. [Exit LUCIUS.] Farewell, good Messala;—

Good night, Titinius:—Noble, noble Cassius,
Good night, and good repose.

Cæs. O my dear brother!
This was an ill beginning of the night:
Never come such division 'tween our souls!
Let it not, Brutus.

Brut. Every thing is well.

Cæs. Good night, my lord.

Brut. Good night, good brother.

Tit. Mss. Good night, lord Brutus.

Brut. Farewell, every one.

[About Cæs. Tit. and Mss.]

Re-enter LUCIUS, with the Gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?

Luc. Here in the tent.

Brut. What, thou speak'st drowsily?

Poor knave, I blame thee not; thou art o'erwatch'd.

Call Claudius, and some other of my men;
I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.

Luc. Varro, and Claudius!

Enter VARRO and CLAUDIUS.

Var. Calls my lord?

Brut. I pray you, Sirs, lie in my tent, and sleep;

It may be, I shall raise you by and by
On business to my brother Cassius.

Var. So please you, we will stand, and watch your pleasure.

Brut. I will not have it so: lie down, good
Sirs;

It may be, I shall otherwise bethink me.
Look, Lucius, here's the book I sought for so—
I put it in the pocket of my gown.

Luc. I was sure, your lordship did not give it me.

Brut. Bear with me, good boy, I am much forgetful.

Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile,
And touch thy instrument a strain or two?

Luc. Ay, my lord, as it please you.

Brut. It does, my boy:

I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.
Luc. It is my duty, Sir.

Brut. I should not urge thy duty past thy
night;

I know, young bloods look for a time of rest.

Luc. I have slept, my lord, already.

Brut. It is well done; and thou shalt sleep
again;

I will not hold thee long: if I do live,
I will be good to thee. [Music, and a Song.
This is a sleepy tune:—O murd'rous slumber!
Lay'st thou thy leaden mace* upon my boy,
That plays thee music?—Gentle knave, good
night;

I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee.
If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument;
I'll take it from thee; and, good boy, good
night.

Let me see, let me see;—Is not the leaf turn'd
Where I left reading? Here it is, I think.

[He sits down.]

Enter the GHOST of CÆSAR.

How ill this taper burns!—Ha! who comes
here?

I think, it is the weakness of mine eyes,
That shapes this monstrous apparition.

It comes upon me:—Art thou any thing?

Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil,
That mak'st my blood cold, and my hair to Speak to me, what thou art. [stare?]

Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.

Brut. Why com'st thou?

Ghost. To tell thee, thou shalt see me at Philippi.

* At some time.

* Theory.

* Sceptre.

Bru. Well;
Then I shall see thee again?
Ghost. Ay, at Philippi. [GHOST vanishes.]
Bru. Why, I will see thee at Philippi then.—
Now I have taken heart, thou vanishest:
Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.—
Boy! Lucius!—Varro! Claudius! Sirs, a-
Claudius! [wake!—
Luc. The strings, my lord, are false.
Bru. He thinks, he still is at his instru-
Lucius, awake. [ment.—
Luc. My lord!
Bru. Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so cry'dst out?
Luc. My lord, I do not know that I did cry.
Bru. Yes, that thou didst: Didst thou see any thing?
Luc. Nothing, my lord.
Bru. Sleep again, Lucius.—Sirrah, Clau-Fellow thou! awake. [dins!
Var. My lord.
Clau. My lord.
Bru. Why did you so cry out, Sirs, in your sleep?
Var. Clau. Did we, my lord?
Bru. Ay: Saw you any thing?
Var. No, my lord, I saw nothing.
Clau. Nor I, my lord.
Bru. Go, and commend me to my brother
Cassius;
Bid him set on his powers betimes before,
And we will follow.
Var. Clau. It shall be done, my lord. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Plains of Philippi.

Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army.

Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered:
You said, the enemy would not come down,
But keep the hills and upper regions;
It proves not so; their battles are at hand;
They mean to warn* us at Philippi here,
Answering before we do demand of them.

Ant. Tut, I am in their bosoms, and I know
Wherefore they do it: they could be content
To visit other places; and come down
With fearful bravery, thinking, by this face,
To fasten in our thoughts that they have cour-
But 'tis not so. [age;

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Prepare you, generals:
The enemy comes on in gallant show;
Their bloody sign of battle is hung out,
And something to be done immediately.

Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on,
'pon the left hand of the even field.

Oct. Upon the right hand I, keep thou the left.

Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent?

Oct. I do not cross you; but I will do so.

[March.

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and their Army; LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, MESSALA, and others.

Bru. They stand, and would have parley.

Cas. Stand fast, Titinius: We must out and talk.

Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle?

Ant. No, Cesar, we will answer on their charge. [words.

Make forth, the generals would have some
Oct. Stir not until the signal.

Bru. Words before blows: Is it so, countrymen?

Oct. Not that we love words better, as you do.

Bru. Good words are better than bad strokes,
Octavius.

Ant. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words:

Witness the hole you made in Cesar's heart,
Crying, Long live! hail, Cesar!

Cas. Antony,

The posture of your blows are yet unknown;
But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
And leave them honeyless.

Ant. Not stingless too.

Bru. O, yes, and soundless too;
For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony,
And, very wisely, threat before you sting.

Ant. Villains, you did not so, when your vile daggers

Hack'd one another in the sides of Cesar:
You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd
like hounds, [feet;

And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Cesar's
Whilst damned Casca, like a cur, behind,
Struck Cesar on the neck. O flatterers!

Cas. Flatterers!—Now, Brutus, thank yourself:

This tongue had not offended so to-day,
If Cassius might have rul'd.

Oct. Come, come, the cause: If arguing make us sweat,

The proof of it will turn to redder drops.
Look;

I draw a sword against conspirators;
When think you that the sword goes up again?—

Never, till Cesar's three and twenty wounds
Be well aveng'd; or till another Cesar
Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors.

Bru. Cesar, thou can'st not die by traitors,
Unless thou bring'st them with thee.

Oct. So I hope;

I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.

Bru. O, if thou wert the noblest of thy strain,
Young man, thou could'st not die more honourable.

Cas. A peevish schoolboy, worthless of such honour,

Join'd with a masker and a reveller.

Ant. Old Cassius still!

Oct. Come, Antony; away.—

Defiance, traitors, hurl* we in your teeth:
If you dare fight to-day, come to the field;
If not, when you have stomachs.

[Exeunt OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army.

Cas. Why now, blow, wind; swell, billow;
and swim, bark!

The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.

Bru. Ho!

Lucilius; hark, a word with you.

Luc. My lord.

[BRUTUS and LUCILIUS converse apart.

Cas. Messala,—

Mes. What says my general?

Cas. Messala,

This is my birth-day; as this very day [sala:
Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand, Mes
Be thou my witness, that, against my will,
As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set

Upon one battle all our liberties.

You know, that I held Epicurus strong,
And his opinion: now I change my mind,
And partly credit things that do presage.
Coming from Sardis, on our former^a ensign
Two mighty eagles fell, and there they perch'd,
Gorging and feeding from our soldier's hands;
Who to Philippi here consorted; us;
This morning are they fled away, and gone;
And in their steads, do ravens, crows, and
kites,

Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us,
As we were sickly prey; their shadows seem
A canopy most fatal, under which
Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.

Mes. Believe not so.

Cas. I but believe it partly;

For I am fresh of spirit, and resolv'd
To meet all perils very constantly.

Bru. Even so, Lucilius.

Cas. Now, most noble Brutus,
The gods to-day stand friendly; that we may,
Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age!
But, since the affairs of men rest still uncertain,

Let's reason with the worst that may befall.
If we do lose the battle, then is this
The very last time we shall speak together:
What are you then determined to do?

Bru. Even by the rule of that philosophy,
By which I did blame Cato for the death
Which he did give himself:—I know not how,
But I do find it cowardly and vile,
For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
The time of life.—arming myself with patience,

To stay the providence of some high powers,
That govern us below.

Cas. Then, if we lose this battle,
You are contented to be led in triumph
Through the streets of Rome?

Bru. No, Cassius, no: think not, thou noble
Roman,
That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome;
He bears too great a mind. But this same day
Must end that work, the idea of March begun;
And whether we shall meet again, I know not.
Therefore our everlasting farewell take:—
For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius!
If we do meet again, why we shall smile;
If not, why then this parting was well made.

Cas. For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutus!

If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed;
If not, 'tis true, this parting was well made.

Bru. Why then, lead on.—O, that a man might know
The end of this day's business, ere it come!
But it sufficeth, that the day will end,
And then the end is known.—Come, ho! away!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same.—The Field of Battle.

Alarum.—Enter BRUTUS and MESSALA.

Bru. Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these bills;
Unto the legions on the other side:

[Loud Alarum.]
Let them set on at once; for I perceive
But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing,
And sudden push gives them the overthrow.
Ride, ride, Messala: let them all come down.
[Exeunt.]

^a Foremost.

[†] Accompanied.

[‡] Directions for the officers.

SCENE III.—The same.—Another part of the Field.

Alarum.—Enter CASSIUS and TITINIUS.

Cas. O, look, Titinius, look, the villain fly!
Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy:
This ensign here of mine was turning back;
I slew the coward, and did take it from him.

Tit. O Cassius, Brutus gave the word too early;
Who having some advantage on Octavius,
Took it too eagerly; his soldiers fell to spoil,
Whilst we by Antony are all enclos'd.

Enter PINDARUS.

Pin. Fly further off, my lord, fly further off;
Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord!
Fly therefore, noble Cassius, fly far off.

Cas. This hill is far enough. Look, look, Ti-tinus;

Are those my tents, where I perceive the light
To-day? They are, my lord.

Cas. Titinius, if thou lov'st me, [him,
Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops,
And here again; that I may rest assur'd,
Whether yond' troops are friend or enemy.

Tit. I will be here again, even with a thought. [Exit]

Cas. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill;
My sight was ever thick; regard Titinius,
And tell me what thou not'st about the field.—
[Exit PINDARUS.]

This day I breathed first, time is come round,
And where I did begin, there I shall end;
My life is run his compass.—Surreh, what news?

Pin. [Above.] O my lord!

Cas. What news?

Pin. Titinius is Enclosed round about with horsemen, that Make to him on the spur;—yet he spurs on.—
Now they are almost on him; now, Titinius!—
Now come 'light:—O, he 'lights too:—he's ta'en;—and, hark! [Shout]

They shout for joy.

Cas. Come down, behold no more.—
O, coward, that I am, to live so long,
To see my best friend ta'en before my face!

Enter PINDARUS.

Come hither, Sirrah:
In Parthia did I take thee prisoner;
And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,
That whatsoever I did bid thee do, Thou should'st attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath!

Now be a freeman; and, with this good sword,
That ran through Caesar's bowels, search this bosom.

Stand not to answer: Here, take thou the hills;
And when my face is cover'd as tis now,
Guide thou the sword.—Caesar, thou art re-veng'd,

Even with the sword that kill'd thee. [Dies.]

Pin. So, I am free; yet would not so have been,

Durst I have done my will. O Cassius!
Far from this country Pindarus shall run,
Where never Roman shall take note of him.
[Exit.]

Re-enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA.

Mes. It is but change, Titinius; for Octavius
Is overthrown by noble Brutus' power,
As Cassius' legions are by Antony.

Tit. These tidings will well comfort Cassius.
Mes. Where did you leave him?
Tit. All disconsolate,
 With Pindarus his bondman, on this hill.
Mes. Is not that he, that lies upon the ground?
Tit. He lies not like the living. O my heart!
Mes. Is not that he?
Tit. No, this was he, Messala,
 But Cassius is no more.—O setting sun!
 As in thy red rays thou dost sink to night,
 So in his red blood Cassius' day is set;
 The sun of Rome is set! Our day is gone;
 Clouds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are done!
 Mistrust of my success hath done this deed.
Mes. Mistrust of good success hath done
 this deed.
 O hateful error, melancholy's child!
 Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of men
 The things that are not? O error, soon conceiv'd,
 Thou never com'st unto a happy birth,
 But kill'st the mother that engender'd thee.
Tit. What, Pindarus! Where art thou, Pindarus?
Mes. Seek him, Titinius: whilst I go to meet
 The noble Brutus, thrusting this report
 Into his ears: I may say, thrusting it;
 For piercing steel, and darts envenomed,
 Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus,
 As tidings of this sight.
Tit. Hie you, Messala,
 And I will seek for Pindarus the while.
 [Exit MESSALA.
 Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius?
 Did I not meet thy friends? and did not they Put on my brows this wreath of victory,
 And bid me give't thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts?
 Alas, thou hast misconstrued every thing.
 But hold thee, take this garland on thy brow;
 Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I
 Will do his bidding.—Brutus, come apace,
 And see how I regarded Caius Cassius.—
 By your leave, gods:—This is a Roman's part:
 Come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' heart.
 [Dies.
Alarum. Re-enter MESSALA, with BRUTUS, young CATO, STRATO, VOLUMNIUS, and LUCI-LIUS.
Br. Where, where, Messala, doth his body
 lie?
Mes. Lo, yonder; and Titinius mourning it.
Br. Titinius' face is upward.
Cato. He is slain.
Br. O Julius Cesar, thou art mighty yet!
 Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords
 In our own proper entrails. [Low Alarums.
Cato. Brave Titinius! [sings!
 Look, wher' he have not crown'd dead Cas-Br. Are yet two Romans living such as these?—
 The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!
 It is impossible that ever Rome [tears
 Should breed thy fellow.—Friends, I owe more
 To this dead man, than thou shalt see me pay.—
 I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time.—
 Come, therefore, and to Thassos send his body;
 His funeral shall not be in our camp,
 Lest it discomfort us.—Lucilius, come;—
 And come young Cato; let us to the field.—
 Labeo, and Flavius, set our battles on:—
 'Tis three o'clock; and, Romans, yet e'er night
 We shall try fortune in a second fight.
 [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Another part of the Field.

Alarum.—Enter, fighting, Soldiers of both Armies; then BRUTUS, CATO, LUCILIUS, and
 others.

Br. Yet, countrymen, O, yet hold up your heads!

Cato. What bastard doth not? Who will go
 with me?

I will proclaim my name about the field:—
 I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!
 A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend;
 I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

[Charges the Enemy.

Br. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I;
 Brutus, my country's friend; know me for Brutus.

[Exit, charging the Enemy. CATO is overpowered, and falls.

Luc. O young and noble Cato, art thou down?

Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius;
 And may'st be honour'd being Cato's son.

1 Sold. Yield, or thou diest.

Luc. Only I yield to die:

There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight;
 [Offering Money.

Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death.

1 Sold. We must not.—A noble prisoner!

2 Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is ta'en.

1 Sold. I'll tell the news.—Here comes the general:—

Enter ANTONY.

Brutus is ta'en, Brutus is ta'en, my lord.

Ant. Where is he?

Luc. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe enough:
 I dare assure thee, that no enemy
 Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus:
 The gods defend him from so great a shame!
 When you do find him, or alive, or dead,
 He will be found like Brutus, like himself.

Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, I assure you,

A prize no less in worth: keep this man safe,
 Give him all kindness: I had rather have Such men my friends, than enemies. Go on,
 And see wher' Brutus be alive, or dead:
 And bring us word unto Octavius' tent,
 How every thing is chanc'd. [Exit.

SCENE V.—Another part of the Field.

Enter BRUTUS, DARDANIUS, CLITUS, STRATO, and VOLUMNIUS.

Br. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.

Cl. Statilius show'd the torch-light; but,
 my lord,

He came not back; he is or ta'en, or slain.

Br. Sit thee down, Clitus: Slaying is the word;

It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus.— [Whispering.

Cl. What, I, my lord? No, not for all the world.

Br. Peace then, no words.

Cl. I'll rather kill myself.

Br. Hark thee, Dardanius! [Whispers him.

Der. I do such a deed?

Cl. O, Dardanius!

Der. O, Clitus!

Cl. What ill request did Brutus make to
 thee?

Des. To kill him, Clitus: Look, he meditates.

Cl. Now is that noble vessel full of grief, That it runs over even at his eyes.

Br. Come hither, good Volumnius; list a word.

Vol. What says my lord?

Br. Why, this, Volumnius:

The ghost of Cæsar hath appear'd to me
Two several times by night: at Sardis, once;
And, this last night, here in Philippi's fields.
I know, my hour is come.

Vol. Not so, my lord.

Br. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius.

Thou see'st the world, Volumnius, how it goes;
Our enemies have beat us to the pit:
It is more worthy to leap in ourselves,
Than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius,

Then know'st, that we two went to school together;
Then know'st, that we two went to school together;
Even for that our love of old, I pray thee,
Hold thou my sword-hilts, whilst I run on it.

Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my lord. [Alarm still.]

Cl. Fly, fly, my lord; there is no tarrying here.

Br. Farewell to you;—and you;—and you, Volumnius.—

Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep;
Farewell to thee too, Strato.—Countryman,
My heart doth joy, that yet, in all my life,
I found no man, but he was true to me.
I shall have glory by this losing day,
More than Octavius, and Mark Antony,
By this vile conquest shall attain unto.
So, fare you well at once; for Brutus' tongue
Hath almost ended his life's history: [rest,
Night hangs upon mine eyes; my bones would
That have but labour'd to attain this hour.

[Alarm. Cry within; Fly, fly, fly.]

Cl. Fly, my lord, fly.

Br. Hence; I will follow thee.

[Exeunt CLITUS, DARDANIUS, and VOLUMNIUS.]

I pr'ythee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord:
Thou art a fellow of a good respect;
Thy life hath had some smatch of honour in it:

Hold thou my sword, and turn away thy face
While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato?

Str. Give me your hand first: Fare you well, my lord.

Br. Farewell, good Strato.—Cæsar, now he still:

I kill'd not thee with half so good a will.

[He runs on his sword and dies.]

Alarm. Retreat. Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, MESSALA, LUCILIUS, and their Army.

Oct. What man is that?

Mes. My master's man.—Strato, where is thy master?

Str. Free from the bondage you are in Messala;

The conquerors can but make a fire of him;
For Brutus only overcame himself,

And no man else hath honour by his death.

Luc. So Brutus should be found.—I thank thee, Brutus.

That thou hast prov'd Lucilius' saying true.

Oct. All that serv'd Brutus, I will entertain them.*

Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?

Str. Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you.

Oct. Do so, Messala.

Mes. How died my master, Strato?

Str. I held the sword, and he did run on it.

Mes. Octavius, then take him to follow thee,
That did the latest service to my master.

Ant. This was the noblest Roman of them
All the conspirators, save only he, [all:]

Did that they did in envy of great Cæsar;

He, only, in a general honest thought,

And common good to all, made use of them.

His life was gentle; and the elements

So mix'd in him, that Nature might stand up,

And say to all the world, This was a man!

Oct. According to his virtue let us use him,
With all respect and rites of burial.

Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,

Most like a soldier, order'd honourably.—

So, call the field to rest: and let's away,

To part the glories of this happy day. [Exeunt.]

* Receive into my service.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Alexandria.—A Room in CLEOPATRA'S Palace.

Enter DEMETRIUS and PHILO.

Phil. Nay, but this dotage of our general's, (O'erflows the measure: those his goodly eyes,
That o'er the files and musters of the war
Have glow'd like plated Mars, now bend,
now turn,
The office and devotion of their view
Upon a tawny front: his captain's heart,
Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst
The buckles on his breast, reneges* all temper;
And is become the bellows, and the fan,
To cool a gypsy's lust. Look where they come!

Flourish. Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, with their Trains; EUNUCHS fanning her.

Take but good note, and you shall see in him
The triple pillar of the world transform'd
Into a strumpet's fool: behold and see.

Cleo. If it be love indeed, tell me how much.

Ant. There's beggary in the love that can be reckon'd.

Cleo. I'll set a bourn† how far to be belov'd.

Ant. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter an ATTENDANT.

Att. News, my good lord, from Rome.

Ant. Grates* me:—The sum.

Cleo. Nay, hear them, Antony:

Fulvia, perchance is angry; Or, who knows
If the scarce-bearded Cesar have not sent
His powerful mandate to you, Do this, or this;
Take int that kingdom, and enfranchise that;
Perform't, or else we damn thee.

Ant. How, my love!

Cleo. Perchance,—nay, and most like,
You must not stay here longer, your dismissal
Is come from Cesar; therefore hear it, Antony.—

Where's Fulvia's process!‡ Cesar's, I would say!—Both?—

Call in the messengers.—As I am Egypt's
queen,
Thou blushest, Antony; and that blood of thine [shame,
Is Cesar's homager; else so thy cheek pays
When shrill-tongu'd Fulvia scolds.—The messengers.

Ant. Let Rome in Tyber melt! and the wide arch

Of the rang'd empire fall! Here is my space;
Kingdoms are clay: our dungy earth alike
Feeds beast as man: the nobleness of life
Is, to do thus; when such a mutual pair, [Embracing.

And such a twain can do't, in which, I bind

* Renounces.

† Bound or limit.

* Offends.

‡ Subdue, conquer.

‡ Summons.

(On pain of punishment, the world to weet,*
We stand up peerless.

Cleo. Excellent Falsehood!
Why did we marry Fulvia, and not love her?—
I'll seem the fool I am not; Antony
Will be himself.

Ant. But stirr'd by Cleopatra.—
Now, for the love of Love, and her soft hours,
Let's not confound† the time with conference harsh:

There's not a minute of our lives should stretch Without some pleasure now: What sport tonight?

Cleo. Hear the ambassadors.

Ant. Fie, wrangling queen!
Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh,
To weep; whose every passion fully strives
To make itself, in thee, fair and admir'd!
No messenger; but thine and all alone,
To-night, we'll wander through the streets,
and note

The qualities of people. Come, my queen;
Last night you did desire it:—Speak not to us.

[Exeunt ANT. and CLEO. with their Train.]

Dem. Is Cesar with Antonius priz'd so slight?

Phi. Sir, sometimes, when he is not Antony,
He comes too short of that great property
Which still should go with Antony.

Dem. I'm full sorry,
That he approves the common liar,‡ who
Thus speaks of him at Rome: But I will hope
Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same.—Another Room.

Enter CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and a SOOTH-SAYER.

Char. Lord Alexas, sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the soothsayer that you praised so to the queen? O, that I knew this husband, which, you say, must change his horns with garlands!

Alex. Soothsayer.

Sooth. Your will?

Char. Is this the man?—Is't you, Sir, that know things?

Sooth. In nature's infinite book of secrecy,
A little I can read.

Alex. Show him your hand.

Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly; wine
Cleopatra's health to drink. [enough,

Char. Good Sir, give me good fortune.

Sooth. I make not, but foresee.

Char. Pray then, foresee me one.

Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer than you are.

Char. He means, in flesh.

Irás. No, you shall paint when you are old.

Char. Wrinkles forbid!

Alex. Vex not his prescience; be attentive.

Char. Hush!

Sooth. You shall be more loving, than beloved.

Char. I had rather heat my liver with drinking.

Alex. Nay, hear him.

Char. Good now, some excellent fortune!
Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all: let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do homage: find me to marry me with Octavius Cesar, and companion me with my mistress.

Sooth. You shall outlive the lady whom you serve.

Char. O excellent! I love long life better than figs.

Sooth. You have seen and proved a fairer former fortune

Than that which is to approach.

Char. Then, belike, my children shall have no names:‡ Pr'ythee, how many boys and wenches must I have?

Sooth. If every of your wishes had a womb,
And fertile every wish, a million.

Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch.

Alex. You think, none but your sheets are privy to your wishes.

Char. Nay, come, tell Iras hers.

Alex. We'll know all our fortunes.

Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, tonight, shall be—drunk to bed.

Irás. There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else.

Char. Even as the overflowing Nilus presageth famine.

Irás. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.

Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear.—
Pr'ythee, tell her but a worky-day fortune.

Sooth. Your fortunes are alike.

Irás. But how, but how? give me particulars.

Sooth. I have said.

Irás. Am I not an inch of fortune better than
she?

Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it?

Irás. Not in my husband's nose.

Char. Our worser thoughts heavens mend!
Alexas,—come, his fortune, his fortune.—†, let him marry a woman that cannot go. sweet Isis,‡ I beseech thee! And let her die too, and give him a worse! and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a cuckold! Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight; good Isis, I beseech thee!

Irás. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people! for, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose-wived, so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knave uncuckolded; Therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly!

Char. Amen.

Alex. Lo, now! if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores, but they'd do't.

Eno. Hush! here comes Antony.

Char. Not he, the queen.

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Cleo. Saw you my lord?

Eno. No, lady.

Cleo. Was he not here?

Char. No, madam.

Cleo. He was dispos'd to mirth; but on the sudden [bus,—

A Roman thought hath struck him.—Enobar-
Eno. Madam.

Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither. Where's Alexas?

Alex. Here, madam, at your service.—My lord approaches.

* Know.

† Consume.

‡ Fame.

* Shall be bastards.

† An Egyptian goddess.

Enter ANTONY, with a MESSENGER and Attendants.

Cleo. We will not look upon him: Go with us.

[Exit CLEOPATRA, ENOBABBUS, ALEXAS, IRAS, CHARMIAN, SOUTHSAYER, and Attendants.]

Mess. Fulvia thy wife first came into the field.

Ant. Against my brother Lucius?

Mess. Ay:

But soon that war had end, and the time's state
Made friends of them, joining their force 'gainst
Cesar;

Whose better issue in the war, from Italy,
Upon the first encounter, drave them.

Ant. Well,
What worst?

Mess. The nature of bad news infects the teller.

Ant. When it concerns the fool, or coward.—
On:

Things, that are past, are done, with me.—Tis
Who tells me true, though in his tale lie death,
I hear him as he flatter'd.

Mess. Labienus

(This is stiff news) hath, with his Parthian
Extended* Asia from Euphrates; [force,
His conquering banner shook, from Syria
To Lydia, and to Ionia;
Whilst—

Ant. Antony, thou would'st say,—

Mess. O, my lord!

Ant. Speak to me home, mince not the general tongue;

Name Cleopatra as she's call'd in Rome:
Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase; and taunt my faults

With such full licence, as both truth and ma-
Have power to utter. O, then we bring forth weeds,

When our quick winds† lie still; and our ills
told us,

Is as our earring.‡ Fare thee well a while.

Mess. At your noble pleasure. [Exit.

Ant. From Sicyon how the news? Speak
there.

1 Att. The man from Sicyon.—Is there such a one?

2 Att. He stays§ upon your will.

Ant. Let him appear,—

These strong Egyptian fetters I must break,

Enter another MESSENGER.

Or lose myself in dotage.—What are you?

2 Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead.

Ant. Where died she?

2 Mess. In Sicyon:

Her length of sickness, with what else more
Importeth thee to know, this bears. [serious
[Gives a letter.]

Ant. Forbear me.— [Exit MESSENGER.]

There's a great spirit gone! Thus did I desire
What our contempts do often hurl from us, [it:
We wish it ours again; the present pleasure,
By revolution lowering, does become
The opposite of itself: she's gone, being gone;
The hand could pluck her back, that shov'd her on.

I must from this enchanting queen break off;
Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know,
My idleness doth hatch.—How now! Enobarbus!

Enter ENOBABBUS.

Eno. What's your pleasure, Sir?

Ant. I must with haste from hence.

Eno. Why, then, we kill all our women:
We see how mortal an unkindness is to them;
if they suffer our departure, death's the word.

Ant. I must be gone.

Eno. Under a compelling occasion, let women die: It were pity to cast them away for nothing; though, between them and a great cause, they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly; I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment: I do think, there is mettle in death, which commits some loving act upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying.

Ant. She is cunning past man's thought.

Eno. Alack, Sir, no; her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love: We cannot call her winds and waters, sighs and tears; they are greater storms and tempests than almanacks can report: this cannot be cunning in her; if it be, she makes a shower of rain as well as Jove.

Ant. 'Would I had never seen her!

Eno. O, Sir, you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work; which not to have been blessed withal, would have discredited your travel.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Sir?

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulvia?

Ant. Dead.

Eno. Why, Sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice. When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth; comforting therein, that when old robes are worn out, there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented: this grief is crowned with consolation; your old smock brings forth a new petticoat:—and, indeed, the tears live in an onion, that should water
this sorrow.

Ant. The business she hath broached in the Cannot endure my absence. [state,

Eno. And the business you have broached here cannot be without you; especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode.

Ant. No more light answers. Let our officers

Have notice what we purpose. I shall break
The cause of our expedience* to the queen,
And get her lover† to part. For not alone
The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches,
Do strongly speak to us; but the letters too
Of many our contriving friends in Rome
Petition us at home: Sextus Pompeius
Hath given the dare to Cesar, and commands
The empire of the sea: our slippery people (Whose love is never link'd to the deserver, Till his deserts are past,) begin to throw
Pompey the great, and all his dignities,
Upon his son; who, high in name and power,
Higher than both in blood and life, stands up
For the main soldier: whose quality, going on,
The sides o'the world may danger: Much is breeding, [life,
Which, like the courser's‡ hair, hath yet but
And not a serpent's poison. Say, our pleasure,

* Seized. † In some editions minis.

‡ Tilling, plowing; prepares us to produce grain: and.
§ Wait.

‡ Move.

To such whose place is under us, requires
Our quick remove from hence.

Eas. I shall do't.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Where is he?

Char. I did not see him since.

Cleo. See where he is, who's with him, what he does:—

I did not send you;—If you find him sad,
Say, I am dancing; if in mirth, report
That I am sudden sick: Quick, and return.

[Exit ALEXAS.]

Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly,
You do not hold the method to enforce
The like from him.

Cleo. What should I do, I do not?

Char. In each thing give him way, cross him in nothing.

Cleo. Thou teachest like a fool: the way to lose him.

Char. Tempt him not so too far: I wish for-
bear;

In time we hate that which we often fear.

Enter ANTONY.

But here comes Antony.

Cleo. I am sick, and sullen.

Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose,—

Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian, I shall fall;

It cannot be thus long, the sides of nature
Will not sustain it.

Ant. Now, my dearest queen,—

Cleo. Pray you, stand further from me.

Ant. What's the matter?

Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there's some good news.

What says the married woman?—You may go;
'Would, she had never given you leave to
come!

Let her not say, 'tis I that keep you here,
I have no power upon you; hers you are.

Ant. The gods best know,—

Cleo. O, never was there queen
So mightily betray'd! Yet, at the first,
I saw the treasons planted.

Ant. Cleopatra,—

Cleo. Why should I think, you can be mine, and true, [gods,
Though you in swearing shake the thronged
Who have been false to Fulvia? Riotous madness,

To be entangled with those mouth-made vows,
Which break themselves in swearing!

Ant. Most sweet queen,—

Cleo. Nay, pray you, seek no colour for your going, [ing,
But bid farewell, and go: when you sued stay-
Then was the time for words: No going
then;—

Eternity was in our lips, and eyes; [poor,
Bliss in our brows' bent;† none our parts so
But was a race‡ of heaven: They are so still,
(Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world,
Art turn'd the greatest liar.

Ant. How now, lady!

Cleo. I would, I had thy inches; thou shouldst know,
There were a heart in Egypt.

Ant. Hear me, queen:

The strong necessity of time commands
Our services a while; but my full heart
Remains in use with you. Our Italy
Shines o'erwith civil swords: Sextus Pompeius
Makes his approaches to the port* of Rome:
Equality of two domestic powers

cular,

And that which most with you should safe-
my going,

Is Fulvia's death.

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom,

It does from childishness:—Can Fulvia die?!

Ant. She's dead, my queen:

Look here, and, at thy sovereign leisure, read
The garboils she awak'd;§ at the last, best:
See, when, and where she died.

Cleo. O most false love!

Where be the sacred vials thou should'st fill
With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see,
In Fulvia's death, how mine receiv'd shall be.

Ant. Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to
know

The purposes I bear; which are, or cease
As you shall give the advice: Now, by the fire,

That quickens Nilus' slime,|| I go from hence,
Thy soldier, servant; making peace, or war,
As thou affect'st.

Cleo. Cut my lace, Charmian, come;—

But let it be.—I am quickly ill, and well;
So Antony loves.

Ant. My precious queen, forbear;
And give true evidence to his love, which

Cleo. So Fulvia told me.

I prythee turn aside, and weep for her;
Then bid adieu to me, and say the tears
Belong to Egypt:¶ Good now, play one scene
Of excellent dissembling; and let it look Like perfect honour.

Ant. You'll heat my blood; no more.

Cleo. You can do better yet; but this is meetly.

Ant. Now, by my sword,—

Cleo. And target.—Still he mends;
But this is not the best: Look, prythee,
Charmian,

How this Herculean Roman does become
The carriage of his chafe.

Ant. I'll leave you, lady.

Cleo. Courteous lord, one word.

Sir, you and I must part,—but that's not it:
Sir, you and I have lov'd,—but there's not it.
That you know well: Something it is I would,—
O, my oblivion†† is a very Antony,
And I am all forgotten.

Ant. But that your royalty
Holds idleness your subject, I should take you
For idleness itself.

Cleo. 'Tis sweating labour,
To bear such idleness so near the heart
As Cleopatra this. But, Sir, forgive me;

Our separation so abides, and flies,
That thou, residing here, go'st yet with me,
And I, hence fleeting, here remain with thee.
Away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Rome.—An apartment in CESAR'S House.

Enter OCTAVIUS CESAR, LEPIDUS, and Attendants.

Ces. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth know,
It is not Cesar's natural vice to hate
One great competitor: * from Alexandria
This is the news; He fishes, drinks, and wastes
The lamps of night in revel: is not more man-like

Than Cleopatra; nor the queen Ptolemy [or]
More womanly than he: hardly gave audience, Vouchsaf'd to think he had partners: You shall find there

A man, who is the abstract of all faults
That all men follow.

Lep. I must not think, there are
Evils enough to darken all his goodness:
His faults, in him, seem as the spots of heaven,
More fiery by night's blackness; hereditary,
Rather than purchas'd; † what he cannot
Than what he chooses. [change,

Ces. You are too indulgent: let us grant, it is not

Amiss to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy;
To give a kingdom for a mirth; to sit
And keep the turn of tippling with a slave;
To reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet
With knaves that smell of sweat: say, this becomes him,

(As his composure must be rare indeed, Whom these things cannot blemish,) yet must Antony

No way excuse his soils, when we do bear
So great weight in his lightness. ‡ If he fill'd
His vacancy with his voluptuousness,
Full surfeits, and the dryness of his bones,
Call on him § for't: but, to confound || such time, [loud]

That drums him from his sport, and speaks as
As his own state, and ours,—'tis to be chid
As we rate boys; who, being mature in knowledge, [sure,

Pawn their experience to their present plea-
And so rebel to judgement.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Lep. Here's more news.

Mess. Thy biddings have been done; and every hour,
Most noble Cesar, shalt thou have report
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea;
And it appears, he is belov'd of those
That only have fear'd Cesar: to the ports
The discontents ¶ repair, and men's reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Ces. I should have known no less:—
It hath been taught us from the primal state,
That he, which is, was wish'd, until he were;
And the ebb'd man, ne'er lov'd, till ne'er worth
love,

* Associate or partner. † Procured by his own fault.
‡ Levy. § Visit him. || Consume. ¶ Discontented

Comes dear'd, by being lack'd.* This common body,
Like a vagabond flag upon the stream,
Goes to, and back, lackeying the varying tide,
To rot itself with motion.

Mess. Cesar, I bring thee word,
Menecrates and Menas, famous pirates,
Make the sea serve them: which they ear† and
wound

With keels of every kind: Many hot inroads
They make in Italy; the borders maritime Lack blood‡ to think on't, and flush§ youth revolt:

No vessel can peep forth, but 'tis as soon
Taken as seen; for Pompey's name strikes
Than could his war resisted. [more,

Ces. Antony,
Leave thy lascivious wassals. || When thou once
Wast beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st
Hirtius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel
Did famine follow; whom thou fought'st against, [more]

Though daintily brought up, with patience
Than savages could suffer: Thou didst drink
The stale¶ of horses, and the gilded puddle
Which beasts would cough at: thy palate then did deign

The roughest berry on the rudest hedge;
Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets, [Alps]

The barks of trees thou browsed'st; on the
It is reported, thou did'st eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on: And all this
(It wounds thine honour, that I speak it now,)
Was borne so like a soldier, that thy cheek
So much as lank'd not.

Lep. It is pity of him.

Ces. Let his shames quickly
Drive him to Rome: 'Tis time we twain
Did show ourselves i' the field; and, to that end, Assemble we immediate council: Pompey
Thrives in our idleness.

Lep. To-morrow, Cesar,
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly
Both what by sea and land I can be able,
To 'front this present time.

Ces. Till which encounter,
It is my business too. Farewell.

Lep. Farewell, my lord: What you shall know mean time
Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, Sir,
To let me be partaker.

Ces. Doubt not, Sir;
I knew it for my bond. †† [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Alexandria.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

Cleo. Charmian,—

Char. Madam.

Cleo. Ha, ha!—

Give me to drink mandragora. ††

Char. Why, madam?

Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of My Antony is away. [time,

Char. You think of him
Too much.

Cleo. O, treason!

Char. Madam, I trust, not so.

Cleo. Thou eunuch! Mardian!

Mar. What's your highness' pleasure?

* Endear'd by being missed. † Plough. ‡ Turn pale.
§ Ruddy. || Feastings; in the old copy it is wassails.
¶ c. vassals. ¶ Urine.  Stagnant, dirty water.
†† My bounden duty. †† A noisy person.

Cleo. Not now to hear thee sing; I take no pleasure
In aught a eunuch has: 'Tis well for thee,
That, being unseminar'd,* thy freer thoughts
May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affections?

Mar. Yes, gracious madam.

Cleo. Indeed?

Mar. Not in deed, madam; for I can do nothing
But what in deed is honest to be done:
Yet have I fierce affections, and think,
What Venus did with Mars.

Cleo. O Charmian,
Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he, or sits he?
Or does he walk? or is he on his horse?
O happy horse, to bear the weight of Antony!
Do bravely, horse! for wot'st thou whom thou mov'st?

The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm
And burgonett of men.—He's speaking now,
Or murmuring, Where's my serpent of old Nile?
For so he calls me; Now I feed myself
With most delicious poison:—Think on me,
That am with Phœbus' amorous pinches black,
And wrinkled deep in time? Broad-fronted
Cesar,

When thou wast here above the ground, I was
A morsel for a monarch: and great Pompey
Would stand, and make his eyes grow in my brow;
There would he anchor his aspect, and die
With his looking on his life.

Enter ALEXAS.

Alex. Sovereign of Egypt, hail!

Cleo. How much unlike art thou Mark Antony?

Yet, coming from him, that great medicine
With his tinct gilded thee:—
How goes it with my brave Mark Antony?

Alex. Last thing he did, dear queen,
He kiss'd,—the last of many doubled kisses,—
This orient pearl;—His speech sticks in my heart.

Cleo. Mine ear must pluck it thence.

Alex. Good friend, quoth he,

Say, the firm Roman to great Egypt sends
This treasure of an oyster; at whose foot
To mend the petty present, I will place
Her opulent throne with kingdoms: All the east,
Say thou, shall call her mistress. So he needn'd,
And soberly did mount a terracottæ steed,
Who neigh'd so high, that what I would have
Was beastly dumb'd by him. [Exit Alex.]

Cleo. What, was he sad, or merry?

Alex. Like to the time o' the year between the extremes
Of hot and cold: he was ner sad, ner merry.

Cleo. O well-divided disposition!—Note him, Note him, good Charmian, 'tis the man; but note him:

He was not sad; for he would shine on those
That make their looks by his: he was not merry;
Which seem'd to tell them, his remembrance lay

In Egypt with his joy: but between both;
O heavenly mingle!—Be'st thou sad, or merry,
The violence of either thee becomes;
So does it no man else.—Met'st thou my posts?

Alex. Ay, madam, twenty several messengers: why do you send so thick? [Exit Alex.]

Cleo. Who's been that day
When I forget to send to Antony,

Shall die a beggar.—Ink and paper. Char-mian.—

Welcome, my good Alexas.—Did I, Charmian,
Ever love Cesar so?

Char. O that brave Cesar!

Cleo. Be chok'd with such another emphasis!
Say, the brave Antony.

Char. The valiant Cesar!

Cleo. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth,
If thou with Cesar paragon again
My man of men.

Char. By your most gracious pardon,
I sing but after you.

Cleo. My sallad days;
When I was green in judgement:—^[blood] Cold is
To say, as I said then!—But, come, away:
Get me ink and paper: he shall have every day
A several greeting, or I'll unpeople Egypt:
[Exit Char.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Messina.—A Room in Pompey's
house.

Enter POMPEY, MENEKRATES, and MENAS.

Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall us-
The deeds of justest men. [Exit Men.]

Mene. Know, worthy Pompey,
That what they do delay, they not deny.

Pom. Whiles we are suitors to their throes,
The thing we sue for. [Exit Mene.]

Mene. We, ignorant of ourselves, ^[powers]
Beg often our own harms, which the wise
Deny us for our good; so find we profit
By losing of our prayers.

Pom. I shall do well:
The people love me, and the sea is mine:
My power's a crescent, and my auguring hope
Says, it will come to the full. Mark Antony
In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make No wars without doors: Cesar gets money where

He loses hearts: Lepidus flatters both,
Of both is flatter'd; but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.

Mene. Cesar and Lepidus
Are in the field; a mighty strength they carry.

Pom. Where have you this? 'tis false.

Mene. From Silvius, Sir.

Pom. He dreams: I know, they are in Rome
together,
Looking for Antony: But all charms of law,
Salt Cleopatra, soften thy warr'd lip!
Let witchcraft join with beauty, lust with Tie up the libertine in a field of feasts, ^[b]
Keep his brain fuming; Epicurean cooks,
Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite,
That sleep and feeding may procure his ^[time]

Even till a Lethe'd dullness.—How now, Var-[Exit Men.]

Enter VARRIUS.

Var. This is most certain that I stand del-
Mark Antony is every hour in Rome ^[var]
Expected; since he went from Egypt, 'tis
A space for further travel.

Pom. I could have given less matter
A better ear.—Menas, I did not think,
This amorous surfeiter would have don'd; ^[time]
For such a petty war: his soldiership
Is twice the other twain: But let us rear
The higher our opinion, that our starr'd
Can from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck
The ne'er-lust-wearied Antony.

* Declined, faded.

† Down on; i. e. put on.

‡ To.

§ Helmet.

Men. I cannot hope,
 Cesar and Antony shall well greet together:
 His wife, that's dead, did trespasses to Cesar;
 His brother warr'd upon him; although, I think,
 Not mov'd by Antony.

Pom. I know not, Menas,
 How lesser enmities may give way to greater.
 Were't not that we stand up against them all,
 'Twere pregnant they should square* between themselves;

For they have entertained cause enough
 To draw their swords: but how the fear of us
 May cement their divisions, and bind up
 The petty difference, we yet not know.
 Be it as our gods will have it! It only stands
 Our lives upon, to use our strongest hands.
Come, Menas. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Rome.—A Room in the house of LEPIDUS.

Enter ENOBARBUS and LEPIDUS.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed,
 And shall become you well, to entreat your
 To soft and gentle speech. [captain]

Eno. I shall entreat him
 To answer like himself: If Cesar move him,
 Let Antony look over Cesar's head,
 And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter,
 Were I the wearer of Antonius' beard,
 I would not shave to-day.

Lep. 'Tis not a time
 For private stomaching.

Eno. Every time
 Serves for the matter that is then born in it.
Lep. But small to greater matters must give way.

Eno. Not if the small come first.
Lep. Your speech is passion:
 But, pray you, stir no embers up. Here comes
 The noble Antony.

Enter ANTONY and VENTIDIUS.

Eno. And yonder, Cesar.

Enter CESAR, MECENAS, and AGRIPPA.

Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia:
 Hark you, Ventidius.

Ces. I do not know,
 Mecenas; ask Agrippa.

Lep. Noble friends,
 That which combin'd us was most great, and let not

A leaner action rend us. What's amiss,
 May it be gently heard: When we debate
 Our trivial difference loud, we do commit Murder in healing wounds: Then, noble part-
 (The rather, for I earnestly beseech,) [ners,
 'Touch you the sourest points with sweetest
 Nor curstness; grow to the matter. [terms,

Ant. 'Tis spoken well:
 Were we before our armies, and to fight,
 I should do thus.

Ces. Welcome to Rome.

Ant. Thank you.

Ces. Sit.

Ant. Sit, Sir.

Ces. Nay,

Then—

Ant. I learn, you take things ill, which are not so;

Or, being, concern you not.

Ces. I must be laugh'd at,
 If, or for nothing, or a little, I

Should say myself offended; and with you Chiefly i'the world: more laugh'd at, that I should

Once name you derogately, when to sound your name

It not concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Egypt, Cesar.

What was't to you?

Ces. No more than my residing here at Rome
 Might be to you in Egypt: Yet, if you there Did practise* on my state, your being in Egypt
 Might be my question.†

Ant. How intend you, practis'd?

Ces. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent, [brother,

By what did here befall me. Your wife, and Made wars upon me, and their contestation
 Was theme for you, you were the word of war.

Ant. You do mistake your business; my brother never

Did urge me in his act: I did enquire it;
 And have my learning from some true reports,‡
 That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather

Discredit my authority with yours;
 And make the wars alike against my stomach,
 Having alike your cause? Of this, my letters Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quarrel,

As matter whole you have not to make it with,
 It must not be with this.

Ces. You praise yourself

By laying defects of judgement to me; but
 You patch'd up your excuses.

Ant. Not so, not so;

I know you could not lack, I am certain on't,
 Very necessity of this thought, that I,
 Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,

Could not with grateful eyes attend those wars Which 'fronted§ mine own peace. As for my wife,

I would you had her spirit in such another:
 The third o'the world is yours; which with a
 snaffle||

You may pace easy, but not such a wife.

Eno. 'Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women'

Ant. So much incurable, her garboils,¶ Cesar,

Made out of her impatience, (which not wanted Shrewdness of policy too,) I grieving grant,
 Did you too much disquiet: for that, you must
 But say, I could not help it.

Ces. I wrote to you,
 When rioting in Alexandria; you
 Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
 Did gibe my missive out of audience.

Ant. Sir,

He fell upon me, ere admitted; then
 Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want
 Of what I was i'the morning; but, next day,
 I told him of myself; which was as much
 As to have ask'd him pardon: Let this follow
 Be nothing of our strife; if we contend,
 Out of our question†† wipe him.

Ces. You have broken
 The article of your oath; which you shall never Have tongue to charge me with.

Lep. Soft, Cesar.

Ant. No, Lepidus, let him speak,
 The honour's sacred which he talks on now,

* Use bad arts or stratagems.

† Subject of conversation.

‡ Reports.

§ Fronted.

|| Snaffle.

 Missive.

§ Reports.

Supposing that I lack'd it: But on, Cesar;
The article of my oath,—

Ces. To lend me arms, and aid, when I requir'd them;
The which you both denied.

Ant. Neglected, rather; [up]
And then, when poison'd hours had bound me
From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may,

I'll play the penitent to you: but mine honesty
Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my power

Work without it: Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars here;
For which myself, the ignorant motive, do
So far ask pardon, as befits mine honour
To stoop in such a case.

Lep. 'Tis nobly spoken.

Mec. If it might please you, to enforce no further

The griefs* between ye: to forget them quite,
Were to remember that the present need
Speaks to atone† you.

Lep. Worthily spoke, Mecænas.

Eno. Or, if you borrow one another's love for the instant, you may, when you hear no more words of Pompey, return it again: you shall have time to wrangle in, when you have nothing else to do.

Ant. Thou art a soldier only; speak no more.

Eno. That truth should be silent, I had almost forgot.

Ant. You wrong this presence, therefore speak no more.

Eno. Go to then; your considerate stone.

Ces. I do not much dislike the matter, but
The manner of his speech: for it cannot be,
We shall remain in friendship, our conditions;†
So differing in their acts. Yet, if I knew
What hoop should hold us staunch,‡ from edge to edge

O'the world I would pursue it.

Agri. Give me leave, Cesar,—

Ces. Speak, Agrippa.

Agri. Thou hast a sister by the mother's side,
Admir'd Octavia: great Mark Antony
Is now a widower.

Ces. Say not so, Agrippa;
if Cleopatra heard you, your reproof
Were well deserv'd of rashness.

Ant. I am not married, Cesar: let me hear
Agrippa further speak.

Agri. To hold you in perpetual amity,
To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an unslipping knot, take Antony
Octavia to his wife: whose beauty claims
No worse a husband than the best of men;
Whose virtue, and whose general graces, speak
That which none else can utter. By this marriage,

All little jealousies, which now seem great,
And all great fears, which now import their dangers, [tales,
Would then be nothing: truths would be but Where now half tales be truths: her love to both,

Would, each to other, and all loves to both.
Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke;
For 'tis a studied, not a present thought,
By duty ruminated.

Ant. Will Cesar speak?

Ces. Not till he hears how Antony is touch'd
With what is spoke already.

Ant. What power is in Agrippa,
If I would say, Agrippa, be it so,
To make this good?

Ces. The power of Cesar, and His power unto Octavia.

Ant. May I never
To this good purpose, that so fairly shows.
Dream of impediment!—Let me have thy hand:
Further this act of grace; and, from this hour,
The heart of brothers govern in our loves.
And sway our great designs!

Ces. There is my hand.
A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother
Did ever love so dearly: Let her live
To join our kingdoms, and our hearts; and Fly off our loves again! [re-ter

Lep. Happily, amen!

Ant. I did not think to draw my sword 'gainst Pompey;
For he hath laid strange courtesies, and great
Of late upon me: I must thank him only,
Lest my remembrance suffer ill report;
At heel of that, defy him.

Lep. Time calls upon us:
Of us must Pompey presently be sought,
Or else he seeks out us.

Ant. And where lies he?

Ces. About the mount Misenum.

Ant. What's his strength
By land?

Ces. Great, and increasing: but by sea
He is an absolute master.

Ant. So is the fame. [it.
'Would, we had spoke together! Haste we for Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, despatch we
The business we have talk'd of.

Ces. With most gladness;
And do invite you to my sister's view,
Whither straight I will lead you.

Ant. Let us, Lepidus,
Not lack your company.

Lep. Noble Antony,
Not sickness should detain me.

[Flourish. Exeunt CESAR, ANTONY, & LEPIDUS.

Mec. Welcome from Egypt, Sir.

Eno. Half the heart of Cesar, worthy Mecænas!—my honourable friend, Agrippa!—

Agri. Good Enobarbus!

Mec. We have cause to be glad, that matters are so well digested. You staid well by it in Egypt.

Eno. Ay, Sir; we did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking.

Mec. Eight wild boars roasted whole at a breakfast, and but twelve persons there; is this true?

Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle: we had much more monstrous matter of feast, which worthily deserved noting.

Mec. She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square* to her.

Eno. When she first met Mark Antony, she pursued up his heart upon the river of Cydnus.

Agri. There she appear'd indeed; or my reporter devised well for her.

Eno. I will tell you:
The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne,
Burn'd on the water: the poop was beaten
gold;

Purple the sails, and so perfumed, that
The winds were love-sick with them: the oars were silver; [made

Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and
The water, which they beat, to follow faster.
As amorous of their strokes. For her own person,

* Grievances. † Reconcile. ‡ Dispositions. § Firm

* Suits with her merits.

It beggar'd all description: she did lie
In her pavilion, (cloth of gold, of tissue,) O'erpicturing that Venus, where we see,
The fancy out-work nature: on each side her,
Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids,
With diverse-colour'd fans, whose wind did seem

To glow the delicate cheeks which they did
And they undid, did.*

Agr. O, rare for Antony!

Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides,
So many mermaids, tended her i'the eyes,
And made their bends adornings: at the helm
A seeming Mermaid steers; the silken tackle Swell with the touches of those flower-soft hands,

That rarely framed the office. From the barge
A strange invisible perfume hits the sense
Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast
Her people out upon her; and Antony,
Enthron'd in the market-place, did sit alone,
Whistling to the air; which, but for vacancy,
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too,
And made a gap in nature.

Agr. Rare Egyptian!

Eno. Upon her landing, Antony sent to her,
Invited her to supper: she replied,
It should be better, he became her guest;
Which she entreated: Our courteous Antony, Whom ne'er the word of No woman heard
speak,

Being barber'd ten times o'er, goes to the feast;
And, for his ordinary, pays his heart,
For what his eyes eat only.

Agr. Royal wench!

She made great Cesar lay his sword to bed;
He plough'd her, and she cropp'd.

Eno. I saw her once

Hop forty paces through the public street:
And having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted,

That she did make defect, perfection,
And, breathless, power breathe forth.

Mec. Now Antony must leave her utterly.

Eno. Never; he will not;

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale
Her infinite variety: Other women Cloy th' appetites they feed; but she makes hungry

Where most she satisfies. For vilest things
Become themselves in her; that the holy priests
Bless her, when she's riggish.†

Mec. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle
The heart of Antony, Octavia is
A blessed lottery‡ to him.

Agr. Let us go.—

Good Enobarbus make yourself my guest,
Whilst you abide here.

Eno. Humbly, Sir, I thank you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same.—A Room in CESAR'S
House.

Enter CESAR, ANTONY, OCTAVIA between them;
ATTENDANTS, and a SOOTHSAYER.

Ant. The world, and my great office, will sometimes
Divide me from your bosom.

Octa. All which time
Before the gods my knee shall bow my prayers
To them for you.

Ant. Good night, Sir.—My Octavia,
Read not my blemishes in the world's report:
I have not kept my square; but that to come

Shall all be done by the rule. Good night,
dear lady.—

Octa. Good night, Sir.

Ces. Good night.

[Exeunt CESAR and OCTAVIA.]

Ant. Now, Sirrah! you do wish yourself in Egypt?

Sooth. Would I had never come from thence,
nor you

Thither!

Ant. If you can, your reason?

Sooth. I see't in

My motion, have it not in my tongue: But yet
Hie you again to Egypt.

Ant. Say to me,
Whose fortunes shall rise higher, Cesar's, or
mine?

Sooth. Cesar's.

Therefore, O Antony, stay not by his side:
Thy demon, that's thy spirit which keeps thee, is

Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable,
Where Cesar's is not; but near him, thy angel
Becomes a Fear, as being o'erpower'd; there—
Make space enough between you. [fore

Ant. Speak this no more.

Sooth. To none but thee; no more, but when to thee.

If thou dost play with him at any game,
Thou art sure to lose; and, of that natural luck,
He beats thee 'gainst the odds; thy lustre
thickens,

When he shines by: I say again, thy spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him;
But, he away, 'tis noble.

Ant. Get thee gone:

Say to Ventidius, I would speak with him:

[Exit SOOTHSAYER.]

He shall to Parthia.—Be it art, or hap,
He hath spoken true: The very dice obey him;
And, in our sports, my better cunning faints
Under his chance: if we draw lots, he speeds:
His cocks do win the battle still of mine,
When it is all to nought; and his quails* ever Beat mine, inhoop'd,† at odds. I will to Egypt:

And though I make this marriage for my peace,

Enter VENTIDIUS.—

I'the east my pleasure lies:—O, come, Ven-tidius,

You must to Parthia; your commission's ready:
Follow me, and receive it. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The same.—A Street.

Enter LEPIDUS, MECÆNAS, and AGRIPPA.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no further: pray you, hasten

Your generals after.

Agr. Sir, Mark Antony

Will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow.

Lep. Till I shall see you in your soldier's dress.

Which will become you both, farewell.

Mec. We shall,

As I conceive the journey, be at mount‡
Before you, Lepidus.

Lep. Your way is shorter,
My purposes do draw me much about;
You'll win two days upon me.

Mec. Agr. Sir, good success!

Lep. Farewell.

[Exeunt.]

* Added to the warmth they were intended to diminish.
† Readily perform. ‡ Wanton. § Allotment.

* The ancients used to match quails as we match cocks.
† Inclosed. ‡ Mount Mithras.

SCENE V.—Alexandria.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Give me some music; music, moody*
Of us that trade in love. [food
Attend. The music, ho!

Enter MARDIAN.

Cleo. Let it alone; let us to billiards:
Come, Charmian.

Char. My arm is sore, best play with Mardian.

Cleo. As well a woman with an eunuch play'd,
As with a woman;—Come, you'll play with me, Sir?

Mar. As well as I can, madam.

Cleo. And when good will is show'd, though it come too short,
The actor may plead pardon. I'll none now:—
Give me mine angle.—We'll to the river: there,
My music playing far off, I will betray Tawny-fan'd fishes; my bended hook shall pierce

Their slimy jaws; and, as I draw them up,
I'll think them every one an Antony,
And say, Ah, ha! you're caught.

Char. 'Twas merry, when
You wager'd on your angling; when your diver
Did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which he
With fervency drew up.

Cleo. That time!—O times!—
I laugh'd him out of patience; and that night
I laugh'd him into patience; and next morn,
Ere the ninth hour, I drunk him to his bed;
Then put my tires and mantles on him, whilst
I wore his sword Philippan. O! from Italy;

Enter a MESSENGER.

Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears,
That long time have been barren.

Mess. Madam, madam,—

Cleo. Antony's dead?—
If thou say so, villain, thou kill'st thy mistress:
But well and free,
If thou so yield him, there is gold, and here
My bluest veins to kiss; a hand, that kings
Have lipp'd, and trembled kissing.

Mess. First, madam, he's well.

Cleo. Why, there's more gold. But, Sirrah, mark; We use
To say, the dead are well: bring it to that,
The gold I give thee, will I melt, and pour
Down thy ill-uttering throat.

Mess. Good madam, hear me.

Cleo. Well, go to, I will;
But there's no goodness in thy face: If Antony
Be free, and healthful,—why so tart a favour?
To trumpet such good tidings? If not well,
Thou should'st come like a fury crown'd with
Not like a formal man.‡ [snakes,

Mess. Will't please you hear me?

Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee, ere thou
speak'st:

Yet, if thou say, Antony lives, is well,
Or friends with Cesar, or not captive to him,
I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail
Rich pearls upon thee.

Mess. Madam, he's well.

Cleo. Well said.

Mess. And friends with Cesar.

Cleo. Thou'rt an honest man.

Mess. Cesar and he are greater friends than ever.

Cleo. Make thee a fortune from me.

Mess. But yet madam,—

Cleo. I do not like but yet, it does allay
The good precedence;* as upon but yet:
But yet is as a jailer to bring forth
Some monstrous malefactor. Pr'ythee, friend,
Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear,
The good and bad together: He's friend with
Cesar;

In state of health, thou say'st; and, thou say'st,

Cleo. For what good turn?

Mess. For the best turn i'the bed.

Cleo. I am pale, Charmian.

Mess. Madam, he's married to Octavia.

Cleo. The most infectious pestilence upon thee! [Strikes him down.

Mess. Good madam, patience.

Cleo. What say you?—Hence,
[Strikes him again.

Horrible villain! or I'll spurn thine eyes
Like balls before me; I'll unhair thy head;
[She hails him up and down.

Thou shalt be whipp'd with wire, and strew'd

Smarting in ling'ring pickle.

Mess. Gracious madam,

I, that do bring the news, made not the match.

Cleo. Say, 'tis not so, a province I will give

And make thy fortunes proud: the blow thou
Shall make thy peace, for moving me to rage;
And I will boot thee with what gift beside Thy modesty can beg.

Mess. He's married, madam.

Cleo. Rogue, thou hast liv'd too long.
[Draws a Dagger.

Mess. Nay, then I'll run:—

What mean you, madam? I have made no fault. [Exit.

Char. Good madam, keep yourself within

Cleo. Some innocents 'scape not the thunderbolt.—

Turn all to serpents!—Call the slave again;
Though I am mad, I will not bite him:—Call.

Char. He is afraid to come.

Cleo. I will not hurt him:—

These hands do lack nobility, that they strike
A meaner than myself; since I myself
Have given myself the cause.—Come hither,
Sir.

Re-enter MESSENGER.

Though it be honest, it is never good
To bring bad news: Give to a gracious message
A host of tongues; but let ill tidings tell Themselves, when they be felt.

Mess. I have done my duty.

Cleo. Is he married?

I cannot hate thee worser than I do,
If thou again say, Yes.

Mess. He is married, madam.

Cleo. The gods confound thee! dost thou hold there still?

Mess. Should I lie, madam?

Cleo. O, I would, thou didst;
So half my Egypt were submerg'd,† and made
A cistern for scald snakes! Go, get thee hence;

Char. Good your highness, patience.

Cleo. In praising Antony, I have disprais'd Cesar.

Char. Many times, madam.

Cleo. I am paid for't now.

Lead me from hence,

I faint; O Iras, Charmian,—'Tis no matter:—

Go to the fellow, good Alexas; bid him

Report the feature* of Octavia, her years,

Her inclination, let him not leave out

The colour of her hair:—bring me word quickly.— [Exit ALEXAS.

Let him for ever go:—Let him not—Charmian,

Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,

T'other way he's a Mars:—Bid you Alexas [To MARDIAN.

Bring me word, how tall she is.—Pity me,

Charmian,

But do not speak to me.—Lead me to my chamber. [Exit.

SCENE VI.—Near Misenum.

Enter POMPEY and MENAS, at one side, with Drum and Trumpet: at another, CESAR, LEPIDUS, ANTONY, ENOBARBUS, MECENAS, with Soldiers marching.

Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you mine; And we shall talk before we fight.

Ces. Most meet, [we
That first we come to words; and therefore have
Our written purposes before us sent;
Which, if thou hast consider'd let us know
It 'twill tie up thy discontented sword;
And carry back to Sicily much tall† youth
That else must perish here.

Pom. To you all three,
The senators alone of this great world,
Chief factors for the gods,—I do not know,
Wherefore my father should revengers want,
Having a son and friends; since Julius Cesar,
Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted,†
There saw you labouring for him. What was it, [what

That mov'd pale Cassius to conspire? And Made the all-honour'd, honest, Roman Brutus,
With the arm'd rest, courtiers of beauteous freedom,

To drench the Capitol; but that they would Have one man but a man? And that is it,
Hath made me rig my navy; at whose burden
The anger'd ocean foams; with which I meant
To scourge the ingratitude that spiteful
Cast on my noble father. [Rome

Ces. Take your time.

Ant. Thou canst not fear‡ us, Pompey, with thy sails,

We'll speak with thee at sea: at land, thou know'st

How much we do o'er-count thee.

Pom. At land, indeed,

Thou dost o'er-count me of my father's house:
But, since the cuckoo builds not for himself,
Remain in't as thou may'st.

Lep. Be pleas'd to tell us,
(For this is from the present,*) how you take
The offers we have sent you.

Ces. There's the point.

Ant. Which do not be entreated to, but weigh
What it is worth embrac'd.

Ces. And what may follow,
To try a larger fortune.

Pom. You have made me offer
Of Sicily, Sardinia; and I must Rid all the sea of pirates; then, to send Measures of wheat to Rome: This 'greed upon
To part with unhack'd edges, and bear back
Our target undinted.

Ces. Ant. Lep. That's our offer.

Pom. Know then,

I came before you here, a man prepar'd
To take this offer: But Mark Antony
Put me to some impatience: Though I lose
The praise of it by telling, You must know,
When Cesar and your brothers were at blows,
Your mother came to Sicily, and did find
Her welcome friendly.

Ant. I have heard it, Pompey;
And am well studied for a liberal thanks,
Which I do owe you.

Pom. Let me have your hand:
I did not think, Sir, to have met you here.

Ant. The beds i'the east are soft; and thanks to you, [ther;

That call'd me, timelier than my purpose, hi-
For I have gain'd by it.

Ces. Since I saw you last,
There is a change upon you.

Pom. Well, I know not [face;
What counts‡ harsh fortune casts upon my
But in my bosom shall she never come,
To make my heart her vassal.

Lep. Well met here.

Pom. I hope so, Lepidus.—Thus we are agreed:

I crave, our composition may be written,
And seal'd between us.

Ces. That's the next to do.

Pom. We'll feast each other, ere we part;
and let us

Draw lots who shall begin.

Ant. That will I, Pompey.

Pom. No, Antony, take the lot: but, first (Or last, your fine Egyptian cookery
Shall have the fame. I have heard, that Julius Grew fat with feasting there. [Cesar

Ant. You have heard much.

Pom. I have fair meanings, Sir.

Ant. And fair words to them.

Pom. Then so much have I heard:—
And I have heard, Apollodorus carried—

Eno. No more of that:—He did so.

Pom. What, I pray you?

Eno. A certain queen to Cesar in a mattress.

Pom. I know thee now;—How far'st thou, soldier?

Eno. Well;

And well am like to do; for, I perceive,
Four feasts are toward.

Pom. Let me shake thy hand;
I never hated thee: I have seen thee fight,
When I have envied thy behaviour.

Eno. Sir,
I never lov'd you much; but I have prais'd
you,
When you have well deserv'd ten times as much
As I have said you did.

Pom. Enjoy thy plainness,
It nothing ill becomes thee.—
Aboard my galley I invite you all:
Will you lead, lords?

Ces. Ant. Lep. Show us the way, Sir.

Pom. Come.

[Exeunt POMPEY, CESAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, Soldiers, and Attendants.]

Men. Thy father, Pompey, would ne'er have made this treaty.—[Aside.]—You and I have known,* Sir.

Eno. At sea, I think.

Men. We have, Sir.

Eno. You have done well by water.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me: though it cannot be denied what I have done by land.

Men. Nor what I have done by water.

Eno. Yes, something you can deny for your own safety: you have been a great thief by sea.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand, Menas: If our eyes had authority, how they might take two thieves kissing.

Men. All men's faces are true, whatsoe'er their hands are.

Eno. But there is never a fair woman has a true face.

Men. No slander; they steal hearts.

Eno. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turned to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune.

Eno. If he do, sure, he cannot weep it back
again.

Men. You have said, Sir. We looked not for Mark Antony; Pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Eno. Cesar's sister is call'd Octavia.

Men. True, Sir; she was the wife of Caius
Marcellus.

Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus An-tonius.

Men. Pray you, Sir?

Eno. 'Tis true.

Men. Then is Cesar, and he, for ever knit together.

Eno. If I were bound to divine of this unity,
I would not prophesy so.

Men. I think, the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage, than the love of the parties.

Eno. I think so too. But you shall find, the band that seems to tie their friendship together, will be the very strangler of their amity:
Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.†

Men. Who would not have his wife so?

Eno. Not he, that himself is not so; which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again: then shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Cesar; and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity, shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affection where it is: he married but his occasion here.

Men. And thus it may be. Come, Sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it, Sir: we have need on throats in Egypt.

Men. Come; let's away. [Exit.]

SCENE VII.—On Board POMPEY's Galley, lying near Misenum.

Music. Enter two or three SERVANTS, with a Banquet.*

1 Serv. Here they'll be, man: Some o' their plantet are ill-rooted already, the least wind
i' the world will blow them down.

2 Serv. Lepidus is high-coloured.

1 Serv. They have made him drink and drink.

2 Serv. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out, no more; reconciles them to his entreaty, and himself to the drink.

1 Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

2 Serv. Why, this is to have a name in great men's fellowship; I had as lief have a reel that will do me no service, as a partner; I could not heave.

1 Serv. To be called into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disfigure the cheeks.

A Snout sounded. Enter CESAR, ANTONY,
POMPEY, LEPIDUS, AGRIPPA, MENENAS,
ENOBARDUS, MENAS, with other Captains.

Ant. Thus do they, Sir: [To CESAR.] They take the flow o' the Nile

By certain scales i' the pyramid; they know,
By the height, the lowness, or the mean,† if

Or foison,‡ follow: The higher Nilus swells,
The more it promises: as it ebbs, the seeds-
man

Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain,
And shortly comes to harvest.

Lep. You have strange serpents there.

Ant. Ay, Lepidus.

Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun: so is your crocodile.

Ant. They are so.

Pom. Sit,—and some wine.—A health to Lepidus.

Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne'er out.

Eno. Not till you have slept; I fear me, you'll be in, till then.

Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard, the Ptolemies' pyramises§ are very goodly things;
without contradiction, I have heard that.

Men. Pompey, a word. [Aside.]

Pom. Say in mine ear: What is't?

Men. Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, captain, [Aside.]

And hear me speak a word.

Pom. Forbear me till anon.—

This wine for Lepidus.

Lep. What manner o' thing is your crocodile?

Ant. It is shaped, Sir, like itself; and it is as broad as it hath breadth: it is just so high as it is, and moves with its own organs: it lives by that which nourisheth it; and the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of?

Ant. Of its own colour too.

Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure.

Pom. [To MENAS aside.] Go, hang, Sir, hang! Tell me of that? away!

Do as I bid you.—Where's this cup I call'd for?

Men. If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear me,

Rise from thy stool. [Aside.

Pom. I think, thou'rt mad. The matter?

[Rises, and walks aside.

Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith: What's else to say?

Be jolly, lords.

Ant. These quick-sands, Lepidus,

Keep off them, for you sink.

Men. Wilt thou be lord of all the world?

Pom. What say'st thou?

Men. Wilt thou be lord of the whole world? That's twice.

Pom. How should that be?

Men. But entertain it, and,

Although thou think me poor, I am the man Will give thee all the world.

Pom. Hast thou drunk well?

Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup.

Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove: Whate'er the ocean pales,* or sky inclips,† Is thine, if thou wilt have't.

Pom. Show me which way.

Men. These three world-sharers, these competitors,‡

Are in thy vessel: let me cut the cable;

And, when we are put off, fall to their throats: All there is thine.

Pom. Ah, this thou should'st have done, And not have spoke on't! In me, 'tis villany; In thee it had been good service. Thou must know,

'Tis not my profit that does lead mine honour; Mine honour it. Repent, that e'er thy tongue Hath so betray'd thine act: Being done unknown,

I should have found it afterwards well done; But must condemn it now. Desist and drink.

Men. For this, [Aside.

I'll never follow thy pall'd§ fortunes more.— Who seeks, and will not take, when once 'tis Shall never find it more. [offer'd,

Pom. This health to Lepidus.

Ant. Bear him ashore.—I'll pledge it for him, Pompey.

Eno. Here's to thee, Menas.

Men. Enobarbus, welcome.

Pom. Fill, till the cup be hid.

Eno. There's a strong fellow, Menas.

[Pointing to the Attendant who carries off LEPIDUS.

Men. Why?

Eno. He bears

The third part of the world, man; See'st not?

Men. The third part then is drunk: 'Would it were all,

That it might go on wheels!

Eno. Drink thou; increase the reels.

Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian feast.

Ant. It ripens towards it.—Strike the ves- Here is to Cesar. [sels,|| ho!

Ces. I could well forbear it.

It's monstrous labour, when I wash my brain, And it grows fouler.

Ant. Be a child o'the time.

Ces. Possess* it, I'll make answer: but I had rather fast

From all, four days, than drink so much in one.

Eno. Ha, my brave emperor! [To ANTONY. Shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchanals, And celebrate our drink?

Pom. Let's ha't, good soldier.

Ant. Come, let us all take hands; [sense Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd our In soft and delicate Lethe.

Is weaker than the wine; and mine own tongue Splits what it speaks: the wild disguise hath almost Agr. What's Antony? The god of Jupiter.

Eno. Spake you of Cesar? How? the nonpa-

Agr. O Antony! O thou Arabian bird!

Eno. Would you praise Cesar, say,—Cesar;

Agr. Indeed, he plied them both with ex-

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARNIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Where is the fellow?

Alex. Half afeard to come.

Cleo. Go to, go to:—Come hither, Sir.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Alex. Good majesty,
 Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you,
 But when you are well pleas'd.

Cleo. That Herod's head
 I'll have: But how? when Antony is gone Through whom I might command it.—Come thou near.

Mess. Most gracious majesty,—

Cleo. Didst thou behold
 Octavia?

Mess. Ay, dread queen.

Cleo. Where?

Mess. Madam, in Rome.
 I look'd her in the face; and saw her led Between her brother and Mark Antony.

Cleo. Is she as tall as me?

Mess. She is not, madam.

Cleo. Didst hear her speak? Is she shrilltongu'd, or low?

Mess. Madam, I heard her speak; she is lowvoic'd.

Cleo. That's not so good:—he cannot like her long.

Char. Like her? O Isis! 'tis impossible.

Cleo. I think so, Charmian: Dull of tongue, and dwarfish!—

What majesty is in her gait? Remember,
 If e'er thou look'st on majesty.

Mess. She creeps;
 Her motion and her station* are as one:
 She shows a body rather than a life;
 A statue, than a breather.

Cleo. Is this certain?

Mess. Or I have no observance.

Char. Three in Egypt

 I do perceiv't:—There's nothing in her yet:—
 The fellow has good judgement.

Char. Excellent.

Cleo. Guess at her years, I pr'ythee.

 She was a widow.

Cleo. Widow?—Charmian, hark.

Mess. And I do think, she's thirty.

 I will employ thee back again; I find thee
 Most fit for business: Go, make thee ready;
 Our letters are prepar'd. [Exit MESSENGER.

SCENE V.—The same.—Another Room in the same.

Enter ENOBARBUS and EROS, meeting.

Eno. How now, friend Eros?

Eros. There's strange news come, Sir.

Eno. What, man?

Eros. Cesar and Lepidus have made wars upon Pompey.

Eno. This is old; What is the success?††

Eros. Our great navy's rigged.

Eros. For Italy, and Cesar. More, Demetrius; My lord desires you presently: my news I might have told hereafter.

Eros. 'Twill be sought:

But let it be.—Bring me to Antony.

Eros. Come, Sir.

SCENE VI.—Rome.—A Room in CESAR'S House.

Enter CESAR, AGRIPPA, and MACHIAS.

Ces. Contemning Rome, he has done all this: And more;

In Alexandria,—here's the manner of it,—I'the market place, on a tribunal silver'd, Cleopatra and himself in chairs of gold Were publicly enthron'd: at the feet, sat Cæsarion whom they call my father's son; And all the unlawful issue, that their lust Since then hath made between them. Agg. Whom does he accuse?

Ces. Cesar: and that, having in Sicily Sexius Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him [me]

Agg. Sir, this should be answer'd.

Ces. 'Tis done already, and the messenger gone. I have told him, Lepidus was grown too cruel; That he his high authority abus'd,

And did deserve his stripes; for what I have conquer'd,

I grant him part; but then, in his Account, And other of his conquer'd Kingdoms, I Demand the like.

Mec. He'll never yield to that.

Ces. Nor must not that he yielded to in this.

Enter OCTAVIA.

Oct. Hail, Cesar, and my lord! hail, and dear Cesar!

Ces. That ever I should call thee, erst my!

Oct. You have not call'd me so, nor has you ever.

Ces. Why have you still upon us then? You come not

Oct. Good my lord,

To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it On my free will. My lord, Mark Antony Hearing that you prepar'd for war, acquainted My grieved ear withal; whereupon, I begg'd His pardon for return.

Ces. Which soon he granted.

Being an obstruct between his love and him.

Oct. Do not say so, my lord.

Ces. I have eyes upon him,

And his affairs come to me on the wind.

Where is he now?

Oct. My lord, in Athens.

Ces. No, my most wronged sister; Cleopatra Hath nodded him to her. He hath given to empire

Up to a whore, who now are levying [bid The kings o'the earth for war: He hath seen Bocchus, the king of Lybia; Archelaus, Of Cappadocia; Philadelphus, king Of Paphlagonia; the Thracian king, Adalix: King Malchus of Arabia; king of Pont; Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, king Of Comagene; Polemon and Amintas, The kings of Mede, and Lycœonia, with a More larger list of sceptres.

Oct. Ah me, most wretched,

That have my heart parted betwixt two friends. That do afflict each other!

Ces. Welcome hither:

Your letters did withhold our breaking forth: Till we perceiv'd, both how you were wrong led,

And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart! Be you not troubled with the time, which drives O'er your content these strong necessities; But let determin'd things to destiny Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome. Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd Beyond the mark of thought; and the high gods,

To do you justice, make them ministers Of us, and those that love you. Best of comfort And ever welcome to us. [fort;

Agg. Welcome, lady.

Mec. Welcome, dear madam.

Each heart in Rome does love and pity you:
Only the adulterous Antony, most large
In his abominations, turns you off;
And gives his potent regiment* to a trull,†
That noises‡ it against us.

Oct. Is it so, Sir?

Ces. Most certain. Sister, welcome: Pray
you,
Be ever known to patience: My dearest sister!

SCENE VII.—ANTONY'S Camp, near the Promontory of Actium.

Enter CLEOPATRA and ENOBARBUS.

Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.

Eno. But why, why, why?

Cleo. Thou hast forespoke§ my being in these wars;
And say'st, it is not fit.

Eno. Well, is it, is it?

Cleo. Is't not? Denounce against us, why should not we
Be there in person?

Eno. [Aside.] Well, I could reply:—
If we should serve with horse and mares to-

Cleo. Sink Rome; and their tongues rot,
That speak against us! A charge we bear i'the
war,

And, as the president of my kingdom, will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it;
I will not stay behind.

Eno. Nay, I have done:
Here comes the emperor.

Enter ANTONY and CANIDIUS.

Ant. Is't not strange, Canidius,
That from Tarentum, and Brundisium,
He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea,
And take in¶ Toryne?—You have heard on't, sweet?

Cleo. Celerity is never more admir'd,
Than by the negligent.

Ant. A good rebuke, [men,
Which might have well becom'd the best of
To taunt at slackness.—Canidius, we Will fight with him by sea.

Cleo. By sea! What else?

Can. Why will my lord do so?

Ant. For he dares us to't.

Eno. So hath my lord dar'd him to single fight.

Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Phar-salia, [offers,
Where Cesar fought with Pompey: But these
Which serves not for his vantage, he shakes off;
And so should you.

Eno. Your ships are not well mann'd:

Your mariners are muleteers,* reapers, people
Ingross'd by swift impress;† in Cesar's fleet
Are those, that often have 'gainst Pompey fought: [grace

Their ships are yare;‡ yours, heavy.§ No dis-
Shall fall you for refusing him at sea,
Being prepar'd for land.

Ant. By sea, by sea.

Eno. Most worthy Sir, you therein throw away

The absolute soldiership you have by land;
Distract your army, which doth most consist
Of war-mark'd footmen; leave unexecuted
Your own renowned knowledge; quite forego
The way which promises assurance; and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard,
From firm security.

Ant. I'll fight at sea.

Cleo. I have sixty sails,|| Cesar none better.

Ant. Our overplus of shipping will we burn;
And, with the rest full-mann'd, from the head of Actium

Beat the approaching Cesar. But if we fail,

Enter a MESSENGER.

We then can do't at land.—Thy business?

And our twelve thousand horse:—We'll to our ship;

Enter a SOLDIER.

Away, my Thetis!—How now, worthy soldier?

Sold. O noble emperor, do not fight by sea;
Trust not to rotten planks: Do you misdoubt
The sword, and these my wounds? Let the Egyptians,

And the Phoenicians, go a ducking; we
Have used to conquer, standing on the earth,
And fighting foot to foot.

Ant. Well, well, away.

[Exeunt ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, and ENOBARBUS.]

Sold. By Hercules, I think, I am i'the right.
Can. Soldier, thou art: but his whole action grows

Not in the power on't: So our leader's led,
And we are women's men.

Sold. You keep by land
The legions and the horse whole, do you not?

Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justeius,
Publicola, and Caelius, are for sea: [Cesar's

Sold. They say, one Taurus.

Can. Well I know the man.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. The emperor calls for Canidius.

Can. With news the time's with labour; and throes||| forth,
Each minute, some. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.—A plain near Actium.

Enter CESAR, TAURUS, Officers, and others.

Ces. Taurus,—

Taur. My lord.

Ces. Strike not by land; keep whole:
Provoke not battle, till we have done at sea.
Do not exceed the prescript of this scroll:
Our fortune lies upon this jump.* [Exeunt.]

Enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on yon' side o' the hill
In eye† of Cesar's battle; from which place
We may the number of the ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly. [Exeunt.]

Enter CANIDIUS, marching with his Land Army one Way over the Stage; and TAURUS, the Lieutenant of CESAR, the other Way. After their going in, is heard the Noise of a Sea-Fight.

Alarum. Re-enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold no longer:
The Antoniad,‡ the Egyptian admiral,
With all their sixty, fly, and turn the rudder;
To see't, mine eyes are blasted.

Enter SCARUS.

Scar. Gods, and goddesses,
All the whole synod of them!

Eno. What's thy passion?

Scar. The greater cattle§ of the world is lost
With very ignorance; we have kiss'd away
Kingdoms and provinces.

Eno. How appears the fight?

Scar. On our side like the token'd|| pestilence,
Where death is sure. Yon' ribald-rid nag¶ of

Did sicken at the sight on't, and could not Endure a further view.

Scar. She once being loof'd,‡‡

Leaving the fight in height, flies after her:
I never saw an action of such shame;
Experience, manhood, honour, ne'er before
Did violate so itself.

Eno. Alack, alack!

Enter CANIDIUS.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath,
And sinks most lamentably. Had our general
Been what he knew himself, it had gone well:
O, he has given example for our flight,
Most grossly, by his own.

Eno. Ay, are you thereabouts? Why then,
good night

Indeed. [Aside.]

Can. Towards Peloponnesus are they fled.

Scar. 'Tis easy to't; and there I will attend
What further comes.

* Hazard. † Sight. ‡ Name of Cleopatra's ship.

Can. To Cesar will I render
My legions, and my horse; six kings already Show me the way of yielding.

Eno. I'll yet follow
The wounded chance of Antony, though my reason
Sits in the wind against me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IX.—Alexandria.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY and ATTENDANTS.

Ant. Hark, the land bids me tread no more upon't, [ther.
It is asham'd to bear me!—Friends, come in—
I am so lated* in the world, that I
Have lost my way for ever:—I have a ship
Laden with gold; take that, divide it; fly.
And make your peace with Cesar.

Att. Fly! not we.

Ant. I have fled myself; and have instructed cowards
To run, and show their shoulders.—Friends,
be gone;

I have myself resolv'd upon a course,
Which has no need of you; be gone:
My treasure's in the harbour, take it.—O,
I follow'd that I blush to look upon:
My very hairs do mutiny; for the white
Reprove the brown for rashness, and they then
For fear and doting.—Friends, be gone; you shall

Have letters from me to some friends, that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you, look not sad,

Nor make replies of loathness: take the hint
Which my despair proclaims; let that be left
Which leaves itself: to the sea side straight-
way:

I will possess you of that ship and treasure.
Leave me, I pray, a little: 'pray you now:—
Nay, do so; for, indeed, I have lost command.
Therefore I pray you:—I'll see you by and by.
[Sits down.]

Enter EROS, and CLEOPATRA, led by CHARMIAN and IRAS.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him:—Comfort him.

Irás. Do, most dear queen.

Char. Do! Why, what else?

Cleo. Let me sit down. O Juno!

Ant. No, no, no, no, no.

Eros. See you here, Sir?

Ant. O fie, fie, fie.

Char. Madam,—

Irás. Madam; O good empress!—

Eros. Sir, Sir,—

Ant. Yes, my lord, yes;—He,† at Philippi.

The lean and wrinkled Cassius; and 'twas I.
That the mad Brutus ended: he alone
Dealt on lieutenantry,‡ and no practice had
In the brave squares of war: Yet now—No matter.

Cleo. Ah, stand by.

Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen.

Irás. Go to him, madam, speak to him;
He is unqualitied§ with very shame.

Cleo. Well then,—Sustain me:—O!

Eros. Most noble Sir, arise; the queen approaches;

* Belated, benighted. † Cesar.

Ant. I have offended reputation;
A most unnohle swerving.

Eros. Sir, the queen.

Ant. O, whither hast thou led me, Egypt?
See,

How I convey my shame out of thine eyes
By looking back on what I have left behind
'Stroy'd in dishonour.

Cleo. O my lord, my lord!
Forgive my fearful sails! I little thought,
You would have follow'd.

Ant. Egypt, thou know'st too well,
My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings,
And thou should'st tow me after: O'er my spirit

Thy full supremacy thou know'st; and that Thy beck might from the bidding of the gods Command me.

Cleo. O, my pardon.

Ant. Now I must

To the young man send bumble treaties, dodge
And palter in the shifts of lowness; who
With half the bulk o'the world play'd as I pleas'd,

Making, and marriog fortunes. You did know,
How much you were my conqueror; and that My sword, made weak by my affection, would Obey it on all cause.

Cleo. O pardon, pardon.

Ant. Fall not a tear, I say; one of them rates!

All that is won and lost: Give me a kiss;
Even this repays me.—We sent our school-
master,

Is he come back?—Love, I am full of lead:—
Some wine, within there, and our viands:—
Fortune knows,

We scorn her most, when most she offers blows. [Exeunt.

SCENE X.—CESAR'S Camp, in Egypt.

Enter CESAR, DOLABELLA, THYREUS, and
others.

Ces. Let him appear that's come from An-Know you him? (tony.—

Dol. Cesar, 'tis his schoolmaster:†
An argument that he is pluck'd, when hither
He sends so poor a pinion of his wing,
Which had superfluous kings for messengers,
Not many moons gone by.

Enter EUPHRONIUS.

Ces. Approach, and speak.

Eup. Such as I am, I come from Antony:
I was of late as petty to his ends,
As is the morn-dew on the myrtle leaf
To his grand sea.‡

Ces. Be it so; Declare thine office.

Eup. Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee,
and
Requires to live in Egypt: which not granted,
He lessens his requests; and to thee sues
To let him breathe between the heavens and
earth,

A private man in Athens: This for him.
Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness;
Submits her to thy might; and of thee craves
The circle§ of the Ptolemies for her heirs,
Now hazarded to thy grace.

Ces. For Antony,
I have no ears to his request. The queen

Or take his life there: This if she perform,
She shall not sue unheard. So to them both.

Eup. Fortune pursue thee!

Ces. Bring him through the bands.

[Exit EUPHRONIUS.

To try thy eloquence, now 'tis time: Despatch;
From Antony win Cleopatra: promise,

[To THYREUS.

And in our name, what she requires; add
more,

From thine invention, offers: women are not,
In their best fortunes, strong; but want will perjure

The ne'er-touch'd vestal: Try thy cunning, Thyreus;

Make thine own edict for thy pains, which we
Will answer as a law.

Thyr. Cesar, I go.

Ces. Observe how Antony becomes his flaw;†

And what thou think'st his very action speaks
In every power that moves.

Thyr. Cesar, I shall.

SCENE XI.—Alexandria.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN,
and IRAS.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?

Eno. Think, and die.

Cleo. Is Antony, or we, in fault for this?

Eno. Antony only, that would make his will Lord of his reason. What although you fled From that great face of war, whose several ranges

Frighted each other? why should he follow?
The itch of his affection should not then
Have nick'd his captainship, at such a point,
When half to half the world oppos'd, he being
The mered question:‡ 'Twas a shame no less Than was his loss, to course your flying flags,
And leave his navy gazing.

Cleo. Pr'ythee, peace.

Enter ANTONY, with EUPHRONIUS.

Ant. Is this his answer?

Eup. Ay, my lord.

Ant. The queen

Shall then have courtesy, so she will yield
Us up.

Eup. He says so.

Ant. Let her know it.—

To the boy Cesar send this grizled head,
And he will fill thy wishes to the brim
With principalities.

Cleo. That head, my lord?

Ant. To him again; Tell him, he wears the rose

Of youth upon him; from which the world should note

Something particular: his coin, ships, legions,
May be a coward's; whose ministers would prevail

Under the service of a child, as soon
As i'the command of Cesar: I dare him there-

Eno. Yes, like enough, high-battled Cesar will Unstate his happiness, and be stag'd to the Against a sword.—I see, men's judgements
are

A parcel* of their fortunes; and things out-
Do draw the inward quality after them,
To suffer all alike. That he should dream,
Knowing all measures, the full Cesar will Answer his emptiness!—Cesar, thou hast sub-
His judgement too. [du'd]

Enter an ATTENDANT.

Att. A messenger from Cesar.

Cleo. What, no more ceremony?—See, my
women!—

That kneel'd unto the buds.—Admit him, Sir.

Eno. Mine honesty, and I, begin to square.†
[Aside.]

The loyalty, well held to fools, does make
Our faith mere folly:—Yet, he, that can endure
To follow with allegiance a fallen lord,
Does conquer him that did his master conquer,
And earns a place i'the story.

Enter THYREUS.

Cleo. Cesar's will?

Thyr. Hear it apart.

Cleo. None but friends; say boldly.

Thyr. So, haply,‡ are they friends to Antony.

Eno. He needs as many, Sir, as Cesar has;
Or needs not us. If Cesar please, our master
Will leap to be his friend: For us, you know,
Whose he is, we are; and that's Cesar's.

Thyr. So.— [treats,

As you did love, but as you fear'd him.

Cleo. O!

Thyr. The scars upon your honour, therefore, he
Does pity, as constrained blemishes,
Not as deserv'd.

Cleo. He is a god, and knows [yielded,
What is most right: Mine honour was not
But conquer'd merely.

Eno. To be sure of that, [Aside.
I will ask Antony.—Sir, Sir, thou'rt so leaky,
That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee. [Exit ENOBARBUS.]

Thyr. Shall I say to Cesar
What you require of him? for he partly begs
To be desir'd to give. It much would please
him,

That of his fortunes you should make a staff
To lean upon: but it would warm his spirits,
To hear from me you had left Antony,
And put yourself under his shroud,
The universal landlord.

Cleo. What's your name?

Thyr. My name is Thyreus.

Cleo. Most kind messenger,
Say to great Cesar this, In disputation§
I kiss his conqu'ring hand: tell him, I am prompt
To lay my crown at his feet, and there to kneel:

Tell him, from his all-obeying* breath I hear
The doom of Egypt.

If that the former dare but what it can,
No chance may shake it. Give me grace to My duty on your hand. [lay

What art thou, fellow?

Thyr. One, that but performs
The bidding of the fullest§ man, and worthiest
To have command obey'd.

Since she was Cleopatra?)—Whip him. fel-
Till, like a boy, you see him cringe his face,
And whine aloud for mercy: Take him hence.

Ant. Tug him away: being whipp'd,
Bring him again:—This Jack of Cesar's shall Bear us an errand to him.—

[Exit ATTEND. with THYREUS.
You were half blasted ere I knew you:—Ha!
Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome,
Forborne the getting of a lawful race,
And by a gem of women, to be abus'd
By one that looks on feeders!

Cleo. Good my lord,—

Ant. You have been a boggler ever:—
But when we in our viciousness grow hard.
(O misery on't!) the wise gods seel†† our eyes:
In our own filth drop our clear judgements;
make us

Adore our errors; laugh at us, while we strut
To our confusion.

Cleo. O, is it come to this?

Ant. I found you as a morsel, cold upon Dead Cesar's trencher: nay, you were a fragment [hours,

Of Cneius Pompey's; besides what hotter
Unregister'd in vulgar fame, you have

Cleo. Wherefore is this?

Ant. To let a fellow that will take rewards.
And say, God quit you! be familiar with
My playfellow, your hand; this kingly seal.

Re-enter ATTENDANTS, with THYREUS.

1 Att. Soundly, my lord.

Ant. Cry'd he? and begg'd he pardon?

1 Att. He did ask favour.

Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent
Thou wast not made his daughter; and be thou
To follow Cesar in his triumph, since [sorry
Thou hast been whipp'd for following him:
henceforth,

The white hand of a lady fever thee,
Shake thou to look on't.—Get thee back to
Cesar,

Tell him thy entertainment: Look, thou say,
He makes me angry with him: for he seems
Proud and disdainful; harping on what I am;
Not what he knew I was: He makes me
angry;

And at this time most easy 'tis to do't;
When my good stars, that were my former guides,

Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires
Into the abism of hell. If he mislike
My speech, and what is done; tell him, he has Hipparchus, my enfranchis'd bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like, to quit† me: Urge it thou:
Hence, with thy stripes, begone.

[Exit THYREUS.

Cleo. Have you done yet?

Ant. Alack, our terrene‡ moon
Is now eclips'd; and it portends alone
The fall of Antony!

Cleo. I must stay his time.

Ant. To flatter Cesar, would you mingle eyes
With one that ties his points?

Cleo. Not know me yet?

Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?

Cleo. Ah, dear, if I be so,
From my cold heart let heaven engender hail,
And poison it in the source; and the first stone
Drop in my neck; as it determines,§ so
Dissolve my life! The next Cesarion|| smite!
Till, by degrees, the memory of my womb,
Together with my brave Egyptians all,
By the discandying¶ of this pelleted storm,
Lie graveless; till the flies and gnats of Nile
Have buried them for prey!

Ant. I am satisfied.

Cesar sits down in Alexandria; where
I will oppose his fate. Our force by land
Hath nobly held; our sever'd navy too
Have knit again, and fleet, threat'ning most sealike.

Where hast thou been, my heart?—Dost thou hear, lady?

If from the field I shall return once more
To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood;
I and my sword will earn our chronicle;
There is hope in it yet.

Cleo. That's my brave lord!

Ant. I will be treble-sinew'd, hearted,
breath'd,
And fight maliciously: for when mine hours
Were nicett and lucky, men did ransom lives
(Of me for jests; but now, I'll set my teeth,
And send to darkness all that stop me.—Come,
Let's have one other gaudy†† night: call to me

All my sad captains, fill our bowls; once more
Let's mock the midnight bell.

Cleo. It is my birth-day:
I had thought, to have held it poor; but, since
my lord

Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant. We'll yet do well.

Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.

Ant. Do so, we'll speak to them; and tonight I'll force

The wine peep through their scars.—Come on,
my queen;

There's sap in't yet. The next time I do fight,
I'll make death love me; for I will contend
Even with his pestilent scythe.

[Exit ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, and Attendants.

Eno. Now he'll out-stare the lightning. To be furious,

Is, to be frighted out of fear: and in that mood,
The dove will peck the estridge;* and I see
A diminution in our captain's brain [still,
Restores his heart: When valour preys on
reason,

It cats the sword it fights with. I will seek
Some way to leave him. [Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—CESAR'S Camp at Alexandria.

Enter CESAR, reading a Letter; AGRIPPA, ME-
CENAS, and others.

Ces. He calls me boy; and chides, as he had
power

To beat me out of Egypt: my messenger
He hath whipp'd with rods; dares me to personal combat,

Cesar to Antony: Let the old ruffian know,
I have many other ways to die; mean time,
Laugh at his challenge.

Mec. Cesar must think,
When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted
Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now
Make boot† of his distraction: Never anger
Made good guard for itself.

Ces. Let our best heads
Know, that to-morrow the last of many battles
We mean to fight:—Within our files there are
Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it be done;
And feast the army: we have store to do't,
And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Antony! [Exit.

SCENE II.—Alexandria.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS,
CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitius?

Eno. No.

Ant. Why should he not?

Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune,
He is twenty men to one.

Ant. To-morrow, soldier,
By sea and land I'll fight: or I will live,
Or bathe my dying honour in the blood
Shall make it live again. Woo't thou fight
well?

Eno. I'll strike; and cry, Take all.

Ant. Well said; come on.—

Be bounteous at our meal.—Give me thy hand,
Thou hast been rightly honest;—so hast thou;—
And thou,—and thou,—and thou:—you have serv'd me well,
And kings have been your fellows.

Cleo. What means this?

Eno. 'Tis one of those odd tricks, which sorrow shoots [Aside.
Out of the mind.

Ant. And thou art honest too.

I wish, I could be made so many men;
And all of you clapp'd up together in An Antony; that I might do you service,
So good as you have done.

Serv. The gods forbid!

Ant. Well, my good fellows, wait on me to-
night:

Scant not my cups; and make as much of me,
As when mine empire was your fellow too,
And suffer'd my command.

Cleo. What does he mean?

Eno. To make his followers weep.

Ant. Tend me to-night;

May be, it is the period of your duty:
Haply,* you shall not see me more; or if,
A mangled shadow: perchance, to-morrow
You'll serve another master. I look on you,
As one that takes his leave. Mine honest
friends,

I turn you not away; but, like a master
Married to your good service, stay till death:
Tend me to-night two hours, I ask no more,
And the gods yield† you for't!

Eno. What mean you, Sir, [weep;
To give them this discomfort? Look, they
And I, an ass, am onion-ey'd; for shame,
Transform us not to women.

Ant. Ho, ho, ho!†
Now the witch take me, if I meant it thus!
Grace grow where those drops fall! My hearty
friends,

You take me in too dolorous a sense:
I spake to you for your comfort: did desire you To burn this night with torches: Know, my hearts,

I hope well of to-morrow; and will lead you,
Where rather I'll expect victorious life,
Than death and honour. Let's to supper;
come,

And drown consideration. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The same.—Before the Palace.

Enter two SOLDIERS, to their Guard.

1 Sold. Brother, good night: to-morrow is the day.

2 Sold. It will determine one way: fare you
well.

Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?

1 Sold. Nothing: What news?

2 Sold. Belike, 'tis but a rumour:
Good night to you.

1 Sold. Well, Sir, good night.

Enter two other SOLDIERS.

2 Sold. Soldiers,
Have careful watch.

3 Sold. And you: Good night, good night.

[The first two place themselves at their Posts.

Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope
Our landmen will stand up.

tony lov'd,
Now leaves him.

1 Sold. Walk; let's see if other watchmen
Do hear what we do.

[They advance to another Post.

2 Sold. How now, masters?

Sold. How now?

How now? do you hear this?

[Several speaking together.

1 Sold. Ay; Is't not strange?

3 Sold. Do you hear, masters? do you hear?

1 Sold. Follow the noise so far as we have quarter;

Let's see how't will give off.

Sold. [Several speaking.] Content: 'Tis strange. [Exeunt.

Palace.

mour, Eros!

Because we brave her.—Come.

Cleo. Nay, I'll help too.

Enos. Alexas did revolt; and went to Jewry,
On affairs of Antony, there did persuade Great Herod to incline himself to Cesar,
And leave his master Antony: for this pains,
Cesar hath hang'd him. Canidius, and the rest
That fell away, have entertainment, but
No honourable trust. I have done ill;
Of which I do accuse myself so sorely,
That I will joy no more.

Enter a SOLDIER of CESAR'S.

Sold. Enobarbus, Antony
Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with
His bounty overplus: The messenger
Came on my guard; and at thy tent is now,
Unloading of his mules.

Enos. I give it you.
Sold. Mock me not, Enobarbus.
I tell you true: Best that you saf'd the bringer
Out of the host; I must attend mine office,
Or would have done't myself. Your emperor
Continues still a Jove. [Exit SOLDIER.]

Enos. I am alone the villain of the earth,
And feel I am so most. O Antony,
Thou mine of bounty, how would'st thou have
My better service, when my turpitude [paid
Thou dost so crown with gold! This blows
my heart:

If swift thought break it not, a swifter mean
Shall outstrike thought: but thought will do't,
I feel.

I fight against thee!—No: I will go seek
Some ditch, wherein to die; the foul'st beast fits
My latter part of life. [Exit.]

SCENE VII.—Field of Battle between the Camps.

Alarm.—Drums and Trumpets.—Enter AGRIP-
PA, and others.

Agr. Retire, we have engag'd ourselves too far:
Cesar himself has work, and our oppression
Exceeds what we expected. [Exeunt.]

Alarm.—Enter ANTONY, and SCARUS wounded.

Scar. O my brave emperor, this is fought indeed!
Had we done so at first, we had driven them
With clouts about their heads. [Home

Ant. Thou bleed'st apace.
Scar. I had a wound here that was like a T,
But now 'tis made an H.

Ant. They do retire.
Scar. We'll beat 'em into bench-holes; I have yet

Room for six scotches more.

Enter ENOS.

Enos. They are beaten, Sir; and our advantage serves
For a fair victory.

Scar. Let us score their backs,
And snatch 'em up, as we take hares, behind;
'Tis sport to maul a runner.

Ant. I will reward thee
Once for thy spritely comfort, and ten-fold
For thy good valour. Come thou on.

Scar. I'll halt after. [Exeunt.]

Ant. We have beat him to his camp; Run one before,
And let the queen know of our guests.—To-morrow,
Before the sun shall see us, we'll spill the blood
That has to-day escap'd. I thank you all;
For doughty*-handed are you; and have fought
Not as you serv'd the cause, but as it had been Each man's like mine; you have shown all Hectors.

Tell them your feats; whilst they with joyful tears [kiss

O infinite virtue! com'st thou smiling from
The world's great snare uncaught?

Ant. My nightingale,
We have beat them to their beds. What, girl?
though grey
Do something mingle with our brown; yet have we

A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can Get gaol for gaol of youth. Behold this man;
Commend unto his lips thy favouring hand;—
Kiss it, my warrior:—He hath fought to-day,
As if a god, in hate of mankind, had Destroy'd in such a shape.

Cleo. I'll give thee, friend,
An armour all of gold; it was a king's.

Ant. He has deserv'd it, were it carbuncled
Like holy Phœbus' car.—Give me thy hand;

We must return to the court of guard: The night

marching.

Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea;
We please them not by land.

Scar. For both, my lord.

Ant. I would, they'd fight i'the fire, or in the air;

We'd fight there too. But this it is; Our fort

His fretted fortunes give him hope, and fear,
Of what he has, and has not.

Re-enter ANTONY.

Ant. All is lost;

My fleet have yielded to the foe; and yonder
They cast their caps up, and carouse together
Like friends long lost.—Triple-turn'd whore!^{*}

Do we shake hands.—All come to this?—The

That spaniel'd me at heels, to whom I gave Their wishes, do discandy, melt their sweets
On blossoming Cesar; and this pine is bark'd,
That overtopp'd them all. Betray'd I am:
O this false soul of Egypt! this grave charm,[†]
Whose eye beck'd forth my wars, and call'd them home;

Whose bosom was my crownet,[‡] my chief end,
Like a right gipsy, hath, at fast and loose,[¶]
Beguil'd me to the very heart of loss.—
What, Eros, Eros!

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Ah, thou spell! Avaunt.

Cleo. Why is my lord enrag'd against his love?

Ant. Vanish; or I shall give thee thy deserving, [thee,
And blemish Cesar's triumph. Let him take
And hoist thee up to the shouting plebeians:
Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot
Of all thy sex; most monster-like, be shown
For poor'st diminutives, to dolts;[¶] and let Patient Octavia plough thy visage up With her prepared nails. [Exit CLEO.] 'Tis well thou'rt gone,

If it be well to live: But better 'twere
Thou fell'st into my fury, for one death
Might have prevented many.—Eros, ho!—

Alcides,^{} thou mine ancestor, thy rage:
Let me lodge Lichas^{††} on the horns o'the moon;
And with those hands, that grasp'd the heaviest club,

Subdue my worthiest self. The witch shall die;

SCENE XII.—The same.—Another Room.

Enter ANTONY and EROS.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me?

Eros. Ay, noble lord.

Ant. Sometime, we see a cloud that's dra-gonish;

A vapour, sometime, like a bear, or lion,
A tower'd citadel, a pendant rock,
A forked mountain, or blue promontory
With trees upon't, that nod unto the world,
And mock our eyes with air: Thou hast seen
these signs;

They are black vesper's pageants.

Eros. Ay, my lord.

Ant. That, which is now a horse, even with

As water is in water.

Eros. It does, my lord.

She hath betray'd me, and shall die the death.

Mar. Death of one person can be paid but once;

And that she has discharg'd: What thou
would'st do,

Is done unto thy hand; the last she spake
Was, Antony! most noble Antony!

Then in the midst a tearing groan did break
The name of Antony; it was divided Between her heart and lips: she render'd life,
Thy name so buried in her.

Ant. Dead then?

Mar. Dead.

Ant. Eros, unarm; the long day's task is
done,

And we must sleep:—That thou depart'st
hence safe,

Does pay thy labour richly; Go.—Off, pluck off;— [Exit MARDIAN.

¶ Servant.

The battery from my heart. O, cleave, my sides!

Heart, once be stronger than thy continent,*
Crack thy frail case!—Apace, Eros, apace.—
No more a soldier:—Bruised pieces, go;
You have been nobly borne.—From me a while.— [Exit Eros.]

I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now
All length is torture:—Since the torch is out,
Lie down, and stray no further: Now all labour
Mars what it does; yea, very force entangles
Itself with strength: Seal then,† and all is done.— [me:]

Eros!—I come, my queen:—Eros!—Stay for Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand in hand, [gaze:]

And with our sprightly port make the ghosts
Dido and her Æneas shall want troops,
And all the haunt be ours.—Come, Eros, Eros!

Re-enter EROS.

Eros. What would my lord?

Ant. Since Cleopatra died,
I have liv'd in such dishonour, that the gods
Detest my baseness. I, that with my sword Quarter'd the world, and o'er green Neptune's back [lack]

With ships made cities, condemn myself, to
The courage of a woman; less noble mind
Than she, which, by her death, our Cesar tells,
I am conqueror of myself. Thou art sworn, Eros, [now]

That, when the exigent should come, (which Is come, indeed,) when I should see behind
The inevitable prosecution of [me]
Disgrace and horror, that, on my command,
Thou then would'st kill me: do't; the time is come:

Thou strik'st not me, 'tis Cesar thou defeat'st.
Put colour in thy cheek.

Eros. The gods withhold me!
Shall I do that, which all the Parthian darts,
Though enemy, lost aim, and could not?

Ant. Eros, [see]
Would'st thou be window'd in great Rome, and Thy master thus with pleach'd‡ arms, bending down

His corrigible§ neck, his face subdued
To penetrative|| shame; whilst the wheel'd seat
Of fortunate Cesar, drawn before him, branded
His baseness that ensued?¶

Eros. I would not see't.

Ant. Come then; for with a wound I must be cur'd. [worn]

Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast
Most useful for thy country.

Eros. O, Sir, pardon me.

Ant. When I did make thee free, swor'st thou not then

To do this when I bade thee? Do it at once;
Or thy precedent services are all
But accidents unpurpos'd. Draw, and come.

Eros. Turn from me then that noble countenance,

Wherein the worship of the whole world lies.

Ant. Lo thee. [Turning from him.]

Eros. My sword is drawn.

Ant. Then let it do at once

The thing why thou hast drawn it.

Eros. My dear master,
My captain, and my emperor! let me say,
Before I strike this bloody stroke, farewell.

Ant. 'Tis said, man;—and farewell.

Eros. Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike now?

Ant. Now, Eros.

Eros. Why, there then:—[Falls on his Sword.]
Thus do I escape the sorrow

Of Antony's death. [Din.]

Ant. Thrice nobler than myself!

Thou teachest me, O valiant Eros, what I should, and thou could'st not. My queen and Eros

Have, by their brave instruction, got upon me
A nobleness in record: but I will be
A bridegroom in my death, and run into't
As to a lover's bed. Come then; and, Eros, Thy master dies thy scholar; to do thus

[Falling on his Sword.]
I learn'd of thee. How! not yet dead? not dead?—

The guard!—ho!—O, despatch me.

Enter DERCEAS and GUARD.

1 Guard. What's the noise?

Ant. I have done my work ill, friends; O, make an end

Of what I have begun.

2 Guard. The star is fallen.

1 Guard. And time is at his period.

All. Alas, and woe!

Ant. Let him that loves me, strike me dead.

1 Guard. Not I.

2 Guard. Nor I.

3 Guard. Nor any one. [Exit GUARD.]

Der. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly. [ings.]

This sword but shown to Cesar, with this tid—
Shall enter me with him.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. Where's Antony?

Der. There, Diomed, there.

Dio. Lives he?

Wilt thou not answer, man? [Exit DERCEAS.]

Ant. Art thou there, Diomed? Draw thy sword, and give me

Sufficing strokes for death.

Dio. Most absolute lord,
My mistress Cleopatra sent me to thee.

Ant. When did she send thee?

Dio. Now, my lord.

Ant. Where is she?

Dio. Lock'd in her monument. She had a prophesying fear

Of what hath come pass: for when she saw
(Which never shall be found,) you did suspect
She had dispos'd* with Cesar, and that your rage

Would not be purg'd, she sent you word she was dead; [sent:]

But, fearing since how it might work, hath
Me to proclaim the truth; and I am come,
I dread, too late.

Ant. Too late, good Diomed:—Call my guard, I prythee.

Dio. What ho! the emperor's guard! The guard, what, ho!

Come, your lord calls.

Enter some of the GUARD.

Ant. Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra bides;

'Tis the last service that I shall command you.

1 Guard. Woe are we, Sir, you may not live to wear

All your true followers out.

All. Most heavy day!

Ant. Nay, good my fellows, do not please sharp fate
To grace it with your sorrows: bid that wel-
Which comes to punish us, and we punish it Seeming to bear it lightly. Take me up:
I have led you oft; carry me now, good friends,
And have my thanks for all.

[Exeunt bearing ANTONY.]

SCENE XIII.—The same.—A Monument.

Enter above, CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. () Charmian, I will never go from hence.

Char. Be comforted, dear madam.

Cleo. No, I will not:
All strange and terrible events are welcome,
But comforts we despise; our size of sorrow,
Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great

Enter DIOMEDES.

As that which makes it.—How now? is he dead?

Dio. His death's upon him, but not dead.
Look out o'the other side your monument,
His guard hath brought him thither.

Enter ANTONY, borne by the GUARD.

Cleo. O thou sun,
Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in!—darkling* stand
The varying shore o'the world!—O Antony!
Antony, Antony!—Charmian, help; help, Iras;
Help, friends below; let's draw him hither.

Ant. Peace:

Not Cesar's valour hath o'erthrown Antony,
But Antony's hath triumphed on itself.

Cleo. So it should be, that none but Antony
Should conquer Antony; but woe 'tis so!

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying; only
I here importune death a while, until
Of many thousand kisses the poor last
I lay upon thy lips.—

Cleo. I dare not, dear
(Dear my lord, pardon,) I dare not,
Lest I be taken: not the imperious show
Of the full-fortun'd Cesar ever shall Be brooch'd† with me; if knife, drugs, serpents, have

Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe:
Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes,
And still conclusion,† shall acquire no honour Demuring upon me.—But come, come, An-
tony,—

Help me, my women,—we must draw thee
Assist, good friends.

Ant. O, quick, or I am gone.

Cleo. Here's sport, indeed!—How heavy weighs my lord!

Our strength is all gone into heaviness,
That makes the weight: Had I great Juno's
power,

The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee
And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little,— Wishers were ever fools;—(), come, come,
come;

And welcome, welcome! die where thou hast
liv'd:

Quickens with kissing; had my lips that power,
Thus would I wear them out.

All. A heavy sight!

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying:
Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.

Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high,

That the false housewife Fortune break her
Provok'd by my offence.

Ant. One word, sweet queen: [wheel,
Of Cesar seek your honour, with your safety.— [()!

Cleo. They do not go together.

Ant. Gentle, hear me:
None about Cesar trust, but Proculeius.

Cleo. My resolution, and my hands, I'll trust;
None about Cesar.

Ant. The miserable change now at my end, Lament nor sorrow at: but please your thoughts,

In feeding them with those my former fortunes
Wherein I liv'd, the greatest prince o'the
world,

The noblest: and do now not basely die,
Nor cowardly; put off my helmet to
My countryman, a Roman, by a Roman Valiantly vanquish'd. Now, my spirit is going;
I can no more. [Dies.

Cleo. Noblest of men, woo't die?
Hast thou no care of me? shall I abide
In this dull world, which in thy absence is
No better than a sty?—O, see, my women,
The crown o'the earth doth melt:—My lord!—
O, wither'd is the garland of the war,
The soldier's pole is fallen; young boys, and girls,

Are level now with men: the odds is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable
Beneath the visiting moon. [She faints.

Char. O, quietness, lady!

Iras. She is dead too, our sovereign.

Char. Lady,—

Iras. Madam,—

Char. O madam, madam, madam!

Iras. Royal Egypt!
Empress!

Char. Peace, peace, Iras.

Cleo. No more, but e'en a woman; and commanded

By such poor passion as the maid that milks,
And does the meanest chares.*—It were for me
To throw my sceptre at the injurious gods;
To tell them, that this world did equal theirs, Till they had stolen our jewel. All's but naught;

Patience is sottish; and impatience does
Become a dog that's mad: Then is it sin,
To rush into the secret house of death,
Ere death dare come to us?—How do you
women?

What, what? good cheer! Why, how now
Charmian?

My noble girls!—Ah, women, women! look,
Our lamp is spent, it's out:—Good Sirs, take heart:— [To the GUARD below.

We'll bury him: and then, what's brave, what's noble,

Let's do it after the high Roman fashion,
And make death proud to take us. Come,
away:

This case of that huge spirit now is cold.
Ah, women, women! come; we have no friend
But resolution, and the briefest end.

[Exeunt: those above bearing off ANTONY'S Body.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—CESAR'S Camp before Alexandria.

Enter CESAR, AGRIPPA, DOLABELLA, MECE-
NAS, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, and others.

Ces. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield;

* Without light.
† Solute determination.

† Ornamented.
‡ Revive.

* Task-work.

Being so frustrate,* tell him, he mocks us by
The pauses that he makes.†

Dol. Cesar, I shall. [Exit DOLABELLA.]

Enter DERCEBAS, with the Sword of ANTONY.

Ces. Wherefore is that? and what art thou, that dar'st
Appear thus to us?

Der. I am call'd Dercetas;
Mark Antony I serv'd, who best was worthy
Best to be serv'd: whilst he stood up and spoke,
He was my master; and I wore my life,
To spend upon his haters: If thou please
To take me to thee, as I was to him
I'll be to Cesar; if thou pleasest not,
I yield thee up my life.

Ces. What is't thou say'st?

Der. I say, O Cesar, Antony is dead.

Ces. The breaking of so great a thing should make

A greater crack: The round world should have shook

Lions into civil streets, [Tony
And citizens to their dens:—The death of An-
Is not a single doom; in the name lay
A moiety of the world.

Der. He is dead, Cesar;
Not by a public minister of justice,
Nor by a hired knife; but that self hand,
Which writ his honour in the acts it did,
Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it,

Splitted the heart.—This is his sword,
I robb'd his wound of it; behold it stain'd
With his most noble blood.

Ces. Look you, sad friends?
The gods rebuke me, but it is a tidings
To wash the eyes of kings.

Agr. And strange it is,
That nature must compel us to lament
Our most persisted deeds.

Mec. His taints and honours
Waged equal with him.

Agr. A rarer spirit never [us
Did steer humanity: but you, gods, will give
Some faults to make us men. Cesar is touch'd.

Mec. When such a spacious mirror's set before him,
He needs must see himself.

Ces. O Antony!
I have follow'd thee to this;—But we do lance
Diseases in our bodies: I must perforce
Have shown to thee such a declining day,
Or look on thine; we could not stall together
In the whole world: But yet let me lament,
With tears as sovereign as the blood of hearts,
That thou, my brother, my competitor
In top of all design, my mate in empire,
Friend and companion in the front of war,
The arm of mine own body, and the heart
Where mine hist thoughts did kindle,—that our stars,

Unreconcilable, should divide [friends,—
Our equalness to this.—Hear me, good
But I will tell you at some meeter season;

Enter a MESSENGER.

The business of this man looks out of him,
We'll hear him what he says.—Whence are
you?

Mess. A poor Egyptian yet. The queen my mistress,
Confin'd in all she has, her monument,
Of thy intents desires instruction;

That she preparedly may frame herself
To the way she's forced to.

Ces. Bid her have good heart;
She soon shall know of us, by some of ours,
How honourable and how kindly we Determine for her: for Cesar cannot live
To be ungentle.

Mess. So the gods preserve thee! [Exit.]

Ces. Come hither, Proculeius; Go, and say,
We purpose her no shame: give her what comforts

The quality of her passion shall require;
Lest, in her greatness, by some mortal stroke
She do defeat us: for her life in Rome
Would be eternal in our triumph: Go,
And, with your speediest, bring us what she
And how you find of her. [says,

Pro. Cesar, I shall. [Exit PROCULEIUS.]

Ces. Gallus, go you along.—Where's Dolabella,

To second Proculeius? [Exit GALLUS.]

Agr. Mec. Dolabella!

Ces. Let him alone, for I remember now
How he's employed; he shall in time be ready.
Go with me to my tent; where you shall see
How hardly I was drawn into this war;
How calm and gentle I proceeded still
In all my writings: Go with me, and see
What I can show in this. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Alexandria.—A Room in the Monument.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. My desolation does begin to make
A better life: 'Tis paltry to be Cesar;
Not being fortune, he's but fortune's knave,*
A minister of her will; And it is great
To do that thing that ends all other deeds;
Which shackles accidents, and bolts up change;
Which sleeps, and never palates more the
The beggar's nurse and Cesar's. [dunc,

Enter, to the Gates of the Monument, PROCU-LEIUS, GALLUS, and Soldiers.

Pro. Cesar sends greeting to the queen of Egypt;

And bids thee study on what fair demands
Thou mean'st to have him grant thee.

Cleo. [Within.] What's thy name?

Pro. My name is Proculeius.

Cleo. [Within.] Antony
Did tell me of you, bade me trust you; but I do not greatly care to be deceiv'd,
That have no use for trusting. If your master
Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell
That majesty, to keep decorum, must [him,
No less beg than a kingdom: if he please
To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son,
He gives me so much of mine own, as I
Will kneel to him with thanks.

Pro. Be of good cheer; [thing:
You are fallen into a princely hand, fear no-
Make your full reference freely to my lord,
Who is so full of grace, that it flows over
On all that need: Let me report to him
Your sweet dependancy; and you shall find
A conqueror, that will pray in aid for kind-
Where he for grace is kneel'd to. [ness,

Cleo. [Within.] Pray you, tell him
I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him
The greatness he has got. I hourly learn
A doctrine of obedience; and would gladly
Look him i'the face.

Pro. This I'll report, dear lady.

* Frustrated.

† He trifles with us

* Servant.

Of him that caus'd it. [ed

Gai. You see how easily she may be surpriz'd;

[Here PROCULEIUS, and two of the Guard, ascend the Monument by a Ladder placed against a Window, and having descended, come behind CLEOPATRA. Some of the Guard unbar and open the Gates.

Guard her till Cesar come.

[To PROCULEIUS and the Guard. Exit GALLUS.

Iras. Royal queen!

Char. O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen!—

Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands.

[Drawing a Dagger.

Pro. Hold, worthy lady, hold:

[Seizes and disarms her.

Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this Reliev'd, but not betray'd.

Cleo. What, of death too
That rids our dogs of languish?

Pro. Cleopatra,
Do not abuse my master's bounty, by
The undoing of yourself: let the world see
His nobleness well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou, death? [queen
Come hither, come! come, come, and take a
Worth many babes and beggars!

Pro. O, temperance, lady!

Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink,
If idle talk will once be necessary, [Sir;
I'll not sleep neither: This mortal house I'll ruin,

Do Cesar what he can. Know, Sir, that I Will not wait pinion'd* at your master's court;

Nor once be chastis'd with the sober eye
Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up,
And show me to the shouting varletry†
Of censuring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt
Be gentle grave to me! rather on Nilus' mud
Lay me stark naked, and let the water-flies Blow me into abhorring! rather make
My country's high pyramids my gibbet,
And hang me up in chains!

Pro. You do extend
These thoughts of horror further than you shall Find cause in Cesar.

Enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Proculeius,
What thou hast done thy master Cesar knows,
And he hath sent for thee: as for the queen,
I'll take her to my guard.

Pro. So, Dolabella,
It shall content me best: be gentle to her.—
To Cesar I will speak what you shall please.

[To CLEOPATRA.

If you'll employ me to him.

Cleo. Say, I would die.

[Exit PROCULEIUS, and Soldiers.

Dol. Most noble empress, you have heard of
me?

Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Assuredly, you know me.

Cleo. No matter, Sir, what I have heard, or known. [dreams;

You laugh, when boys, or women, tell their Is't not your trick?

Dol. I understand not, madam.

Cleo. I dream'd, there was an emperor Antony;—

O, such another sleep, that I might see
But such another man!

Dol. If it might please you,—

Cleo. His face was as the heavens; and therein stuck
A sun and moon; which kept their course, and lighted

The little O, the earth.

Dol. Most sovereign creature,—

Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean: his rear'd arm

Crested the world: his voice was propertyed
As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends;
But when he meant to quail* and shake the
orb,

He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,
There was no winter in't; an autumn 'twas,
That grew the more by reaping: His delights
Were dolphin-like; they show'd his back above

The element they liv'd in: In his livery Walk'd crowns, and crownets; realms and islands were

As platest dropp'd from his pocket.

Dol. Cleopatra,—

Cleo. Think you, there was, or might be, such a man

As this I dream'd of?

Dol. Gentle madam, no.

Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods.
But, if there be, or ever were one such,
It's past the size of dreaming: Nature wants stuff [gine

To vie strange forms with fancy; yet, to ima-
An Antony, were nature's piece 'gainst fancy, Condemning shadows quite.

Dol. Hear me, good madam: [it
Your loss is as yourself, great; and you bear
As answering to the weight: 'Would I might never

O'ertake pursu'd success, but I do feel,
By the rebound of yours, a grief that shoots
My very heart at root.

Cleo. I thank you, Sir.

Know you what Cesar means to do with me?

Dol. I am loath to tell you what I would you knew.

Cleo. Nay, pray you, Sir,—

Dol. Though he be honourable,—

Cleo. He'll lead me then in triumph?

Dol. Madam, he will;
I know it.

Within. Make way there,—Cesar.

Enter CESAR, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, MECENAS, SELEUCUS, and Attendants.

Ces. Which is the queen
Of Egypt?

Dol. 'Tis the emperor, madam.

[CLEOPATRA kneels.

Ces. Arise,
You shall not kneel:—

I pray you, rise; rise, Egypt.

Cleo. Sir, the gods
Will have it thus; my master and my lord
I must obey.

Ces. Take to you no hard thoughts:
The record of what injuries you did us,
Though written in our flesh, we shall remember As things but done by chance. [ber

Cleo. Sole Sir o'the world,
I cannot project mine own cause so well
To make it clear; but do confess, I have Been laden with like frailties, which before
Have often sham'd our sex.

* Bound, confined.

† Rabble.

* Crush.

† Silver money.

‡ Shape or form.

Ces. Cleopatra, know,
We will extenuate rather than enforce:
If you apply yourself to our intents,
(Which towards you are most gentle,) you shall find

A benefit in this change; but if you seek
To lay on me a cruelty, by taking Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself
Of my good purposes, and put your children
To that destruction which I'll guard them from,

If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave.

Cleo. And may, through all the world: 'tis yours: and we
Your 'scutcheons, and your signs of conquest, shall [lord.

Hang in what place you please. Here, my good

Ces. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.

Cleo. This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels,

I am possess'd of: 'tis exactly valued;
Not petty things admitted.—Where's Seleucus?

Sel. Here, madam.

Cleo. This is my treasurer; let him speak,
my lord,

Upon his peril, that I have reserv'd
To myself nothing. Speak the truth, Seleucus.

Sel. Madam,
I had rather seal* my lips, than, to my peril,
Speak that which is not.

Cleo. What have I kept back?

Sel. Enough to purchase what you have made known.

Ces. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; I approve
Your wisdom in the deed.

Cleo. See, Cesar! O, behold,
How pomp is follow'd! mine will now be yours; [mine.

And, should we shift estates, yours would be
The ingratitude of this Seleucus does [trust
Even make me wild:—O slave, of no more Than love that's hir'd!—What, goest thou back? thou shalt [eyes,

Go back, I warrant thee; but I'll catch thine
Though they had wings: Slave, soulless villian, dog!

O rarely† base!

Ces. Good queen, let us entreat you.

Cleo. O Cesar, what a wounding shame is
this;

That thou, vouchsafing here to visit me,
Doing the honour of thy lordliness
To one so meek, that mine own servant should Parcel‡ the sum of my disgraces by Addition of his envy! Say, good Cesar,
That I some lady trifles have reserv'd,
Immoment toys, things of such dignity
As we greet modern§ friends withal; and say,
Some nobler token I have kept apart
For Livia|| and Octavia,¶ to induce
Their mediation; must I be unfolded
With one that I have bred? The gods! It smites me

Beneath the fall I have. Pr'ythee, go hence;
[To SELEUCUS.

Or I shall show the cinders of my spirits
Through the ashes of my chance:—Wert thou a man,

Thou would'st have mercy on me.

Ces. Forbear, Seleucus. [Exit SELEUCUS.

Cleo. Be it known, that we, the greatest, are misthought

For things that others do; and, when we fall,

We answer others' merits* in our name,
Are therefore to be pitied.

Ces. Cleopatra, [ledg'd,
Not what you have reserv'd, nor what acknow-
Put we i'the roll of conquest: still be it yours,
Bestow it at your pleasure; and believe,
Cesar's no merchant, to make prize with you
Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be cheer'd;

Make not your thoughts your prisons: no,
dear queen;

For we intend so to dispose you, as [sleep:
Yourself shall give us counsel. Feed, and
Our care and pity is so much upon you,
That we remain your friend; And so adieu.

Cleo. My master, and my lord!

Ces. Not so: Adieu.

[Exit CESAR, and his Train.

Cleo. He words me, girls, he words me, that I should not

Be noble to myself: but hark thee, Charmian.

[Whisper CHARMIAN.

Iras. Finish, good lady; the bright day is
And we are for the dark. [dost.

Cleo. Hie thee again:

I have spoke already, and it is provided;
Go, put it to the haste.

Char. Madam, I will.

Re-enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Where is the queen?

Char. Behold, Sir. [Exit CHARMIAN.

Cleo. Dolabella?

Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command,

Which my love makes religion to obey,
I tell you this: Cesar through Syria
Intends his journey; and, within three days.
You with your children will be send before:
Make your best use of this: I have perform'd
Your pleasure, and my promise.

Cleo. Dolabella,
I shall remain your debtor.

Dol. I your servant.

Adieu, good queen; I must attend on Cesar.

Cleo. Farewell, and thanks. [Exit Dol.]

Now, Iras, what think'st thou?
Thou, an Egyptian puppet, shall be shown
In Rome, as well as I: mechanic slaves,
With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers, shall Uplift us to the view; in their thick breaths,
Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclouded,
And forc'd to drink their vapour.

Iras. The gods forbid!

Cleo. Nay, 'tis most certain, Iras: Saucy lictors† [rhymers

Will catch at us, like strumpets; and scald
Ballad us out o'tune: the quick‡ comedians
Extemporally will stage us, and present
Our Alexandrian revels; Antony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see
Some squeaking Cleopatra boy§ my greatness
I'the posture of a whore.

Iras. O the good gods!

Cleo. Nay, that is certain.

Iras. I'll never see it; for, I am sure, my ears
Are stronger than mine eyes.

Cleo. Why that's the way
To fool their preparation, and to conquer
Their most absurd intents.—Now, Charmian—

Guard. Here is a rural fellow,
That will not be denied your highness' presence;
He brings you figs.

Cleo. Let him come in. How poor an instrument [Exit GUARD.
May do a noble deed! he brings me liberty.
My resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing
Of woman in me: Now from head to foot
I am marble-constant: now the fleeting moon
No planet is of mine.

Re-enter GUARD, with a CLOWN bringing a Basket.

Guard. This is the man.

Cleo. Avoid, and leave him. [Exit GUARD.
Hast thou the pretty worm† of Nilus there,
That kills and pains not?

Clown. Truly I have him: but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal; those, that do die of it, do seldom or never recover.

Cleo. Remembers't thou any that have died on't?

Clown. Very many, men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday:
a very honest woman, but something given to lie; as a woman should not do, but in the way of honesty: how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt,—Truly, she makes a very good report o'the worm: But he that will believe all that they say, shall never be saved by half that they do: But this is most fallible, the worm's an odd worm.

Cleo. Get thee hence; farewell.

Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm.

Cleo. Farewell. [CLOWN sets down the Basket.]

Clown. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind.‡

Cleo. Ay, ay; farewell.

Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted, but in the keeping of wise people; for, indeed, there is no goodness in the worm.

Cleo. Take thou no care; it shall be heeded.

Clown. Very good: give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eat me?

Clown. You must not think I am so simple, but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman: I know, that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not. But, truly, these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women; for in every ten that they make, the devils mar five.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone; farewell.

Clown. Yes, forsooth; I wish you joy of the worm. [Exit.]

Re-enter IRAS, with a Robe, Crown, &c.

Cleo. Give me my robe, put on my crown; I have
Immortal longings in me: Now no more
The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip:— [hear
Yare, yare,|| good Iras; quick.—Methinks, I
Antony call; I see him rouse himself

To praise my noble act; I hear him mock
The luck of Cesar, which the gods give men
To excuse their after wrath: Husband, I come:
Now to that name my courage prove my title!
I am fire, and air; my other elements
I give to baser life.—So,—have you done?
Come then, and take the last warmth of my lips. [well.]

Farewell, kind Charmian;—Iras, long fare-
[Kisses them. IRAS falls and dies.]

Have I the aspic in my lips? Dost fall?
If thou and nature can so gently part,
The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch,
Which hurts, and is desir'd. Dost thou lie still?
If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world
It is not worth leave-taking.

Char. Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain; that I may say

The gods themselves do weep!

Cleo. This proves me base:

If she first meet the curled Antony,
He'll make demand of her; and spend that kiss,
Which is my heaven to have. Come, mortal wretch,

[To the Asp, which she applies to her Breast.
With thy sharp teeth this knot intricate
Of life at once untie: poor venomous fool,
Be angry, and despatch. O, could'st thou
speak!

That I might hear thee call great Cesar, ass Unpolicied!*

Char. O eastern star!

Cleo. Peace, peace!

Dost thou not see my baby at my breast,
That sucks the nurse asleep?

Char. O, break! O, break!

Cleo. As sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentle,—

O Antony!—Nay, I will take thee too:—

[Applying another Asp to her Arm.
What should I stay—

[Falls on a Bed, and dies.]

Char. In this wild world?—So, fare thee
well.—

Now boast thee, death! in thy possession lies
A lass unparallel'd.—Downy windows, close;
And golden Phoebus never be beheld
Of eyes again so royal! Your crown's awry;
I'll mend it, and then play.

Enter the GUARD, rushing in.

1 Guard. Where is the queen?

Char. Speak softly, wake her not.

1 Guard. Cesar hath sent—

Char. Too slow a messenger.

[Applies the Asp.]

O, come; apace, despatch: I partly feel thee.

1 Guard. Approach, ho! All's not well: Ce-sar's beguil'd.

2 Guard. There's Dolabella sent from Cesar;—call him.

1 Guard. What work is here?—Charmian, is this well done?

Char. It is well done, and fitting for a prin-
Descended of so many royal kings. [cess
Ah, soldier! [Dies.]

Enter DOLABELLA

Dol. How goes it here?

2 Guard. All dead.

Dol. Cesar, thy thoughts
Touch their effects in this: Thyself art coming
To see perform'd the dreaded act, which thou
So sought'st to hinder.

Within. A way there, way for Cesar!

* Unpolitic, to leave me to myself.

* Job of work.

† Inconstant.

‡ Serpent.

§ Act according to his nature.

|| Make haste.

Enter Caesar, and Attendants.

Del. O, Sir, you are too sure an augurer;
That you did fear, is done.

Ces. Bravest at the last:
She leav'd at our purposes, and, being royal,
Took her own way.—The manner of their
I do not see them bleed. [Deaths.]

Del. Who was last with them?

1 Guard. A simple countryman, that brought her figs;
This was his basket.

Ces. Poison'd then.

1 Guard. O Caesar, [spoke:]
This Charmian liv'd but now; she stood, and I found her trimming up the diadem
On her dead mistress; tremblingly she stood,
And on the sudden dropp'd.

Ces. O noble weakness!—
If they had swallow'd poison, 'twould appear
By external swelling: but she looks like sleep,
As she would catch another Antony
In her strong toil of grace.*

* General appearance.

Del. Here, on her breast,
There is a vent of blood, and something blows:
The like's on her arm.

1 Guard. This is an asp's trail: and these fig-leaves

Have a time upon them, such as the asp's leaves
Upon the caves of Nile.

Ces. Most probable,
That so she died; for her physician tells me,
She had pursu'd conclusions* infinite
Of easy ways to die.—Take up her bed;
And bear her women from the monument:—
She shall be buried by her Antony:
No grave upon the earth shall clip: in it
A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them: and their story is No less in pity, than his glory, which Brought them to be lamented. Our army
shall,

In solemn show, attend the funeral;
And then to Rome.—Come, Dolabella, see
High order in this great solemnity. [March.]

* Tried experiments.

† March.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Athens.—A Hall in TIMON'S House.

Enter POET, PAINTER, JEWELLER, MERCHANT, and others, at several Doors.

Poet. Good day, Sir.

Pain. I am glad you are well.

Poet. I have not seen you long; How goes the world?

Pain. It wears, Sir, as it grows.

Poet. Ay, that's well known:

But what particular rarity? what strange, Which manifold record not matches? See, Magic of bounty! all these spirits thy power Hath conjur'd to attend. I know the merchant.

Pain. I know them both; t'other's a jeweller.

Mer. O, 'tis a worthy lord!

Jew. Nay, that's most fix'd.

Mer. A most incomparable man; breath'd,* as it were,

To an untirable and continuat† goodness: He passes.‡

Jew. I have a jewel here.

Mer. O, pray, let's see't: For the lord Timon, Sir?

Jew. If he will touch the estimate: But, for that—

Poet. When we for recompense have prais'd the rite,

It stains the glory in that happy verse Which aptly sings the good.

Mer. 'Tis a good form.

[Looking at the Jewel.

Jew. And rich: here is a water, look you.

Pain. You are rapt, Sir, in some work, some dedication

To the great lord.

Poet. A thing slipp'd idly from me.

Our poesy is as a gum, which oozes [flint From whence 'tis nourished: The fire i'the Shows not, till it be struck; our gentle flame Provokes itself, and, like the current, flies Each bound it chafes. What have you there?

Pain. A picture, Sir.—And when comes your book forth?

Poet. Upon the heels of my presentment,* Let's see your piece. [Sir

Pain. 'Tis a good piece.

Poet. So 'tis: this comes off well and excellent.

Pain. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable: How this grace Speaks his own standing! what a mental power This eye shoots forth! how big imagination Moves in this lip! to the dumbness of the ges- One might interpret. [ture

Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life. Here is a touch; is't good?

Poet. I'll say of it, It tutors nature: artificial strife† Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain SENATORS, and pass over.

Pain. How this lord's follow'd!

Poet. The senators of Athens:—Happy men!

Pain. Look, more!

Poet. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.

I have, in this rough work, shap'd out a man,

* Inured by constant practice. † For continual.
‡ I. e. Fix'd, or, grow beyond common bounds.

* As soon as my book has been presented to Timon.
† I. e. The contest of art with nature.

Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug
With amplest entertainment: My free drift
Halts not particularly,* but moves itself
In a wide sea of wax: no levell'd malice
Infects one comma in the course I hold;
But flies an eagle flight, bold, and forth on,
Leaving no tract behind.

Pein. How shall I understand you?

Poet. I'll unbolt to you.

You see how all conditions, how all minds,
(As well of glib and slippery creatures, as Of grave and austere quality,) tender down
Their services to lord Timon: his large fortune,
Upon his good and gracious nature hanging,
Subdues and properties to his love and tend-ance

All sorts of hearts; yea, from the glass-fac'd flatterer†

To Apemantus, that few things loves better
Than to abhor himself: even he drops down
The knee before him, and returns in peace
Most rich in Timon's nod.

Pein. I saw them speak together.

Poet. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant
hill,

Feign'd Fortune to be thron'd: The base
o'the mount

Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of natures,
That labour on the bosom of this sphere
To propagate their states:‡ amongst them all,
Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd,
One do I personate of lord Timon's frame, Whom Fortune with her ivory hand wafts to
her;

[vants
Whose present grace to present slaves and ser-
Translates his rivals.

Pein. 'Tis conceiv'd to scope. [thinks,
This throne, this Fortune, and this hill, me-
With one man beckon'd from the rest below,
Bowing his head against the steepy mount
To climb his happiness, would be well ex-
In our condition. [press'd

Poet. Nay, Sir, but hear me on:
All those which were his fellows but of late,
(Some better than his value,) on the moment
Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tend-
ance,

Rain sacrificial whisperings§ in his ear,
Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him
Drink¶ the free air.

Pein. Ay, marry, what of these?

Poet. When Fortune, in her shift and change of mood, [ants,
Spurns down her late lov'd, all his depend-
Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top,
Even on their knees and hands, let him slip
down,

Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Pein. 'Tis common:

A thousand moral paintings I can show
That shall demonstrate these quick blows of fortune

More pregnantly than words. Yet you do well,
To show lord Timon, that mean eyes have
The foot above the head. [seen

Trumpets sound. Enter TIMON, attended; the SERVANT of VENTIDIUS talking with him.

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?

* My design does not stop at any particular character.

† Open, explain.

‡ One who shows by reflection the looks of his patron.

§ To advance their conditions of life.

¶ Whisperings of officious servility.

§ Inhale.

 I. e. Inferior spectators.

Sen. Serv. Ay, my good lord: five talents is his debt;

His means most short, his creditors most strait:
Your honourable letter he desires [him,
To those have shut him up; which falling to Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius! Well;
I am not of that feather, to shake off [him
My friend when he must need me. I do know
A gentleman, that well deserves a help,
Which he shall have: I'll pay the debt, and free him.

Ven. Serv. Your lordship ever binds him.

Tim. Commend me to him: I will send him ransom; [me:—

And, being enfranchis'd, bid him come to
'Tis not enough to help the feeble up,
But to support him after.—Fare you well.

Ven. Serv. All happiness to your honour!

[Exit.

Enter an old ATHENIAN.

Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak.

Tim. Freely, good father.

Old Ath. Thou hast a servant nam'd La-cilius.

Tim. I have so: What of him?

Old Ath. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he here, or no?—Lacilius!

Enter LACILIUS.

Lac. Here, at your lordship's service.

Old Ath. This fellow here, lord Timon, this thy creature,

By night frequents my house. I am a man
That from my first have been inclin'd to thrift;
And my estate deserves an heir more rais'd,
Than one which holds a trencher.

Tim. Well; what further?

Old Ath. One only daughter have I, no kin else,

On whom I may confer what I have got:
The maid is fair, o'the youngest for a bride,
And I have bred her at my dearest cost.
In qualities of the best. This man of thine
Attempts her love: I pry'thee, noble lord,
Join with me to forbid him her resort;
Myself have spoke in vain.

Tim. The man is honest.

Old Ath. Therefore he will be, Timon:
His honesty rewards him in itself,
It must not bear my daughter.

Tim. Does she love him?

Old Ath. She is young, and apt:
Our own precedent passions do instruct us
What levity's in youth.

Tim. [To LACILIUS.] Love you the maid?

Lac. Ay, my good lord, and she accepts of it.

Old Ath. If in her marriage my consent be missing,
I call the gods to witness, I will choose
Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world,
And dispossess her all.

Tim. How shall she be endow'd,
If she be mated with an equal husband?

Old Ath. Three talents, on the present; in future, all.

Tim. This gentleman of mine hath serv'd me
long;
To build his fortune, I will strain a little,
For 'tis a bond in men. Give him thy daughter:

What you bestow, in him I'll accept;
And make him weigh with him.

Old Ath. Most noble lord,
Pawn me to this your honour, she is his. †

Tim. My hand to thee; mine honour on my promise.

Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship: Never may
That state or fortune fall into my keeping,
Which is not ow'd to you!

[Exeunt LUCILIUS and old ATHENIAN.]

Poet. Vouchsafe my labour, and long live your lordship!

Tim. I thank you; you shall hear from me anon: [friend?

Go not away.—What have you there, my Pain. A piece of painting, which I do beseech

Your lordship to accept. [seech

Tim. Painting is welcome.

The painting is almost the natural man;
For since dishonour traffics with man's nature,
He is but outside: These pencil'd figures are Even such as they give out.* I like your work;

And you shall find, I like it: wait attendance
Till you hear further from me.

Pain. The gods preserve you!

Tim. Well fare you, gentlemen: Give me your hand;

We must needs dine together.—Sir, your jewel
Hath suffer'd under praise.

Jew. What, my lord? dispraise?

Tim. A mere satiety of commendations.
If I should pay you for't as 'tis extoll'd,
It would unclew† me quite.

Jew. My lord, 'tis rated [know,
As those, which sell, would give: But you well
Things of like value, differing in the owners,
Are prized by their masters: believe't, dear
You mend the jewel by wearing it. [lord,

Tim. Well mock'd.

Mer. No, my good lord; he speaks the common tongue.

Which all men speak with him.

Tim. Look, who comes here. Will you be chid?

Enter APEMANTUS.

Jew. We will bear, with your lordship.

Mer. He'll spare none.

Tim. Good morrow to thee, gentle Apemantus!

Apem. Till I be gentle, stay for thy good morrow; [honest.

When thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves

Tim. Why dost thou call them knaves? thou know'st them not.

Apem. Are they not Athenians?

Tim. Yes.

Apem. Then I repent not.

Jew. You know me, Apemantus.

Apem. Thou know'st I do; I call'd thee by thy name.

Tim. Thou art proud, Apemantus.

Apem. Of nothing so much, as that I am not like Timon.

Tim. Whither art going?

Apem. To knock out an honest Athenian's brains.

Tim. That's a deed thou'lt die for.

Apem. Right, if doing nothing be death by the law.

Tim. How likest thou this picture, Apemantus?

Apem. The best, for the innocence.

Tim. Wrought he not well, that painted it?

Apem. He wrought better, that made the painter; and yet he's but a filthy piece of work.

Pain. You are a dog.

Apem. Thy mother's of my generation; What's she, if I be a dog?

Tim. Wilt dine with me, Apemantus?

Apem. No; I eat not lords.

Tim. An thou should'st, thou'dst anger ladies.

Apem. O, they eat lords; so they come by great bellies.

Tim. That's a lascivious apprehension.

Apem. So thou apprehend'st it: Take it for thy labour.

Tim. How dost thou like this jewel, Apemantus?

Apem. Not so well as plain-dealing,* which will not cost a man a doit.

Tim. What dost thou think 'tis worth?

Apem. Not worth my thinking.—How now, poet?

Poet. How now, philosopher?

Apem. Thou liest.

Poet. Art not one?

Apem. Yes.

Poet. Then I lie not.

Apem. Art not a poet?

Poet. Yes.

Apem. Then thou liest: look in thy last work, where thou hast feign'd him a worthy fellow.

Poet. That's not feign'd, he is so.

Apem. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour: He, that loves to be flattered, is worthy o'the flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord!

Tim. What would'st do then, Apemantus?

Apem. Even as Apemantus does now, hate a lord with my heart.

Tim. What, thyself?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Wherefore?

Apem. That I had no angry wit to be a lord.—Art not thou a merchant?

Mer. Ay, Apemantus.

Apem. Traffic confound thee, if the gods will not!

Mer. If traffic do it, the gods do it.

Apem. Traffic's thy god, and thy god confound thee!

Trumpets sound. Enter a SERVANT.

Tim. What trumpet's that?

Serv. 'Tis Alcibiades, and

Some twenty horse, all of companionship.

Tim. Pray, entertain them; give them guide to us.— [Exeunt some Attendants.

You must needs dine with me:—Go not you hence, [done,

Till I have thank'd you; and, when dinner's
Show me this piece.—I am joyful of your sights.—

Enter ALCIBIADES, with his Company.

Most welcome, Sir!

[They salute.

Apem. So, so; there!—

Aches contract and starve your supple joints!—
That there should be small love 'mongst these sweet knaves, [out

And all this court'sy! The strain of man's breed
Into baboon and monkey.†

Alcib. Sir, you have sav'd my longing, and I
Most hungrily on your sight. [feed

Tim. Right welcome, Sir:

* Pictures have no hypocrisy; they are what they profess to be.
† To unclew a man is to draw out the whole mass of his fortunes.

* Alluding to the proverb: plain-dealing is a jewel, but they who use it beggars.
† Man is degenerated; his strain or lineage is worn down to a monkey.

Ere we depart, we'll share a bounteous time
In different pleasures. Pray you, let us in.
[Exeunt all but APEMANTUS.]

Enter two LORDS.

1 Lord. What time a day is't, Apemantus?

Apem. Time to be honest.

1 Lord. That time serves still.

Apem. The most accursed thou, that still omit'st it.

2 Lord. Thou art going to lord Timon's feast.

Apem. Ay; to see meat fill knaves, and wine heat fools.

2 Lord. Fare thee well, fare thee well.

Apem. Thou art a fool, to bid me farewell twice.

2 Lord. Why, Apemantus?

Apem. Shouldst have kept one to thyself, for
I mean to give thee none.

1 Lord. Hang thyself.

Apem. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding;
make thy requests to thy friend.

2 Lord. Away, unpeaceable dog, or I'll spurn thee hence.

Apem. I will fly, like a dog, the heels of the ass. [Exit.]

1 Lord. He's opposite to humanity. Come, shall we in,

And taste lord Timon's bounty? he outgoes
The very heart of kindness.

2 Lord. He pours it out; Plutus, the god of
gold,

Is but his steward: no meed,* but he repays
Sevenfold above itself; no gift to him,
But breeds the giver a return exceeding
All use of quittance.†

1 Lord. The noblest mind he carries,
That ever govern'd man.

2 Lord. Long may he live in fortunes! Shall we in?

1 Lord. I'll keep you company. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same.—A Room of State in TIMON'S House.

Hautboys playing loud music. A great banquet served in; FLAVIUS and others attending; then enter TIMON, ALCIBIADES, LUCIUS, LUCUL-LUS, SEMPRONIUS, and other Athenian Senators, with VENTIDIUS, and Attendants. Then comes, dropping after all, APEMANTUS, discontentedly.

Ven. Most honour'd Timon, 't hath pleas'd the gods remember
My father's age, and call him to long peace.
He is gone happy, and has left me rich:
Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound
To your free heart, I do return those talents, Doubled, with thanks, and service, from whose help
I deriv'd liberty.

Tim. O, by no means,
Honest Ventidius: you mistake my love;
I gave it freely ever; and there's none
Can truly say, he gives, if he receives:
If our betters play at that game, we must not dare

To imitate them; Faults that are rich, are fair.

Ven. A noble spirit.

[They all stand ceremoniously looking on TIMON.]

Tim. Nay, my lords, ceremony
Was but devis'd at first, to set a gloss
On faint deeds, hollow welcomes,

* Meed here means desert. † I. e. All the customary returns made in discharge of obligations.

Recanting goodness, carry ere 'tis shown;
But where there is true friendship, there needs
none.

Pray, sit; more welcome are ye to my fortunes,
Than my fortunes to me. [They sit.]

1 Lord. My lord, we always have confes'd
it.

Apem. Ho, ho, confes'd it? hang'd it, have
you not?

Tim. O, Apemantus!—you are welcome.

Apem. No,

You shall not make me welcome:

I come to have thee thrust me out of doors.

Tim. Fie, thou art a churl; you have got a humour there

Does not become a man, 'tis much to blame:
They say, my lords, that ira fever breeds out,*

But yond' man's ever angry.

Go, let him have a table by himself;

For he does neither affect company,

Nor is he fit for it, indeed.

Apem. Let me stay at thine own peril, Ti-
mon;

I come to observe; I give thee warning out.

Tim. I take no heed of thee; thou art an Athenian; therefore welcome: I myself would have no power: pr'ythee, let my meat make thee silent.

Apem. I scorn thy meat; 'twould choke me, for I should

Ne'er flatter thee.—O you gods! what a num-
Of men eat Timon, and he sees them not!

It grieves me, to see so many dip their meat
In one man's blood; and all the madness in,
He cheers them up too.†

I wonder, men dare trust themselves with men:
Methinks they should invite them without knives;

Good for their meat, and safer for their lives.

There's much example for't; the fellow, that Sits next him now, parts bread with him, and pledges

The breath of him in a divided draught,
Is the readiest man to kill him: it has been if I

Were a huge man, I should fear to drink at meals;

Lest they should spy my windpipe's dangerous notes;

Great men should drink with harness; on their throats.

Tim. My lord, in heart;‡ and let the health go round.

2 Lord. Let it flow this way, my good lord.

Apem. Flow this way! [mon,

A brave fellow!—he keeps his tides well. Ti-
Those healths will make thee, and thy state, look ill.

Here's that, which is too weak to be a sinner,
Honest water, which ne'er left man i' the mire:
This, and my food, are equals; there's no odds.
Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the gods.

APEMANTUS' GRACE.

Immortal gods, I crave no pelf;

I pray for no man, but myself:

Grant I may never prove so fond,||

To trust man on his oath or bond;

Or a harlot, for her weeping;

Or a dog, that seems a sleeping;

* Anger is a short madness.

† The allusion is to a pack of hounds trained to pursuit, by being gratified with the blood of an animal which they kill, and the wonder is, that the animal, on which they are feeding, cheers them to the chase.

‡ Armour.

§ With sincerity.

|| Foolish.

*Or a keeper with my freedom;
Or my friends, if I should need 'em.
Amen. So fall to't:
Rich men sin, and I eat root.*

[Eats and drinks.]

Much good dich thy good heart, Apemantus!

Tim. Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now.

Alcib. My heart is ever at your service, my lord.

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of enemies, than a dinner of friends.

Alcib. So they were bleeding-new, my lord, there's no meat like them; I could wish my best friend at such a feast.

Apem. 'Would all those flatterers were thine enemies then; that then thou might'st kill 'em, and bid me to 'em.

1 Lord. Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeals, we should think ourselves for ever perfect.*

Tim. O, no doubt, my good friends, but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you: How had you been my friends else? why have you that charitable title from thousands, did you not chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to myself, than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf; and thus far I confirm you. O, you gods, think I, what need we have any friends, if we should never have need of them? they were the most needless creatures living, should we ne'er have use for them: and would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases, that keep their sounds to themselves. Why, I have often wished myself poorer, that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do benefits: and what better or properer can we call our own, than the riches of our friends? O, what a precious comfort 'tis, to have so many, like brothers, commanding one another's fortunes! O joy, e'en made away ere it can be born! Mine eyes cannot hold out water, methinks: to forget their faults, I drink to you.

Apem. Thou weapest to make them drink, Timon.

2 Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eyes,

And, at that instant, like a babe sprung up.

Apem. Ho, ho! I laugh to think that babe a bastard.

3 Lord. I promise you, my lord, you mov'd me much.

Apem. Much.† [Tucket sounded.]

Tim. What means that trump?—How now?

Enter a SERVANT.

Serv. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies? what are their wills?

Serv. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office, to signify their pleasures.

Tim. I pray, let them be admitted.

Enter CUPID.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon;—and to all
That of his bounties taste!—The five best sen-

Acknowledge thee their patron; and come freely

To gratulate thy plenteous bosom: The ear, Taste, touch, smell, all pleas'd from thy table rise;

They only now come but to feast thine eyes.

Tim. They are welcome all; let them have kind admittance:

Music, make their welcome. [Exit CUPID.]

1 Lord. You see, my lord, how ample you are belov'd.

Music.—Re-enter CUPID, with a masque of LADIES as Amazons, with lutes in their hands, dancing, and playing.

Apem. Hey day, what a sweep of vanity comes this way!

They dance! they are mad women.

Like madness is the glory of this life,
As this pomp shows to a little oil, and root.
We make ourselves fools, to disport ourselves;
And spend our flatteries, to drink those men,
Upon whose age we void it up again,
With poisonous spite, and envy. Who lives, that's not

Depraved, or depraves? who dies, that bears
Not one spurn to their graves of their friends' gift?

I should fear, those, that dance before me now,
Would one day stamp upon me: It has been done;

Men shut their doors against a setting sun.

The LORDS rise from table, with much adoring of TIMON; and, to show their loves, each singles out an Amazon, and all dance, men with women, a lefty strain or two to the hautboys, and cease.

Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies,

Set a fair fashion on our entertainment,
Which was not half so beautiful and kind;
You have added worth unto't, and lively lustre,

And entertain'd me with mine own device;
I am to thank you for it.

1 Lady. My lord, you take us even at the best.

Apem. 'Faith, for the worst is filthy; and would not hold taking, I doubt me.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet Attends you: Please you to dispose yourselves.

All Lad. Most thankfully, my lord.

[Exit CUPID, and LADIES.]

Tim. Flavius,—

Flav. My lord.

Tim. The little casket bring me hither.

Flav. Yes, my lord.—More jewels yet!

There is no crossing him in his humour;

Else I should tell him,—Well,—i'faith, I should,

When all's spent, he'd be cross'd* then, an he 'Tis pity, bounty had not eyes behind;
That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind.†

[Exit, and returns with the casket.]

1 Lord. Where be our men?

Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness.

2 Lord. Our horses.

Tim. O my friends, I have one word

* I. e. Arrived at the perfection of happiness.

† Endearing.

‡ Much, was formerly an expression of contemptuous admiration.

* Shakespeare plays on the word crossed: alluding to the piece of silver money called a cross.

† For his nobleness of soul.

To say to you:—Look you, my good lord, I must Entreat you, honour me so much, as to Advance this jewel;

Accept, and wear it, kind my lord.

1 Lord. I am so far already in your gift,--

Alas, so are we all.

Enter a SERVANT.

Serv. My lord, there are certain nobles of the senate

Newly alighted, and come to visit you.

Tim. They are fairly welcome.

Flav. I beseech your honour, [near.]

Vouchsafe me a word; it does concern you

Tim. Near! why then another time I'll hear

I pray thee, let us be provided [then:]

To show them entertainment.

Flav. I scarce know how. [Aside.]

Enter another SERVANT.

2 Serv. May it please your honour, the lord Lucius

Out of his free love, hath presented to you

Four milk-white horses, trapp'd in silver.

Tim. I shall accept them fairly: let the presents

Enter a third SERVANT.

Be worthily entertain'd.—How now, what news?

3 Serv. Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, Lord Lucullus, entreats your company to-morrow to hunt with him; and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds.

Tim. I'll hunt with him; And let them be rewarded without fail reward. [Exit.]

Flav. [Aside.] What will this come to? He commands us to provide, and give great

And all out of an empty coffer.— [gifts.]

Nor will he know his purse; or yield me this, To show him what a beggar his heart is,

Being of no power to make his wishes good; His promises fly so beyond his state,

That what he speaks is all in debt, he owes For every word; he is so kind, that he now

Pays interest for't; his hand's put to their books.

Well, 'would I were gently put out of office, Before I were forc'd out!

Happier is he that has no friend to feed, Than such as do even enemies exceed.

I bleed inwardly for my lord. [Exit.]

Tim. You do yourselves Much wrong, you bate too much of your own merits:—

Here, my lord, a trifle of our love.

2 Lord. With more than common thanks I will receive it.

3 Lord. O, he is the very soul of bounty!

Tim. And now I remember me, my lord, you gave

Good words the other day of a bay courser I rode on: it is yours, because you lik'd it.

3 Lord. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, in that.

Tim. You may take my word, my lord; I know, no man

Can justly praise, but what he does affect: I weigh my friend's affection with mine own; I'll tell you true. I'll call on you.

All Lords. None so welcome.

Tim. I take all and your several visitations So kind to heart, 'tis not enough to give;

methinks, I could deal^a kingdoms to my friends,

And ne'er be weary.—Alcibiades,

Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich,

It comes in charity to thee: for all thy glory is amongst the dead; and all the lands thou lie in a patch'd field. [Exit.]

Alcib. Ay, deified land, my lord.

1 Lord. We are so victoriously beaute,—

Tim. And so

Am I to you.

2 Lord. So infinitely amiable,—

Tim. All to you.—Lights, more lights.

1 Lord. The best of happiness,

Honour, and fortunes, keep with you, [Exit.]

Tim. Ready for his friends.

[Exeunt ALCEBIADES, LUCIUS, &c.]

Aperu. What a coil's here!

Barren of backs, and jutting out of hand!

I doubt whether their legs be worth the stir

That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of drops: [Exit.]

Methinks, false hearts should never have count

Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on court'ans.

Tim. Now, Apemantus, if thou wert not

I'd be good to thee. [Exit.]

Aperu. No, I'll nothing: see,

If I should be bribe'd so, thou wouldst be sure

To rail upon thee: and then thou wouldst rail

the faster,

Thou giv'st so long, Timon, I fear me, thou

Wilt give away thyself in paper's slanders:

What need these feasts, pageants, and vain glories?

Tim. Nay,

An you begin to rail on society once,

I am sworn, not to give regard to you.

Farewell; and come with better aims. [Exit.]

Aperu. So;—

Thou'lt not hear me now,—thou shalt not then, I'll lock

Thy heaven from thee. O, that man's ears

should be

To counsel deaf, but not to flattery! [Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same.—A Room in a SENATOR'S House.

Enter a SENATOR, with papers in his hand.

Sen. And late, five thousand to Varro; and to Isidore [sum.]

He owes nine thousand; besides my former

Which makes it five and twenty.—Still in motion

Of raging waste! It cannot hold; it will not.

If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog.

And give it Timon, why, the dog coins gold.

If I would sell my horse, and buy twenty more

Better than he, why, give my horse to Timon,

Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me, straight.

And able horses: No porter at his gate;

But rather one that smiles, and still invites

All that pass by. It cannot hold; no reason

Can sound his state in safety. Caphis, ho!

Caphis, I say!

Enter CAPHIS.

Caph. Here, Sir; What is your pleasure?

^a I. e. Could dispense them on every side with an ungrudging distribution, like that with which I could deal out cards.

⁺ I. e. All happiness to you. ; Offering assistance.

[†] I. e. He ruined by his securities entered into.

[‡] By his heaven he means good advice; the only thing by which he could be saved.

Sen. Get on your cloak, and haste you to lord Timon;
 Impórtune him for my monies; be not ceas'd*
 With slight denial; nor then silenc'd, when—
Commend me to your master—and the cap
 Plays in the right hand, thus:—but tell him,
 Sirrah,

My uses cry to me, I must serve my turn
 Out of mine own; his days and times are past,
 And my reliances on his fracted dates
 Have smit my credit: I love, and honour him;
 But must not break my back, to heal his finger:

Immediate are my needs; and my relief
 Must not be toss'd and turn'd to me in words,
 But find supply immediate. Get you gone:
 Put on a most importunate aspect,
 A visage of demand; for, I do fear,
 When every feather sticks in his own wing,
 Lord Timon will be left a naked gull,
 Which flashes now a phoenix. Get you gone.

Caph. I go, Sir.

Sen. I go, Sir?—take the bonds along with
 And have the dates in compt. [you,

Caph. I will, Sir.

Sen. Go.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same.—A Hall in TIMON'S House.

Enter FLAVIUS, with many bills in his hand.

Flav. No care, no stop! so senseless of expense,
 That he will neither know how to maintain it,
 Nor cease his flow of riot: Takes no account
 How things go from him; nor resumes no care
 Of what is to continue; Never mind
 Was to be so unwise, to be so kind.
 What shall be done? He will not hear, till feel:
 I must be round with him now he comes from hunting.
 Fie, fie, fie, fie!

Enter CAPHIS, and the SERVANTS of ISIDORE and VARRO.

Caph. Good even,† Varro: What,
 You come for money?

Var. Serr. Is't not your business too?

Caph. It is;—And yours too, Isidore?

Isid. Serr. It is so.

Caph. 'Would we were all discharg'd!

Var. Serr. I fear it.

Caph. Here comes the lord.

Enter TIMON, ALCIBIADES, and LORDS, &c.

Tim. So soon as dinner's done, we'll forth
 again,‡

My Alcibiades.—With me? What's your will?

Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues.

Tim. Dues? Whence are you?

Caph. Of Athens here, my lord.

Tim. Go to my steward.

Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath put me off

To the succession of new days this month:
 My master is awak'd by great occasion,
 To call upon his own; and humbly prays you,
 That with your other noble parts you'll suit,
 In giving him his right.

Tim. Mine honest friend,

I pr'ythee, but repair to me next morning.

Caph. Nay, good my lord,—

Tim. Contain thyself, good friend.

Var. Serr. One Varro's servant, my good
 lord,—

Isid. Serr. From Isidore;

He humbly prays your speedy payment,—

Caph. If you did know, my lord, my master's wants,—

Var. Serr. 'Twas due on forfeiture, my lord, six weeks,

And past,—

Isid. Serr. Your steward puts me off, my
 lord;

And I am sent expressly to your lordship.

Tim. Give me breath:—

I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on;

[Exeunt ALCIBIADES and LORDS.

I'll wait upon you instantly.—Come hither,
 pray you, [To FLAVIUS.

How goes the world, that I am thus encounter'd

With clamorous demands of date-broke bonds,
 And the detention of long-since-due debts,
 Against my honour?

Flav. Please you, gentlemen,
 The time is unagreeable to this business:
 Your importunacy cease, till after dinner;
 That I may make his lordship understand
 Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. Do so, my friends:

See them well entertain'd.

[Exit TIMON.

Flav. I pray, draw near.

[Exit FLAVIUS.

Enter APEMANTUS and a FOOL.

Caph. Stay, stay, here comes the fool with Apemantus; let's have some sport with 'em.

Var. Serr. Hang him, he'll abuse us.

Isid. Serr. A plague upon him, dog!

Var. Serr. How dost, fool?

Apem. Dost dialogue with thy shadow?

Var. Serr. I speak not to thee.

Apem. No; 'tis to thyself,—Come away.

[To the FOOL.

Isid. Serr. [To VAR. SERR.] There's the fool hangs on your back already.

Apem. No, thou stand'st single, thou art not on him yet.

Caph. Where's the fool now?

Apem. He last asked the question.—Poor rogues, and usurers' men! bawds between gold and want!

All Serr. What are we, Apemantus?

Apem. Asses.

All Serr. Why?

Apem. That you ask me what you are, and do not know yourselves.—Speak to 'em, fool.

Fool. How do you, gentlemen?

All Serr. Gramercies, good fool: How does your mistress?

Fool. She's e'en setting on water to scald such chickens as you are. 'Would, we could see you at Corinth.

Apem. Good! gramercy.

Enter PAGE.

Fool. Look you, here comes my mistress' page.

Page. [To the FOOL.] Why, how now, captain? what do you in this wise company?—
 How dost thou, Apemantus?

Apem. 'Would I had a rod in my mouth, that
 I might answer thee profitably.

Page. Pr'ythee, Apemantus, read me the superscription of these letters; I know not which is which.

Apem. Canst not read?

Page. No.

Apem. There will little learning die then, that day thou art hanged. This is to lord

* Stopped

from noon.

† Good even was the usual salutation

‡ I. e. To hunting; in our author's time it was the custom to hunt as well after dinner as before.

Timon; this to Alcibiades. Go; thou wast born a bastard, and thou'lt die a hawd.

Page. Thou wast whelped a dog; and thou shalt furnish, a dog's death. Answer not, I am gone. [Exit PAGE.]

Apem. Even so thou out-run'st grace. Fool, I will go with you to lord Timon's.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

Apem. If Timon stay at home.—You three serve three usurers?

All Serv. Ay, 'would they served us!

Apem. So would I,—as good a trick as ever hangman served thief.

Fool. Are you three usurers' men?

All Serv. Ay, fool.

Fool. I think, no usurer but has a fool to his servant: My mistress is one, and I am her fool. When men come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly, and go away merry; but they enter my mistress' house merrily, and go away sadly: The reason of this?

Var. Serv. I could render one.

Apem. Do it then, that we may account thee a whoremaster, and a knave; which, notwithstanding, thou shalt be no less esteemed.

Var. Serv. What is a whoremaster, fool?

Fool. A fool in good clothes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit: sometime, it appears like a lord: sometime, like a lawyer; sometime, like a philosopher, with two stones more than his artificial one: He is very often like a knight; and, generally in all shapes, that man goes up and down in, from fourscore to thirtcen, this spirit walks in.

Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man: as much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lackest.

Apem. That answer might have become Apemantus.

All Serv. Aside, aside; here comes lord Timon.

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Apem. Come with me, fool, come.

Fool. I do not always follow lover, elder brother, and woman; sometime, the philosopher. [Exit APEMANTUS and FOOL.]

Flav. 'Pray you, walk near; I'll speak with you anon. [Exit SERV.]

Tim. You make me marvel: Wherefore, ere this time,

Had you not fully laid my state before me; That I might so have rated my expense, As I had leave of means?

Flav. You would not hear me, At many leisures I propos'd.

Tim. Go to:

Perchance, some single vantages you took, When my indisposition put you back; And that unaptness made your minister, Thus to excuse yourself.

Flav. O my good lord!

At many times I brought in my accounts, Laid them before you; you would throw them off,

And say, you found them in mine honesty. When, for some trifling present, you have bid me

Return so much,* I have shook my head, and wept;

Yea, 'gainst the authority of manners, pray'd you

To hold your hand more close; I did endure

* He does not mean, so great a sum, but a certain sum.

Not seldom, nor no slight checks; when I have Prompted you, in the cobb of your estate, And your great flow of debts. My dear-lord's lord, [Time,] Though you hear now, (too late!) yet now's a The greatest of your having lacks a half To pay your present debts.

Tim. Let all my land be sold.

Flav. 'Tis all engag'd, some forfeited and gone;

And what remains will hardly stop the mouth Of present dues: the future comes apace: What shall defend the interim? and at length How goes our reckoning?

Tim. To Lacedæmon did my land extend.

Flav. O my good lord, the world is but a word;†

Were it all yours to give it in a breath, How quickly were it gone?

Tim. You tell me true.

Flav. If you suspect my husbandry, or false- Call me before the exactest auditors, [head, And set me on the proof. So the gods bless me,

When all our offices have been oppos'd With riotous feeders; when our vaults have wept

With drunken spilt of wine; when every room Hath blas'd with lights, and bray'd with minstrelsy;

I have retir'd me to a wasteful cook,‡ And set mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Pr'ythee, no more.

Flav. Heavens, have I said, the bounty of this lord! [saints,

How many prodigal bits have slaves and poor- This night englutted! Who is not Timon's? What heart, head, sword, force, means, but is lord Timon's?

Great Timon, noble, worthy, royal Timon!

Ah! when the means are gone, that buy this praise,

The breath is gone whereof this praise is made: Feast-won, fast-lost; one cloud of winter showers,

These flies are couch'd.

Tim. Come, sermon me no further:

No villanous bounty yet hath pass'd my heart; Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given.

Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience lack,

To think I shall lack friends? Secure thy heart; If I would broach the vessels of my love,

And try the argument of hearts by borrowing,

Men, and men's fortunes, could I frankly use, As I can bid thee speak.

Flav. Assurance bless your thoughts!

Tim. And, in some sort, these wants of mine are crown'd,§

That I account them blessings; for by these Shall I try friends: You shall perceive, how you [friends.

Mistake my fortunes; I am wealthy in my Within there, ho!—Flaminius! Servilius!

Enter FLAMINIUS, SERVILIUS, and other SERVANTS.

Serv. My lord, my lord,—

* I. e. As the world itself may be comprised in a word, you might give it away in a breath.

† The apartments allotted to culinary offices, &c.

‡ A pipe with a turning stopple running to waste.

§ If I would, (says Timon,) by borrowing try of what men's hearts are composed, what they have in them, &c.

¶ Dignified, made respectable.

Tim. I will despatch you severally.—You, to lord Lucius,—
To lord Lucullus you: I hunted with his Honour to-day;—You, to Sempronius; Commend me to their loves; and, I am proud, say,
That my occasions have found time to use them Toward a supply of money: let the request Be fifty talents.

Flam. As you have said, my lord.

Flav. Lord Lucius, and Lord Lucullus? humph! [Aside.]

Tim. Go you, Sir, [To another SERV.] to the senators,

(Of whom, even to the state's best health, I have [stant Deserv'd this hearing,) bid 'em send o'the in- A thousand talents to me.

Flav. I have been bold,
(For that I knew it the most general way,) To them to use your signet, and your name; But they do shake their heads, and I am here No richer in return.

Tim. Is't true? can it be?

Flav. They answer, in a joint and corporate voice,
That now they are at fall,* want treasure, cannot

Do what they would; are sorry—you are honourable,—

But yet they could have wish'd—they know not—but

Something hath been amiss—a noble nature May catch a wrench—would all were well— 'tis pity—

And so, intending† other serious matters, After distasteful looks, and these hard fractions,‡

With certain half-caps,§ and cold moving nods, They froze me into silence.

Tim. You gods, reward them!—
I pr'ythee, man, look cheerly; These old fellows

Have their ingratitude in them hereditary: Their blood is cak'd, 'tis cold, it seldom flows; 'Tis lack of kindly warmth, they are not kind; And nature, as it grows again toward earth, Is fashion'd for the journey, dull, and heavy.—

Go to Ventidius,—[To a SERV.] Pr'ythee, [To FLAVIUS,] be not sad,

Thou art true, and honest; ingeniously|| I speak,

No blame belongs to thee:—[To SERV.] Ventidius lately

Buried his father; by whose death, he's stepp'd Into a great estate: when he was poor, Imprison'd, and in scarcity of friends, I clear'd him with five talents; Greet him from Bid him suppose, some good necessity [me; Touches his friend, which craves to be remember'd

With those five talents:—that had,—[To FLAV.] give it these fellows

To whom 'tis instant due. Ne'er speak, or think, [sink.

That Timon's fortunes 'mong his friends can

Flav. I would, I could not think it; That thought is bounty's foe;

Being free¶ itself, it thinks all others so. [Exeunt.

* I. e. At an ebb.

† Intending, had anciently the same meaning as attending. § Broken hints, abrupt remarks.

|| A half-cap is a cap slightly moved, not put off.

¶ For ingenuously.

|| Liberal, not parsimonious.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The same.—A Room in LUCULLUS' House.

FLAMINIUS waiting. Enter a SERVANT to him.

Serv. I have told my lord of you, he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, Sir.

Enter LUCULLUS.

Serv. Here's my lord.

Lucul. [Aside.] One of lord Timon's men? a gift, I warrant. Why, this hits right; I dreamt of a silver basin and ewer to-night. Flaminus, honest Flaminus; you are very respectfully* welcome, Sir.—Fill me some wine.—[Exit SERVANT.] And how does that honourable, complete, free-hearted gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good lord and master?

Flam. His health is well, Sir.

Lucul. I am right glad that his health is well, Sir: And what hast thou there under thy cloak, pretty Flaminus?

Flam. 'Faith, nothing but an empty box, Sir; which, in my lord's behalf, I come to entreat your honour to supply; who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him; nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Lucul. La, la, la, la,—nothing doubting, says he? alas, good lord! a noble gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I have dined with him, and told him on't; and come again to supper to him, of purpose to have him spend less; and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and honesty† is his; I have told him on't, but I could never get him from it.

Re-enter SERVANT, with wine.

Serv. Please your lordship, here is the wine.

Lucul. Flaminus, I have noted thee always wise. Here's to thee.

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure.

Lucul. I have observed thee always for a to-wardly prompt spirit,—give thee thy due,—and one that knows what belongs to reason: and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well: good parts in thee.—Get you gone, Sirrah.—[To the SERVANT, who goes out.]—Draw nearer, honest Flaminus. Thy lord's a bountiful gentleman: but thou art wise; and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money; especially upon bare friendship, without security. Here's three solidares for thee; good boy, wink at me, and say thou saw'st me not. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is't possible, the world should so much differ; [neer, And we alive, that liv'd?‡ Fly, damned base-To him that worships thee.

[Throwing the money away.]
Lucul. Ha! Now I see thou art a fool, and fit for thy master. [Exit LUCULLUS.

Flam. May these add to the number that may scald thee!

Let molten coin be thy damnation, Thou disease of a friend, and not himself! Has friendship such a faint and milky heart, It turns in less than two nights? O you gods

* For respectfully. † Honesty here means liberality.

‡ I. e. And we who were alive then, alive now.

I had my master's property? This slave
 Untill his honour, has my lord's trust in him?
 Why should it thrive, and turn to enrichment,
 When he is turn'd to prison?
 O, may diseases only work upon't!
 And, when he is sick to death, let not that part of nature
 Which my lord paid for, be of any power
 To expel sickness, but feeling his hour!
 [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The same.—A public place.
Enter Lucius, with three Strangers.

Luc. Who, the lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

1 Stran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours, now lord Timon's happy hours are done; and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. Pish no, do not believe it; he cannot want for money.

2 Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that, not long ago, one of his men was with the lord Lucullus, to borrow so many talents, nay, urged extremely for't, and showed what necessity belonged to't, and yet was denied.

Luc. How?

3 Stran. I tell you, denied, my lord.

Luc. What a strange case was that? now, before the gods, I am ashamed on't. Denied that honourable man? there was very little honour showed in't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such like trifles, nothing comparing to his, yet, had he mistook him, and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents.

Enter SERVILIUS.

Ser. See, by good hap, yonder's my lord; I have sweet to see his honour.—My honoured lord,— [To Lucius.]

Luc. Servilius! you are kindly met, Sir. Fare thee well!—Commend me to thy honourable-virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend.

Ser. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord; he's ever sending: How shall I thank him, thankest thou? And what has he sent now?

Ser. He has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents.

Luc. I know, his lordship is but merry with me;

He cannot want fifty-five hundred talents.

Ser. But in the mean time he wants less, my lord, if his occasion were not virtuous. [Lord.] I should not urge it half so faithfully.

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?

Ser. Upon my soul, 'tis true, Sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I, to disfigure myself against such a good time, when I might have shown myself honourable! how unluckily it happened, that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and made a great deal of honour!—Servilius, now before the gods, I am not able to do't; the more beast, I say:—I was willing to let such things away, these gentlemen can witness; but I would not, for the wealth of Athens, I had done it now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship, and I hope, his honour will conceive the fault of me, because I have no power to be kind; And tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions, nay, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far, as to use mine own words to him?

Ser. Yes, Sir, I shall.

Luc. I will look you out a good turn, Servilius.— [Exit SERVILIUS.]

True, as you said, Timon is shrunk, indeed; And he, that's once denied, will hardly speak.

[Exit LUCIUS.]

1 Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius?

2 Stran. Ay, too well.

1 Stran. Why this

Is the world's soul, and just of the same piece
 Is every flatterer's spirit. Who can call him
 His friend, that dips in the same dish? He, in My knowing, Timon hath been this lord's friend,
 And kept his credit with his purse; [Exit.]
 Supported his estate, nay, Timon's money
 Has paid his men their wages. He ne'er drinks,
 But Timon's silver treads upon his lip,
 And yet, (O, see the monstrousness of man
 When he looks out in an ungrateful shape!)
 He does deny him, in respect of him,
 What charitable men afford to beggars.

3 Stran. Religion groans at it.

1 Stran. For mine own part,

I never tasted Timon in my life,
 Nor came any of his bounties over me,
 To mark me for his friend, yet, I protest,
 For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue,
 And honourable carriage,
 Had his necessity made use of me,
 I would have put my wealth into donation,*
 And the best half should have return'd to him,
 So much I love his heart. But, I perceive,
 Men must learn now with pity to dispense:
 For policy sits above conscience. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The same.—A Room in SEMPRONIUS' House.

Enter SEMPRONIUS, and a SERVANT of TIMON'S.

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in't? Humph!
 'Bove all others!

He might have tried lord Lucius, or Lucullus,
 And now Ventidius is wealthy too,
 Whom he redeem'd from prison: All these Owe their estates unto him. [Enter]

Serv. O my lord,
 They have all been touch'd,† and found but metal, for

They have all denied him!

Sem. How! have they denied him?

Has Ventidius and Lucullus denied him?
 And does he send to me? Three? humph!
 It shows but little love or judgement in him.
 Must I be his last refuge? His friends, like physicians,

Thrive, give him over; Must I take the cure
 upon me? [Exit.]

He has much disgrac'd me in't; I am angry at That might have known my place: I see no sense for't,

But his occasions might have woo'd me first;
 For, in my conscience, I was the first man
 That e'er receiv'd gift from him.

* The reason, to get his wealth down in amount as a donation.
 † Tried.

And does he think so backwardly of me now,
That I'll requite it last? No: So it may prove
An argument of laughter to the rest,
And I amongst the lords be thought a fool.
I had rather than the worth of thrice the sum,
He had sent to me first, but for my mind's
sake;

I had such a courage* to do him good. But now return,

And with their faint reply this answer join;
Who bates mine honour, shall not know my coin. [Exit.

Serv. Excellent! Your lordship's a goodly villain. The devil knew not what he did, when he made man politic; he crossed himself by't: and I cannot think, but, in the end, the villanies of man will set him clear. How fairly this lord strives to appear foul! takes virtuous copies to be wicked; like those that, under hot ardent zeal, would set whole realms on fire.

Of such a nature is his politic love.

This was my lord's best hope; now all are fled,
Save the gods only: Now his friends are dead, Doors, that were ne'er acquainted with their
wards

Many a bounteous year, must be employ'd
Now to guard sure their master.

And this is all a liberal course allows;
Who cannot keep his wealth, must keep his house.† [Exit.

SCENE IV.—The same.—A Hall in TIMON'S
House.

Enter two Servants of VARRO, and the Servant of LUCIUS, meeting TITUS, HORTENSIVS, and other Servants to TIMON'S Creditors, waiting his coming out.

Var. Serv. Well met; good-morrow, Titus and Hortensius.

Tit. The like to you, kind Varro.

Hor. Lucius?

What, do we meet together?

Luc. Serv. Ay, and, I think,
(One business does command us all; for mine is money.

Tit. So is theirs and ours.

Enter PHILOTUS.

Luc. Serv. And Sir
Philotus too!

Phi. Good day at once.

Luc. Serv. Welcome, good brother.
What do you think the hour?

Phi. Labouring for nine.

Luc. Serv. So much?

Phi. Is not my lord seen yet?

Luc. Serv. Not yet.

Phi. I wonder on't; he was wont to shine at seven.

Luc. Serv. Ay, but the days are waxed shorter with him:

You must consider, that a prodigal course
Is like the sun's;† but not, like his, recoverable.
I fear,

'Tis deepest winter in lord Timon's purse;
That is, one may reach deep enough, and yet
Find little.

Phi. I am of your fear for that.

Tit. I'll show you how to observe a strange
Your lord sends now for money. [Event.

Hor. Most true, he does.

Tit. And he wears jewels now of Timon's
For which I wait for money. [Gift,

Hor. It is against my heart.

Luc. Serv. Mark, how strange it shows,
Timon in this should pay more than he owes:
And e'en as if your lord should wear rich
And send for money for 'em. [Jewels,

Hor. I am weary of this charge,* the gods can witness:

I know, my lord hath spent of Timon's wealth,
And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth.

1 Var. Serv. Yes, mine's three thousand crowns: What's yours?

Luc. Serv. Five thousand mine.

1 Var. Serv. 'Tis much deep: and it should seem by the sum,

Your master's confidence was above mine;
Else, surely, his had equall'd.

Enter FLAMINIUS.

Tit. One of lord Timon's men.

Luc. Serv. Flaminius! Sir, a word: 'Pray, is my lord ready to come forth?

Flam. No, indeed, he is not.

Tit. We attend his lordship; pray, signify
so much.

Flam. I need not tell him that; he knows,
you are too diligent. [Exit FLAMINIUS.

Enter FLAVIUS in a cloak, muffled.

Luc. Serv. Ha! is not that his steward muffled so?

He goes away in a cloud: call him, call him.

Tit. Do you hear, Sir?

1 Var. Serv. By your leave, Sir,—

Flav. What do you ask of me, my friend?

Tit. We wait for certain money here, Sir.

Flav. Ay,

If money were as certain as your waiting,
'Twere sure enough. Why then prefer'd you
not

Your sums and bills, when your false masters
Of my lord's meat? Then they could smile, and fawn

Upon his debts, and take down the interest Into their gluttonous maws. You do yourselves but wrong,

To stir me up; let me pass quietly:

Believ't, my lord and I have made an end;
I have no more to reckon, he to spend.

Luc. Serv. Ay, but this answer will not serve.

Flav. If 'twill not,

'Tis not so base as you; for you serve knaves.
[Exit.

1 Var. Serv. How! what does his cashier'd worship mutter?

2 Var. Serv. No matter what; he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in?
such may rail against great buildings.

Enter SERVILIUS.

Tit. O, here's Servilius; now we shall know
Some answer.

Serv. If I might beseech you, gentlemen,
To repair some other hour, I should much
Derive from it: for, take it on my soul,
My lord leans wond'rously to discontent.
His comfortable temper has forsook him;
He is much out of health, and keeps his chamber.

Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chambers, are not sick:

And, if it be so far beyond his health,
Methinks, he should the sooner pay his debts,
And make a clear way to the gods.

* Ardour, eager desire. † I. e. Keep within doors for fear of duns. I. e. Like him in blaze and splendour.

* Commission, employment.

Ser. Good gods!

Tit. We cannot take this for an answer, Sir.

Flam. [Within.] Servilius, help!—my lord!
my lord!—

Enter TIMON, in a rage; FLAMINIUS following.

Tim. What, are my doors oppos'd against my passage?

Have I been ever free, and must my house
Be my retentive enemy, my jail:

The place which I have feasted, does it now,
Like all mankind, show me an iron heart?

Luc. Serr. Put in now, Titus.

Tit. My lord, here is my bill.

Luc. Serr. Here's mine.

Hor. Serr. And mine, my lord.

Both Var. Serr. And ours, my lord.

Phi. All our bills.

Tim. Knock me down with 'em: * cleave me to the girdle.

Luc. Serr. Alas! my lord,—

Tim. Cut my heart in sums.

Tit. Mine, fifty talents.

Tim. Tell out my blood.

Luc. Serr. Five thousand crowns, my lord.

Tim. Five thousand drops pays that.—

What yours?—and yours?

1 Var. Serr. My lord,—

2 Var. Serr. My lord,—

Tim. Tear me, take me, and the gods fall upon you! [Exit.

Hor. 'Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money; these debts may well be called desperate ones, for a madman owes 'em. [Exeunt.

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Tim. They have e'en put my breath from me,
the slaves:

Creditors!—devils.

Flav. My dear lord,—

Tim. What if it should be so?

Flav. My lord,—

Tim. I'll have it so:—My steward!

Flav. Here, my lord.

Tim. So fitly? Go, bid all my friends again,
Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius; all:
I'll once more feast the rascals.

Flav. O my lord,

You only speak from your distracted soul;
There is not so much left, to furnish out
A moderate table.

Tim. He't not in thy care; go.

I charge thee; invite them all: let in the tide
Of knaves once more; my cook and I'll provide.
[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The same.—The Senate-House.

The Senate sitting. Enter ALCIBIADES, attended.

1 Sen. My lord, you have my voice to it; the Bloody; 'tis necessary he should die: [fault's
Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.

2 Sen. Most true; the law shall bruise him.

Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion to the senate!

1 Sen. Now, captain?

Alcib. I am an humble suitor to your virtues;
For pity is the virtue of the law,
And none but tyrants use it cruelly.
It pleases time, and fortune, to lie heavy
Upon a friend of mine, who, in hot blood,
Hath stepp'd into the law, which is past depth
To those that, without heed, do plunge into it.

He is a man, setting his fate aside,*

Of comely virtues:

Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice;

(An honour in him which buys out his fault,)

But, with a noble fury, and fair spirit,

Seeing his reputation touch'd to death,

He did oppose his foe:

And with such sober and unnoted passion

He did behave; his anger, ere 'twas spent,

As if he had but prov'd an argument.

1 Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox;†

Striving to make an ugly deed look fair:

Your words have took such pains, as if they labour'd [long]

To bring manslaughter into form, set quarrel

Upon the head of valour; which, indeed,

Is valour misbegot, and came into the world

When sects and factions were newly born;

He's truly valiant, that can wisely suffer

The worst that man can breathe; and make his wrongs [lessly]

His outsides; wear them like his raiment, care-

And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart,

To bring it into danger.

If wrongs be evils, and enforce us kill,

What folly 'tis, to hazard life for ill?

Alcib. My lord,—

1 Sen. You cannot make gross sins look clear;
To revenge is no valour, but to bear.

Alcib. My lords, then, under favour, pardon
If I speak like a captain.— [me.]

Why do fond men expose themselves to battle,

And not endure all threat'nings? sleep upon it,

And let the foes quietly cut their throats,

Without repugnancy? but if there be

Such valour in the bearing, what make we

Abroad?|| why then, women are more valiant,

That stay at home, if bearing carry it; [lon,

And th' ass, more captain than the lion; the se-

Loaden with irons, wiser than the judge.

If wisdom be in suffering. (O my lords,

As you are great, be pitifully good:

Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood?

To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust;¶

But, in defence, by mercy, 'tis most just.

To be in anger, is impiety;

But who is man, that is not angry?

Weigh but the crime with this.

2 Sen. You breathe in vain.

Alcib. In vain? his service done

At Lacedæmon, and Byzantium,

Were a sufficient briber for his life.

1 Sen. What's that?

Alcib. Why, I say, my lords, h'as done fair
service,

And slain in fight many of your enemies:

How full of valour did he bear himself

In the last conflict, and made plenteous
wounds?

2 Sen. He has made too much plenty with 'em, he

Is a sworn rioter: h'as a sin that often

Drowns him, and takes his valour prisoner:

If there were no foes, that were enough alone

To overcome him: in that beastly fury

He has been known to commit outrages,

And cherish factions: 'Tis inferr'd to us.

His days are foul, and his drink dangerous.

* I. e. Putting this action of his, which was predemined by fate, out of the question.

† I. e. Passion so subdued that no spectator could note its operation. 1 Manage, govern.

‡ You undertake a paradox too hard.

|| What have we to do in the field?

¶ For aggravation.

 "Homicide in our own defence, by a merciful interpretation of the law is considered justifiable."

* Timon quibbles. They present their written bills;
he catches at the word, and alludes to bills or battle-axes.

1 Sen. He dies.

Alci. Hard fate! he might have died in war.
My lords, if not for any parts in him, (Though his right arm might purchase his own time, (you,

And be in debt to none,) yet, more to move
Take my deserts to his, and join them both:
And, for I know, your reverend ages love
Security, I'll pawn my victories, all
My honour to you, upon his good returns.
If by this crime he owes the law his life,
Why, let the war receiv't in valiant gore;
For law is strict, and war is nothing more.

1 Sen. We are for law, he dies; urge it no more, (ther,
On height of our displeasure: Friend, or bro-
He forfeits his own blood, that spills another.

Alci. Must it be so! it must not be. My
I do beseech you, know me. (lords,

2 Sen. How?

Alci. Call me to your remembrances.

2 Sen. What?

Alci. I cannot think, but your age has forgot me;

It could not else be, I should prove so base,*
To sue, and be denied such common grace:
My wounds ache at you.

1 Sen. Do you dare our anger?

*Tis in few words, but spacious in effect;
We banish thee for ever.

Alci. Banish me?

Banish your outrage; banish usury,
That makes the senate ugly.

1 Sen. If, after two days' shine, Athens cantain thee,
Attend our weightier judgement. And, not to swell our spirit,†
He shall be executed presently.

(Exit SENATORS.)

Alci. Now the gods keep you old enough;
that you may live

Only in bone, that none may look on you!
I am worse than mad: I have kept back their
foes,

While they have told their money, and let out
Their coin upon large interest; I myself,
Rich only in large hurts;—All those, for this?
Is this the balsam, that the usuring senate
Pours into captains' wounds? ha! banish-
ment!

It comes not ill; I hate not to be banish'd;
It is a cause worthy my spleen and fury,
That I may strike at Athens. I'll cheer up
My discontented troops, and lay for hearts,‡
'Tis honour, with must lands to be at odds;
Soldiers should brook as little wrongs, as gods. (Exit.

SCENE VI.—A magnificent Room in TIMON'S
House.

Mus. Tables set out: SERVANTS attending.

Enter divers LORDS, at several doors.

1 Lord. The good time of day to you, Sir.

2 Lord. I also wish it to you. I think, this honourable lord did but try us this other day.

1 Lord. Upon that were my thoughts tiring,§ when we encountered: I hope, it is not so low with him, as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends.

2 Lord. It should not be, by the persuasion of his new feasting.

* For dishonoured.

† I.e. Not to put ourselves in any turmoil of rage.

‡ We should now say—to lay out for hearts, i.e. the affections of the people.

§ To tire on a thing meant to be fully employed on it.

1 Lord. I should think so: He hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off; but he hath conjured me beyond them, and I must needs appear.

2 Lord. In like manner was I in debt to my important business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provision was out.

1 Lord. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go.

2 Lord. Every man here's so. What would he have borrowed of you?

1 Lord. A thousand pieces.

2 Lord. A thousand pieces!

1 Lord. What of you?

2 Lord. He sent to me, Sir.—Here he comes.

Enter TIMON, and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both:—
And how fare you?

1 Lord. Ever at the best, bearing well of your lordship.

2 Lord. The swallow follows not summer more willingly, than we your lordship.

Tim. (Aside.) Nor more willingly leaves winter; such summer-birds are men.—Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompense this long stay: feast your ears with the music awhile;
if they will fare so harshly on the trumpet's sound: we shall to't presently.

1 Lord. I hope it remains not unkindly with your lordship, that I returned you an empty messenger.

Tim. O, Sir, let it not trouble you.

2 Lord. My noble lord,—

Tim. Ah, my good friend! what cheer?

(The banquet brought in.)

2 Lord. My most honourable lord, I am so en-sick of shame, that, when your lordship this other day sent to me, I was so unfortunate a

Tim. Think not on't, Sir.

2 Lord. If you had sent but two hours before,—

Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance.*—Come, bring in all together.

2 Lord. All cover'd dishes!

1 Lord. Royal cheer, I warrant you.

2 Lord. Doubt not that, if money, and the season can yield it.

1 Lord. How do you? What's the news?

2 Lord. Alcibiades is banished: Hear you
of it?

1 & 2 Lord. Alcibiades banished!

2 Lord. 'Tis so, be sure of it.

1 Lord. How! how?

2 Lord. I pray you, upon what?

Tim. My worthy friends, will you draw near?

2 Lord. I'll tell you more anon. Here's a noble feast toward.

2 Lord. This is the old man still.

2 Lord. Will't hold? will't hold?

2 Lord. It does: but time will—and so—

2 Lord. I do conceive.

Tim. Each man to his stool, with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress: your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place: Sit, sit. The gods require our thanks.

You great benefactors, sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts, make yourselves praised: but reserve still to give, lest your deities be despised. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to the other: for, were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved, more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villians: If there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be—as they are.—The rest of your fees, O gods,—the senators of Athens, together with the common lag* of people,—what is amiss in them, you gods make suitable for destruction. For these my present friends,—as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing they are welcome.

Uncover, dogs, and lap.

[The dishes uncovered are full of warm water.

Some speak. What does his lordship mean?

Some other. I know not.

[Throws the dishes at them, and drives them out.

Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none.—What, all in motion? Henceforth be no feast, Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest. [be Burn, house; sink, Athens! henceforth hated Of Timon, man, and all humanity! [Exit.

Re-enter the LORDS, with other LORDS and SENATORS.

1 Lord. How now, my lords?

2 Lord. Know you the quality of lord Timon's fury?

3 Lord. Pish! did you see my cap?

4 Lord. I have lost my gown.

3 Lord. He's but a mad lord, and nought but humour sways him. He gave me a jewel the other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat:—Did you see my jewel?

4 Lord. Did you see my cap?

3 Lord. Here 'tis.

4 Lord. Here lies my gown.

1 Lord. Let's make no stay.

2 Lord. Lord Timon's mad.

3 Lord. I feel't upon my bones.

4 Lord. One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones. [Exeunt.

Are we undone? cast off? nothing remaining? Flar. Alack, my fellows. what should I say to you?

Let me be recorded by the righteous gods. I am as poor as you.

Enter ALCIBIADES, with drum and fife, in warlike manner; PHRYNIA and TIMANDRA.

Alcib. What art thou there?

Speak.

Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker knew thy heart,

For showing me again the eyes of man!

Alcib. What is thy name? Is man so hateful
to thee,

That art thyself a man?

Tim. I am misanthropos, and hate mankind.

For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog,

That I might love thee something.

Alcib. I know thee well;

But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange.

Tim. I know thee too; and more, than that I know thee,

I not desire to know. Follow thy drum;
With man's blood paint the ground, gules,

Then what should war be? This fell whore

Enter APEMANTUS.

More man? Plague! plague!

Apem. I was directed hither: Men report,
Thou dost affect my manners, and dost use
them.

Tim. 'Tis then, because thou dost not keep a dog [thee!

That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain,
Will put thy shirt on warm? Will these moss'd trees,

That have outliv'd the eagle, page thy heels,
And skip when thou point'st out? Will the cold brook,

Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste,
To cure thy o'er-night's surfeit? call the creatures,—

Of wreakful heaven; whose bare unhoused
To the conflicting elements expos'd, [trunks,
Answer mere nature,—bid them flatter thee;
O! thou shalt find—

Tim. A fool of thee: Depart.

Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Apem. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'st misery.

Apem. I flatter not; but say, thou art a caitiff.

Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?

Apem. To vex thee.

Tim. Always a villain's office, or a fool's.
Dost please thyself in't?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. What! a knave too?

Apem. If thou didst put this sour cold habit
on

To castigate thy pride, 'twere well: but thou
Dost it enforcedly; thou'dst courtier be again, Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery

rable.

Fell from their boughs, and left me open, bare
For every storm that blows;—I, to bear this,
That never knew but better, is some burden:
Thy nature did commence in sufferance, time
Hath made thee hard in't. Why should'st thou hate men? [given?

They never flatter'd thee: What hast thou

Apem. Art thou proud yet?

Tim. Ay, that I am not thee.

Apem. I, that I was

No prodigal.

Tim. I, that I am one now;

Were all the wealth I have, shut up in thee,
I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone.—
That the whole life of Athens were in this!

Thus would I eat it. [Eating a root.]

Apem. Here; I will mend thy feast.

[Offering him something.]

Tim. First mend my company, take away
thyself.

Apem. So I shall mend mine own, by the lack of thine.

Tim. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but botch'd;
If not, I would it were.

Apem. What would'st thou have to Athens?

Tim. Thine thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt,

Tell them there I have gold; look, so I have.

Apem. Here is no use for gold.

Tim. The best, and truest:

For here it sleeps, and does no hired harm.

Apem. Where liest o' nights, Timon?

Tim. Under that's above me.

Where feed'st thou o' days, Apemantus?

Apem. Where my stomach feeds me; or,
rather, where I eat it.

Tim. Would poison were obedient, and knew my mind!

Apem. Where would'st thou send it?

Tim. To sauce thy dishes.

Apem. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends: When thou wast in thy gilt, and thy perfume, they mocked thee for too much curiosity; in thy rags thou knowest none, but art despised for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee, eat it.

Tim. On what I hate, I feed not.

Apem. Dost hate a medlar?

Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.

Apem. An thou had'st hated medlars sooner, thou should'st have loved thyself better now.
What man didst thou ever know unthrift, that was beloved after his means?

Tim. Who, without those means thou talkest of, didst thou ever know beloved?

Apem. Myself.

Tim. I understand thee; thou hadst some means to keep a dog.

Apem. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers?

Tim. Women nearest; but men, men are the things themselves. What would'st thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy
power?

Apem. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the men.

Tim. Would'st thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts?

Apem. Ay, Timon.

Tim. A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee to attain to! If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee: if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee: if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when, peradventure, thou wert accused by the ass: if thou wert the ass, thy dulness would torment thee:
and still thou livedst but as a breakfast to the wolf: if thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner: wert thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury:

wert thou a bear thou would'st be killed by the horse; wert thou a horse, thou would'st be seized by the leopard; wert thou a leopard, thou wert german to the lion, and the spoils of thy kindred were jurors on thy life: all thy safety were remotion;^a and thy defence, absence. What beast could'st thou be, that was not subject to a beast? and what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss is transformation?

Apem. If thou could'st please me with speaking to me, thou might'st have hit upon it here.
The commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts.

Tim. How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city?

Apem. Yonder comes a poet, and a painter.
The plague of company light upon thee! I will fear to catch it, and give way. When I know not what else to do, I'll see thee again.

Tim. When there is nothing living but thee, thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a big-gar's dog, than Apemantus.

Apem. Thou art the cap of all the fools alive.

Tim. Would thou wert clean enough to spit upon.

Apem. A plague on thee, thou art too hot to curse.

Tim. All villanies, that do stand by thee, are pure.

Apem. There is no leprosy but what thou
speak'st.

Tim. If I tame thee.—

I'll beat thee,—but I should infect my hands.

Apem. I would, my tongue could spit thee off!

Tim. Away, thou issue of a mangy dog!

Choler doth kill me, that thou art alive;
I swoon to see thee.

Apem. Would thou would'st burst!

Tim. Away,

Thou tedious rogue! I am sorry, I shall lose
A stone by thee. [Throws a stone at him.]

Apem. Beast!

Tim. Slave!

Apem. Toad!

Tim. Rogue, rogue, rogue!

[Apemantus retreats backward, as going.]
I am sick of this false world; and will have nought

But even the mere necessities upon it.

Then, Timon, presently prepare thy grave;

Lie where the light foam of the sea may beat

Thy grave-stone daily: make thine epitaph,

That death is me at others' lives may laugh.

O thou sweet king-killer, and dear divorce

[Looking on the gold.]

Twixt natural son and sire! thou bright defiler

Of Hymen's purest bed! thou valiant Mars!

Thou ever young, fresh, lov'd, and delicate wooer,

Whose blush doth thaw the consecrated snow

That lies on Dian's lap! thou visible god,

That solder'st close impossibilities,

And mak'st them kiss! that speak'st with every tongue,

To every purpose! O thou touch of hearts!

Think, thy slave man rebels; and by thy virtue

Set them into confounding odds, that beasts

May have the world in empire!

^a For too much fiscal delicacy.

^a Remoteness, the being placed at a distance from the town. ^b The top, the principal. ^c For touchstone.

Apm. 'Would 'twere so;—
But not till I am dead!—I'll say, then, that gold:
Then will be through'd to shortly.

Tim. Through'd to?

Apm. Ay.

Tim. Thy back, I pry thee.

Apm. Live, and love thy misery!

Tim. Long live so, and so die!—I am quit.—

[Exit APMANTUS.
These things like men?—Eat, Timon, and abhor them.

Enter THIEVES.

1 Thief. Where should he have this gold? It is some poor fragment, some slender ort of his remainder. The mere want of gold, and the falling-from of his friends, drove him into this melancholy.

2 Thief. It is noised, he hath a mass of treasure.

3 Thief. Let us make the assay upon him: if we care not for't, he will supply us easily; if he covetously reserve it, how shall we get it?

4 Thief. True; for he bears it not about him, he hid.

1 Thief. Is not this he?

Thieves. Where?

2 Thief. 'Tis his description.

3 Thief. He, I know him.

Thieves. Save thee, Timon.

Tim. Now, thieves?

Thieves. Soldiers, not thieves.

Tim. Both too; and women's sons.

Thieves. We are not thieves, but men that much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat, [roots;

Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath Within this mile break forth a hundred springs:
The oaks bear mast, the briars scarlet hips;
The bounteous housewife, nature, on each bush Lays her full mess before you. Want? why want?

1 Thief. We cannot live on grass, on berries, on beasts, and birds, and fishes. [water,

Tim. Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds,
and fishes; [coo,

You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you
That you are thieves profess'd; that you work
not

In helier shapes: for there is boundless theft
In limited professions. Rascal thieves, Here's gold: Go, suck the subtle blood of the grape,

Fill the high fever sooth your blood to froth,
And so 'scape hanging: trust not the physician;
His antidotes are poison, and he slays
More than you rob: take wealth and lives together;

Be villany, do, since you profess to do't, Like workmen. I'll example you with thievery:

The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction
Rebs the vast sea: the moon's an arrant thief,
And her pale fire she snatches from the sun:
The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves
The moon into salt tears: the earth's a thief,
That feeds and breeds by a composture stolen
From general excrement; each thing's a thief;
The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough power [away;

Have uncheck'd theft. Love not yourselves:
Rob one another. There's more gold: Cut
throats;

All that you meet are thieves: To Athens, go,
Break open shops; nothing can you steal,
But thieves do less it: Steal not less, for this
I give you; and gold confound you howsoever!
Amen. [TIMON retires to his Cave.

2 Thief. He has almost charmed me from my profession, by persuading me to it.

1 Thief. 'Tis in the malice of mankind, that he thus advises us; not to have us thrive in our mystery.

2 Thief. I'll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade.

1 Thief. Let us first see peace in Athens:
There is no time so miserable, but a man may be true. [EXEUNT THIEVES.

Enter FLAVIUS.

Flav. O you gods!
Is you despis'd and ruinous man my lord?
Full of decay and failing? O monument
And wonder of good deeds evilly bestow'd!
What an alteration of honour has Desperate want made!
What viler thing upon the earth, than friends,
Who can bring noblest minds to basest ends?
How rarely does it meet with this time's gaze,

When man was wish'd to love his enemies:
Grant, I may ever love, and rather woo [do!
Those that would mischief me, than those that
He has caught me in his eye: I will present
My honest grief unto him; and, as my lord,
Shall serve him with my life.—My dearest
master!

TIMON comes forward from his Cave.

Tim. Away! what art thou?

Flav. Have you forgot me, Sir?

Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all
men;

Then, if thou grant'st thou'rt man, I have forgot thee.

Flav. An honest poor servant of yours.

Tim. Then

I know thee not: I ne'er had honest man
About me, I; all that I kept were knaves,
To serve as meat to villains.

Flav. The gods are witness,
Ne'er did poor steward wear a truer grief
For his undone lord, than mine eyes for you.

Tim. What, dost thou weep?—Come nearer;
—then I love thee,

Because thou art a woman, and disclaim'st
Flinty mankind; whose eyes do never give,
But thorough lust, and laughter. Pity's sleeping:

Strange times, that weep with laughing, not
with weeping!

Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my lord, [lasts,

To accept my grief, and whilst this poor wealth
To entertain me as your steward still.

Tim. Had I a steward so true, so just, and
So comfortable? It almost turns [now
My dangerous nature wild. Let me behold Thy face.—Surely, this man was born of woman.—

Forgive my general and exceptless rashness,
Perpetual-sober gods! I do proclaim
One honest man,—mistake me not,—but one;
No more, I pray,—and he is a steward.—
How fain would I have hated all mankind,
And thou redeem'st thyself: But all, save thee,

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The same.—Before TIMON's Cave.

Enter POST and PAINTER; TIMON behind, unseen.

Post. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides.

Post. What's to be thought of him? Does the rumour hold for true, that he is so full of gold?

Post. Certain: Alcibiades reports it; Phry-nia and Timandra had gold of him: he likewise enriched poor straggling soldiers with great quantity: 'Tis said, he gave unto his steward a mighty sum.

Post. Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends.

Post. Nothing else: you shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest.
Therefore, 'tis not amiss, we tender our loves to him, in this supposed distress of his: it will show honesty in us; and is very likely to lead our purposes with what they travel for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having.

Post. What have you now to present unto
him?

our human habitation.

Post. Nothing at this time but my visitation:
only I will promise him an excellent peer.

Post. I must serve him so too; tell him of an intent that's coming toward him.

Post. Good as the best. Promising is the very air o'the time: it opens the eyes of expectation: performance is ever the duller for his act; and, but in the plainer and simpler kind of people, the deed of saying* is quite out of use. To promise is most courtly and fashionable: performance is a kind of wall and testament, which argues a great sickness in his judgement that makes it.

Tim. Excellent workman! Thou canst not paint a man so bad as is thyself.

Post. I am thinking, what I shall say I have provided for him: It must be a personating of himself: a satire against the softness of properity; with a discovery of the infinite faturies, that follow youth and opulency.

Tim. Must thou needs stand for a villain in thine own work? Wilt thou whip thine own faults in other men? Do so, I have gold for
thee.

Post. Nay, let's seek him:
Then do we sin against our own estate,
When we may profit meet, and come too late.

Post. True;
When the day serves, before black-corn'd
night,

Find what thou want'st by free and offer'd light.
Come.

Tim. I'll meet you at the turn. What a gift's
gold,

That he is worshipp'd in a baser temple,
Than where swine feed!

'Tis thou that rigg'st the bark, and plough'st
the foam;

Settiest admired reverence in a slave:
To thee be worship! and thy saints for aye

Be crown'd with plagues, that thee alone obey!
'Fit I do meet them. [Admonish-
ing.]

Post. Hail, worthy Timon!

Post. Our late noble master.

Tim. Have I once liv'd to see two honest men?

Post. Sir,
Having often of your open bounty tasted,
Hearing you were retir'd, your friends fall'st
off,

Whose thankless natures—O abhorred spirits!
Not all the whips of heaven are large enough—
What! to you!

Whose star-like nobleness gave life and influence [cover
To their whole being! I'm rapt and cannot
The monstrous bulk of this ingratitude
With any size of words.

Tim. Let it go naked, men may see't the better:

You, that are honest, by being what you are,
Make them best seen, and known.

Post. He, and myself,
Have travell'd in the great shower of your gifts,
And sweetly felt it.

Tim. Ay, you are honest men.

Post. We are hither come to offer you our service.

Tim. Most honest men! Why, how shall I requit you?

Can you eat roots, and drink cold water? so.

Both. What we can do, we'll do, to do you service.

Tim. You are honest men: You have heard that I have gold;

* The saying of that we said we would do.

I am sure you have: speak truth: you are honest men.

Pain. So it is said, my noble lord: but there—
Came not my friend, nor I. [fore

Tim. Good honest men!—Thou draw'st a counterfeit*

Best in all Athens: thou art, indeed, the best;
Thou counterfeit'st most lively.

Pain. So, so, my lord.

Tim. Even so, Sir, as I say:—And, for thy fiction, [To the Poet.

Why thy verse swells with stuff so fine and smooth,

That thou art even natural in thine art.—

But, for all this, my honest-natur'd friends,

I must needs say, you have a little fault:

Marry, 'tis not monstrous in you; neither wish
You take much pains to mend. [I,

Both. Beseech your honour,

To make it known to us.

Tim. You'll take it ill.

Both. Most thankfully, my lord.

Tim. Will you, indeed?

Both. Doubt it not, worthy lord.

Tim. There's ne'er a one of you but trusts a
That mightily deceives you. [knave,

Both. Do we, my lord?

Tim. Ay, and you hear him cog, see him dissemble,

Know his gross patchery, love him, feed him,

Keep in your bosom: yet remain assur'd,

That he's a made-up villain.†

Pain. I know none such, my lord.

Poet. Nor I.

Tim. Look you, I love you well; I'll give you gold,

Rid me these villains from your companies:

Hang them, or stab them, drown them in a draught,‡

Confound them by some course, and come to
I'll give you gold enough. [me,

Both. Name them, my lord, let's know them.

Tim. You that way, and you this, but two in company:—

Each man apart, all single and alone,

Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.

If, where thou art, two villains shall not be.

[To the PAINTER.

Come not near him.—If thou would'st not reside [To the POET.

But where one villain is, then him abandon.—

Hence! pack! there's gold, ye came for gold, ye slaves: [Hence!

You have done work for me, there's payment:
You are an alchymist, make gold of that:—

Out, rascal dogs!

[Exit, beating and driving them out.

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter FLAVIUS, and two SENATORS.

Flav. It is in vain that you would speak with
For he is set so only to himself, [Timon;

That nothing but himself, which looks like
Is friendly with him. [man,

1 Sen. Bring us to his cave:

It is our part, and promise to the Athenians,
To speak with Timon.

2 Sen. At all times alike

Men are not still the same: 'Twas time, and griefs, [hand,

That fram'd him thus: time, with his fairer
Offering the fortunes of his former days,

The former man may make him: Bring us to
And chance it as it may. [him,

Flav. Here is his cave.—

[mon!

Peace and content be here! Lord Timon! Ti-Look out, and speak to friends: The Athenians,

By two of their most reverend senate, greet
Speak to them, noble Timon. [thee:

Enter TIMON.

Tim. Thou sun, that comfort'st, burn!—

Speak, and be hang'd:

For each true word, a blister! and each false

Be as a caut'ring to the root o'the tongue,

Consuming it with speaking!

1 Sen. Worthy Timon—

Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon.

2 Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee, Timon.

Tim. I thank them; and would send them back the plague,

Could I but catch it for them.

1 Sen. O, forget

What we are sorry for ourselves in thee.

The senators, with one consent of love,*

Entreat thee back to Athens; who have
thought

On special dignities, which vacant lie

For thy best use and wearing.

2 Sen. They confess,

Toward thee, forgetfulness too general, gross:

Which now the public body,—which doth sel-

Play the recanter,—feeling in itself [dom

A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal

Of its own fall, restraining aid to Timon;

And send forth us, to make their sorrowed render,†

Together with a recompense more fruitful

Than their offence can weigh down by the dram; [wealth,

Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and

As shall to thee blot out what wrongs were theirs,

And write in thee the figures of their love,

Ever to read them thine.

Tim. You witch me in it;

Surprise me to the very brink of tears:

Lend me a fool's heart, and a woman's eyes,

And I'll bewEEP these comforts, worthy senators.

1 Sen. Therefore, so please thee to return
with us,

And of our Athens (thine, and ours,) to take

The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks,

Allow'd‡ with absolute power, and thy good
name

Live with authority:—so soon we shall drive

Of Alcibiades the approaches wild; [back

Who, like a boar too savage, doth root up

His country's peace.

2 Sen. And shakes his threat'ning sword

Against the walls of Athens.

1 Sen. Therefore, Timon,—

Tim. Well, Sir, I will; therefore, I will,
Sir; Thus,—

If Alcibiades kill my countrymen,

Let Alcibiades know this of Timon, [Athens.

That—Timon cares not. But if he sack fair

And take our goodly aged men by the beards,

Giving our holy virgins to the stain

Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war;

Then, let him know,—and tell him, Timon speaks it,

In pity of our aged, and our youth,

I cannot chuse but tell him, that—I care not,

* A portrait was so called.

† A complete, a finished villain.

‡ In a joke.

* With one united voice of affection.

† Confession. ‡ Licensed, uncontrolled.

And let him tak't at worst; for their knives care not,
While you have throats to answer: for myself,
There's not a whittle* in the unruly camp,
But I do prize it at my love, before † you
The reverend'st throat in Athens. So I leave
To the protection of the prosperous gods,†
As thieves to keepers.

Flav. Stay not, all's in vain.

Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph,
It will be seen to-morrow; My long sickness
Of health,† and living, now begins to mend,
And nothing brings me all things. Go, live
Be Alcibiades your plague, you his, [still;
And last so long enough!

1 Sen. We speak in vain.

Tim. But yet I love my country; and am not
One that rejoices in the common wreck,
As common bruit‡ doth put it.

1 Sen. That's well spoke.

Tim. Commend me to my loving country-
men,—

1 Sen. These words become your lips as they pass through them.

2 Sen. And enter in our ears like great triumphs

In their applauding gates.

Tim. Commend me to them;

And tell them, that, to ease them of their griefs,
Their fears of hostile strokes, their aches,
losses,

Their pangs of love, with other incident throes
That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain
In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness do them:

I'll teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades' wrath.

2 Sen. I like this well, he will return again.

Tim. I have a tree, which grows here in my close,

That mine own use invites me to cut down,
And shortly must I fell it; Tell my friends,
Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree,||
From high to low throughout, that whose please

To stop affliction, let him take his haste,
Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe,
And hang himself:—I pray you, do my greet-
ing.

Flav. Trouble him no further, thus you still shall find him.

Tim. Come not to me again: but say to Athens,

Timon hath made his everlasting mansion
Upon the beached verge of the salt flood;
Which once a day with his embossed froth¶
The turbulent surge shall cover; thither come,
And let my grave-stone be your oracle,—
Lips, let sour words go by, and language end:
What is amiss, plague and infection mend!
Graves only be men's works; and death, their
gain!

Sun, hide thy beams! Timon hath done his reign. [Exit TIMON.

1 Sen. His discontents are unremoveably
Coupled to nature.

2 Sen. Our hope in him is dead: let us return,
And strain what other means is left unto us
In our dear peril.

3 Sen. It requires swift foot. [Exeunt.

* A clasp knife.

† I. e. The gods who are the authors of the prosperity of mankind.

‡ He means—the disease of life begins to promise me a period. § Report, rumour.

¶ Methodically, from highest to lowest.

§ Swollen froth.

 Dreadful.

SCENE III.—The Walls of Athens.

Enter two SENATORS, and a MESSENGER.

1 Sen. Thou hast painfully discover'd; as his files

As full as thy report?

Mess. I have spoke the least:
Besides, his expedition promises
Present approach.

2 Sen. We stand much hazard, if they bring not Timon.

Mess. I met a courier, one mine ancient
friend;—

Whom, though in general part we were of,
Yet our old love made a particular force,
And made us speak like friends:—this man was riding

From Alcibiades to Timon's cave,
With letters of entreaty, which import'd
His fellowship in the cause against your city,
In part for his sake mov'd.

Enter SENATORS from Timon.

1 Sen. Here come our brothers.

2 Sen. No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect.—

The enemies' drum is heard, and fearful sound
Doth choke the air with dust: in and prepare;
Ours is the fall, I fear, our foes, the snare.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Woods.—Timon's Oak, and a Tomb-stone seen.

Enter a SOLDIER, seeking Timon.

Sol. By all description this should be the place.

Who's here? speak, ho!—No answer!—What
is this?

Timon is dead, who hath outstretch'd his span:
Some beast rear'd this; there does not live a Dead, sure; and this his grave.—

What's on this tomb I cannot read; the character I'll take with wax.

Our captain hath in every figure skill;
An ag'd interpreter, though young in days:
Before proud Athens he's set down by this,
Whose fall the mark of his ambition is. [Exit.

SCENE V.—Before the Walls of Athens.

Trumpets sound. Enter ALCIBIADES, and Forces.

Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious town
Our terrible approach. [A Parley sounded.

Enter SENATORS on the Walls.

Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the time
With all licentious measure, making your wills
The scope of justice; till now, myself, and such

As slept within the shadow of your power,
Have wander'd with our travers'd arms,* and breath'd

Our sufferance vainly: Now the time is flush,†
When crouching marrow, in the bearer strong,
Cries, of itself, No more: now breathless wrong.
Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease;
And palsy insolence shall break his wind,
With fear and horrid flight.

1 Sen. Noble and young,
When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit.
Ere thou hadst power, or we had cause of fear.
We sent to thee; to give thy rages balm,

* Arms across.

† Nature.

To wipe out our ingratitude with loves
Above their quantity.

2 Sen. So did we woo
Transformed Timon to our city's love,
By humble message, and by promis'd means ;
We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
The common stroke of war.

1 Sen. These walls of ours
Were not erected by their hands, from whom You have receiv'd your griefs : nor are they
such,
Than these great towers, trophies, and schools should fall
For private faults in them.

2 Sen. Nor are they living,
Who were the motives that you first went out ;
Shame, that they wanted cunning, in excess
Hath broke their hearts. March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread :
By decimation, and a tithed death,
(If thy revenges hunger for that food,
Which nature loaths,) take thou the destin'd tenth ;

And by the hazard of the spotted die,
Let die the spotted.

1 Sen. All have not offended ;
For those that were, it is not square,† to take,
On those that are, revenges : crimes, like lands,
Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage :

Spare thy Athenian cradle, and those kin,
Which, in the bluster of thy wrath, must fall,
With those that have offended : like a shepherd,
Approach the fold, and cull the infected forth,
But kill not altogether.

2 Sen. What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile.
Than hew to't with thy sword.

1 Sen. Set but thy foot [ope ;
Against our rampir'd gates, and they shall
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before,
To say, thou'lt enter friendly.

2 Sen. Throw thy glove ;
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress,
And not as our confusion, all thy powers

Shall make their harbour in our town, till we Have seal'd thy full desire.

Alcib. Then there's my glove ;
Descend, and open your uncharged ports ;
Those enemies of Timon's, and mine own,
Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof,
Fall, and no more : and,—to atone your fears
With my more noble meaning,—not a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream
Of regular justice in your city's bounds,
But shall be remedied, to your public laws
At heaviest answer.

Both. 'Tis most nobly spoken.

Alcib. Descend, and keep your words.

The SENATORS descend, and open the Gates.

Enter a SOLDIER.

Sold. My noble general, Timon is dead ;
Entomb'd upon the very hem o'the sea :
And on his grave-stone, this insculpture ;
which [sion
With wax I brought away, whose soft impres-
Interprets for my poor ignorance.

Alcib. [Reads.] *Here lies a wretched corse, of wretched soul bereft :
Seek not my name : A plague consume you wicked cut-throats left !
Here lie I Timon ; who, alive, all living men
did hate :
Pass by, and curse thy fill ; but pass, and stay not here thy gait.*

These well express in thee thy latter spirits :
Though thou abhor'dst in us our human griefs, Scorn'dst our brain's flow,† and those our droplets which

From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye

On thy low grave, on faults forgiven. Dead
Is noble Timon ; of whose memory
Hereafter more.—Bring me into your city,
And I will use the olive with my sword :
Make war breed peace ; make peace stint war ; make each
Prescribe to other, as each other's leech.||
Let our drums strike. [Exeunt.]

* I. e. By promising him a competent subsistence.
† Not regular, not equitable.

* Unattacked gates. † Stop. ‡ Reconcile.
‡ I. e. Our tears. || Physician.

to Belarius.

PHILARIO, Friend to Posthumus, } Italians.
IACHIMO, Friend to Philario, }

A FRENCH GENTLEMAN, Friend to Philario.

CAIUS LUCIUS, General of the Roman Forces.

A ROMAN CAPTAIN. TWO BRITISH CAPTAINS.

PISANIO, Servant to Posthumus.

CORNELIUS, a Physician.

TWO GENTLEMEN.

TWO JAILERS.

QUEEN, Wife to Cymbeline.

IMOGEN, Daughter to Cymbeline, by a former Queen.

HELEN, Woman to Imogen.

Lords, Ladies, Roman Senators, Tribunes, Apparitions, a Soothsayer, a Dutch Gentleman, a Spanish Gentleman, Musicians, Officers, Captains, Soldiers, Messengers, and other Attendants.

SCENE, sometimes in Britain; sometimes in Italy.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Britain.—The Garden behind CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter two GENTLEMEN.

1 Gent. You do not meet a man, but frowns: our bloods*

No more obey the heavens, than our courtiers; Still seem, as does the king's.

2 Gent. But what's the matter?

1 Gent. His daughter, and the heir of his kingdom, whom

He purpos'd to his wife's sole son, (a widow, That late he married,) hath referr'd herself Unto a poor but worthy gentleman: She's wedded;

Her husband banish'd; she imprison'd: all Is outward sorrow; though I think, the king Be touch'd at very heart.

2 Gent. None but the king?

1 Gent. He, that hath lost her, too: so is the queen, [tier,
That most desir'd the match: But not a courtier—
Although they wear their faces to the bent
Of the king's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

2 Gent. And why so?

1 Gent. He that hath miss'd the princess, is a thing
Too bad for bad report: and he that hath her,
(I mean, that married her,—alack, good man!—
And therefore banish'd) is a creature such
As, to seek through the regions of the earth

For one his like, there would be something failing

In him that should compare. I do not think,
So fair an outward, and such stuff within,
Endows a man but he.

2 Gent. You speak him far.*

1 Gent. I do extend him, Sir, within himself;
Crush him together, rather than unfold
His measure duly.†

2 Gent. What's his name, and birth?

1 Gent. I cannot delve him to the root: His father

Was call'd Sicilius, who did join his honour,
Against the Romans, with Cassibelan;
But had his titles by Tenantius,‡ whom
He serv'd with glory and admir'd success:
So gain'd the sur-addition, Leonatus:
And had, besides this gentleman in question,
Two other sons, who, in the wars o'the time,
Died with their swords in hand; for which their father

(Then old and fond of issue,) took such sorrow,
That he quit being; and this gentle lady,
Big of this gentleman, our theme, deceas'd
As he was born. The king, he takes the babe
To his protection; calls him Posthumus;
Breeds him, and makes him of his bed-chamber:

Puts him to all the learnings that his time
Could make him the receiver of; which he took,

As we do air, fast as 'twas minister'd; and
In his spring became a harvest: Liv'd in court,

* I.e. You praise him extensively.

† My praise, however extensive, is within his merit.

‡ The father of Cymbeline.

* Inclination, natural disposition.

(Which rare it is to do,) most prais'd, most lov'd:

A sample to the youngest; to the more mature,
A glass that feated* them; and to the graver,
A child that guided dotards: to his mistress,
For whom he now is banish'd,—her own price
Proclaims how she esteem'd him and his virtue;
By her election may be truly read,
What kind of man he is.

2 Gent. I honour him [me,
Even out of your report. But, 'pray you, tell
Is she sole child to the king?

1 Gent. His only child. [ing,
He had two sons, (if this be worth your hear-Mark it,) the eldest of them at three years old,
I the swathing clothes the other, from their nursery [knowledge
Were stolen: and to this hour, no guess in Which way they went.

2 Gent. How long is this ago?

1 Gent. Some twenty years.

2 Gent. That a king's children should be so convey'd!
So slackly guarded! And the search so slow,
That could not trace them!

1 Gent. Howsoe'er 'tis strange,
Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at,
Yet is it true, Sir.

2 Gent. I do well believe you.

1 Gent. We must forbear: Here comes the queen and princess. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter the QUEEN, POSTHUMUS, and IMOGEN.

Queen. No, be assur'd, you shall not find me,
daughter,
After the slander of most step-mothers,
Evil-ey'd unto you: you are my prisoner, but
Your jailer shall deliver you the keys [mus,
That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthu-
So soon as I can win the offended king,
I will be known your advocate: marry, yet
The fire of rage is in him; and 'twere good,
You lean'd unto his sentence, with what pa-
Your wisdom may inform you. [tience

Post. Please your highness,
I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril:—
I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying
The pangs of barr'd affections; though the king
Hath charg'd you should not speak together.
[Exit QUEEN.

Imo. O
Dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant
Can tickle where she wounds!—My dearest husband, [thing,
I something fear my father's wrath; but no-(Always reserv'd my holy duty,) what
His rage can do on me: You must be gone;
And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes; nor comforted to live,
But that there is this jewel in this world,
That I may see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress!
(O, lady, weep no more; lest I give cause
To be suspected of more tenderness
Than doth become a man! I will remain
The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth.
My residence in Rome at one Philario's;
Who to my father was a friend, to me
Known but by letter: thither write, my queen,
And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you Though ink be made of gall. [send,

Re-enter QUEEN.

Queen. Be brief, I pray you:
If the king come, I shall incur I know not How much of his displeasure:—Yet I'll move him [Aside.

To walk this way: I never do him wrong,
But he does buy my injuries, to be friends;
Pays dear for my offences. [Exit.

Post. Should we be taking leave
As long a term as yet we have to live,
The loathness to depart would grow: Adieu!

Imo. Nay, stay a little:
Were you but riding forth to air yourself,
Such parting were too petty. Look here, love;
This diamond was my mother's: take it, heart;
But keep it till you woo another wife,
When Imogen is dead.

Post. How! how! another?—
You gentle gods, give me but this I have,
And tear up* my embracements from a next
With bonds of death!—Remain thou here [Putting on the Ring.
While sunset can keep it on! And sweetest, fairest,

As I my poor self did exchange for you,
To your so infinite loss; so, in our trifles
I still win of you: For my sake, wear this;
It is a manacle of love; I'll place it
Upon this fairest prisoner.

[Putting a Bracelet on her Arm.
Imo. O, the gods!
When shall we see again?

Enter CYMBELINE and LORDS.

Post. Alack, the king!

Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! hence, from my sight!

If, after this command, thou fraught† the court
With thy unworthiness, thou diest: Away!
Thou art poison to my blood.

Post. The gods protect you!
And bless the good remainders of the court!
I am gone. [Exit.

Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death
More sharp than this is.

Cym. O disloyal thing,
That should'st repair my youth; thou heapest
A year's age on me!

Imo. I beseech you, Sir,
Harm not yourself with your vexation; I Am senseless of your wrath; a touch more
Subdues all pangs, all fears. [rare;

Cym. Past grace? obedience?

Imo. Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace.

Cym. That might'st have had the sole|| son of my queen!

Imo. O bless'd, that I might not! I chose an eagle,
And did avoid a puttock.¶

Cym. Thou took'st a beggar; would'st have made my throne
A seat for baseness.

Imo. No; I rather added
A lustre to it.

Cym. O thou vile one!

Imo. Sir,
It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus:
You bred him as my playfellow; and he is
A man, worth any woman; overbuys me
Almost the sum he pays.

Cym. What!—art thou mad?

* Formed their manners.

† Close up. ‡ Sensation § Fill.
¶ A more exquisite feeling. ¶ Only. ¶ A less.

Imo. Almost, Sir: Heaven restore me!—
"Would I were
A neat-herd's* daughter! and my Lamentus
Our neighbour shepherd's son!

Re-enter QUEEN.

Cym. Thou foolish thing!—
They were again together: you have done +
[To the Queen.]

Not after our command. Away with her,
And pen her up.

Queen. "Beseech your patience:—Pence,
Dear lady daughter, pence;—Sweet avenging,
Leave us to ourselves; and make yourself
some comfort

Out of your best advice.†

Cym. Nay, let her languish
A drop of blood a day; and, being aged,
Die of this folly! [Exit.]

Enter PISANIO.

Queen. Plo!—you must give way: [news?
Here is your servant.—How now, Sir? What

Pis. My lord your son drew on my master.

Queen. Ha!

No harm, I trust, is done?

Pis. There might have been,
But that my master rather play'd than fought,
And had no help of anger: they were parted
By gentlemen at hand.

Queen. I am very glad on't.

Imo. Your son's my father's friend; he takes his part.—

To draw upon an exile!—O brave Sir!—
I would they were in Afric both together;
Myself by with a needle, that I might prick
The goer back.—Why came you from your master?

Pis. On his command: He would not suffer
me

To bring him to the haven: left these notes
Of what commands I should be subject to,
When it pleas'd you to employ me.

Queen. This hath been
Your faithful servant: I dare lay mine honour,
He will remain so.

Pis. I humbly thank your highness.

Queen. Pray, walk a while.

Imo. About some half hour hence,
I pray you, speak with me: you shall, at least,
Go see my lord aboard: for this time, leave me. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—A public Place.

Enter CLOTEA, and two Lords.

1 Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt; the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice: Where air comes out, air comes in: there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.

Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift
it—Have I hurt him?

2 Lord. No, faith; not so much as his patience. [Aside.]

1 Lord. Hurt him? his body's a passable carcass, if he be not hurt: it is a thoroughfare for steel if it be not hurt.

2 Lord. His steel was in debt; it went o'the backside the town. [Aside.]

Clo. The villain would not stand me.

2 Lord. No; but he fled forward still, toward your face. [Aside.]

1 Lord. Stand you! You had land enough of your own: but he added to your having; gave you some ground.

* Cattle-keeper.

† Combination.

2 Lord. As many lashes as you have come:
Duppies! [Aside.]

Clo. I would, they had not come between us.

2 Lord. So would I, till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground.

Clo. And that she should love this fellow, and refuse me! [Aside.]

2 Lord. If it be a sin to make a true choice, she is damned. [Aside.]

1 Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together:—She's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

2 Lord. She shines not upon flesh, but the reflection should hurt her. [Aside.]

Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber: "Would she had been some hurt done!

2 Lord. I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt. [Aside.]

Clo. You'll go with us?

1 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

Clo. Nay, come, let's go together.

2 Lord. Well, my lord. [About]

SCENE IV.—A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter IMOGEN and PISANIO.

Imo. I would thou grow'st unto the shore
o'the haven,

And question'st every sail: if he should write,
And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost
As offer'd mercy is. What was the last
That he spake to thee?

Pis. 'Twas, His queen, his queen!

Imo. Then warr'd his handkerchief?

Pis. And kiss'd it, madam.

Imo. Senseless linen! happier than thou
And that was all? [Aside.]

Pis. No, madam; for so long
As he could make me with this eye or ear
Distinguish him from others, he did keep
The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief,
Still waving, as the fits and starts of his mind
Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,
How swift his ship.

Imo. Thou should'st have made him
As little as a crow, or less, ere left
To after-eye him.

Pis. Madam, so I did.

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings;
crack'd them, but

To look upon him; till the diminution
Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle:
Nay, follow'd him, till he had melted from
The smallness of a gnat to air; and then
Have turn'd mine eye, and wept.—But, good
When shall we hear from him? [Pis.]

Pis. Be assur'd, madam,

With his next vantage.†

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had
Most pretty things to say: ere I could tell him,
How I would think on him, at certain hours,
Such thoughts, and such; or I could make him
The shes of Italy should not betray [swear
Mine interest, and his honour; or have charg'd him, [sigh]

At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at mid-
To encounter me with orisons,§ fur then
I am in heaven for him: or ere I could Give him that parting kiss, which I had set

* Her beauty and sense are not equal.

† To understand the force of this idea, it should be remembered that anciently almost every sign had a motto, or some attempt at a witticism underneath it.

‡ Opportunity. § Meet me with reciprocal prayer.

Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father,
And, like the tyrannous breathing of the north,
Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a LADY.

Lady. The queen, madam,
Desires your highness' company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them
despatch'd.—

I will attend the queen.

Pis. Madam, I shall.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Rome.—An Apartment in PHILARIO'S House.

Enter PHILARIO, IACHIMO, a FRENCHMAN, a DUTCHMAN, and a SPANIARD.

Iach. Believe it, Sir, I have seen him in Britain: he was then of a crescent note,* expected to prove so worthy, as since he hath been allowed the name of: but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration; though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his side, and I to peruse him by items.

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnished,† than now he is, with that which makes‡ him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there, could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter, (wherein he must be weighed rather by her value, than his own,) words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

French. And then his banishment:—

Iach. Ay, and the approbation of those, that weep this lamentable divorce, under her colours, are wonderfully to extend§ him; be it but to fortify her judgement, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without more quality. But how comes it, he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance?

Phi. His father and I were soldiers together; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life:—

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Here comes the Briton: Let him be so entertained amongst you, as suits, with gentlemen of your knowing, to a stranger of quality.—I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman; whom I commend to you as a noble friend of mine: How worthy he is, I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing.

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay, and yet pay still.

French. Sir, you o'er-rate my poor kindness: I was glad I did atone|| my countryman and you; it had been pity, you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose, as then each bore, upon importance¶ of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, Sir, I was then a young traveller: rather shunned to go even with what I heard, than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences: but, upon my mended judgement, (if I offend not to say it is mended,) my quarrel was not altogether slight.

French. 'Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of swords; and by such two, that would, by all likelihood, have confounded* one the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think: 'twas a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses: This gentleman at that time vouching, (and upon warrant of bloody affirmation,) his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant-qualified, and less attemptible, than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living; or this gentleman's opinion, by this, worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still, and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so far prefer her 'fore ours of Italy.

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nothing; though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.†

Iach. As fair, and as good, (a kind of hand-in-hand comparison,) had been something too fair, and too good for any lady in Britany. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours outlustres many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many: but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady.

Post. I praised her, as I rated her: so do I my stone.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagoned mistress is dead, or she's outpriz'd by a trifle.

Post. You are mistaken: the one may be sold, or given; if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift: the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which by their graces, I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours: but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stolen too: so, of your brace of unprizeable estimations, the one is but frail, and the other casual; a cunning thief, or a that-way accomplished courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last.

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier, to convirce‡ the honour of my mistress; if, in the holding or loss of that, you term her frail. I do nothing doubt, you have store of thieves; notwithstanding I fear not my ring.

Phi. Let us leave here, gentlemen.

Post. Sir, with all heart. This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me: we are familiar at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation, I should get ground of your fair mistress: make her go back, even to the yielding; had I admittance, and opportunity to friend.

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare, thereon, pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring; which, in my opinion, o'er-values it something: But I make my wager rather against your confidence, than her requitation: and, to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world.

Post. You are a great deal abused* in too bold a persuasion; and I doubt not you sustain what you're worthy of, by your attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Post. A repulse: Though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more; a punishment too.

Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this: it came in too suddenly; let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.

Iach. 'Would I had put my estate, and my neighbour's, on the approbation† of what I have spoke.

Post. What lady would you choose to assail?

Iach. Yours; whom in constancy, you think, stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring, that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of hers, which you imagine so reserved.

Post. I will wage against your gold, gold to it: my ring I hold dear as my finger; 'tis part of it.

Iach. You are a friend, and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting: But, I see, you have some religion in you, that you fear.

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue; you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of my speeches; and would undergo what's spoken, I swear.

Post. Will you?—I shall but lend my diamond till your return:—Let there be covenants drawn between us: My mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking: I dare you to this match: here's my ring.

Phi. I will have it no lay.

Iach. By the gods it is one:—If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too. If I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours:—provided, I have your commendation,‡ for my more free entertainment.

Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles betwixt us:—only, thus far you shall answer. If you make your voyage upon her, and give me directly to understand you have prevailed, I am no further your enemy, she is not worth our debate: if she remain unseduced. (you not making it appear otherwise,) for your ill opinion, and the assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your sword.

Iach. Your hand; a covenant: We will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain; lest the bargain should catch cold, and starve: I will fetch my gold, and have our two wagers recorded.

Post. Agreed.

[Exeunt POSTHUMUS and IACHIMO.]

French. Will this hold, think you?

Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Britain.—A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter QUEEN, LADIES, and CORNELIUS.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers; Make haste: Who has the note of them?

* Deceived.

† Proof.

‡ Recommendation.

1 Lady. I, madam.

Queen. Despatch.— [Exeunt LADIES.]
Now, master doctor; have you brought these drugs?

Cor. Pleaseth your highness, ay: here they are, madam: [Presenting a small Box.]
But I beseech your grace, (without offence; My conscience bids me ask;) wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds. Which are the movers of a languishing death. But, though slow, deadly?

Queen. I do wonder, doctor, [beat]
Thou ask'st me such a question: Have I not Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd me how To make perfumes? distil? preserve? yea, so. That our great king himself doth woo me oft For my confections? Having thus far proceeded,

(Unless thou think'st me devilish,) is't not meet: That I did amplify my judgement in Other conclusions? I will try the forces Of these thy compounds on such creatures as We count not worth the hanging, (but more human,)

To try the vigour of them, and apply Allayments to their act; and by them gather Their several virtues, and effects.

Cor. Your highness [hears]
Shall from this practice but make hard your Besides, the seeing these effects will be Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O, content thee.—

Enter PISANIO.

Here comes a flattering rascal; upon him Will I first work: he's for his master, [Aside.]
And enemy to my son.—How now, Pisanio?— Doctor, your service for this time is ended. Take your own way.

Cor. I do suspect you, madam; But you shall do no harm. [Aside.]

Queen. Hark thee, a word.— [To PISANIO.]

Cor. [Aside.] I do not like her. She does think, she has

Strange lingering poisons: I do know her spirit, And will not trust one of her malice with A drug of such damn'd nature: Those, she says, Will stupify and dull the sense awhile: Which first, perchance, she'll prove on rats, and dogs;

Then afterward up higher; but there is No danger in what show of death it makes, More than the locking up the spirits a time. To be more fresh, reviving. She is fond With a most false effect; and I the truer. So to be false with her.

Queen. No further service, doctor, Until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.]

Queen. Weeps she still, say'st thou? Dost thou think, in time

She will not quench;† and let instructions enter Where folly now possesses? Do thou work; When thou shalt bring me word, she loves my son,

I'll tell thee, on the instant, thou art then As great as is thy master: greater; for His fortunes all lie speechless, and his name Is at last gasp: Return he cannot, nor Continue where he is: to shift his being: Is to exchange one misery with another; And every day, that comes, comes to decay;

* Experiments.

† To change his state.

A day's work in him: What shalt thou expect,
To be depender on a thing that leans?
Who cannot be new built; nor has no friends,
[The QUEEN drops a box: PISANIO takes it up.

So much as but to prop him?—Thou tak'st up Thou know'st not what; but take it for thy labour:

It is a thing I made, which hath the king
Five times redeem'd from death: I do not
know

What is more cordial:—Nay, I pry thee, take
It is an earnest of a further good [it;
That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how
The case stands with her; do't, as from thyself.
Think what a chance thou changest on; but
think

Thou hast thy mistress still; to boot, my son,
Who shall take notice of thee: I'll move the
To any shape of thy preferment, such [king
As thou'lt desire; and then myself, I chiefly,
That set thee on to this desert, am bound
To load thy merit richly. Call my women:
Think on my words. [Exit PISA.]—A sly and constant knave;

Not to be shak'd: the agent for his master;
And the remembrancer of her, to hold [that,
The hand fast to her lord.—I have given him
Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her
Of liegers* for her sweet; and which she,
after,

Except she bend her humour, shall be assur'd

Re-enter PISANIO, and LADIES.

To taste of too.—So, so;—well done, well
done:

The violets, cowslips, and the primroses,
Bear to my closet;—Fare thee well, Pisanio;
Think on my words.

[Exit QUEEN and LADIES.

Pis. And shall do:
But when to my good lord I prove untrue,
I'll choke myself: there's all I'll do for you.
[Exit.

SCENE VII.—Another Room in the same.

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false;
A foolish suitor to a wedded lady, [band!
That hath her husband banish'd;—O, that hus-
My supreme crown of grief! and those repeated

Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stolen,
As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable

Is the desire that's glorious: Blessed be those,
How mean so'er, that have their honest wills,
Which seasons comfort.—Who may this be?
Fie!

Enter PISANIO and IACHIMO.

Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome;
Comes from my lord with letters.

Iach. Change you, madam?
The worthy Leonatus is in safety,
And greets your highness dearly.

[Presents a Letter.

Imo. Thanks, good Sir:
You are kindly welcome.

Iach. All of her, that is out of door, most rich! [Aside.
If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare,
She is alone the Arabian bird; and I
Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend!

Arm me, audacity, from head to foot!
Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight;
Rather, directly fly.

Imo. [Reads.]—He is one of the noblest note, to whose kindness I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your truest

LEONATUS.

So far I read aloud:

But even the very middle of my heart [ly.—
Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankful-
You are as welcome, worthy Sir, as I
Have words to bid you; and shall find it so,
In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.—

What! are men mad? Hath nature given them eyes

To see this vaulted arch, and the rich crop
Of sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt
The fiery orbs above, and the twinn'd stones
Upon the number'd beach? and can we not Partition make with spectacles so precious 'Twixt fair and foul?

Imo. What makes your admiration?

Iach. It cannot be i'the eye; for apes and monkeys, [and
'Twixt two such shes, would chatter this way,
Contemn with mows* the other: Nor i'the
judgement;

For idiots, in this case of favour, would
Be wisely definite: Nor i'the appetite;
Sluttry, to such neat excellence oppos'd,
Should make desire vomit emptiness,
Not so allur'd to feed.

Imo. What is the matter, trow?

Iach. The cloyed will,
(That satiate yet unsatisfied desire,
That tub both fill'd and running,) ravening first
The lamb, longs after for the garbage.

Imo. What, dear Sir,
Thus raps you? Are you well?

Iach. Thanks, madam; well:—'Beseech you, Sir, desire [To PISANIO.

My man's abode where I did leave him: he Is strange and peevish.†

Pis. I was going, Sir,
To give him welcome. [Exit PISANIO.

Imo. Continues well my lord? His health,
'beseech you?

Iach. Well, madam.

Imo. Is he dispos'd to mirth? I hope, he is.

Iach. Exceeding pleasant; none a stranger
there

So merry and so gamesome: he is call'd
The Briton reveller.

Imo. When he was here,
He did incline to sadness; and oft-times
Not knowing why.

Iach. I never saw him sad.

There is a Frenchman his companion, one
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much
A Gallian girl at home: he furnaces [loves
The thick sighs from him; whiles the jolly Briton

(Your lord, I mean,) laughs from's free lungs, cries, O!

Can my sides hold, to think, that man,—who
By history, report, or his own proof, [knows
What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose
But must be,—will his free hours languish for Assured bondage?

Imo. Will my lord say so?

Iach. Ay, madam? with his eyes in flood with laughter.

To have them in safe stowage; May it please
To take them in protection? [you

Imo. Willingly;

And pawn mine honour for their safety: since
My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my bed-chamber.

Iach. They are in a trunk,
Attended by my men: I will make bold
To send them to you, only for this night;
I must aboard to-morrow.

Imo. O, no, no.

Iach. Yes, I beseech; or I shall short my
word,
By length'ning my return. From Gallia
I cross'd the seas on purpose, and on promise
To see your grace.

Imo. I thank you for your pains;
But not away to-morrow?

Iach. O, I must, madam:
Therefore, I shall beseech you, if you please
To greet your lord with writing, do't to-night:
I have outstod my time; which is material
To the tender of our present.

Imo. I will write.
Send your trunk to me; it shall safe be kept,
And truly yielded you: You are very welcome.
[Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Court before CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter CLOTEN, and two LORDS.

Clo. Was there ever man had such luck!
when I kissed the jack upon an up-cast,* to be hit away! I had a hundred pound on't:
And then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing; as if I borrowed mine oaths of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.

1 Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his pate with your bowl.

2 Lord. If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have ran all out. [Aside.

Clo. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths: Ha?

2 Lord. No, my lord; nor [Aside.] crop the ears of them.

Clo. Whoreson dog!—I give him satisfaction? 'Would, he had been one of my rank!

2 Lord. To have smelt like a fool. [Aside.

Clo. I am not more vexed at any thing in the earth,—A pox on't! I had rather not be so noble as I am; they dare not fight with me, because of the queen my mother: every jack-slave hath his belly full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match.

2 Lord. You are a cock and capon too; and you crow, cock, with your comb on. [Aside.

Clo. Sayest thou?

1 Lord. It is not fit, your lordship should undertake every companion† that you give offence
to.

Clo. No, I know that: but it is fit, I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2 Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

Clo. Why, so I say.

1 Lord. Did you hear of a stranger, that's come to court to-night?

Clo. A stranger! and I know not on't!

2 Lord. He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not. [Aside.

1 Lord. There's an Italian come; and, 'tis thought, one of Leonatus' friends.

* He is describing his fate at bowls, the jack is the small bowl at which the others are aimed. † Fellow.

Clo. Leonatus! a banished rascal; and he' another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?

1 Lord. One of your lordship's pages.

Clo. Is it fit, I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in't?

1 Lord. You cannot derogate,* my lord.

Clo. Not easily, I think.

2 Lord. You are a fool granted; therefore your issues being foolish, do not derogate.

[Aside.

Clo. Come, I'll go see this Italian: What I have lost to day at bowls, I'll win to-night of him. Come, go.

2 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

[Exeunt CLOTEN and first LORD.

That such a crafty devil as is his mother
Should yield the world this ass! a woman, that Bears all down with her brain; and this her
son

Cannot take two from twenty for his heart,
And leave eighteen. Alas, poor princess,
Thou divine Imogen, what thou endur'st!
Betwixt a father by thy step-dame govern'd;
A mother hourly coining plots; a wooer
More hateful than the foul expulsion is (Of thy dear husband,† than that horrid act
Of the divorce he'd make! The heavens hold firm

The walls of thy dear honour; keep unshak'd
That temple, thy fair mind; that thou may'st
stand,

To enjoy thy banish'd lord, and this great land!
[Exit.

SCENE II.—A Bed-chamber; in one part of it a Trunk.

IMOGEN reading in her Bed; a LADY attending.

Imo. Who's there? my woman Helen?

Lady. Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours then: mine eyes are weak:—

Fold down the leaf where I have left: To bed:
Take not away the taper, leave it burning;
And if thou canst awake by four o'the clock,
I pr'ythee, call me. Sleep hath seiz'd me wholly. [Exit LADY.

To your protection I commend me, gods!
From fairies, and the tempters of the night,
Guard me, beseech ye!

[Sleeps. IACHIMO, from the Trunk.

Iach. The crickets sing, and man's o'er-la-bour'd sense

Repairs itself by rest: Our Tarquin thus
Did softly press the rushes,† ere he waken'd
The chastity he wounded.—Cytherea,
How bravely thou becom'st thy bed! fresh lily!
And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch!

But kiss; one kiss!—Rubies unparagon'd,
How dearly they do't!—'Tis her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus: The flame o'the
taper [lids,

Bows toward her; and would under-peep her
To see the enclosed lights, now canopied
Under these windows: White and azure, lac'd
With blue of heaven's own tinct.‡—But my design?

To note the chamber:—I will write all down:—
Such, and such, pictures:—There the window:—Such

* I. e. Degrade yourself.

† It was anciently the custom to strew chambers with rushes. ‡ I. e. The white skin lac'd with blue veins.

Ah, but some natural notes about her body,
Above ten thousand meaner moveables
Would testify, to enrich mine inventory :
O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her !
And be her sense but as a monument,
Time in a chapel lying !—Come off, come off :— [Taking off her bracelet.

As slippery, as the Gordian knot was hard !
The same ; and this will witness outwardly,
As strongly as the conscience does within,
To the madding of her lord. On her left breast

A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drops
I the bottom of a cowslip : Here's a voucher, Stronger than ever law could make : this secret

Will force him think I have pick'd the lock, and The treasure of her honour. No more.—To what end ?

Why should I write this down, that's rivetted, Screw'd to my memory ? She hath been reading late

The tale of Terens ; here the leaf's turn'd
Where Philomel gave up ;—I have enough :
To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it.
Swift, swift, ye dragons of the night !—that dawning

May here the raven's eye : I lodge in fear ;
Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here.

One, two, three,—Time, time ! [Clock strikes.

[Goes into the Trunk. The Scene closes.

SCENE III.—An Antechamber adjoining IMOGEN'S Apartment.

Enter CLOTEN and LORDS.

1 Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turned up ace.

Clo. It would make any man cold to lose.

1 Lord. But not every man patient, after the noble temper of your lordship ; You are most hot, and furious, when you win.

Clo. Winning would put any man into courage : If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough : It's almost morning, is't not ?

1 Lord. Day, my lord.

Clo. I would this music would come : I am advised to give her music o' mornings ; they say, it will penetrate.

Enter MUSICIANS.

Come on ; tune : If you can penetrate her with your fingering, so ; we'll try with tongue too :
If none will do, let her remain ; but I'll never give o'er. First, a very excellent good-concoited thing ; after a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it,—and then let her consider.

SONG.

Hark ! hark ! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
And Phoebus' gins arise,
His steeds to water at those springs
On chalced' flowers that lies ;
And winking Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes ;
With every thing that pretty bin:
My lady sweet, arise ;
Arise, arise.

* Poetry.

† Cyp.

So, get you gone : If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better :^a If it do not, it is a vice in her ears, which horse-hair, and cats-guts, nor the voice of unpeev'd quacks best, can never amend. : [Exeunt Musicians.

Enter CYMBELINE and QUEEN.

1 Lord. Here comes the king.

Clo. I am glad, I was up so late ; for that the reason I was up so early : He cannot choose but take this service I have done fatherly.—Good morrow to your majesty, and to my gracious mother.

Cym. Attend you have the dowry of our son's daughter ?

Will she not forth ?

Clo. I have assailed her with words, but she vouchsafes no notice.

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new ;

She hath not yet forgot him : some more she Must wear the print of his remembrance out,
And then she's yours.

Queen. You are most bound to the king ;
Who let a go by no advantages, that may Prefer you to his daughter. Frame yourself
To orderly solicits ; and be friended
With aptness of the season : make doubts
Increase your services : so seem, as if You were inspir'd to do those duties which
You tender to her ; that you in all obey her,
Save when command to your dissolution tends.
And therein you are senseless.

Clo. Senseless ? Not so.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. So like you, Sir, embowom'd has
The one in Caius Lucius. [Exit ;

Cym. A worthy fellow,
Albeit he comes on angry purpose now ;
But that's no fault of his : We must respect
According to the honour of his sender ; [Exit
And towards himself his goodness foregoes on us

We must extend our notice.—Our dear son,
When you have given good morning to your
mistress,

Attend the queen, and us ; we shall have need
To employ you towards this Roman.—Come, our queen.

[Exeunt CYM. QUEEN, LORDS, and MESS.

Clo. If she be up, I'll speak with her ; if not,
Let her lie still, and dream.—By your leave ho !— [Knocks

I know her women are about her ; What
If I do lose one of their hands ? 'Tis gold Which buys admittance ; oft it doth ; yea, and makes

Diana's rangers false themselves, yield up
Their deer to the stand of the stealer ; and 'tis
gold

Which makes the true man kill'd, and saves
the thief ;

Nay, sometime, hangs both thief and true man : What

Can it not do, and undo ? I will make
One of her women lawyer to me ; for
I yet not understand the case myself.
By your leave. [Knocks

Enter a LADY.

Lady. Who's there, that knocks ?

Clo. A gentleman.

Lady. No more !

^a Will you were for it.

† With solicitations not only proper but well-timed.

Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.

Lady. That's more

Than some, whose tailors are as dear as yours,
Can justly boast of: What's your lordship's pleasure?

Clo. Your lady's person: Is she ready?

Lady. Ay,

To keep her chamber.

Clo. There's gold for you; sell me your good report.

Lady. How! my good name! or to report of
you

What I shall think is good!—The princess—

Enter IMOGEN.

Clo. Good-morrow, fairest sister: Your sweet
hand.

Imo. Good-morrow, Sir: You lay out too much pains

For purchasing but trouble: the thanks I give,
Is telling you that I am poor of thanks,
And scarce can spare them.

Clo. Still, I swear, I love you.

Imo. If you but said so, 'twere as deep with
me:

If you swear still, your recompense is still
That I regard it not.

Clo. This is no answer.

Imo. But that you shall not say I yield, being silent,

I would not speak. I pray you, spare me:
I shall unfold equal discourtesy [ing
To your best kindness; one of your great know-
Should learn, being taught, forbearance.

Clo. To leave you in your madness, 'twere
my sin:

I will not.

Imo. Fools are not mad folks.

Clo. Do you call me fool?

Imo. As I am mad, I do:

If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad;
That cures us both. I am much sorry, Sir,
You put me to forget a lady's manners,
By being so verbal:^a and learn now, for all,
That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce,

By the very truth of it, I care not for you;
And am so near the lack of charity,
(To accuse myself) I hate you: which I had
You felt, than make't my boast. [rather

Clo. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For

The contract you pretend with that base wretch, (One, bred of alms, and foster'd with cold dishes,

With scraps o'the court,) it is no contract,
And though it be allow'd in meaner parties, (Yet who, than he, more mean?) to knit their souls

(On whom there is no more dependency
But brats and beggary) in self-figur'd knot,†
Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by
The consequence o'the crown; and must not
The precious note of it with a base slave, [soil
A hidingt for a livery, a squire's cloth,
A pantler, not so eminent.

Imo. Profane fellow!

Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more,
But what thou art, besides, thou wert too base
To be his groom: thou wert dignified enough,
Even to the point of envy, if 'twere made
Comparative for your virtues, to be styl'd
The under-hangman of his kingdom; and hated
For being preferr'd so well.

^a So verbose, so full of talk.

† In knots of their own tying.

‡ A low fellow only fit to wear a livery.

Clo. The south-fog rot him!

Imo. He never can meet more mischance, than come [ment,

To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest gar-
That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer,
In my respect, than all the hairs above thee.
Were they all made such men.—How now,
Pisanio?

Enter PISANIO.

Clo. His garment? Now, the devil—

Imo. To Dorothy my woman bid thee presently:—

Clo. His garment?

Imo. I am sprighted^a with a fool;

Frighted, and anger'd worse:—Go, bid my woman

Search for a jewel, that too casually Hath left mine arm; it was thy master's:
'shrew me,

If I would lose it for a revenue

Of any king's in Europe. I do think,

I saw't this morning: confident I am,

Last night 'twas on my arm; I kiss'd it:

I hope, it be not gone, to tell my lord

That I kiss aught but he.

Pis. 'Twill not be lost.

Imo. I hope so: go, and search. [Exit Pis.

Clo. You have abus'd me:—

His meanest garment?

Imo. Ay; I said so, Sir.

If you will make't an action, call witnesses to't.

Clo. I will inform your father.

Imo. Your mother too:

She's my good lady; and will conceive, I hope,

But the worst of me. So I leave you, Sir,

To the worst of discontent. [Exit.

Clo. I'll be reveng'd:—

His meanest garment?—Well. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Rome.—An Apartment in PHILARIO'S House.

Enter POSTHUMUS and PHILARIO.

Post. Fear it not, Sir; I would, I were so sure

To win the king, as I am bold, her honour
Will remain here.

Phi. What means do you make to him?

Post. Not any; but abide the change of
time;

Quake in the present winter's state, and wish
That warmer days would come: In these fear'd hopes,

I barely gratify your love; they failing,

I must die much your debtor.

Phi. Your very goodness, and your company,
O'erpays all I can do. By this, your king

Hath heard of great Augustus: Caius Lucius
Will do his commission thoroughly: and, I
think,

He'll grant the tribute, send the arrearages,
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe,

(Statist though I am none, nor like to be,)

That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
The legions, now in Gallia, sooner landed

In our not-fearing Britain, than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen

Are men more order'd, than when Julius Cæsar Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage

Worthy his frowning at: Their discipline

(Now mingled with their courages) will make known

^a Haunted.

† Statistman.

To their approvers,* they are people, such
That mend upon the world.

Enter IACINTO.

Phi. See! Jackine?

Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by land:

And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,
To make your vessel nimble.

Phi. Welcome, Sir.

Post. I hope, the briefness of your answer
The speediness of your return. [mends]

Jack. Your lady
Is one the fairest that I have look'd upon.

Post. And, therewithal, the best; or let her beauty

Look through a casement to allure false hearts,
And be false with them.

Jack. Here are letters for you.

Post. Their tenour good, I trust.

Jack. 'Tis very like.

Phi. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court,
When you were there?

Jack. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet.—
Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is't not Too dull for your good wearing?

Jack. If I have lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.

I'll make a journey twice as far to enjoy
A second sight of such sweet shortness, which
Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.

Post. The stone's too hard to come by.

Jack. Not a whit,

Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, Sir,
Your loss your sport: I hope, you know that Must not continue friends. [we]

Jack. Good Sir, we must,
If you keep covenant: Had I not brought
The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant
We were to question further: but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honour,
Together with your ring; and not the wronger
Of her, or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.

Post. If you can make't apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand
And ring, is yours: If not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honour, gains, or loses,
Your sword, or mine; or masterless leaves both
To who shall find them.

Jack. Sir, my circumstances,
Being so near the truth, as I will make them, Must first induce you to believe: whose
strength

I will confirm with oath; which, I doubt not,
You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall
You need it not. [find]

Post. Proceed.

Jack. First, her bed-chamber,
(Where, I confess, I slept not; but, profess, Had that was well worth watching,) It was hang'd

With tapestry of silk and silver? the story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for
The press of boats, or pride: A piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship, and value; which I won-
der'd,

Could be so rarely and exactly wrought,
Since the true life on't was—

* To those who try them.

Post. This is true;
And this you might have heard of him, by us,
Or by some other.

Jack. More particulars
Must justify my knowledge.

Post. So they must,
Or do your honour injury.

Jack. The chimney
Is south the chamber; and the chimney-piece,
Charles Dix, bathing: never saw I figure
So likely to report themselves: the outer
Was as another nature, dumb; outward her,
Motion and breath left out.

Post. This is a thing,
Which you might from relation likewise say;
Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Jack. The roof o'the chamber [over]
With golden cherubims is fretted: Her self
(I had forgot them,) were two winking Cupids
Of silver, each on one foot standing, wisely
Depending on their brands.†

Post. This is her honour!—
Let it be granted, you have seen all this, [and praise]

Be given to your remembrance, the deputy
Of what is in her chamber, nothing more
The wager you have laid.

Jack. Then if you can, [Pulling out the breast]

Be pale; I beg but leave to air this jewel:
See!—

And now 'tis up again: It must be mended
To that your diamond; I'll keep them.

Post. Jove!—
Once more let me behold it: Is it that
Which I left with her?

Jack. Sir, (I thank her,) that:
She stripp'd it from her arm; I saw her yet;
Her pretty action did outdo her gift,
And yet enrich'd it too: She gave it me, and
She priz'd it once. [mid]

Post. May be, she pluck'd it off,
To send it me.

Jack. She writes so to you? doth she?

Post. O, no, no, no; 'tis true. Here, take this too; [Gives the Ring.]

It is a basilisk unto mine eye,
Kills me to look on't:—Let there be no honour,
Where there is beauty; truth, where subblance; love [are]

Where there's another man: The vows of we-
Of no more bondage be, to where they are
made,

Than they are to their virtues; which is no-
O, above measure false! [thing:—]

Phi. Have patience, Sir,
And take your ring again; 'tis not yet won
It may be probable, she lost it; or,
Who knows if one of her women, being cur-
Hath stolen it from her. [rapt.]

Post. Very true;
And so, I hope, he came by't:—Back my Render to me some corporal sign about her,
More evident than this; for this was stolen.

Jack. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.

Post. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears. [sure.]

'Tis true;—nay, keep the ring—'tis true: I am
She would not lose it: her attendants are All sworn and honourable:—They induc'd to steal it!

And by a stranger?—No, he hath enjoy'd her:
The cognizance† of her incontinency

* Ornamented iron bars which support wood burned in chimneys. † Torch in the hands of Cupid.

† The badge, the token.

as this,—she hath bought the name of whore
thus dearly.—

There, take thy hire : and all the fiends of hell
Divide themselves between you !

Phi. Sir, be patient :

This is not strong enough to be believ'd
Of one persuaded well of—

Post. Never talk on't ;

She hath been colted by him.

Iach. If you seek

For further satisfying, under her breast
(Worthy the pressing,) lies a mole, right proud
Of that most delicate lodging : By my life,
I kiss'd it ; and it gave me present hunger
To feed again, though full. You do remember
This stain upon her ?

Post. Ay, and it doth confirm Another stain, as big as hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.

Iach. Will you hear more ?

Post. Spare your arithmetic : never count the Once, and a million ! [turns ;

Iach. I'll be sworn,—

Post. No swearing.

If you will swear you have not done't, you lie ;
And I will kill thee, if thou dost deny
Thou hast made me cuckold.

Iach. I will deny nothing.

Post. O, that I had her here, to tear her limb-meal !

I will go there, and do't ; i'the court ; before
Her father :—I'll do something— [Exit.

Phi. Quite besides

The government of patience !—You have won :
Let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath
He hath against himself.

Iach. With all my heart. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The same.—Another Room in the same.

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women

Must be half-workers ? We are bastards all ;
And that most venerable man, which I Did call my father, was I know not where When I was stamp'd ; some coiner with his tools

Made me a counterfeit : Yet my mother seem'd
The Dian of that time : so doth my wife
The nonpareil of this.—O vengeance, vengeance !

Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd,
And pray'd me, oft, forbearance : did it with
A pudency* so rosy, the sweet view on't Might well have warm'd old Saturn ; that I thought her [devils !—

As chaste as unsunn'd snow :—O, all the
This yellow Iachimo, in an hour,—was't not ?—
Or less,—at first : Perchance he spoke not ;
but,

Like a full-acorn'd boar, a German one,
Cried, oh ! and mounted : found no opposition
But what he look'd for should oppose, and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out [tion

The woman's part in me ! For there's no mo-
That tends to vice in man, but I affirm

It is the woman's part : Be it lying, note it,
The woman's ; flattering, hers ; deceiving,
hers ; [dain,

Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, dis-
Nice longings, slanders, mutability, [knows,
All faults that may be nam'd, nay, that hell
Why hers in part, or all ; but, rather, all :

* Modesty.

For even to vice

They are not constant, but are changing still
One vice, but of a minute old, for one Not half so old as that. I'll write against
them,

Detest them, curse them :—Yet 'tis greater skill
In a true hate, to pray they have their will :
The very devils cannot plague them better.
[Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Britain.—A Room of State in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, and LORDS,
at one Door ; and at another, CAIUS LUCIUS,
and Attendants.

Cym. Now say, what would Augustus Cesar
with us ?

Luc. When Julius Cesar (whose remembrance yet [tongues,
Lives in men's eyes ; and will to ears, and Be theme, and hearing ever,) was in this Britain,

And conquer'd it, Cassibelan, thine uncle,
(Famous in Cesar's praises, no whit less Than in his feats deserving it,) for him,
And his succession, granted Rome a tribute,
Yearly three thousand pounds ; which by thee
Is left untender'd. [lately

Queen. And, to kill the marvel,
Shall be so ever.

Clo. There be many Cesars,
Ere such another Julius. Britain is
A world by itself ; and we will nothing pay,
For wearing our own noses.

Queen. That opportunity, [sume
Which then they had to take from us, to re-
We have again.—Remember, Sir, my liege,
The kings your ancestors ; together with
The natural bravery of your isle ; which stands
As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in
With rocks unscaleable, and roaring waters ;
With sands, that will not bear your enemies'
boats, [conquest

But suck them up to the top-mast. A kind of Cesar made here ; but made not here his brag
(Of, came, and saw, and overcame : with shame
(The first that ever touch'd him,) he was carried [ping,
From off our coast, twice beaten ; and his ship-
(Poor ignorant baubles !) on our terrible seas,
Like egg-shells mov'd upon their surges,
crack'd

As easily 'gainst our rocks : for joy whereof,
The fam'd Cassibelan, who was once at point
(O, giglot* fortune !) to master Cesar's sword,
Made Lud's town with rejoicing fires bright,
And Britons strut with courage.

Clo. Come, there's no more tribute to be paid :
Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time ; and, as I said, there is no more such Cesars : other of them may have crooked noses ;
but, to owe such straight arms, none.

Cym. Son, let your mother end.

Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan : I do not say, I am one ;
but I have a hand.—Why tribute ? why should we pay tribute ? If Cesar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light ; else,
Sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know,
Till the injurious Romans did extort

* Strumpet.

This tribute from us, we were free: Caesar's ambition, [stretch (Which swell'd so much, that it did almost
The sides o' the world,) against all colour, here
Did put the yoke upon us; which to shake off,
Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon
Ourselves to be. We do say then to Caesar,
Our ancestor was that Mulmetina, which Ordain'd our laws; (whose use the sword of Caesar

Hath too much mangled; whose repair, and franchise,

Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed,
Though Rome be therefore angry;) Mulmetina,

Who was the first of Britain, which did put
His brows within a golden crown, and call'd
Himself a king.

Lac. I am sorry, Cymbeline,
That I am to pronounce Augustus Caesar (Caesar, that hath more kings his servants, than Thyself domestic officers,) thine enemy:
Receive it from me, then:—War, and confusion,

In Caesar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee: look Thou fery not to be resisted:—Thus dail'd,
I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Cains.
Thy Caesar knighted me; my youth I spent Much under him; of him I gather'd honour;
Which he, to seek of me again, perforce,
Behoves me keep at utterance;* I am perfect,<†
That the Pannonians and Dalmatians, for Their liberties, are now in arms: a precedent
Which, not to read, would show the Britons
So Caesar shall not find them. [cold:

Lac. Let proof speak.

Cla. His majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day, or two, longer: If you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle: if you beat us out of it, it is yours; if you fall in the adventure, our crowns shall fare the better for you;
and there's an end.

Lac. So, Sir.

Cym. I know your master's pleasure, and he
mine:

All the remain is, welcome. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Another Room in the same.

Enter PISANIO.

Pis. How! of adultery? Whence write
you not

What monster's her accuser?—Leonatus!

O, master! what a strange infection

Is fallen into thy ear? What false Italian

(As poisonous tongue'd, as handed,) hath prevail'd

On thy too ready hearing?—Disloyal? No:

She's punish'd for her truth; and undergoes,

More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults

As would take in; some virtue.—O, my mas-

Thy mind to her is now as low, as were [ter

Thy fortunes.—How! that I should murder
her?

Upon the love, and truth, and vows, which I

Have made to thy command!—I, her!—her

blood?

If it be so to do good service, never

Let me be counted servicable. How look I,

That I should seem to lack humanity,

So much as this fact comes to? Do't: The letter [Reading.

That I have sent her, by her own command
Shall give thee opportunity:—O darest paper!
Black as the ink that's on thee! Sometimes baffle,

Art thou a feedery* for this net, and look'st
So virgin-like without? Ah, here she comes.

Enter IMOGEN.

I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Imo. How now, Pisanio?

Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my lord.

Imo. Who? thy lord? that is my lord? Imo-genus?

O, learn'd indeed were that astronomer,
That knew the stars, as I his characters;
He'd lay the future open.—You, good gods,
Let what is here contain'd relish of love,
Of my lord's health, of his content,—yet not
That we two are asunder, let that grieve him,— (Some griefs are med'cinable;) that is one of
them,

For it doth physic love;—of his content,
All but in that!—Good woe, thy love:—

Bless'd be, [Love,
You bees, that make these looks of counsel!
And men in dangerous bonds pray not alike;
Though forfeiters you cast in prison, yet
You clasp young Cupid's tables.—Good you, gods! [Bless

Justice, and your father's wrath, should be take me in his decision, could not be so cruel to me, as you, O the descent of creatures, would not even renew me with your eyes. Fair notice, that I am in Caubria, at Milford-Haven. What your own love will, out of this, advise you, Allow. So, he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his own, and your, increasing in

love,
LEONATUS POSTHUMUS.

O, for a horse with wings!—Hear'st thou,

Pisanio?

He is at Milford-Haven: Read, and tell me

How far 'tis thither. If one of mean affairs

May plod it in a week, why may not I

Glide thither in a day?—Then, true Pisanio,

(Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord; who long'st,— [long'st,—

O, let me hate,—but not like me:—yet

But in a fainter kind:—O, not like me;

For mine's beyond beyond,) say, and speak

thick,† [ing,

(Love's counsellor should fill the borus of hear-

To the smothering of the sense,) how far it is

To this same blessed Milford: And, by the

way,

Tell me how Wales was made so happy, as

To inherit such a haven: But, first of all,

How we may steal from hence; and, for the gap, [going,

That we shall make in time, from our hence-

And our return, to excuse:—but first, how get hence:

Why should excuse be born or e'er begot?

We'll talk of that hereafter. Pr'ythee, speak,

How many score of miles may we well ride

'Twixt hour and hour?

Pis. One score, 'twixt sun and sun,

Madam, 's enough for you; and too much too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to his execution,

man,

Could never go so slow: I have heard of riding wagers,

Where horses have been nimbler than the

sands

* At the extremity of defiance. † Well-informed.

‡ To look in a town, is to conquer it.

a Confederate.

† Crowd one word on another, so that no words.

That run i'the clock's behalf:—But this is foolery:—

Go, bid my woman feign a sickness; say, She'll home to her father: and provide me, presently,

A riding suit; no costlier than would fit A franklin's^a housewife.

Pis. Madam, you're best consider.

Imo. I see before me, man, nor here, nor here,

Nor what ensues; but have a fog in them, That I cannot look through. Away, I pr'ythee; Do as I bid thee: There's no more to say; Accessible is none but Milford way. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Wales.—A mountainous Country, with a Cave.

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house, with such

Whose roof's as low as ours! Stoop, boys: This gate

Instructs you how to adore the heavens; and bows you

To morning's holy office: The gates of monarchs Are arch'd so high, that giants may jet† through And keep their impious turbands on, without Good morrow to the sun.—Hail, thou fair heaven!

We house i'the rock, yet use thee not so hardly As prouder livers do.

Gui. Hail, heaven!

Arr. Hail, heaven!

Bel. Now, for our mountain sport: Up to yon hill,

Your legs are young; I'll tread these flats. Consider,

When you above perceive me like a crow, That it is place which lessens, and sets off. And you may then revolve what tales I have told you,

Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war: This service is not service, so being done, But being so allow'd: To apprehend thus, Draws us a profit from all things we see:

And often, to our comfort, shall we find The sharded‡ beetle in a safer hold

Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O, this life Is nobler, than attending for a check;

Richer, than doing nothing for a babe; Prouder, than rustling in unpaid-for silk:

Such gain the cap of him, that makes them fine,

Yet keeps his book uncross'd: no life to ours.§

Gui. Out of your proof you speak: we, poor unfledg'd,

Have never wing'd from view o'the nest; nor know not

What air's from home. Haply, this life is best, If quiet life be best; sweeter to you,

The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing:

We are beastly; subtle as the fox, for prey;

¶ To overpass his bound

Then didst unjustly banish me: whereas,
At three and two years old, I stole these babes;
Thinking to bar thee of succession, as Thou rest'st at me of my lands. Early-born, Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother,
And every day do honour to her grave:
Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call'd,
They take for natural father. The game is up.

SCENE IV.—Near Milford-Haven.

Enter PISANIO and IMMOGH.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from hence, the place
Was near at hand: No'er long'd my mother so
To see me first, as I have now.—Pisanio!
Man!

Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind,
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh
From the inward of thee? O, but painted
Would be interpreted a thing purpl'd
Beyond self-explication: Put thyself
Into a 'haviour' of less fear, ere witness Vanquish my staid reason. What's the matter?

Why tender'st thou that paper to me, with
A look untender? If it be summer news,
Suckle to't before: if winterly, thou need'st
But keep that countenance still.—My husband's hand!

That drag-damn'd Italy hath out-craft'd him,
And he's at some hard point.—Speak, man;
thy tongue

May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.

Pis. Please you, read;
And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
The most diddain'd of fortune.

Imo. [Reads.] Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath played the strumpet in my bed; the testimony whereof lie bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises; from-proof as strong as my grief, and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part, thou Pisanio, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life: I shall give thee opportunities at Milford-Haven: she hath my letter for the purpose: Where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pander to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyal.

Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword?
the paper

Hath cut her throat already.—No, 'tis slander; Whose edge is sharper than the sword: whose
tongue

Outvenoms all the worms of Nile; whose Rides on the posting winds, and doth belie
All corners of the world: kings, queens, and states,

Maid, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave
This viperous slander enters.—What cheer,
madam?

Imo. False to his bed! What is it, to be false?
To lie in watch there, and to think on him?
To weep 'twixt clock and clock? if sleep charge
nature,

To break it with a fearful dream of him,
And cry myself awake? that's false to his bed?
Is it?

Pis. Alas, good lady!

Imo. I false? Thy conscience witness:—
Iachimo,

o For behaviour.

Thou didst accuse him of immorality;
Thou then look'd'st like a villain; now, no thinks,

Thy favour's good enough.—Some joy 'o' that,
Whose mother was her painting;† both betray'd
him:

Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion;
And, for I am richer than to hang by the wall,
I must be ripp'd:—to pieces with me!—O,
Men's vows are women's traitors! All go seeming.

By thy revolt, O husband, shall be thought
Put on for villainy; not born, whose't goes;
But worn, a bait for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, hear me.

Imo. True honest men being banish'd, like his [weeping]
Eneas,
Were, in his time, thought false: and shall
Did scandal many a body tear; took pity
From most true wretchedness: So, then, Posthumus,

Wilt lay the heaven on all proper men;
Goodly, and gallant, shall be false and perjur'd,
From thy great fall.—Come, follow, to the best:

Do thou thy master's bidding: when thou art
A little witness my obedience: Look!
I draw the sword myself: take it; and bid
The innocent mansion of my love, my heart:
Fear not; 'tis empty of all things, but grief:
Thy master is not there; who was, indeed,
The riches of it: Do his bidding; strike.
Thou may'st be valiant in a better cause;
But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument!

Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Imo. Why, I must die;

And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
No servant of thy master's: Against all slaughter

There is a prohibition so divine,
That cravens my weak hand. Come, here's
my heart;

Something's afore't:—Soft, soft; we'll so de-
Obedient as the scabbard.—What is here?

The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus,
All turn'd to heresy? Away, away,
Corrupters of my faith! you shall no more
Be stomachers to my heart! Thus may you fools

Believe false teachers: Though those that are
Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse case of woe.

And thou, Posthumus, thou that didst set up
My disobedience 'gainst the king my father,
And make me put into contempt the suits
Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find

It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of rareness: and I grieve myself,
To think, when thou shalt be disedg'd by her
That now thou tir'st'st on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me.—Prythee, despatch:

The lamb entreats the butcher: Where's thy Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,
When I desire it too.

Pis. O gracious lady,
Since I receiv'd command to do this business,
I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do't, and to bed then.

Pis. I'll wake mine eye-balls blind first.

Imo. Wherefore then

Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd

o False, in Italian, signifies both a joy and a where.

§ Cowards.

¶ Trust not or you're on.

So many miles with a pretence? this place?
Mine action, and thine own? our horses' labour?

The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court,
For my being absent: whereunto I never Purpose return? Why hast thou gone so far,
To be unbent, when thou hast ta'en thy stand,
The elected deer before thee?

Pis. But to win time
To lose so bad employment: in the which I have consider'd of a course; Good lady,
Hear me with patience.

Imo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak:
I have heard, I am a strumpet; and mine ear,
Therein false struck, can take no greater
Nor tent to bottom that. But speak. [wound,

Pis. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.

Imo. Most like;
Bringing me here to kill me.

Pis. Not so, neither:
But if I were as wise as honest, then
My purpose would prove well. It cannot be,
But that my master is abus'd:
Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,
Hath done you both this cursed injury.

Imo. Some Roman courtesan.

Pis. No, on my life.
I'll give but notice you are dead, and send him
Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis commanded
I should do so: You shall be miss'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.

Imo. Why, good fellow, [live?
What shall I do the while? Where bide? How (Or in my life what comfort, when I am
Dead to my husband?

Pis. If you'll back to the court,—

Imo. No court, no father; nor no more ado
With that harsh, noble, simple, nothing:
That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.

Pis. If not at court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.

Imo. Where then? [night,
Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day,
Are they not but in Britain? I'the world's volume

Our Britain seems as of it, but not in it;
In a great pool, a swan's nest; Pr'ythee, think There's livers out of Britain.

Pis. I am most glad
You think of other place. The ambassador,
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow: Now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your fortune is; and but disguise
That, which, to appear itself, must not yet be,
But by self-danger; you should tread a course
Pretty; and full of view: yea, haply, near
The residence of Posthumus: so nigh, at least,
That though his actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourly to your ear,
As truly as he moves.

Imo. O, for such means!
Though peril to my modesty, not death on't,
I would adventure.

Pis. Well then, here's the point:
You must forget to be a woman; change
Command into obedience; fear, and niceness,
(The handmaids of all women, or, more truly,
Woman it's pretty self,) to a waggish courage;
Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and
As quarrelous as the weasel: nay, you must Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek,
Exposing it (but, O, the harder heart!
Alack no remedy!) to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titan;* and forget

* The sun.

Your laboursome and dainty trims, wherein
You made great Juno angry.

Imo. Nay, be brief:
I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already.

Pis. First, make yourself but like one.
Fore-thinking this, I have already fit,
(Tis in my cloak-bag,) doublet, hat, hose, all That answer to them: Would you, in their serving,

And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of such a season, 'fore noble Lucius

Present yourself, desire his service, tell him Wherein you are happy,* (which you'll make him know,

If that his head have ear in music,) doubtless,
With joy he will embrace you; for he's honourable, [abroad

And, doubling that, most holy. Your means
You have met, rich; and I will never fail
Beginning, nor supplyment.

Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. Pr'ythee, away:
There's more to be consider'd; but we'll even
All that good time will give us: This attempt I'm soldier to,† and will abide it with
A prince's courage. Away, I pr'ythee.

Pis. Well, madam, we must take a short farewell:

Lest, being miss'd, I be suspected of [tress,
Your carriage from the court. My noble mis-
Here is a box; I had it from the queen;
What's in't is precious; if you are sick at sea,
Or stomach-qualm'd at land, a dram of this
Will drive away distemper.—To some shade,
And fit you to your manhood:—May the gods
Direct you to the best!

Imo. Amen: I thank thee. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Room in CYMBELINE's Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, LUCIUS,
and LORDS.

Cym. Thus far; and so farewell.

Luc. Thanks, royal Sir.

My emperor hath wrote; I must from hence;
And am right sorry, that I must report ye
My master's enemy.

Cym. Our subjects, Sir,
Will not endure his yoke; and for ourself
To show less sovereignty than they, must needs
Appear unkinglike.

Luc. So, Sir, I desire of you
A conduct over land, to Milford-Haven.—
Madam, all joy befall your grace, and you!

Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that office;

The due of honour in no point omit:—
So, farewell, noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my lord.

Clo. Receive it friendly: but from this time
I wear it as your enemy. [forth

Luc. Sir, the event
Is yet to name the winner; Fare you well.

Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my
lords,

Till he have cross'd the Severn.—Happiness!
[Exeunt LUCIUS and LORDS.

Queen. He goes hence frowning: but it honours us,
That we have given him cause.

Clo. 'Tis all the better;
Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it.

* I. e. Wherein you are accomplished.

† As for your subsistence abroad, you may rely on me.
‡ Equal to.

Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor
How it goes here. It fits us therefore, ripe,
Our chariots and our horsemen be in readiness:

The powers that he already hath in Gallia
Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he
His war for Britain. [moves]

Queen. 'Tis not sleepy business;
But must be look'd to speedily, and strongly.

Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus,
Hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen,
Where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd
Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The duty of the day: She looks as like
A thing more made of malice, than of duty:
We have noted it.—Call her before us; for
We have been too slight in sufferance.

[Exit an ATTENDANT.]

Queen. Royal Sir,
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd
Hath her life been; the cure whereof, my lord,
'Tis time must do. Beseech your majesty,
Forbear sharp speeches to her: she's a lady
So tender of rebukes, that words are strokes,
And strokes death to her.

Re-enter an ATTENDANT.

Cym. Where is she, Sir? How
Can her contempt be answer'd?

Atten. Please you, Sir,
Her chambers are all lock'd; and there's no answer [make]

That will be given to the lord'st of noise we Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit
her,

She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close;
Whereto constrain'd by her infirmity,
She should that duty leave unpaid to you,
Which daily she was bound to proffer: this
She wish'd me to make known; but our great
Made me to blame in memory. [court]

Cym. Her doors lock'd?
Not seen of late? Grant, heavens, that, which
I fear,
Prove false! [Exit.]

Queen. Son, I say, follow the king.

Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old ser-
I have not seen these two days. [vant.]

Queen. Go, look after.— [Exit CLOTEN.]
Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus!—
He hath a drug of mine: I pray, his absence
Proceed by swallowing that; for he believes
It is a thing most precious. But for her,
Where is she gone? Haply, despair hath seiz'd her; [flown]

Or, wing'd with fervour of her love, she's
To her dear'd Posthumus: Gone she is
To death, or to dishonour; and my end
Can make good use of either: She being down,
I have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter CLOTEN.

How now, my son?

Clo. 'Tis certain she is fled:
Go in, and cheer the king; he rages; none
Dare come about him.

Queen. All the better: May
This night forestall him of the coming day!

[Exit Queen.]

Clo. I love, and hate her, for she's fair and royal; [quite]
And that she hath all courtly parts more ex-
Than lady, ladies, woman: from every one
The best she hath, and she, of all compounded, Outsells them all: I love her therefore, But,

* Than any lady, than all ladies, than all womankind.

Disdaining me, and throwing scorn on
The low Posthumus, standless as her judgment, [just]
That what's else rare, is check'd; and, in the
I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed,
To be reveng'd upon her. For, when she

Enter Pisanio.

Shall—Who is here? What! are you peering
Sirrah?

Come hither: Ah, you precious peeper! Where
Is thy lady? Is a word; or else
Thou art straightway with the flocks.

Pis. O, good my lord!

Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter,
I will not ask again. [aside] [villain]
I'll have this secret from thy heart, or do
Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus?
From whose so many wretches of baseness on A dram of worth be drawn. [but]

Pis. Alas, my lord, [miser]
How can she be with him? When was he
He is in Rome.

Clo. Where is she, Sir? Come answer;
No further halting: satisfy me hence,
What is become of her?

Pis. O, my all-worthy lord!

Clo. All-worthy villain! [aside]
Discover where thy mistress is, at once,
At the next word.—No more of worthy lord—
Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation and thy death.

Pis. Then, Sir,
This paper is the history of my knowledge
Touching her flight. [Presenting a letter.]

Clo. Let's see't:—I will pursue her
Even to Augustus' throne.

Pis. Or this, or perish.
She's far enough; and what he learns } Ask
by this,
May prove his travel, not her danger.

Clo. Humph!

Pis. I'll write to my lord she's dead. O
Imogen,
Safe may'st thou wander, safe return again! [Ask.]

Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I think.

Clo. It is Posthumus' hand; I know't.— Sirrah, if thou would'st not be a villain, but do me true service; undergo those employments, wherein I should have cause to see thee, with a serious industry,—that is, what villany soe'er I bid thee do, to perform it directly and truly,—I would think thee an honest man: thou shouldest neither want my means for thy relief, nor my voice for thy preferment.

Pis. Well, my good lord.

Clo. Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not in the course of gratitude but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me?

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand, here's my purse.
Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?

Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.

Clo. The first service thou doest me, fetch that suit hither: let it be thy first service
go.

Pis. I shall, my lord. [Exit.]

Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven:—I forget to ask him one thing; I'll remember't anon:—

Even there thou villain, Posthumus, will I kill thee.—I would these garments were come.
She said upon a time, (the bitterness of it I now belch from my heart,) that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back, will I ravish her:
First kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body,—and when my lust hath dined, (which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised,) to the court I'll knock her back, toss her home again. She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter PISSANIO, with the Clothes.

Be those the garments?

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.

Cl. How long is't since she went to Milford-Haven?

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Cl. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee: the third is, that thou shalt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but dutiful, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee.—
My revenge is now at Milford; 'Would I had wings to follow it!—Come, and be true. [Exit.

Pis. Thou bidd'st me to my loss: for, true to
thee,
Were to prove false, which I will never be,
To him that is most true.—To Milford go,
And find out her whom thou pursu'st. [Exit.
Flow. You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's
He cross'd with slowness; labour be his meed! [Exit.

SCENE VI.—Before the Cave of BELARIUS.

Enter IMOGEN, in Boy's Clothes.

Imo. I see, a man's life is a tedious one:
I have tir'd myself; and for two nights together [sick,
Have made the ground my bed. I should be
But that my resolution helps me.—Milford,
When from the mountain-top Pissanio show'd
thee,
Thou wast within a ken: O Jove! I think,
Foundations by the wretched: such, I mean,
Where they should be reliev'd. Two beggars
told me,
I could not miss my way: Will poor folks lie,
That have afflictions on them; knowing 'tis
A punishment, or trial? Yes; no wonder,
When rich ones scarce tell true: To lapse in falseness
Is sorer, than to lie for need; and falsehood
Is worse in kings, than beggars.—My dear lord! [then,
Thou art one o'the false ones: Now I think on My hunger's gone, but even before, I was
At point to sink for food.—But what is this?
Here is a path to it: 'Tis some savage hold:
I were best not call; I dare not call: yet fa-
mine,
Ere clean it o'erthrow nature, makes it valiant.
Plenty, and peace, breeds cowards; hardness
ever
Of hardness is mother.—Ho! who's here?
If any thing that's civil, speak; if savage,
Take, or lend.—Ho!—No answer? then I'll enter.

Hast draw my sword; and if mine enemy
But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look
Such a foe, good heavens! [on't.
[She goes into the Cave.

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. You, Polydore, have prov'd best woodman,* and
Are master of the feast: Cadwal, and I,
Will play the cook and servant; 'tis our match:†

The sweat of industry would dry, and die,
But for the end it works to. Come; our stomachs

Will make what's homely, savoury: Weariness
Can score upon the flint, when restive sloth Picks the down pillow hard.—Now, peace be Poor house, that keep'st thyself! [here,

Gwi. I am thoroughly weary.

Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.

Gwi. There's cold meat i'the cave; we'll browne on that.

Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd.

Bel. Stay; come not in: [Looking in.
But that it eats our victuals, I should think
Here were a fairy.

Gwi. What's the matter, Sir?

Bel. By Jupiter, an angel or, if not,
An earthly paragon!—Behold divineness
No silder than a boy!

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. Good masters, harm me not:
Before I enter'd here, I call'd; and thought
To have begg'd, or bought, what I have took:
Good troth,
I have stolen nought; nor would not, though I had found [meat:
Gold strew'd o'the floor. Here's money for my
I would have left it on the board, so soon
As I had made my meal; and parted
With prayers for the provider.

Gwi. Money, youth?

Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt!
As 'tis no better reckon'd, but of those
Who worship dirty gods.

Imo. I see, you are angry:
Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have died, had I not made it.

Bel. Whither bound?

Imo. To Milford-Haven, Sir.

Bel. What is your name?

Imo. Fidele, Sir: I have a kinsman, who Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford;
To whom bring going, almost spent with him
I am fallen in; this offence. [ger,

Bel. Pr'ythee, fair youth,
Think us no charls; nor measure our good minds [ter'd!

By this rude place we live in. Well recoun-
Tis almost night: you shall have better cheer
Ere you depart; and thanks to stay and eat
Boys, bid him welcome. [it.—

Gwi. Were you a woman, youth, [honesty,
I should woo hard, but be your groom.—Is
I bid for you, as I'd buy.

Arv. I'll make't my comfort,
He is a man; I'll love him as my brother:—
And such a welcome as I'd give to him,
After long absence, such as yours:—Most welcome!

Be uprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends.

Imo. 'Mongst friends!

* Best hunter. † Agreement. ‡ Ye, you, when

If brothers?—'Would it had been so,
that they
Had been my father's sons! then had my prize
Been less; and so more equal ballast-
To thee, Posthumus. [ing] } Aside.

Bel. He wrings at some distress.

Gui. 'Would, I could free't!

Arr. Or I; whate'er it be,
What pain it cost, what danger! Gods!

Bel. Hark, boys. [Whispering.]

Imo. Great men,
That had a court no bigger than this cave,
That did attend themselves, and had the virtue
Which their own conscience seal'd them, (laying by
That nothing gift of differing* multitudes,)
Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me, gods!

I'd change my sex to be companion with them,
Since Leonatus's false.

Bel. It shall be so:

Boys, we'll go dress our hunt.—Fair youth,
come in: [supp'd,

Discourse is heavy, fasting; when we have
We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story,
So far as thou wilt speak it.

Gui. Pray, draw near.

Arr. The night to the owl, and morn to the lark, less welcome.

Imo. Thanks, Sir.

Arr. I pray, draw near. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Rome.

Enter two SENATORS and TRIBUNES.

1 Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ;

That since the common men are now in action
'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians;
And that the legions now in Gallia are Full weak to undertake our wars against
The fallen off Britons; that we do incite
The gentry to this business: He creates
Lucius pro-consul: and to you the tribunes,
For this immediate levy, he commands
His absolute commission. Long live Cesar!

Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces?

2 Sen. Ay.

Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?

1 Sen. With those legions
Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy Must be suppliant: The words of your commission

Will tie you to the numbers, and the time
Of their despatch.

Tri. We will discharge our duty. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Forest, near the Cave.

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapped it truly.
How fit his garments serve me! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not be fit too? the rather (saving reverence of the word) fort 'tis said, a woman's fitness comes by fits. Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself, (for it is not vainglory, for a man and his glass to confer; in his own chamber, I mean,) the lines of my body are as well drawn as his; no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions:† yet this imperseverant thing loves him in my despite. What mortality is Posthumus, thy head, which is now growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off; thy mistress enforced; thy garments cut to pieces before thy face: and all this done, spurn her home to her father: who may, haply, be a little angry for my so rough usage: but my mother, having power of his testamentary, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe: Out, sword, and to a sore purpose! Fortune, put them into my hand!

This is the very description of their meeting-place; and the fellow dares not deceive me. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—Before the Cave.

Enter, from the Cave, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, and IMOGEN.

Bel. You are not well: [To IMOGEN.] remain here in the cave;

We'll come to you after hunting.

Arr. Brother, stay here: [To IMOGEN.]
Are we not brothers?

Imo. So man and man should be;
But clay and clay differs in dignity,
Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick.

Gui. Go you to hunting, I'll abide with him.

Imo. So sick I am not;—yet I am not well:
But not so citizen a wanton, as [me:]
To seem to die, ere sick: So please you leave Stick to your journal† course: the breach of custom [me]

Is breach of all. I am ill; but your being by Cannot amend me: Society is no comfort
To one not sociable: I'm not very sick, [here:]
Since I can reason of it. Pray you, trust me:
I'll rob none but myself; and let me die,
Stealing so poorly.

Gui. I love thee; I have spoke it:
How much the quantity, the weight as much.
As I do love my father.

Bel. What? how? how?

Arr. If it be sin to say so, Sir, I joke me
In my good brother's fault: I know not why
I love this youth; and I have heard you say, Love's reason's without reason; the bier at door,

And a demand who is't shall die, I'd say
My father, not this youth.

Bel. O noble strain!
(O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness!
Cowards father cowards, and base things sire base:
Nature hath meal, and bran; contempt, and
grace.

I am not their father; yet who this should be,
Doth miracle itself, lov'd before me.— [Aside.]
'Tis the ninth hour o'the morn.

Arr. Brother, farewell.

Imo. I wish ye sport.

Arr. You health.—So please you, Sir.

Imo. [Aside.] These are kind creatures.
Gods, what lies I have heard!

Our courtiers say, all's savage, but at court:
Experience, O, thou disprov'st report! [dish.]
The imperious† seas breed monsters; for the Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.
I am sick still; heart-sick:—Pisanio,
I'll now taste of thy drug.

* Unsteady.

† I. e. Because.

* In single combat.

† Keep your daily course.

‡ Imperial

Gwi. I could not stir him:
He said, he was gentle,* but unfortunate;
Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest.
Arr. Thus did he answer me: yet said, here-
I might know more. [after
Bel. To the field, to the field:—
We'll leave you for this time; go in, and rest.
Arr. We'll not be long away.
Bel. Pray, be not sick,
For you must be our housewife.
Imo. Well, or ill,
I am bound to you.
Bel. And so shalt be ever. [Exit IMOGEN.
This youth, howe'er distress'd, appears he hath Good ancestors. [had
Arr. How angel-like he sings!
Gwi. But his neat cookery! He eat our roots in characters;
And sauc'd our broths, as June had been sick,
And he her dieter.
Arr. Nobly he yokes
A smiling with a sigh: as if the sigh
Was that it was, for not being such a smile;
The smile mocking the sigh, that it would fly
From so divine a temple, to commix
With winds that sailors rail at.
Gwi. I do note,
That grief and patience, rooted in him both,
Mingle their spurs† together.
Arr. Grow, patience!
And let the stinking elder, grief, untwine
His perishing root, with the increasing vine!
Bel. It is great morning. Come; away.—
Who's there?

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I cannot find those runagates; that vil-
Hath mock'd me:—I am faint. [lain
Bel. Those runagates!
Means he not us? I partly know him; 'tis Cloten, the son o'the queen. I fear some ambush.
I saw him not these many years, and yet
I know 'tis he:—We are held as outlaws:—
Hence.
Gwi. He is but one: You and my brother search
What companies are near: pray you, away;
Let me alone with him.
[Exit BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.
Clo. Soft! What are you
That fly me thus? some villain mountaineers?
I have heard of such.—What slave art thou?
Gwi. A thing
More slavish did I ne'er, than answering
A slave, without a knock.
Clo. Thou art a robber,
A law-breaker, a villain: Yield thee, thief.
Gwi. To who? to thee? What art thou?
Have not I
An arm as big as thine? a heart as big?
Thy words, I grant, are bigger; for I wear not
My dagger in my mouth. Say, what thou art;
Why I should yield to thee?
Clo. Thou villain base,
Know'st me not by my clothes?
Gwi. No, nor thy tailor, rascal,
Who is thy grandfather; he made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee.
Clo. Thou precious varlet,
My tailor made them not.
Gwi. Hence then, and thank [fool;
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some
I am loath to beat thee.

Clo. Thou injurious thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.
Gwi. What's thy name?
Clo. Cloten, thou villain.
Gwi. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name, [spider,
I cannot tremble at it; were't toad, or adder,
'Twould move me sooner.
Clo. To thy further fear,
Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know
I'm son to the queen.
Gwi. I'm sorry for't; not seeming
So worthy as thy birth.
Clo. Art not afeard?
Gwi. Those that I reverence, those I fear;
the wise:
At fools I laugh, not fear them.
Clo. Dis the death:
When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
I'll follow those that even now fled hence,
And on the gates of Lud's town set your
heads:
Yield, rustic mountaineer. [Exit, fighting.

Enter BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. No company's abroad.
Arr. None in the world: You did mistake him, sure.
Bel. I cannot tell: Long is it since I saw him, [favour*
But time hath nothing blurr'd those lines of Which then he wore; the snatches in his voice, [solite,
And burst of speaking, were as his: I am ab-
Twas very Cloten.
Arr. In this place we left them:
I wish my brother make good time with him,
You say he is so fell.
Bel. Being scarce made up,
I mean, to man, he had not apprehension
Of roaring terrors; for the effect of judgement
Is oft the cause of fear: But see, thy brother.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS, with CLOTEN's Head.

Gwi. This Cloten was a fool; an empty purse,
There was no money in't: not Hercules
Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had
none:
Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne
My head, as I do his.
Bel. What hast thou done?
Gwi. I am perfect,† what: cut off one Cloten's head,
Son to the queen, after his own report;
Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer; and swore,
With his own single hand he'd take us in,† Displace our heads, where (thank the gods!)
they grow,
And set them on Lud's town.
Bel. We are all undone.
Gwi. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose,
But, that he swore, to take our lives? The law Protects not us: Then why should we be tender,
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us;
Play judge, and executioner, all himself;
For we do fear the law? What company
Discover you abroad?
Bel. No single soul
Can we set eye on, but, in all safe reason,

* Countenance.

† Conquer, subdue.

† I am well-informed what.

† For, for defence.

* Well-born.

† Spurs are the roots of trees.

He must have some attendants. Though his humour

Was nothing but mutation,* ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse; not frowny, not Absolute madness could so far have rav'd,
To bring him here alone: Although, perhaps,
It may be heard at court, that such as we
Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time
May make some stronger head: the which he hearing,

(As it is like him,) might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in; yet it's not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or they so suffering: then on good ground we
If we do fear this body hath a tail [Enter,
More perilous than the head.

Arv. Let ordinance
Come as the gods forsook it: however'er,
My brother hath done well.

Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.†

Gen. With his own sword, [Enter
Which he did wave against my throat, I have
His head from him: I'll throw't into the creek
Behind our rock; and let it to the sea, [Enter
And tell the fishes, he's the queen's son. Cle-
That's all I rock.‡ [Exit.

Bel. I fear, 'twill be reveng'd:
'Would, Polydore, thou had'st not done't!
though valour
Becomes thee well enough.

Arv. 'Would I had done't,
So the revenge alone pursued me!—Polydore,
I love thee brotherly; but envy much,
Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would,
revenge,
That possible strength might meet, would seek us through,
And put us to our answer.

Bel. Well, 'tis done:— [Enter
We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for deer:
Where there's no profit. I prythee, to our
rock;

You and Fidele play the cocks: I'll stay
Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.

Arv. Poor sick Fidele!
I'll willingly to him: To gain'st his colour,
I'd let a parish of such Cloten's blood,
And praise myself for charity. [Exit.

Bel. O thou goddess,
Thou divine Nature, how thyself thou blasse'st
In these two princely boys! They are as gentle
As zephyrs, blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head, and yet as rough,
Their royal blood enshaf'd, as the red'st wind,
That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
And make him stoop to the vale. 'Tis wonderful,

That an invisible instinct should frame them
To royalty unlearn'd; honour untaught;
Civility not seen from other; valour,
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop
As if it had been sow'd! Yet still it's strange
What Cloten's being here to us portends;
Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter GUIDERIO.

Gen. Where's my brother?
I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream,
In embassy to his mother; his body's hostage
For his return. [Solemn Music.

Bel. My ingenious instrument!

Hark, Polydore, it sounds! But what means Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hark!

Gen. Is he at home?

Bel. He went hence even now.

Gen. What does he mean? since death of my dear'st mother

It did not speak before. All solemn things
Should answer solemn accidents. The noise?
Triumphs for nothing, and lamenting toys,
Is jollity for apes, and grief for boys.
Is Cadwal mad?

Re-enter ARVIADEUS, bearing LANCELOT, and in his Arms.

Bel. Look, here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his arms,
Of what we blame him for!

Arv. The bird is dead,
That we have made so much of. I had rather Have shipp'd from sixteen years of age's sixty,

To have turn'd my leaping time into a snail,
Than have seen this.

Gen. O sweetest, sweetest! My! [Enter
My brother wears thee not the one half of
As when thou grew'st thyself.

Bel. O, melancholy!
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? And
The cone, to show what coast thy slough cravat

Might enfoldest harbour in?—Thou should'st Jove know what man thou might'st not made; but I, [Enter
Thou didst, a most sure boy, of melancholy

How found you him?

Arv. Stark; as you see:
Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber,
Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at: he might

Gen. Where?

Arv. O the floor;
His arms thus long'd: I thought, he slept;
and put [re-enters

My clouted brogues from off my feet, whose Answer'd my steps too loud.

Gen. Why, he but sleeps:
If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed;
With female fairies will his tomb be haunted,
And worms will not come to thee.

Arv. With fairest flowers,
Whilst summer lasts, and I live here, Fidele,
I'll sweeten thy sad grave: Thou shalt not lack
The flower, that's like thy face, pale primrose;
nor

The asur'd hare-bell, like thy veins; no, nor
The leaf of eglantine, whom not to slander,
Out-sweeten'd not thy breath: the reddest
would,

With charitable bill (O bill, sore-aching
Those rich-left heirs, that let their fathers lie
Without a monument!) bring thee all this;
Yea, and furr'd moss besides, when flowers are
To winter-ground thy corse. [sings,

Gen. Prythee, have done;
And do not play in wench-like words with that
Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration what
Is now due debt.—To the grave.

Arv. Say, where shall's lay him?

Gen. By good Eriphile, our mother.

Arv. Be't so:

And let us, Polydore, though now our voices
Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground,

* Change, alteration.

† Did make my walk tedious.
; Engage, detain.

‡ Thides. † A slow-sailing, unwieldy vessel. ; S.M.

As once our mother; use like note, and words,
Save that Euriphile must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwal, [thee:
I cannot sing: I'll weep, and word it with
For notes of sorrow, out of tune, are worse
Than priests and fanes that lie.

Arr. We'll speak it then.

Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less:
for Cloten

Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys:
And, though he came our enemy, remember,
He was paid* for that: Though mean and mighty, rotting

Together, have one dust; yet reverence,
(That angel of the world,) doth make distinction [princely;

Of place 'tween high and low. Our foe was
And though you took his life, as being our foe,
Yet bury him as a prince.

Gui. Pray you, fetch him hither.
Thersites' body is as good as Ajax,
When neither are alive.

Arr. If you'll go fetch him
We'll say our song the whilst.—Brother, begin. [Exit BELARIUS.

Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east;

My father hath a reason for't.

Arr. 'Tis true.

Gui. Come on then, and remove him.

Arr. So,—begin.

SONG.

Gui. Fear no more the heat o'the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rages;
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and ta'en thy wages:
Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

Arr. Fear no more the frown o'the great,
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke;
Care no more to clothe, and eat;
To thee the reed is as the oak:
The sceptre, learning, physic, must
All follow this, and come to dust.

Gui. Fear no more the lightning-flash,
Arr. Nor the all-dreaded thunder-stone;
Gui. Fear not slander, censure rash;
Arr. Thou hast finish'd joy and moan:
Both. All lovers young, all lovers must Consign't to thee, and come to dust.

Gui. No exorciser harm thee!
Arr. Nor witchcraft charm thee!
Gui. Ghost unlaid forbear thee!
Arr. Nothing ill come near thee!
Both. Quiet consummation have;
And renowned be thy grave!†

Re-enter BELARIUS, with the Body of CLOTEN.

Gui. We have done our obsequies: Come,
lay him down.

Bel. Here's a few flowers, but about midnight more: [night,
The herbs, that have on them cold dew o'the
Are strewings fitt'st for graves.—Upon their faces:—

You were as flowers, now wither'd: even so
These herb'lets shall, which we upon you strew.—

Come on, away: apart upon our knees.
The ground, that gave them first, has them
again;

Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain.

[Exit BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Imo. [Awaking.] Yes, Sir, to Milford-Haven; Which is the way?—

I thank you.—By yon bush!—Pray, how far thither?

'Ods pittikins!—can it be six miles yet?

I have gone all night:—'Faith, I'll lie down and sleep.

But, soft! no bedfellow:—O, gods, and goddesses! [Seeing the Body.

These flowers are like the pleasures of the world; [dream;

This bloody man, the care on't.—I hope, I
For, so, I thought I was a cave-keeper,

And cook to honest creatures: But 'tis not so;
'Twas but a bolt† of nothing, shot at nothing,

Which the brain makes of fumes: Our very
eyes

Are sometimes like our judgements, blind.

Good faith,

I tremble still with fear: But if there be

Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity

As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it!

The dream's here still: even when I wake, it is Without me, as within me; not imagin'd, felt.

A headless man!—The garments of Posthúmus!

I know the shape of his leg: this is his hand;
His foot Mercurial; his Martial thigh;

The brawns of Hercules: but his Jovial‡

Murder in heaven?—How?—'Tis gone.—Pis-
All curses madd'd Hecuba gave the Greeks,

And mine to boot, be darted on thee! Thou,
Conspir'd with that irregular‡ devil, Cloten,

Hast here cut off my lord.—To write, and

Be henceforth treacherous!—Damn'd Pisanio Hath with his forged letters,—damn'd Pisanio—

From this most bravest vessel of the world
Struck the main-top!—O, Posthumus! alas,
Where is thy head? where's that? Ah me!
where's that?

Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,
And left this head on.—How should this be?
Pisanio?

'Tis he, and Cloten: malice and lucre in them
Have laid this woe here. O, 'tis pregnant, pregnant!‡ [cious

The drug he gave me, which, he said, was pre-
And cordial to me, have I not found it Murd'rous to the senses? That confirms it
home:

This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's: O!—
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,
That we the horrid may seem to those
Which chance to find us: O, my lord, my lord!

Enter LUCIUS, a CAPTAIN, and other OFFICERS, and a SOOTHAYER.

Cap. To them the legions garrison'd in Gal-lia, [ing

You here at Milford-Haven, with your ships:

Be muster'd; bid the captains look to't.—Now,
What have you dream'd, of late, of this war's purpose?

Seoth. Last night the very gods show'd me a

(I fast, and pray'd, for their intelligence,) I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd
From the spongy south to this part of the west,
There vanish'd in the sunbeams: which portends,

(Unless my sins abuse my divination,) Success to the Roman host.

Luc. Dream often so, [here,
And never false.—Soft, ho! what trunk is Without his top? The ruin speaks, that sometime

It was a worthy building.—How! a page!—
Or dead, or sleeping on him? But dead, rather:

For nature doth abhor to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.—
Let's see the boy's face.

Cap. He is alive, my lord.

Luc. He'll then instruct us of this body.—
Young one,

Inform us of thy fortunes; for, it seems,
They crave to be demanded: Who is this,
Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow? Or who was

As these poor pickaxes† can dig: and when
With wild wood-leaves and weeds I have

Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep, and say.
And, leaving so his service, follow you.
So please you entertain me.

Luc. Ay, good youth;
And rather father thee, than master thee.—
My friends,
The boy hath taught us manly duties: Let's Find out the prettiest daisied plot we can
And make him with our pikes and partizans
A grave: Come, arm him.—Boy, he is per-

By thee to us; and he shall be interr'd.
As soldiers can. Be cheerful; wipe the
eyes:

A madness, of which her life's in danger.—

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Field between the British and Roman Camps.

Enter POSTHUMUS, with a bloody Handkerchief.

Past. Yes, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee; for
I wish'd [ones,

Thou should'st be colour'd thus. You married
If each of you would take this course, how many [selves,

Must murder wives much better than them-
For wrying* but a little!—O, Pisanio!

Every good servant does not all commands:
No bond, but to do just ones.—Gods! if you Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never

Had liv'd to put out this: so had you sav'd
The noble Imogen to repent; and struck Me wretch, more worth your vengeance. But,
alack, [love,

You snatch some hence for little faults; that's
To have them fall no more: you some permit
To second ill with ill, each elder worse;
And make them dread it to the doer's thrift.
But Imogen is your own: Do your best wills,
And make me bless'd to obey!—I am brought hither

Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady's kingdom: 'Tis enough
That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress;
peace! [heavens,

I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good
Hear patiently my purpose: I'll disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant: so I'll fight Against the part I come with; so I'll die
For thee, O Imogen, even for whom my life
Is, every breath, a death: and thus, unknown,
Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril
Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men know
More valour in me, than my habits show.

Gods, put the strength o'the Leonati in me!
To shame the guise o'the world, I will begin
The fashion, less without, and more within.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter at one side, LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and the Roman Army; at the other side, the British Army; LEONATUS POSTHUMUS following it, like a poor Soldier. They march over, and go out. Alarums. Then enter again in skirmish, IACHIMO and POSTHUMUS: he conquers and disarms IACHIMO, and then leaves him.

Iach. This heaviness and guilt within my bosom

Takes off my manhood: I have belied a lady,
The princess of this country, and the air on't Revengefully enfeebles me; Or could this carl,†
A very drudge of nature's, have subdu'd me,
In my profession! Knighthoods and honours, borne

Revolters. † An account.
Noticing us.

* Deviating from the right way. † Iach. Iachimo.
† Clown.

As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn.
If that thy gentry, Britain, go before
This lout, as he exceeds our lords, the odds
Is, that we scarce are men, and you are gods.
[Exit.]

The Battle continues; the Britons fly; CYMBELINE is taken: then enter to his rescue, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the ground;
The lane is guarded: nothing routs us, but
The villany of our fears.

Gai. Arr. Stand, stand, and fight!

Enter POSTHUMUS, and seconds the Britons: They rescue CYMBELINE, and exeunt. Then, enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and IMOGEN.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save
thyself:
For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such
As war were hood-wink'd.

Iach. 'Tis their fresh supplies.

Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely: or betimes
Let's re-enforce, or fly. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter POSTHUMUS and a British LORD.

Lord. Cam'st thou from where they made the stand?

Post. I did:

Though you, it seems, come from the fliers.

Lord. I did.

Post. No blame be to you, Sir; for all was lost,

But that the heavens fought: The king himself
Of his wings destitute, the army broken,
And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying
Through a strait lane; the enemy full-hearted, Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having
work

More plentiful than tools to do't, struck down
Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling [damm'd*]

Merely through fear; that the strait pass was
With dead men, hurt behind, and cowards liv-
To die with lengthen'd shame. [ing]

Lord. Where was this lane?

Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf;

Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,—
An honest one, I warrant; who deserved
So long a breeding, as his white beard came to,
In doing this for his country;—athwart the lane,

He, with two striplings, (lads more like to run
The country base,† than to commit such slaughter;

With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer
Than those for preservation cas'd, or shame.)
Made good the passage; cry'd to those that fled,

*Our Britain's harts die flying, not our men:
To darkness fleet, souls that fly backwards!*
Stand;

*Or we are Romans, and will give you that [sarc.
Like, beasts, which you shun beastly; and may
But to look back in frown: stand, stand.—These three,*

Three thousand confident, in act as many,
(For three performers are the file, when all The rest do nothing,) with this word, stand,
stand,

Accommodated by the place, more charming.

With their own nobleness, (which could in-
turn'd

A distaff to a lance,) gilded pale looks.
Part, shame, part, spirit renew'd; that re-turn'd coward

But by example (O, a sin in war, Damn'd in the first beginners!) 'gan to look
The way that they did, and to grin like bear
Upon the pikes o'the hunters. Then began
A stop i'the chaser, a retire; anon,
A rout, confusion thick: Forthwith they fly Chickens, the way which they stoop'd ead-slaves, [coward]

The strides they victors made: and now (Like fragments in hard voyages,) became
The life o'the need; having found the back door open [weak]

Of the unguarded hearts, Heavens, how Some, slain before; some, dying; some, the friends [lost]

O'erborne i'the former wave: ten, charged:
Are now each one the slaughter-man of Those, that would die or ere resist, are gone
The mortal bugs* o'the field.

Lord. This was strange chance:

A narrow lane! an old man, and two boys

Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: Yet it made

Rather to wonder at the things you hear.
Than to work any. Will you rhyme upon
And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:
Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane.

Preserv'd the Britons, was the Romans' ban.

Lord. Nay, be not angry, Sir.

Post. 'Lack, to what end?

Who dares not stand his foe, I'll be his friend:
For if he'll do, as he is made to do,

I know, he'll quickly fly my friendship too.
You have put me into rhyme.

Lord. Farewell, you are angry. [Exit.]

Post. Still going!—This is a lord! O misery!

To be i'the field, and ask, what news, of
To-day, how many would have given up honours

To have sav'd their carcasses? took heed
And yet died too? I, in mine own woe could Could not find death, where I did hear groan;

Nor feel him where he struck: Being an monster, [lost]

'Tis strange, he hides him in fresh cups:
Sweet words; or hath more ministers than That draw his knives i'the war.—Well. I find him:

For being now a favourer to the Roman.
No more a Briton, I have re-sum'd again
The part I came in: Fight I will no more.
But yield me to the veriest hind, that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter
Here made by the Roman; great the answer
Britons must take; for me my ransom's death.
On either side I come to spend my breath.
Which neither here I'll keep, nor bear again.
But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two British CAPTAINS, and Soldiers.

1 Cap. Great Jupiter be prais'd! Lucius taken; [lost]

'Tis thought, the old man and his sons were

2 Cap. There was a fourth man, in a suit
That gave the affront with them. [lost]

1 Cap. So 'tis reported:

But none of them can be found.—Stand! what is there?

* Blocked up.

† A country game called prison-bars, vulgarly prison-base.

* Victims.

† Enemies.

Post. A Roman;
Who had not now been drooping here, if so—
Had answer'd him. [conds

2 Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog!
A leg of Rome shall not return to tell What crows have peck'd them here: He brags his service
As if he were of note: bring him to the king.

Enter CYMBELINE, attended; BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, and ROMAN CAPTIVES. The CAPTAINS present POSTHUMUS to CYMBELINE, who delivers him over to a JAILER: after which, all go out.

SCENE IV.—A Prison.

Enter POSTHUMUS, and two JAILERS.

1 Jail. You shall not now be stolen, you have looks upon you;
So, graze, as you find pasture.

2 Jail. Ay, or a stomach. [Exit JAILERS.
Post. Most welcome, bondage! for thou art
a way,

I think, to liberty: Yet am I better
Than one that's sick o'the gout: since he had Groan so in perpetuity, than be cur'd [rather
By the sure physician, death; who is the key To unbar these locks. My conscience! thou art fetter'd

More than my shanks, and wrists: You good gods, give me

The penitent instrument, to pick that bolt,
Then, free for ever! Is't enough, I am sorry?
So children temporal fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent?
I cannot do it better than in gyves,*
Desir'd, more than constrain'd: to satisfy,
If of my freedom 'tis the main part, take
No stricter render of me, than my all.

I know, you are more clement than vile men,
Who of their broken debtors take a third,
A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again
On their abatement; that's not my desire:
For Imogen's dear life, take mine; and though
'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life; you coin'd it:
'Tween man and man, they weigh not every stamp;

Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake:
You rather mine, being yours: And so, great powers,

If you will take this audit, take this life,
And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen!
I'll speak to thee in silence. [He sleeps.

Solemn music.† Enter, as an Apparition, SICILIUS LEONATUS, Father to POSTHUMUS, an old Man, attired like a Warrior; leading in his hand an ancient Matron, his Wife, and Mother to POSTHUMUS, with music before them. Then, after other music, follow the two young LEONATI, Brothers to POSTHUMUS, with Wounds, as they died in the Wars. They circle POSTHUMUS round, as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder master, show
Thy spite on mortal flies:
With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,
That thy adulteries
Rates and revenges.
Hath my poor boy done aught but well,
Whose face I never saw?
I died, whilst in the womb he stay'd
Attending Nature's law.

* Fetters.

† This Scene is supposed not to be Shakespeare's, but foisted in by the Players for mere show.

Whose father then (as men report,
Thou orphans' father art,)
Thou should'st have been, and shielded him
From this earth-vexing smart.
Meth. Lucina lent not me her aid,
But took me in my throes;
That from me was Posthúmus ript,
Came crying 'mongst his foes,
A thing of pity!

Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry,
Moulded the stuff so fair,
That he deserv'd the praise o'the world,
As great Sicilius' heir.

1 Bro. When once he was mature for man,
In Britain where was he
That could stand up his parallel;
Or fruitful object he

In eye of Imogen, that best
Could deem his dignity?

Meth. With marriage wherefore was he
To be exil'd and thrown [mock'd,
From Leonati' seat, and cast
From her his dearest one,
Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,
Slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain
With needless jealousy;
And to become the geck* and scorn
O' the other's villany?

2 Bro. For this, from stiller seats we came,
Our parents, and us twain,
That, striking in our country's cause,
Fell bravely, and were slain;
Our fealty, and Tenantius' right,
With honour to maintain.

1 Bro. Like hardiment Posthúmus hath
To Cymbeline perform'd:
Then Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Why hast thou thus adjourn'd
The graces for his merits due;
Being all to dolours turn'd?

Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out;
No longer exercise,

Upon a valiant race, thy harsh
And potent injuries:

Meth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
Take off his miseries.

Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion; help!
Or we poor ghosts will cry
To the shining synod of the rest,
Against thy deity.

2 Bro. Help, Jupiter; or we appeal,
And from thy justice fly.

JUPITER descends in Thunder and Lightning, sitting upon an Eagle: he throws a Thunder-bolt. The Ghosts fall on their knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of region
low, [ghosts,
Offend our hearing; hush!—How dare you
Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt you know,
Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts?
Poor shadows of Elysium, hence; and rest
Upon your never-withering banks of flowers:
Be not with mortal accidents oppress;
No care of yours it is, you know, 'tis ours.
Whom best I love, I cross; to make my gift,
The more delay'd, delighted. Be content;
Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift:
His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.
Our jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in Our temple was he married.—Rise, and
He shall be lord of lady Imogen, [fade!—

And happier such by his affliction made.
This tablet lay upon his breast; wherein
Our pleasure his full fortune-death confound;
And so, away: no further with your din!
Express impatience, but you stir up mine.—
Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline.

[Ascends.]

Bel. He came in thunder; his celestial breath
Was sulphurous to smell: the holy eagle.
Stoop'd, as to feed us: his accustom'd
More sweet than our blest fields: his royal bird
Presses the immortal wing, and slays his back.
As when his god is pleas'd.

[All. Thanks, Jupiter!]

Bel. The marble pavement clams, he is en-
ter'd
His radiant roof:—Away! and, to be blast,
Let us with ease perform his great behest.

[Ghosts vanish.]

Post. [Waking.] Sleep, thou hast been a grandson, and begot
A father to me: and thou hast created
A mother and two brothers: But (O scorn!)
Gone! they went hence as soon as they were born. [pond]
And so I am awake.—Poor wretches that de-
On greatness' favour, dream as I have done;
Wake, and find nothing.—But, alas, I swerve:
Many dream not to find, neither deserve,
And yet are stoop'd in favours; as am I,
That have this golden chance, and know not
why.

What fairies haunt this ground! A look! O,
rare one!

Be not, as in our fangled world, a garment
Nobler than that it covers: let thy efforts
Be fellow, to be most unlike our courtiers,
As good as promise.

[Reeds.] When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus and his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.

'Tis still a dream; or else such stuff as madmen
Tongue, and brain not: either both, or nothing:
Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such
As sense cannot untie. Be what it is,
The action of my life is like it, which
I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

[Re-enter JAILERS.]

Jail. Come, Sir, are you ready for death?

Post. Over-roasted rather: ready long ago.

Jail. Hanging is the word, Sir; if you be ready for that, you are well cooked.

Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot.

Jail. A heavy reckoning for you, Sir: But the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more tavern bills; which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth: you come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink;
sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much; purse and brain both empty: the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness: O! of this contradiction you shall now be quit.—O the charity of a penny cord! it sums up thousands in a trice: you have no true debtor and creditor but it; of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge.—

Your neck, Sir, is gone, back, and certain;
so the acquittance follows.

Post. I am ready to die, since I cannot live.

Jail. Indeed, Sir, he that sleeps sleeps with such ease: But a man that wants to sleep, you sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think, he would change places with his officer:
for, look you, Sir, you know not which way
you shall go.

Post. Yes, indeed, do I, follow.

Jail. Your death has eyes he's blind than I have not seen him so glistered: you mistake be directed by some that take upon them to know; or take upon yourself duty, which I am sure you do not know; or jump the obedi-quity on your own peril: still how you shall spend to your journey's end, I think you'll never return to tell me.

Post. I tell thee, follow, these are your eyes to direct thee the way I am going, let such as wink, and will not use them.

Jail. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes, to see the way of blindness! I am sure, hang'd the way of winking.

[Enter a Messenger.]

Mess. Knock off his manacles; bring you prisoner to the king.

Post. Thou bringest good news;—I am to be made free.

Jail. I'll be hang'd then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a jail;
no bolts for the dead.

[Enter Posthumus and Messengers.]

Jail. Unless a man would marry a gallow, and begot young gibbets, I never saw one prone. Yet, on my conscience, there are vain knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman:
and there be some of these too, that die against their wills; as should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good;
O, there were desolation of jailors, and gal-lowes! I speak against my present profit;
but my wish hath a preformant in't. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—CYMBELINE'S Tent.

Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISARIO, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made

Preservers of my throne. Wee in my heart,
That the poor soldier, that so richly fought,
Whose rage sham'd gilded arms, whose naked
breast

Stoop'd before target of proof, cannot be found:
He shall be happy that can find him, if
Our grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw

Such noble fury in so poor a thing; [sought]
Such precious deeds in one that promis'd
But beggary and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him?

Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead and living,
But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am

The heir of his reward; which I will add
To you, the liver, heart, and brain of Britain,
[To BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.]
By whom, I grant, she lives; 'Tis now the time
To ask of whence you are:—report it.

[March.][March.][March, &c.]

Bel. Sir,
In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen:
Further to boast, were neither true nor modest,
Unless I add, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees:
Arise my knights o'the battle: I create you
Companions to our person, and will fit you
With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter CORNELIUS and LADIES.

There's business in these faces:—Why so sadly
Greet you our victory? You look like Romans,
And not o'the court of Britain.

Cor. Hail, great king!
To sour your happiness, I must report
The queen is dead.

Cym. Whom worse than a physician
Would this report become? But I consider,
By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death
Will seize the doctor too.—How ended she?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life;
Which, being cruel to the world, concluded
Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd,
I will report, so please you: These her women
Can trip me, if I err: who, with wet cheeks,
Were present when she finish'd.

Cym. Pr'ythee, say.

Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you; only
Affected greatness got by you, not you:
Married your royalty, was wife to your place;
Abhor'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this:
And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love

With such integrity, she did confess
Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life,
But that her flight prevented it, she had Ta'en off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend!
Who is't can read a woman?—Is there more?

Cor. More, Sir, and worse. She did confess,
she had

For you a mortal mineral; which, being took,
Should by the minute feed on life, and,
ling'ring,

By inches waste you: In which time she per-
By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to Overcome you with her show: yea, and in time,
(When she had fitted you with her craft,) to
work

Her son into the adoption of the crown.
But failing of her end by his strange absence,
Grew shameless desperate; open'd, in despite
Of heaven and men, her purposes; repeated
The evils she hatch'd were not effected; so,
Despairing, died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her women?

Lady. We did so, please your highness.

Cym. Mine eyes
Were not in fault, for she was beautiful;
Mine ears, that heard her flattery; nor my
heart,

That thought her like her seeming; it had been
To have mistrusted her: yet, O my daughter!
That it was folly in me, thou may'st say,
And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all!

Enter LECTUR, IACHIMO, the BOORMAYER, and other Roman Prisoners, guarded; POSTHUMUS behind, and IMOGEN.

Thou com'st not, Caius, now for tribute: that
The Britons have run'd out, though with the loss

Of many a bold one; whose kinsmen have made suit,

That their good souls may be appear'd with
Of you their captives, which ourself have
So, think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, Sir, the chance of war: the
day

Was yours by accident; had it gone with us,
We should not, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd

Our prisoners with the sword. But since the
Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives
May be call'd ransom, let it come: sufficeth,
A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer:
Augustus lives to think on't: And so much
For my peculiar care. This one thing only
I will entreat; My boy, a Briton born,
Let him be ransom'd: never master had
A page so kind, so dutious, diligent,
So tender over his occasions, true,
So fast,* so nurse-like: let his virtue join
With my request, which, I'll make bold, your highness

Cannot deny; he hath done no Briton harm,
Though he have serv'd a Roman: save him,
And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seen him:

His favour is familiar to me.—
Boy, thou hast look'd thyself into my grace,
And art mine own.—I know not why, nor
wherefore,

To say, live, boy: ne'er thank thy master;
And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt,
Fitting my bounty, and thy state, I'll give it;
Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner,
The noblest ta'en.

Imo. I humbly thank your highness.

Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad;
And yet, I know, thou wilt.

Imo. No, no: alack,
There's other work in hand; I see a thing
Bitter to me as death: your life, good master,
Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdain me, [joys,
He leaves me, scorns me: Briefly die their
That place them on the truth of girls and Why stands he so perplex'd? [boys.—

Cym. What would'st thou, boy? [more
I love thee more and more; think more and What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on? speak,

Will have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend?

Imo. He is a Roman; so more kin to me,
Than I to your highness; who, being born your Am something nearer.

Cym. Wherefore ey'st him so?

Imo. I'll tell you, Sir, in private, if you please
To give me hearing.

Cym. Ay, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What's thy name?

Imo. Fidele, Sir.

Cym. Thou art my good youth, my page;
I'll be thy master: Walk with me; speak freely.

[CYMBELINE and IMOGEN converse apart.

Bel. Is not this boy reviv'd from death?

Arg. One said another
Not more resembles: That sweet may lad,
Who died, and was Fidele:—What think you?

Gem. The same dead thing alive.

Bel. Peace, peace! see further; he eyes us not; forbear;

Creators may be alike: were't he, I am sure
He would have spoke to us.

Gem. But we saw him dead.

Bel. Be silent; let's see further.

Pis. It is my mistress:

a Lady, entrance.

a Gentleman, entrance.

Since she is living, let the time run on,
To good, or bad.

[CYMBELINE and IMOGEN come forward.]

Cym. Come, stand thou by our side;
Make thy demand aloud.—Sir, [To IACH.] step
you forth;

Give answer to this boy, and do it freely;
Or, by our greatness, and the grace of it,
Which is our honour, bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood.—On, speak to him.

Iach. My been is, that this gentleman may
Of whom he had this ring. [reuder

Post. What's that to him? [Aside.

Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say,
How came it yours?

Iach. Thou'lt torture me to leave unspoken
Which, to be spoke, would torture thee. [that Cym. How! me?

Iach. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter that which

Torments me to conceal. By villany
I got this ring; 'twas Leonatus' jewel:
Whom thou didst banish; and (which more may grieve thee,

As it doth me,) a nobler Sir ne'er liv'd
'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more,
my lord?

Cym. All that belongs to this.

Iach. That paragon, thy daughter,—
For whom my heart drops blood, and my false spirits

Quail* to remember,—Give me leave; I faint.

Cym. My daughter! what of her? Renew thy strength: [will,

I had rather thou should'st live while nature
Than die ere I hear more: strive man, and speak.

Iach. Upon a time, (unhappy was the clock
That struck the hour!) it was in Rome, (accurs'd 'would

The mansion where!) 'twas at a feast, (O
Our viands had been poison'd! or at least,
Those which I heav'd to head!) the good
Posthúmus,

(What should I say? he was too good to be
Where ill men were; and was the best of all Amongst the rar'st of good ones,) sitting sadly,
Hearing us praise our loves of Italy
For beauty that made barren the swell'd boast
Of him that best could speak: for feature,
laming [erva,

The shrine of Venus, or straight-pight Min-
Postures beyond brief nature; for condition,
A shop of all the qualities that man
Loves woman for; besides, that hook of wiving,
Fairness which strikes the eye:—

Cym. I stand on fire:

Come to the matter.

Iach. All too soon I shall,
Unless thou would'st grieve quickly.—This Posthúmus,

(Most like a noble lord in love, and one
That had a royal lover,) took his hint;
And, not dispraising whom he prais'd, (therein
He was as calm as virtue) he began His mistress' picture; which by his tongue being made,

And then a mind put in't, either our brags
Were crack'd of kitchen trulls, or his descrip-Prov'd us unspeaking sots. [tion

Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose.

Iach. Your daughter's chastity—there it begins.

He spake of her as Dian had hot dreams,
And she alone were cold: Whereat, I, wretch!

Made scruple of his penance; and waver'd with
him

Pieces of gold, 'gainst this which then he won
Upon his honour'd finger, to attain
In suit the place of his bed, and win this ring
By hers and mine adultery: he, true knight,
No lesser of her honour confident

Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring;
And would so, had it been a carbuncle
Of Phoebus' wheel; and might so safely, had it Been all the worth of his car. Away to Britain

Post I in this design: Well may you, Sir,
Remember me at court, where I was taught
Of your chaste daughter the wide difference
'Twixt amorous and villainous. Being thus quenched

Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain
'Gan in your daller Britain operate
Most vilely; for my vantage, excellent;
And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd,
That I return'd with simular proof enough
To make the noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her renown
With tokens thus, and thus; averring notes
Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bea-let,

(O, cunning, how I got it!) nay, some mark
Of secret on her person, that he could not
But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd,
I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon,—
Methinks, I see him now,—

Post. Ay, so thou dost, [Coming forward
Italian send!—Ah me, most credulous fool,
Egregious murderer, thief, any thing
That's due to all the villains past, in being,
To come!—O, give me cord, or knife, or pain,
Some upright justicer! Thou, king, send out
For torturers ingenious: it is I
That all the abhorred things o'the earth amend,
By being worse than they. I am Posthúmus,
That kill'd thy daughter:—villain like, I lie;
That cans'd a lesser villain than myself,
A sacrilegious thief, to do't:—the temple
Of virtue was she; yea, and she herself.*
Spit, and throw stones, cast mire upon me, set
The dogs o'the street to bay me: every villain
Be call'd Posthúmus Leonatus; and
Be villany less than 'twas! O Imogen!
My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen,
Imogen, Imogen!

Imo. Peace, my lord; hear, hear—

Post. Shall's have a play of this? Thou scornful page,

There lie thy part. [Striking her: she falls.

Pis. O gentlemen, help, help [húmes!
Mine, and your mistress:—O, my lord Post-
You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now:—Help,
Mine honour'd lady! [help!—

Cym. Does the world go round?

Post. How come these staggers on me?

Pis. Wake, my mistress?

Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me

To death with mortal joy.

Pis. How fares my mistress?

Imo. O, get thee from my sight;
Thou gav'st me poison: dangerous fellow,
Breathe not where princes are. [hence!

Cym. The tune of Imogen!

Pis. Lady,

The gods threw stones of sulphur on me, if
That box I gave you was not thought by me
A precious thing; I had it from the queen.

Cym. New matter still?

* Sink into dejection.

* Not only the temple of virtue, but virtue herself.

Imo. It poison'd me.

Cor. O gods!—

I left out one thing which the queen confess'd,
Which must approve thee honest: If Pisanio
Have, said she, given his mistress that confec-
tion

Which I gave him for a cordial, she is serv'd
As I would serve a rat.

Cym. What's this, Cornelius?

Cor. The queen, Sir, very oft importun'd me
To temper^e poisons for her; still pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge, only
In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs
Of no esteem: I, dreading that her purpose
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease

The present power of life; but, in short time,
All offices of nature should again
Do their due functions.—Have you ta'en of it?

Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.

Bel. My boys,
There was our error.

Gwi. This is sure, Fidele.

Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady from you?

Think, that you are upon a rock; and now
Throw me again. [Embracing him.]

Post. Hang there like fruit, my soul,
Till the tree die!

Cym. How now, my flesh, my child?
What, mak'st thou me a dullard in this act?
Wilt thou not speak to me?

Imo. Your blessing, Sir. [Kneeling.]

Bel. Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not;
You had a motive for't.

[To GUIDERIUS and ARVIRAGUS.]

Cym. My tears that fall,
Prove holy water on thee! Imogen,
Thy mother's dead.

Imo. I am sorry for't, my lord.

Cym. O, she was naught; and 'long of her it was,
That we meet here so strangely: But her son
Is gone, we know not how, nor where.

Pis. My lord, [Cloten,
Now fear is from me. I'll speak troth. Lord
Upon my lady's missing, came to me
With his sword drawn; foam'd at the mouth,
and swore,

If I discover'd not which way she was gone,
It was my instant death: By accident,
I had a feigned letter of my master's
Then in my pocket; which directed him
To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;
Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,
Which he inforc'd from me, away he posts
With unchaste purpose, and with oath to violate

My lady's honour: what became of him,
I further know not.

Gwi. Let me end the story:
I slew him there.

Cym. Marry, the gods forfend!† [lips
I would not thy good deeds should from my Pluck a hard sentence: pr'ythee, valiant youth,
Deny't again.

Gwi. I have spoke it, and I did it.

Cym. He was a prince.

Gwi. A most uncivil one: The wrongs he did me [me
Where nothing prince-like; for he did provoke
With language that would make me spurn the
sea,

If it could roar so to me: I cut off's head;
And am right glad, he is not standing here
To tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am sorry for thee:
By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and Endure our law: Thou art dead. [must

Imo. That headless man
I thought had been my lord.

Cym. Bind the offender,
And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, Sir king:
This man is better than the man he slew,
As well descended as thyself; and hath
More of thee merited, than a band of Clotens
Had ever scar for.—Let his arms alone;
[To the Guard.]

They were not born for bondage.

Cym. Why, old soldier,
Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for,
By tasting of our wrath? How of descent
As good as we?

Arv. In that he spake too far.

Cym. And thou shalt die for't.

Bel. We will die all three:
But I will prove, that two of us are as good
As I have given out him.—My sons, I must,
For mine own part, unfold a dangerous speech,
Though, haply, well for you.

Arv. Your danger is Ours.

Gwi. And our good his.

Bel. Have at it then.—
By leave;—Thou hadst, great king, a subject,
Was call'd Belarius. [who

Cym. What of him? he is A banish'd traitor.

Bel. He it is, that hath Assum'd this age: indeed, a banish'd man;
I know not how, a traitor.

Cym. Take him hence;
The whole world shall not save him.

Bel. Not too hot:
First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;
And let it be confiscate all, so soon
As I have receiv'd it.

Cym. Nursing of my sons?

Bel. I am too blunt, and saucy: Here's my Ere I arise, I will prefer my sons; [knee;
Then, spare not the old father. Mighty Sir,
These two young gentlemen, that call me father,

And think they are my sons, are none of mine;
They are the issue of your loins, my liege,
And blood of your begetting.

Cym. How! my issue?

Bel. So sure as you your father's. I, old Morgan,
Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd:
Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment

Itself, and all my treason; that I suffer'd,
Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes (For such, and so they are,) these twenty years

Have I train'd up: those arts they have, as I Could put into them; my breeding was, Sir, as

Your highness knows. Their nurse, Euriphile, Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children

Upon my banishment: I mov'd her to't;
Having receiv'd the punishment before,
For that which I did then: Beaten for loyalty
Excited me to treason: Their dear loss,
The more of you 'twas felt, the more it shap'd
Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious,
Sir,

Here are your sons again; and I must lose
Two of the sweetest companions in the world:—
The benediction of those covering heavens
Fall on their heads like dew! for they are
To inlay heaven with stars. [worthy]

Cym. Thou weep'st, and speak'st.
The service, that you three have done, is more
Unlike than this thou tell'st: I lost my children;
If these be they, I know not how to wish
A pair of worthier sons.

Bel. Be pleas'd a while.—
This gentleman, whom I call Polydere,
Most worthy prince, as yours, is true, Guiderius;

This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus,
Your younger princely son; he, Sir, was lapp'd
In a most curious mantle, wrought by the hand
Of his queen mother, which, for more proba-
I can with ease produce. [tion,

Cym. Guiderius had
Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star;
It was a mark of wonder.

Bel. This is he;
Who hath upon him still that natural stamp;
It was wise nature's end in the donation,
To be his evidence now.

Cym. O, what am I
A mother to the birth of three? Ne'er mother Rejoic'd deliverance more:—Bless'd may you be, [orbs,
That after this strange starting from your
You may reign in them now!—O Imogen,
Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

Imo. No, my lord; [brothers,
I have got two worlds by't.—O my gentle
Have we thus met? O never say hereafter,
But I am truest speaker: you call'd me brother,
When I was but your sister; I you brothers,
When you were so indeed.

Cym. Did you e'er meet?

Arv. Ay, my good lord.

Gui. And at first meeting lov'd;
Continued so, until we thought he died.

Cor. By the queen's dram she swallow'd.

Cym. O rare instinct!
When shall I hear all through? This fierce^a abridgment
Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in.—Where? how liv'd you? [tive?

And when came you to serve our Roman cap-
How parted with your brothers? how first met them? [These,

Why fled you from the court? and whither?
And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demanded;

And all the other by-dependancies, [place,
From chance to chance; but nor the time, nor
Will serve our long intergatories. See,
Posthumus anchors upon Imogen; [eye
And she, like harmless lightning, throws her
On him, her brothers, me, her master; hitting
Each object with a joy; the counterchange
Is severally in all. Let's quit this ground,
And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.—
Thou art my brother; So we'll hold thee ever.

[To BELARIUS.

Imo. You are my father too: and did relieve
To see this gracious season. [me,

Cym. All overjoy'd,
Sa— these in bonds; let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.

Imo. My good master,
I will yet do you service.

Luc. Happy be you!

Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought,
He would have well become'd this place, and grac'd

The thankings of a king.

Post. I am, Sir,
The soldier that did company these three
In poor beseeching; 'twas a fitment for
The purpose I then follow'd;—That I was h, Spunk, last time; I had you down, and might
Have made you finish.

Ioth. I am down again: [Kneeling.
But now my heavy conscience sinks my head,
As then your force did. Take that life, to seek you,

Which I so often owe: but, your ring first;
And here the bracelet of the truest princess,
That ever swore her faith.

Post. Kneel not to me;
The power that I have on you, is to spare you;
The malice towards you, to forgive you: Live,
And deal with others better.

Cym. Nobly doom'd:
We'll learn our freeness of a son-in-law;
Pardon's the word to all.

Arv. You help us, Sir,
As you did mean indeed to be our brother;
Joy'd are we, that you are.

Post. Your servant, princes.—Good my lord of Rome,
Call forth your soothsayer: As I slept, no
thought,

Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back,
Appear'd to me, with other sprightly shows^b
Of mine own kindred: when I wak'd, I found
This label on my bosom; whose containing
Is so from sense in hardness, that I can Make no collection of it; let him show
His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philarmonus,—

Sooth. Here, my good lord.

Luc. Read; and declare the meaning.

Sooth. [Reads.] *When as a lion's whelp shall,
to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive,
be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow: then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.
Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus, doth import so much:
The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter.*
[To CYMBELINE.

Which we call mollis aer; and mollis aer
We term it mulier: which mulier, I divine,
Is this most constant wife: who, even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd about
With this most tender air.

Cym. This hath some seeming.

Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee: and thy lopp'd branches point
Thy two sons forth: who, by Belarius stolen,
For many years thought dead, are now reviv'd.
To the majestic cedar join'd; whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym. Well,
My peace we will begin:—And, Caius Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Caesar.
And to the Roman empire; promising
To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen;

^a Vehement, rapid. † I. e. Which ought to be rendered distinct by an ample narrative.

^b Ghostly apparitions.

Whom heavens, in justice, (both on her and hers,) Have laid most heavy hand.

Soth. The fingers of the powers above do tune

The harmony of this peace. The vision Which I made known to Lucius, ere the stroke Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant Is full accomplish'd: For the Roman eagle; From south to west on wing soaring aloft, Lessen'd herself, and 'in the beams o'the sun So vanish'd: which foreshow'd our princely eagle,

The imperial Cesar, should again unite His favour with the radiant Cymbeline, Which shines here in the west.

Cym. Laud we the gods;

And let our crooked smokes climb* to their nostrils

From our bless'd altars! Publish we this peace To all our subjects. Set we forward: Let A Roman and a British ensign wave Friendly together: so through Lud's town march:

And in the temple of great Jupiter Our peace we'll ratify; seal it with feasts.— Set on there:—Never was a war did cease, Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace. [Exeunt.

A SONG,

Sung by Guiderius and Arviragus over Fidele, supposed to be dead.

BY WILLIAM COLLINS.

*To fair Fidele's grassy tomb,
Soft maids and village kins shall bring
Each opening aspect, of earliest bloom,
And rife all the breathing spring.*

*No wailing ghost shall dare appear
To vex with shrieks his quiet grove;
But shepherd lads assemble here,
And melting virgins own their love.*

*No wither'd witch shall here be seen,
No goblins lead their nightly crew:
The female fays shall haunt the green,
And dress thy grave with pearly dew.*

*The red-breast oft at evening hours
Shall kindly lend his little aid,
With hoary moss, and gather'd flowers,
To deck the ground where thou art laid.*

*When howling winds and beating rain,
In tempests shake the sybil's cell;
Or midst the chase on every plain,
The tender thought on thee shall dwell.*

*Each lonely scene shall thee restore;
For thee the tow' be duly shod:
Belov'd, till life could charm no more;
And mourn'd, till pity's self be dead.*

TITUS ANDRONICUS.

PERSONS REPRESENTED.

SATURNINUS, Son to the late Emperor of Rome, and afterwards declared Emperor himself.

BASSIANUS, Brother to Saturninus; in love with Lavinia.

TITUS ANDRONICUS, a noble Roman, General against the Goths.

MARCUS ANDRONICUS, Tribune of the People; and Brother to Titus.

A CAPTAIN, TRIBUNE, MESSENGER, and Clerk;
Romans.

Goths and Romans.

TAMORA, Queen of the Goths.

LAVINIA, Daughter to Titus Andronicus.

A NURSE, and a Black Child.

Kinsmen of Titus, Senators, Tribunes, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

SCENE; Rome, and the Country near it.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome.—Before the Capitol.

The tomb of the ANDRONICI appearing; the TRIBUNES and SENATORS aloft, as in the Senate. Enter, below, SATURNINUS and his Followers, on one side; and BASSIANUS and his Followers on the other; with Drum and Colours.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right,
Defend the justice of my cause with arms;
And, countrymen, my loving followers,
Plead my successive title^a with your swords:
I am his first-born son, that was the last
That wore the imperial diadem of Rome;
Then let my father's honours live in me,
Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.

Bas. Romans,—friends, followers, favourers of my right,—

If ever Bassianus, Cesar's son,
Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome,
Keep then this passage to the Capitol;
And suffer not dishonour to approach
The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate,
To justice, continence, and nobility;
But let desert in pure election shine;
And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS, aloft, with the Crown.

Mar. Princes that strive by factions, and by friends,
Ambitiously for rule and empery,— Know, that the people of Rome, for whom we stand

A special party, have, by their common vote,
In election for the Roman empery,
Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius
For many good and great deserts to Rome;
A nobler man, a braver warrior,
Lives not this day within the city walls:
He by the senate is accited^a home,
From weary wars against the barbarous Goths.
That, with his sons, a terror to our foes,
Hath yok'd a nation strong, train'd up in arms.
Ten years are spent, since first he undertook
This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms
Our enemies' pride: Five times he hath re-
turn'd

Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons
In coffins from the field;
And now at last, laden with honour's spoils,
Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms.

Let us entreat,—By honour of his name,
Whom, worthily, you would have now succeed,
And in the Capitol and senate's right,
Whom you pretend to honour and adore,—
That you withdraw you, and abate your
strength;

Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should,
Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness.

Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to calm my thoughts!

Bas. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affirm
In thy uprightness and integrity,
And so I love and honour thee and thine,
Thy nobler brother Titus, and his sons, [all,
And her, to whom my thoughts are humbled
Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich ornament,
That I will here dismiss my loving friends;

^a I. e. My title to the succession.

^a Summ'd.

And to my fortunes, and the people's favour,
Commit my cause in balance to be weigh'd.

[Exeunt the Followers of BASSIANUS.]

Sat. Friends, that have been thus forward in my right,

I thank you all, and here dismiss you all;
And to the love and favour of my country
Commit myself, my person, and the cause.

[Exeunt the Followers of SATURNINUS.]

Rome, be as just and gracious unto me,
As I am confident and kind to thee.—
Open the gates, and let me in.

Bas. Tribunes! and me, a poor competitor.

[SAT. and BAS. go into the Capitol, and exeunt with SENATORS, MARCUS, &c.]

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter a CAPTAIN, and Others.

Cap. Romans, make way; The good Andro-nicus,

Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion,
Successful in the battles that he fights,
With honour and with fortune is return'd,
From where he circumscribed with his sword,
And brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome.

*Flourish of Trumpets, &c. Enter MUTIUS and MARTIUS: after them, two Men bearing a Coffin covered with black; then QUINTUS and LUCIUS.
After them, TITUS ANDRONICUS; and then
TAMORA, with ALARBUS, CHIRON, DEME-
TRIUS, AARON, and other Goths, prisoners;
Soldiers and People following. The Bearers set down the Coffin, and TITUS speaks.*

Tit. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds! [fraught,]

Lo, as the bark that hath discharged her
Returns with precious lading to the bay,
From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage,

Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs,
To re-salute his country with his tears;
Tears of true joy for his return to Rome.—

Thou great defender of this Capitol,†
Stand gracious to the rights that we intend!—

Romans, of five and twenty valiant sons,
Half of the number that king Priam had,
Behold the poor remains, alive, and dead!
These, that survive, let Rome reward with
love;

These, that I bring unto their latest home,
With burial amongst their ancestors:
Here Goths have given me leave to sheath
my sword.

Titus, unkind, and careless of thine own,
Why suffer'st thou thy sons, unburied yet,
To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx?—
Make way to lay them by their brethren.

[The Tomb is opened.]

There greet in silence, as the dead are wont,
And sleep in peace, slain in your country's (o) sacred receptacle of my joys, [Wars!]

Sweet cell of virtue and nobility,
How many sons of mine hast thou in store,
That thou wilt never render to me more?

Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths,

That we may hew his limbs, and, on a pile,
Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh,
Before this earthly prison of their bones;
That so the shadows be not unappeas'd,
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.‡

* Freight. † Jupiter, to whom the Capitol was sacred.

‡ It was supposed that the ghosts of unburied people appeared to solicit the rites of funeral.

Tit. I give him you; the noblest that sur-
The eldest son of this distressed queen. [vives,

Tam. Stay, Roman brethren;—Gracious conqueror,

Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed,
A mother's tears in passion* for her son:

And, if thy sons were ever dear to thee,

O, think my son to be as dear to me.

Sufficeth not, that we are brought to Rome,

To beautify thy triumphs, and return,

Captive to thee, and to thy Roman yoke;

But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets,

For valiant doings in their country's cause?

O! if to fight for king and common weal

Were piety in thine, it is in these.

Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood:

Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods?

Draw near them then in being merciful;

Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge;

Thrice-noble Titus, spare my first-born son.

Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon
me. [beheld]

These are their brethren, whom you Goths

Alive, and dead; and for their brethren slain,

Religiously they ask a sacrifice:

To this your son is mark'd; and die he must,

To appease their groaning shadows that are
gone.

Luc. Away with him! and make a fire
straight;

And with your swords, upon a pile of wood,
Let's hew his limbs, till they be clean consum'd.

[Exeunt LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MUTIUS, with ALARBUS.]

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety!

Chi. Was ever Scythia half so barbarous?

Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome.

Alarbus goes to rest; and we survive

To tremble under Titus' threatening look. [al,

Then, madam, stand resolv'd; but hope with-

The self-same gods, that arm'd the queen of

With opportunity of sharp revenge [Troy

Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent,

May favour Tamora, the queen of Goths,

(When Goths were Goths, and Tamora was queen,)

To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

*Re-enter LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MU-

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd

Our Roman rites: Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,
And entrails feed the sacrificing fire, [sky.

Whose smoke, like incense, doth perfume the Remaineth nought, but to inter our brethren,

And with loud 'larums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so, and let Andronicus

Make this his latest farewell to their souls.

[Trumpets sounded, and the Coffins laid in the Tomb.]

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons;

Rome's readiest champions, repose you here,

Secure from worldly chances and mishaps!

Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,

Here grow no damned grudges; here, are no

storms,

No noise, but silence and eternal sleep:

Enter LAVINIA.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons!

Lav. In peace and honour live lord Titus
long;

My noble lord and father, live in fame!
Lo! at this tomb my tributary tears
I render, for my brethren's obsequies;
And at thy feet I kneel with tears of joy
Shed on the earth, for thy return to Rome:
O, bless me here with thy victorious hand,
Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud.

Tit. Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly re-
serv'd

The cordial of mine age to glad my heart!—
Lavinia, live; outlive thy father's days,
And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise!*

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS, SATURNINUS,
BASSIANUS, and others.

Mar. Long live lord Titus, my beloved
brother,
Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome!

Tit. Thanks, gentle tribune, noble brother
Marcus.

Mar. And welcome, nephews, from successful wars,
You that survive, and you that sleep in fame.
Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,
That in your country's service drew your
swords:

But safer triumph is this funeral pomp.
That hath aspir'd to Solon's happiness,†
And triumphs over chance in honour's bed.—
Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,
Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been,
Send thee by me, their tribune, and their trust,
This palliament of white and spotless hue;
And name thee in election for the empire,
With these our late-deceased emperor's sons:
Be candidatus then, and put it on,
And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her glorious body fits,
Than his, that shakes for age and feebleness:
What! should I don this robe, and trouble
Be chosen with proclamations to-day; [you?
To-morrow, yield up rule, resign my life,
And set abroad new business for you all?
Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,
And buried one and twenty valiant sons,
Knighted in field, slain manfully in arms,
In right and service of their noble country:
Give me a staff of honour for mine age,
But not a sceptre to control the world:
Upright he held it, lords, that held it last.

Mar. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the empire.

Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou tell!—

Tit. Patience, prince Saturnine.

Sat. Romans, do me right;—

Patricians, draw your swords, and sheath them not

Till Saturninus be Rome's emperor:—
Andronicus, 'would thou wert shipp'd to hell,
Rather than rob me of the people's hearts.

Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good

That noble-minded Titus means to thee!

Tit. Content thee, prince; I will restore to
thee

The people's hearts, and wean them from themselves.

Bas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,
But honour thee, and will do till I die;
My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends.

* He willeth that her life may be longer than his, and her praise longer than fame.

† The maxim alluded to is, that no man can be pronounced happy before his death

A robe.

† I.e. Do on, put it on.

I will most thankful be: and thanks, to men
Of noble minds, is honourable meed.

Tit. People of Rome, and people's tribunes
I ask your voices, and your suffrages; [here.
Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus?

Trib. To gratify the good Andronicus,
And gratulate his safe return to Rome,
The people will accept whom he admits.

Tit. Tribunes, I thank you: and this suit I
make,

That you create your emperor's eldest son,
Lord Saturnine; whose virtues will, I hope,
Reflect on Rome, as Titan's rays on earth,
And ripen justice in this common-weal:
Then if you will elect by my advice,
Crown him, and say,—Long live our emperor!

Mar. With voices and applause of every sort,
Patricians, and plebeians, we create
Lord Saturninus, Rome's great emperor;
And say,—Long live our emperor Saturnine!

[A long Flourish.]

Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done
To us in our election this day,
I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts,
And will with deeds requite thy gentleness:
And, for an onset, Titus, to advance
Thy name, and honourable family,
Lavinia will I make my emperess,
Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my heart.
And in the sacred Pantheon her espouse:
Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please
thee?

Tit. It doth, my worthy lord; and, in this match,

I hold me highly honour'd of your grace:
And here, in sight of Rome, to Saturnine,—
King and commander of our common-weal,
The wide world's emperor,—do I consecrate
My sword, my chariot, and my prisoners;
Presents well worthy Rome's imperial lord:
Receive them then, the tribute that I owe,
Mine honour's ensigns humbled at thy feet.

Sat. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life!
How proud I am of thee, and of thy gifts,
Rome shall record; and, when I do forget
The least of these unspeakable deserts,
Romans, forget your fealty to me.

Tit. Now, madam, are you prisoner to an emperor; [To TAMORA
To him, that for your honour and your state.
Will use you nobly, and your followers.

Sat. A goodly lady, trust me; of the hue
That I would choose, were I to choose anew.—
Clear up, fair queen, that cloudy countenance:
Though chance of war hath wrought this change
of cheer,

Thou com'st not to be made a scorn in Rome:
Princely shall be thy usage every way.
Rest on my word, and let not discontent
Daunt all your hopes; Madam, he comforts
you. [Goths.—

Can make you greater than the queen of Lavinia, you are not displeas'd with this?

Lar. Not I, my lord; with true nobility
Warrants these words in princely courtesy.

Sat. Thanks, sweet Lavinia.—Romans, let us go:

Ransomless here we set our prisoners free:
Proclaim our honours, lords, with trumpet and
drum.

Bas. Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine. [Seizing LAVINIA.

Tit. How, Sir? Are you in earnest then, my
lord?

Bas. Ay, noble Titus: and resolv'd withal.

To do myself this reason and this right.

[The Emperor courts TAMORA in dumb show.

Mar. Suum cuique is our Roman justice :
This prince in justice seizeth but his own.

Luc. And that he will, and shall, if Lucius live.

Tit. Traitors, avaunt ! Where is the emperor's guard ?

Treason, my lord ; Lavinia is surpris'd.

Sat. Surpris'd ! by whom ?

Bus. By him that justly may
Bear his betroth'd from all the world away.

[Exeunt MARCUS and BASSIANUS, with LAVINIA.

Mut. Brothers, help to convey her hence away,

And with my sword I'll keep this door safe.

[Exeunt LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Tit. Follow my lord, and I'll soon bring her back.

Mut. My lord, you pass not here.

Tit. What, villain boy !

Barr'st me my way in Rome ?

[Titus kills MUTIUS.

Mut. Help, Lucius, help.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. My lord, you are unjust : and, more than so,

In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son.

Tit. Nor thou, nor he, are any sons of mine :
My sons would never so dishonour me :
Traitor, restore Lavinia to the emperor.

Luc. Dead, if you will : but not to be his wife,

That is another's lawful promis'd love. [Exit.

Sat. No, Titus, no ; the emperor needs her not,

Not her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock :

I'll trust, by leisure, him that mocks me once ;
Thee never, nor thy traitorous haughty sons,
Confederates all thus to dishonour me. [of,

Was there none else in Rome to make a stale^a
But Saturnine ? Full well, Andronicus,
Agree these deeds with that proud brag of thine,

That said'st, I begg'd the empire at thy hands.

Tit. O monstrous ! what reproachful words are these ?

Sat. But go thy ways ; go, give that changing piece

To him that flourish'd for her with his sword :
A valiant son-in-law thou shalt enjoy ;
One fit to bandy with thy lawless sons,
To rufflet in the commonwealth of Rome.

Tit. These words are razors to my wounded heart.

Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, queen of Gotha,— [nymphs,

That like the stately Phœbe 'mongst her
Dost overshadow the gallant'st dames of Rome,—
If thou be pleas'd with this my sudden choice,
Behold, I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride,
And will create thee empress of Rome.
Speak, queen of Gotha, dost thou applaud my choice ?

And here I swear by all the Roman gods,—

Sith priest and holy water are so near,
And tapers burn so bright, and every thing
In readiness for Hymeneus stand,—

I will not re-salute the streets of Rome,
Or climb my palace, till from forth this place
I lead espous'd my bride along with me.

Tem. And here, in sight of heaven, to Rome
I swear,

If Saturnine advance the queen of Gotha,
She will a handmaid be to his desires,
A loving nurse, a mother to his youth.

Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon :—Lords, accompany

Your noble emperor, and his lovely bride,
Sent by the heavens for prince Saturnine,
Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered :

There shall we consummate our spousal rites.
[Exeunt SATURNINUS, and his Followers ; TAMORA, and her Sons ; AARON, and Goths.

Tit. I am not bid^a to wait upon this bride ;—
Titus, when wert thou went to talk alone,
Dishonour'd thus, and challenged of wrongs ?

Re-enter MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Mar. O, Titus, see, O, see, what thou hast
In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son. [done !

Tit. No, foolish tribune, no ; no son of mine,—

Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed
That hath dishonour'd all our family ;
Unworthy brother, and unworthy sons !

Luc. But let us give him burial as becomes ;
Give Mutius burial with our brethren.

Tit. Traitors, away ! he rests not in this tomb,

This monument five hundred years hath stood,
Which I have sumptuously re-edified :

Here none but soldiers, and Rome's servitors,
Repose in fame ; none basely slain in brawls :—
Bury him where you can, he comes not here.

Mar. My lord, this is impiety in you :
My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him ;
He must be buried with his brethren.

Quin. Mart. And shall, or him we will accompany.

Tit. And shall ? What villain was it spoke that word ?

Quin. He that would vouch't in any place but here.

Tit. What, would you bury him in my despite ?

Mar. No, noble Titus ; but entreat of thee
To pardon Mutius, and to bury him.

Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest,
And, with these boys, mine honour thou hast wounded :

My foes I do repute you every one ;
So trouble me no more, but get you gone.

Mart. He is not with himself ; let us withdraw.

Quin. Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried.

[MARCUS and the Sons of TITUS kneel.
Mar. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead.

Quin. Father, and in that name doth nature speak.

Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed.

Mar. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul,—

Luc. Dear father, soul and substance of us all,—

Mar. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter
His noble nephew here in virtue's nest,
That died in honour and Lavinia's cause.
Thou art a Roman, be not barbarous.
The Greeks upon advice, did bury Ajax
That slew himself ; and wise Laertes' son

^a A stalking horse.

[†] A ruffler was a bully.

^b Lavied.

Did graciously plead for his funeral.

Let not young Martius then, that was thy joy,
Be barr'd his entrance here.

Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise:—

Marcus. Let day is this, that e'er I saw,—

To be dishonour'd by my sons in Rome!—

Well, bury him, and bury me the next.

[Martius is put into the Tomb.]

Lar. There lie thy bones, sweet Martius; with thy friends,

Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb!—

All. No man shed tears for noble Martius;

He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause.

Mar. My lord,—to step out of these dreary dumps,—

How comes it, that the subtle queen of Goths
Is of a sudden thus advanc'd in Rome?

Tit. I know not, Marcus; but, I know, it is;
Whether by device, or no, the heavens can tell:

Is she not then beholden to the man

That brought her for this high good turn so far?

Yes, and will nobly him remunerate.

Flourish. Re-enter, at one side, SATURNINUS, attended; TAMORA, CRIBON, DEMETRIUS, and AARON: At the other, BASSIANUS, LAVI-NIA, and others.

Sat. So Bassianus, you have play'd your prize;

God give you joy, Sir, of your gallant bride.

Bas. And you of yours, my lord: I say no
more.

Nor wish so less; and so I take my leave.

Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law, or we have
power,

Then and thy faction shall repeat this rape.

Bas. Rape, call you it, my lord, to seize my
own,

My true-betrothed love, and now my wife?

But let the laws of Rome determine all;

Mean while I am possess'd of that is mine.

Sat. 'Tis good, Sir: You are very short with
us;

But, if we live, we'll be as sharp with you.

Bas. My lord, what I have done, as best I may,

Answer I must, and shall do with my life.

Only thus much I give your grace to know,

By all the duties that I owe to Rome,

This noble gentleman, lord Titus here,

Is in opinion, and in honour, wrong'd;

That, in the rescue of Lavinia,

With his own hand did slay his youngest son,

In zeal to you, and highly mov'd to wrath

To be control'd in that he frankly gave:

Receive him then to favour, Saturnine;

That hath express'd himself, in all his deeds,

A father, and a friend, to thee, and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds;

'Tis thou, and those, that have dishonour'd me:

Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge,

How I have lov'd and honour'd Saturnine!

Tit. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora

Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine,

Then hear me speak indifferently for all;

And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past.

Sat. What! madam! be dishonour'd openly,

And basely put it up without revenge?

Tit. Not so, my lord, The gods of Rome

forefend,*

I should be author to dishonour you!

But, on mine honour, dare I undertake

For good lord Titus' innocence in all,

Whose fury, not dissembled, speaks his griefs:

* Forbid.

Then, at my suit, look graciously on him;

Love not so noble a friend on vain suppers,

Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart.—

My lord, be rul'd by me, be woo'd at last, [Exit]

Dissemble all your griefs and discontent:

You are but newly planted in your thrones;

Lest then the people, and patricians too,

Upon a just survey, take Titus' part,

And so supplant us for ingratitude,

(Which Rome repotes to be a heinous sin.)

Yield at entreats, and then let me alone.

I'll find a day to massacre them all,

And raze their faction, and their family,

The cruel father, and his traitorous sons,

To whom I sued for my dear son's life;

And make them know, what 'tis to let a queen

Kneel in the streets, and beg for grace in vain.—

Come, come, sweet emperor,—come, Antonius,

Take up this good old man, and cheer the last

That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.

Sat. Rise, Titus, rise; my emperor's will

prevail'd.

Tit. I thank your majesty, and her, as best:

These words, these looks, beseege now life in

me.

Tit. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,

A Roman now adopted happily,

And must advise the emperor for his good.

This day all quarrels die, Andronicus;—

And let it be mine honour, good my lord,

That I have reconcil'd your friends and you.—

For you, prince Bassianus, I have paid

My word and promise to the emperor,

That you will be more mild and tractable.—

And fear not, lords,—and you, Lavinia;—

By my advice, all humbled on your knees,

You shall ask pardon of his majesty.

Lar. We do; and vow to heaven, and to his highness,

That, what we did, was mildly, as we might,

Tend'ring our sister's honour, and our own.

Mar. That on mine honour here I do protest.

Sat. Away, and talk not; trouble us no

more.—

Tit. Nay, say, sweet emperor, we must all be friends:

The tribune and his nephews kneel for grace;

I will not be denied. Sweet heart, look back.

Sat. Marcus, for thy sake, and thy brother's

And at my lovely Tamora's entreats, [Here,

I do remit these young men's heinous faults.

Stand up.

Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,

I found a friend; and sure as death I swear,

I would not part a bachelor from the priest.

Come, if the emperor's court can feast two brides,

You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends.

This day shall be a love-day, Tamora.

Tit. To-morrow, as it please your majesty,

To hunt the panther and the hart with me,

With horn and hound, we'll give your grace adieu.

Sat. Be it so, Titus, and grammarcy too.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The same.—Before the Palace.

Enter AARON.

Aar. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,

Safe out of fortune's shot: and sits aloft,

Secure of thunder's crack, or lightning's flash;

Advanc'd above pale envy's threat'ning reach.
As when the golden sun salutes the morn,
And, having gilt the ocean with his beams,
Gallops the zodiac in his glistening coach,
And overlooks the highest-peering hills;
So Tamora.—

Upon her wit doth earthly honour wait,
And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown,
Then, Aaron, arm thy heart, and fit thy thoughts,
To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress,
And mount her pitch; whom thou in triumph long

Hast prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous chains;
And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes,
Than is Prometheus tied to Caucasus.
Away with slavish weeds, and idle thoughts!
I will be bright, and shine in pearl and gold,
To wait upon this new-made emperess.
To wait, said I? to wanton with this queen,
This goddess, this Semiramis;—this queen,
This syren, that will charm Rome's Saturnine,
And see his shipwreck, and his commonweal's.
Holla! what storm is this?

Enter CHIRON and DEMETRIUS, braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge,
And manners, to intrude where I am grac'd;
And may, for aught thou know'st, affected be.

Chi. Demetrius, thou dost overween in all;
And so in this to bear me down with braves.
'Tis not the difference of a year, or two,
Makes me less gracious, thee more fortunate:
I am as able, and as fit, as thou,
To serve, and to deserve my mistress' grace;
And that my sword upon thee shall approve,
And plead my passions for Lavinia's love.

Aar. Clubs, clubs!† these lovers will not keep the peace.

Dem. Why, boy, although our mother, unadvis'd,
Gave you a dancing-rapier‡ by your side,
Are you so desperate grown, to threat your friends?
Go to; have your lath glued within your
Till you know better how to handle it.

Chi. Mean while, Sir, with the little skill I have,
Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare.

Dem. Ay, boy, grow ye so brave?

[They draw.]

Aar. Why, how now, lords?
So near the emperor's palace dare you draw,
And maintain such a quarrel openly?
Full well I wot§ the ground of all this grudge;
I would not for a million of gold,
The cause were known to them it most concerns:
Nor would your noble mother, for much more,
Be so dishonour'd in the court of Rome.
For shame, put up.

Dem. Not I; till I have sheath'd
My rapier in his bosom, and, withal,
Thrust these reproachful speeches down his throat,
That he hath breath'd in my dishonour here.

Chi. For that I am prepar'd and full resolv'd,— Foul-spoken coward! that thunder'st with thy
And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform.

Aar. Away, I say.—
Now by the gods, that warlike Goths adore,
This petty brabble will undo us all.—
Why, lords,—and think you not how dangerous

It is to jut upon a prince's right?

What, is Lavinia then become so loose,
Or Bassianus so degenerate, [broach'd,
That for her love such quarrels may be Without controlment, justice, or revenge?
Young lords, beware!—an should the empress know [please.

This discord's ground, the music would not
Chi. I care not, I, knew she and all the world;

I love Lavinia more than all the world.

Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice:

Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.

Aar. Why, are ye mad? or know ye not, in How furious and impatient they be, [Rome
And cannot brook competitors in love?
I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
By this device.

Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths
Would I propose, to achieve her whom I love.

Aar. To achieve her!—How?

Dem. Why makest thou it so strange?
She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd;
She is a woman, therefore may be won;
She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd.
What, man! more water glideth by the mill
Than wots the miller of; and easy it is
Of a cut loaf to steal a shive,* we know:
Though Bassianus be the emperor's brother,
Better than he have yet worn Vulcan's badge.

Aar. Ay, and as good as Saturninus may. [Aside.

Dem. Then why should he despair, that knows to court it

With words, fair looks, and liberality?
What, hast thou not full often struck a doe,
And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose?

Aar. Why then, it seems, some certain snatch, or so
Would serve your turns.

Chi. Ay, so the turn were serv'd.

Dem. Aaron, thou hast hit it.

Aar. 'Would you had hit it too;
Then should not we be tir'd with this ado.
Why, hark ye, hark ye,—And are you such fools,

To square† for this? Would it offend you then
That both should speed?

Chi. I'faith, not me.

Dem. Nor me,

So I were one.

Aar. For shame, be friends; and join for that, you jar.

'Tis policy and stratagem must do
That you affect; and so must you resolve;
That what you cannot, as you would, achieve,
You must perforce accomplish as you may.
Take this of me, Lucrece was not more chaste
Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love.

A speedier course than lingering languishment
Must we pursue, and I have found the path.

My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand;
There will the lovely Roman ladies troop:
The forest walks are wide and spacious;
And many unfrequented plots there are,
Fitted by kind‡ for rape and villany:
Single you thither then this dainty doe,
And strike her home by force, if not by words:
This way, or not at all, stand you in hope.

Come, come, our empress, with her sacred§
To villany and vengeance consecrate, [wit,
Will we acquaint with all that we intend,
And she shall file our engines with advice,
That will not suffer you to square yourselves,

* Favour. † This was the usual outcry for assistance, when any riot in the street happened.

† A sword worn in dancing

‡ Know.

* Slice.

† Quarrel.

‡ By nature.

§ Sacred here signifies accursed; a Latinism.

But to your wishes' height advance you both.
The emperor's court is like the house of flies,
The palace full of tongues, of eyes, of ears:
The woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf, and dull;

There speak, and strike, brave boys, and take your turns: [crys,

There serve your lust, shadow'd from heaven's
And revel in Lavinia's treasury.

Chl. Thy counsel, lad, smells of no cowarddise.

Dem. Sit far out ages, till I find the stream
To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits,
For Sigs, for mums, or her. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Forest near Rome.—A Lodge seen at a distance. Horns, and cry of Hounds heard.

Enter TITUS ANDRONICUS, with HENDERS, &c.
MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey. [crys:

The fields are fragrant, and the woods are Unoccupied here, and let us make a bay,
And wile the emperor and his lovely bride,
And rouse the prince: and ring a hunter's peal,
That all the court may echo with the noise.
Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours,
To tend the emperor's person carefully:
I have been troubled in my sleep this night,
But dawning day now comfort hath inspir'd.

Horns wind a Peal. Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, BASSIANUS, LAVINIA, CHIRON, DEMETRIUS,
and Attendants.

Tit. Many good mornings to your majesty:—
Madam, to you as many and as good!—
I promised your grace a hunter's peal.

Sat. And you have rung it lustily, my lords,
Somewhat too early for new-married ladies.

Bas. Lavinia, how say you?

Lav. I say, so;

I have been broad awake two hours and more.

Sat. Come on then, horns and chariots let us
have,

And to our sport:—Madam, now shall ye see
Our Roman hunting. [To TAMORA.

Mor. I have dogs, my lord,
Will rouse the proudest panther in the chase,
And climb the highest promontory top.

Tit. And I have horse will follow where the game [plain.

Makes way, and run like swallows o'er the Dem. Chiron, we hunt not, we, with horns nor hounds,

But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A desert Part of the Forest.

Enter AARON, with a Bag of Gold.

Aar. He, that had wit, would think that I had none,

To bury so much gold under a tree,
And never after to inherit it.

Let him, that thinks of me so abjectly,
Know, that this gold must coil a stratagem;
Which, cunningly effected, will beget
A very excellent piece of villany;
And so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest,† [Hides the Gold.

That have their aims out of the empress' chest.
Enter TAMORA.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad,

† Pardon.

† Disquiet.

When every thing doth make a gladsome hunt:
The birds chant melody on every bush;
The snake lies rolled in the cheerful sun;
The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind,
And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground;
Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit,
And—whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,

Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,—
Let us sit down, and mark their yelping noise,
And—after conflict, such as was supp'd
The wandering prince of Dido once enjoy'd.
When with a happy storm they were surpris'd,
And curtain'd with a counsel-keeping cave,—
We may, each wreathed in the other's arms,
Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber;
Whilst hounds, and horns, and sweet meli-
dious birds,

Be unto us, as is a nurse's song
Of lullaby, to bring her babe asleep.

Aar. Madam, though Venus governs your desires,

Saturn is dominator over mine:
What signifies my deadly-standing eye,
My silence, and my cloudy melancholy?
My fleece of woolly hair that now encrines,
Even as an adder, when she doth unroll
To do some fatal execution?

No, madam, these are no venereal signs;
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood and revenge are hammering in my brain.
Hark, Tamora,—the empress of my soul,
Which never hopes more heaven than ruin is
thee,—

This is the day of doom for Bassianus;
His Philomel[†] must lose her tongue to-day:
Thy sons make pillage of her chastity,
And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood.
Seest thou this letter? Take it up I pray thee,
And give the king this fatal-plotted scroll.—
Now question me no more, we are espied;
Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty,
Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction.

Tam. Ah, my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life!

Aar. No more, great empress, Bassianus
comes:

Be cross with him; and I'll go fetch thy sons
To back thy quarrels, whatso'er they be.
[Exit.

Enter BASSIANUS and LAVINIA.

Bas. Who have we here? Rome's royal empress,
Unfurnish'd of her well-beseeming troop?
Or is it Dian, habited like her;
Who hath abandoned her holy groves,
To see the general hunting in this forest?

Tam. Saucy controller of our private steps!
Had I the power, that, some say, Dian had,
Thy temples should be planted presently
With horns, as was Actæon's, and the hounds
Should drive upon thy new transformed limbs,
Unmannerly intruder as thou art!

Lav. Under your patience, gentle empress,
Thy thought you have a goodly gift in bringing;
And to be doubted, that your Moor and you
Are singled forth to try experiments. [day!
Jove shield your husband from his hounds to-tis pity, they should take him for a stag.

Bas. Believe me, queen, your swarth Cammerman

Doth make your honour of his body's hue,
Spotted, detested, and abominable.

† Titus Ovid's Metamorphoses, Book VI.

† Part.

Why are you sequester'd from all your train?
Dismounted from your snow-white goodly steed,

And wander'd hither to an obscure plot,
Accompanied with a barbarous Moor,
If foul desire had not conducted you?

Lav. And, being interrupted in your sport,
Great reason that my noble lord be rated
For sauciness.—I pray you, let us hence,
And let her 'joy her raven-colour'd love;
'This valley fits the purpose passing well.

Bas. The king, my brother, shall have note of this.

Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him noted long:

Good king! to be so mightily abus'd!

Tam. Why have I patience to endure all this?

Enter CHIRON and DEMETRIUS.

Dem. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother,

Why doth your highness look so pale and wan?

Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look pale?

These two have 'tic'd me hither to this place,
A barren detested vale, you see, it is:

The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and lean,
'O'ercome with moss, and baleful mistletoe.

Here never shines the sun; here nothing breeds,

Unless the nightly owl, or fatal raven.

And, when they show'd me this abhorred pit,
They told me, here, at dead time of the night,

A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes,
Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins,*

Would make such fearful and confused cries,
As any mortal body, hearing it,

Should straight fall mad, or else die suddenly.

No sooner had they told this hellish tale,
But straight they told me, they would bind me

Unto the body of a dismal yew; [here

And leave me to this miserable death.

And then they call'd me, foul adulteress,
Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms

That ever ear did hear to such effect.

And, had you not by wondrous fortune come,

This vengeance on me had they executed:

Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,

(Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children.

Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son.

[Stabs BASSIANUS.

Chi. And this for me, struck home to show my strength. [Stabbing him likewise.

Lav. Ay, come, Semiramis,—ay, barbarous Tamora!

For no name fits thy nature but thy own!

Tam. Give me thy poinard; you shall know, my boys, [wrong.

Your mother's hand shall right your mother's

Dem. Stay, madam, here is more belongs to her; [straw:

First, thrash the corn, then after burn the

'This minion stood upon her chastity,

Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty,

And with that painted hope braves your mightiness:

And shall she carry this unto her grave?

Chi. An if she do, I would I were a eunuch.

Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust.

Tam. But when you have the honey you desire,

Let not this wasp outlive, us both to sting.

Chi. I warrant you, madam; we will make that sure.—

Come, mistress, now perforce we will enjoy
That nice-preserved honesty of yours.

Lav. O Tamora! thou bear'st a woman's face,—

Tam. I will not hear her speak; away with her.

Lav. Sweet lords, entreat her hear me but a word.

Dem. Listen, fair madam: Let it be your glory

To see her tears: but be your heart to them,
As unrelenting flint to drops of rain.

Lav. When did the tiger's young ones teach the dam?

O, do not learn her wrath; she taught it
thee:

The milk, thou suck'dst from her, did turn to marble;

Even at thy teat thou hadst thy tyranny.—

Yet every mother breeds not sons alike;

Do thou entreat her show a woman's pity.

[To CHIRON.

Chi. What! would'st thou have me prove myself a bastard?

Lav. 'Tis true; the raven doth not hatch a lark:

Yet I have heard, (O could I find it now!)

The lion mov'd with pity, did endure

To have his princely paws par'd all away.

Some say that ravens foster forlorn children,
The whilst their own birds samish in their nests:

(O, be to me, though thy hard heart say no,

Nothing so kind, but something pitiful!

Tam. I know not what it means; away with
her.

Lav. O, let me teach thee: for my father's sake,

That gave thee life, when well he might have slain thee,

Be not obdurate, open thy deaf ears.

Tam. Had thou in person ne'er offended me,

Even for his sake am I pitiless:—

Remember, boys, I pour'd forth tears in vain,

To save your brother from the sacrifice;

But fierce Andronicus would not relent.

Therefore away with her, and use her as you
will;

The worse to her, the better lov'd of me.

Lav. O Tamora, be call'd a gentle queen,

And with thine own hands kill me in this
place:

For 'tis not life, that I have begg'd so long;

Poor I was slain, when Bassianus died.

Tam. What begg'st thou then; fond woman,
let me go.

Lav. 'Tis present death I beg; and one thing
more,

That womanhood denies my tongue to tell:

(O, keep me from their worse than killing lust,
And tumble me into some loathsome pit;

Where never man's eye may behold my body:

Do this, and be a charitable murderer.

Tam. So should I rob my sweet sons of their fee:

No, let them satisfy their lust on thee.

Dem. Away, for thou hast staid us here too
long.

Lav. No grace? no womanhood? Ah, beastly creature!

The blot and enemy to our general name!

Confusion fall—

Chi. Nay, then I'll stop your mouth:—

Bring thou her husband;

[Dragging off LAVINIA.

This is the hole where Aaron hid us hide him.

[Exit.]

Tam. Farewell, my sons: see that you make her sure:

Ne'er let my heart know merry cheer indeed,
Till all the Andronici be made away.
Now will I hence to seek my lovely Moor,
And let my spleenful sons this trull devour.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—The same.

Enter AARON, with QUINTUS and MARTIUS.

Aar. Come on, my lords; the better foot before:

Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit,
Where I clogg'd the panther fast asleep.

Quin. My sight is very dull, whate'er it bodes.

Mart. And mine, I promise you; woe's not for shame,
Well could I leave our sport to sleep awhile.

[MARTIUS falls into the Pit.]

Quin. What art thou fallen? What subtle hole is this,

Whose mouth is cover'd with rude-growing
Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood,

As fresh as morning's dew distill'd on flowers?
A very fatal place it seems to me:—

Speak, brother, hast thou hurt thee with the Mart. O, brother, with the dimmest object

That ever eye, with sight, made heart lament.

Aar. [Aside.] Now will I fetch the king to
And them here;

That he thereby may give a likely guess,
How these were they that made away his brother.

Mart. Why dost not comfort me, and help me out

From this unshallow'd and blood-stained hole?

Quin. I am surprised with an uncouth fear:
A chilling sweat o'er-runs my trembling joints;
My heart suspects more than mine eye can see.

Mart. To prove thou hast a true-divining heart,

Aaron and thou look down into this den,
And see a fearful sight of blood and death.

Quin. Aaron is gone; and my compassionate heart

Will not permit mine eyes once to behold
The thing, whereat it trembles by surmise:

O, tell me how it is; for ne'er till now
Was I a child, to fear I know not what.

Mart. Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here,
All on a heap, like to a slaughter'd lamb,

In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.

Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know 'tis he?

Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear
A precious ring, that lightens all the hole,

Which, like a taper in some monument,
Doth shine upon the dead man's earthy cheeks,

And shows the ragged entrails of this pit:
So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus,

When he by night lay bath'd in maiden blood.
O brother, help me with thy fainting hand,—

If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath,—
Out of this fell devouring receptacle,

As hateful as Cocythus' misty mouth.

Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee out;

Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good,
I may be pluck'd into the swallowing womb

Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave.
I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.

Mart. Nor I am strong enough to climb without thy help.

Quin. Thy hand once more; I will not leave Till thou art here aloft, or I below:—

Thou canst not come to me, I come to thee.
[Falls in.]

Enter SATURNINUS and AARON.

Sat. Along with me:—I'll see what hole's here,

And what he is, that now is leap'd into it.
Say, who art thou, that lately didst descend

Into this gaping hollow of the earth?

Mart. The unhappy son of old Andronicus;
Brought thither in a most unlucky hour,

To find thy brother Bassianus dead.

Sat. My brother dead? I know, thou dost but jest:

He and his lady both are at the lodge,
Upon the north side of this pleasant champaign.

'Tis not an hour since I left him there.

Mart. We know not where you left him at.

But, out alas! here have we found him dead.

Enter TAMORA, with Attendants; Titus ANDRONICUS, and LUCIUS.

Tam. Where is my lord, the king?

Sat. Here, Tamora; though griev'd with illing grief.

Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?

Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou seek my wound;

Poor Bassianus here has murdered.

Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal oil,
[Giving a Letter.]

The complement of this timeless tragedy;
And wonder greatly, that man's face can fill

In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.

Sat. [Reads.] As if we were to meet him last society,—

Sweet huntsman, Bassianus 'tis, we mean,—
Do thou so much as dig the grave for him;

Thou know'st our meaning: Look for thy reward
Among the nettles at the elder tree,

Which overshades the mouth of that same pit,
Where we decreed to bury Bassianus.

Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friend.
O, Tamora! was ever heard the like?

This is the pit, and this the elder tree:
Look, Sirs, if you can find the huntsman out,

That should have murder'd Bassianus here.

Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold.

Sat. Two of thy whelps, [To Tit.] fall out of bloody kind,

Have here bereft my brother of his life:—
Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison;

There let them bide, until we have devis'd
Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them.

Tam. What, are they in this pit? O wondrous thing!

How easily murder is discovered!

Tit. High emperor, upon my feeble knee
I beg this boon, with tears not lightly shed,

That this fell fault of my accursed sons,
Accursed, if the fault be prov'd in them,—

Sat. If it be prov'd! you see, it is apparent.—

Who found this letter? Tamora, was it you?

Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.

Tit. I did, my lord: yet let me be their bail.

For by my father's reverend tomb, I vow,
They shall be ready at your highness' will,

To answer their suspicion with their lives.

Sat. Thou shalt not bail them: see, thou follow me. [derers:
Some bring the murder'd body, some the murder—
Let them not speak a word, the guilt is plain;
For, by my soul, were there worse end than death,
That end upon them should be executed.

Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the king;
Fear not thy sons, they shall do well enough.

Tit. Come, Lucius, come; stay not to talk with them. [Exeunt severally.

SCENE V.—The same.

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, with LAVINIA, ravished; her Hands cut off, and her Tongue cut out.

Dem. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can speak, [thee.

Who 'twas that cut thy tongue, and ravish'd Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so; [scribe.

And, if thy stumps will let thee, play the Dem. See, how with signs and tokens she can scowl.

Chi. Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy hands.

Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash;
And so let's leave her to her silent walks.

Chi. An 'twere my case, I should go hang myself.

Dem. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit the cord.

[Exeunt DEMETRIUS and CHIRON.

Enter MARCUS.

Mar. Who's this,—my niece, that flies away so fast?

Cousin, a word; Where is your husband?—
If I do dream, 'would all my wealth would wake me!

If I do wake, some planet strike me down,
That I may slumber in eternal sleep!—

Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungentle hands
Have lopp'd, and hew'd, and made thy body bare

Of her two branches? those sweet ornaments,
Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in;

And might not gain so great a happiness,
As half thy love? Why dost not speak to me?—

Alas, a crimson river of warm blood,
Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind,
Doth rise and fall between thy rosed lips,
Coming and going with thy honey breath.
But sure, some Tereus hath deflower'd thee;
And, lest thou should'st detect him, cut thy tongue.

Ah, now thou turn'st away thy face for shame!
And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood,—
As from a conduit with three issuing spouts,—
Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titan's face,
Blushing to be encounter'd with a cloud.

Shall I speak for thee? shall I say, 'tis so?
O, that I knew thy heart; and knew the beast,
That I might rail at him to ease my mind!

Sorrow concealed, like an oven stopp'd,
Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.

Fair Philomela, she but lost her tongue,
And in a tedious sampler sew'd her mind:

But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee;
A craftier Tereus hast thou met withal,

And he hath cut those pretty fingers off,
That could have better sew'd than Philomel.

O, had the monster seen those lily hands
Tremble, like aspen leaves, upon a lute,

And make the silken strings delight to kiss them; [life:

He would not then have touch'd them for his Or, had he heard the heavenly harmony,

Which that sweet tongue hath made, [asleep,
He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell

As Cerberus at the Thracian poet's feet.
Come, let us go, and make thy father blind:

For such a sight will blind a father's eye:
One hour's storm will drown the fragrant meads; [eyes?

What will whole months of tears thy father's

Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee;

O, could our mourning ease thy misery!
[Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Rome.—A Street.

Enter SENATORS, TRIBUNES, and Officers of Justice, with MARTIUS and QUINTUS, bound, passing on to the Place of Execution: TITUS going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes, stay!

For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent
In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept;
For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed;
For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd;
And for these bitter tears, which now you see
Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks;

Be pitiful to my condemned sons,
Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought!

For two and twenty sons I never wept,
Because they died in honour's lofty bed:

For these, these, tribunes, in the dust I write [Throwing himself on the Ground.

My heart's deep languor, and my soul's sad tears.

Let my tears stanch the earth's dry appetite;
My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush.

[Exeunt SENATORS, TRIBUNES, &c.
with the Prisoners.

O earth, I will befriend thee more with rain,
That shall distil from these two ancient urns,
Than youthful April shall with all his showers:
In summer's drought, I'll drop upon thee still;
In winter, with warm tears I'll melt the snow,
And keep eternal spring-time on thy face,
So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood.

Enter LUCIUS, with his Sword drawn.

O, reverend tribunes! gentle aged men!
Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death;
And let me say, that never wept before,
My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O, noble father, you lament in vain;
The tribunes hear you not, no man is by,
And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Ah, Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead:

Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you.

Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak.

Tit. Why, 'tis no matter, man: if they did hear,

They would not mark me; or if they did mark,
All bootless to them, they'd not pity me.

Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones;
Who, though they cannot answer my distress,

Yet in some sort they're better than the tribunes,

For that they will not intercept my tale:

When I do weep, they humbly at my feet
Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me;
And, were they but attired in grave weeds,
Rome could afford no tribunes like to these.
A stone is soft as wax, tribunes more hard
than stones:

A stone is silent, and offendeth not; [death.
And tribunes with their tongues deem men to But whetstone stand't them with thy weapon drawn?

Lav. To rescue my two brethren from their
death:

For which attempt, the judges have pronounced
My everlasting doom of banishment.

Tit. O happy man! they have befriended thee.
Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive,
That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers?
Tigers must prey; and Rome affords no prey,
But me and mine: How happy art thou then,
From these devourers to be banished!
But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

Enter MARCUS and LAVINIA.

Mar. Titus, prepare thy noble eyes to weep;
Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break;
I bring consuming sorrow to thine eyes.

Tit. Will it consume me? let me see it then.

Mar. This was thy daughter.

Tit. Why, Marcus, so she is.

Lav. Ah me! this object kills me!

Tit. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon
her:—

Speak, my Lavinia, what accursed hand
Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight?
What fool hath added water to the sea?

Or brought a faggot to bright burning Troy?
My grief was at the height before thou cam'st,
And now, like Nilus,* it disdaineth bounds.—
Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too;
For they have sought for Rome, and all in vain;
And they have nurs'd this woe, in feeding life;
In bootless prayer have they been held up,
And they have serv'd me to effectless use:
Now, all the service I require of them
Is, that the one will help to cut the other.—
Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands;
For hands, to do Rome service, are but vain.

Lav. Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd
thee?

Mar. O, that delightful engine of her thoughts, [quence,
That blabb'd them with such pleasing elo-
is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage:
Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sang
Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear!

Lav. O, say thou for her, who hath done this deed?

Mar. O, thus I found her, straying in the park,
Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer,
That hath receiv'd some unrecuring wound.

Tit. It was my deer; and he that wounded
her,

Hath hurt me more, than had he kill'd me dead:
For now I stand as one upon a rock,
Environ'd with a wilderness of sea; [wave,
Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by Expecting ever when some envious surge
Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.
This way to death my wretched sons are gone;
Here stands my other son, a banish'd man;
And here, my brother, weeping at my woes;
But that, which gives my soul the greatest spurn,

Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.—
Had I but seen thy picture in this plight,

* The river Nile.

It would have maddened me! What shall I do
Now I behold thy lively body so?

Thou hast no hands, to wipe away thy tears;
Nor tongue, to tell me who hath martyr'd thee:
Thy husband he is dead; and, for his death,
Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by
this:—

Look, Marcus! ah, see Lucius, look on her!
When I did name her brethren, thou fast
tears

Stood on her cheeks; as doth the honey dew
Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.

Mar. Perchance, she weeps because thy kill'd her husband:

Perchance, because she knows thou hast kill'd her husband, thou art joyful,

Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them.—
No, no, they would not do so foul a deed;
Witness the sorrow that their sister makes.—

Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips;
Or make some sign how I may do thee ease:

Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius,
And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain;

Looking all downwards, to behold thy cheeks
Flow like an amir'd; like mandarin, yet not dry

With many slime left on them by a flood?
And in the fountain shall we gaze so long,
Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness,
And made a brine-pot with our bitter tears?

Or shall we cut away our hands, like these?
Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shows

Pass the remainder of our hateful days?
What shall we do? let us, that have our tongues,
Plot some device of further misery,
To make us wonder'd at in time to come.

Lav. Sweet father, cease your tears; for, at your grief,

See, how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.
Mar. Patience, dear niece:—good Titus, dry thine eyes.

Tit. Ah, Marcus, Marcus! brother, well I
wot,*

Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine,
For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine
own.

Lav. Ah, my Lavinia, I will wipe thy cheeks.
Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark! I understand her signs:

Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say
That to her brother which I said to thee;
His napkin, with his true tears all bewet,
Can do so service on her sorrowful cheeks.

O, what a sympathy of woe is this?
As far from help as limbo is from bliss!

Enter AARON.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord the emperor Sends thee this word,—That, if thou love thy sons,

Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself old Titus,
Or any one of you, chop off your hand,
And send it to the king. he for the same,
Will send thee hither both thy sons alive;
And that shall be the ransom for their fault.

Tit. O, gracious emperor! O, gentle Aaron!
Did ever raven sing so like a lark,
That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise?
With all my heart, I'll send the emperor
My hand:

Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off?
Lav. Stay, father; for that noble hand of thine,

* Know.

* Know.

* Know.

* Know.

* Know.

* Know.

* Know.

* Know.

* Know.

* Know.

* Know.

* Know.

That hath thrown down so many enemies,
Shall not be sent : my hand will serve the turn :
My youth can better spare my blood than you ;
And therefore mine shall save my brother's lives.

Mar. Which of your hands hath not defended
Rome,
And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe,
Writing destruction on the enemy's castle ?
O, none of both but are of high desert :
My hand hath been but idle ; let it serve
To ransom my two nephews from their death ;
Then have I kept it to a worthy end.

Aar. Nay, come agree, whose hand shall go along,
For fear they die before their pardon come.

Mar. My hand shall go.

Luc. By heaven, it shall not go.

Tit. Sirs, strive no more ; such wither'd herbs as these
Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.

Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy
son,
Let me redeem my brothers both from death.

Mar. And, for our father's sake, and mother's care,
Now let me show a brother's love to thee.

Tit. Agree between you ; I will spare my hand.

Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe.

Mar. But I will use the axe.

[Exeunt LUCIUS and MARCUS.]

Tit. Come hither, Aaron ; I'll deceive them
both ;
Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.

Aar. If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest,
And never, whilst I live, deceive men so :—
But I'll deceive you in another sort, [Aside.]
And that you'll say, ere half an hour can pass.
[He cuts off TITUS' Hand.]

Enter LUCIUS and MARCUS.

Tit. Now, stay your strife ; what shall be, is despatch'd.—

Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand :
Tell him, it was a hand that warded him
From thousand dangers ; bid him bury it ;
More hath it merited, that let it have.
As for my sons, say, I account of them
As jewels purchas'd at an easy price ;
And yet dear too, because I bought mine own.

Aar. I go, Andronicus : and for thy hand,
Look by and by to have thy sons with thee :—
Their heads, I mean.—O, how this villany
[Aside.]

Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it !
Let fools do good, and fair men call for grace,
Aaron will have his soul black like his face.
[Exit.]

Tit. O, here I lift this one hand up to heaven,
And bow this feeble ruin to the earth :
If any power pities wretched tears, [me ?]
To that I call ;—What, wilt thou kneel with
[To LAVINIA.]

Do then, dear heart ; for heaven shall hear our prayers ;

(Or with our sighs we'll breathe the welkin dim,
And stain the sun with fog, as sometime clouds,
When they do hug him in their melting bosoms.

Mar. O! brother, speak with possibilities,
And do not break into these deep extremes.

Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottom ?

Then be my passions * bottomless with them.

Mar. But yet let reason govern thy lament.

Tit. If there were reason for these miseries,

Then into limits could I bind my woes :
When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth o'erflow ?

If the winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad,
Threat'ning the welkin with his big-swollen
face ?

And wilt thou have a reason for this coil ? *
I am the sea ; hark, how her sighs do blow !
She is the weeping welkin, I the earth :
Then must my sea be moved with her sighs ;
Then must my earth with her continual tears
Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd :
For why ? my bowels cannot hide her woes,
But like a drunkard must I vomit them.
Then give me leave ; for losers will have leave
To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.

Enter a MESSENGER, with two Heads and a Hand.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid
For that good hand thou sent'st the emperor.
Here are the heads of thy two noble sons ;
And here's thy hand, in scorn to thee sent
back ;
Thy griefs their sports, thy resolution mock'd :
That woe is me to think upon thy woes,
More than remembrance of my father's death.

[Exit.]

Mar. Now let hot Ætna cool in Sicily,
And be my heart an ever-burning hell !
These miseries are more than may be borne !
To weep with them that weep doth ease some
But sorrow flouted at is double death. [deal,]
Luc. Ah, that this sight should make so deep a wound,

And yet detested life not shrink thereat !
That ever death should let life bear his name,
Where life hath no more interest but to breathe !
[LAVINIA kisses him.]

Mar. Alas, poor heart, that kiss is comfort-
As frozen water to a starved snake. [less,]

Tit. When will this fearful slumber have an end ?

Mar. Now, farewell, flattery : Die, Andro-nicus ; [heads ;]
Thou dost not slumber : see, thy two sons'
Thy warlike hand ; thy mangled daughter here ;
Thy other banish'd son, with this dear sight
Struck pale and bloodless ; and thy brother, I,
Even like a stony image, cold and numb.

Ah! now no more will I control thy griefs :
Rent off thy silver hair, thy other hand [sight
Gnawing with thy teeth ; and be this dismal
The closing up of our most wretched eyes !
Now is a time to storm ; why art thou still ?

Tit. Ha, ha, ha!

Mar. Why dost thou laugh ? it fits not with this hour.

Tit. Why, I have not another tear to shed :
Besides this sorrow is an enemy,
And would usurp upon my watery eyes,
And make them blind with tributary tears ;
Then which way shall I find revenge's cave ?
For these two heads do seem to speak to me ;
And threat me, I shall never come to bliss,
Till all these mischiefs be return'd again,
Even in their throats that have committed them.
Come, let me see what task I have to do.—
You heavy people, circle me about ;
That I may turn me to each one of you,
And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs.
The vow is made.—Come, brother, take a head ;
And in this hand the other will I bear :
Lavinia, thou shalt be employed in these
things ;

Bear thou my hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth.

As for thee, boy, go, get thee from my sight;
Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay:
Hie to the Goths, and raise an army there:
And, if you love me, as I think you do,
Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do.

[Exit TITUS, MARCUS, and LAVINIA.]

Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father;

The woeful'st man that ever liv'd in Rome!
Farewell, proud Rome! till Lucius come again,
He leaves his pledges dearer than his life.

Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister;
O, 'would thou wert as thou 'tofore hast been!
But now nor Lucius, nor Lavinia lives,
But in oblivion, and hateful griefs.

If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs;
And make proud Saturninus and his empress
Beg at the gates, like Tarquin and his queen.
Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power,
To be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Room in TITUS' House.—
A Banquet set out.

Enter TITUS, MARCUS, LAVINIA, and young
LUCIUS, a boy.

Tit. So, so; now sit: and look, you eat no more Than will preserve just so much strength in us

As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.
MARCUS, unknit that sorrow-wreathen knot;
Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our hands,

And cannot passionate our tenfold grief
With folded arms. This poor right hand of
Is left to tyrannise upon my breast; [mine
And when my heart, all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh,
Then thus I thump it down.—

Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs!
[To LAVINIA.]

When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating,

Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still.
Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with groans;
Or get some little knife between thy teeth,
And just against thy heart make thou a hole;
That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall,
May run into that sink, and soaking in,
Drown the lamenting fool in sea-salt tears.

Mar. Fie, brother, fie! teach her not thus to Such violent hands upon her tender life. [lay

Tit. How now! has sorrow made thee dote already?

Why, MARCUS, no man should be mad but I.
What violent hands can she lay on her life!
Ah, wherefore dost thou urge the name of hands;—

To bid Æneas tell the tale twice o'er,
How Troy was burnt, and he made miserable?
O, handle not the theme, to talk of hands;
Lest we remember still, that we have none.—

Fie, fie, how frantically I square my talk!
As if we should forget we had no hands,
If MARCUS did not name the word of hands!—
Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this:—
Here is no drink! Hark, MARCUS, what she says;—

I can interpret all her martyr'd signs;—
She says, she drinks no other drink but tears,
Brew'd with her sorrows, mesh'd upon her cheeks:—

Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought;
In thy dumb action will I be as perfect,

* An allusion to brewing.

As begging hermits in their holy prayers:
Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to heaven,

Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,
But I, of these, will wrest an alphabet, [ing.
And, by still* practice, learn to know thy mean-
Boy. Good grandsire, leave these bitter deep laments:

Make my aunt merry with some pleasing tale.

Mar. Alas, the tender boy, in passion mov'd,
Doth weep to see his grandsire's heaviness.

Tit. Peace, tender sapling; thou art made of tears,

And tears will quickly melt thy life away.—

[MARCUS strikes the Dish with a Knife.
What dost thou strike at, MARCUS, with thy knife?

Mar. At that that I have kill'd, my lord; a fly.

Tit. Out on thee, murderer! thou kill'st my heart;

Mine eyes are cloy'd with view of tyranny:
A deed of death, done on the innocent,
Becomes not TITUS' brother: Get thee gone;
I see, thou art not for my company.

Mar. Alas, my lord, I have but kill'd a fly.

Tit. But how, if that fly had a father and mother?

How would he hang his slender gilded wings,
And buz lamenting doings in the air?

Poor harmless fly!
That with his pretty buzzing melody,
Came here to make us merry; and thou hast kill'd him.

Mar. Pardon me, Sir; 'twas a black ill-favour'd fly,

Like to the empress' Moor; therefore I kill'd [him.
Tit. O, O, O,

Then pardon me for reprehending thee,
For thou hast done a charitable deed.
Give me thy knife, I will insult on him;
Flattering myself, as if it were the Moor,
Come hither purposely to poison me.—

There's for thyself, and that's for Tamora.—
Ah, sirrah!†—

Yet I do think we are not brought so low,
But that, between us, we can kill a fly.
That comes in likeness of a coal-black Moor.

Mar. Alas, poor man! grief has so wrought on him,

He takes false shadows for true substances.

Tit. Come, take away.—Lavinia, go with me:
I'll to thy closet; and go read with thee
Sad stories, chanced in the times of old.—

Come, boy, and go with me; thy sight is young.
And thou shalt read, when mine begins to dazzle. [Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same.—Before TITUS' House.

Enter TITUS and MARCUS. Then enter young
LUCIUS, LAVINIA running after him.

Boy. Help, grandsire, help! my aunt Lavinia
Follows me every where, I know not why:—
Good uncle MARCUS, see how swift she comes!
Alas, sweet aunt, I know not what you mean.

Mar. Stand by me, Lucius; do not fear thine aunt.

Tit. She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee harm.

Boy. Ay, when my father was in Rome, she did.

Mar. What means my niece Lavinia by these signs?

* Constant or continual practice

† This was formerly not a disrespectful expression

Tit. Fear her not, Lucius:—Somewhat doth she mean: [thee:

See, Lucius, see, how much she makes of Somewhither would she have thee go with her.

Ah, boy, Cornelia never with more care Read to her sons, than she hath read to thee,

Sweet poetry, and Tully's Orator.* [thus? Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee

Boy. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I guess,

Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her: For I have heard my grandsire say full oft,

Extremity of griefs would make men mad; And I have read that Hecuba of Troy [fear;

Ran mad through sorrow: That made me to Although, my lord, I know, my noble aunt

Loves me as dear as e'er my mother did, And would not, but in fury, fright my youth:

Which made me down to throw my books, and fly; [aunt:

Causeless, perhaps: But pardon me, sweet And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go,

I will most willingly attend your ladyship. Mar. Lucius, I will.

[LAVINIA turns over the Books which LUCIUS has let fall.

Tit. How now, Lavinia?—Marcus, what means this?

Some book there is that she desires to see:—Which is it, girl, of these?—Open them, boy.—

But thou art deeper read, and better skill'd; Come, and take choice of all my library,

And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed.—

Why lifts she up her arms in sequencet thus? Mar. I think, she means, that there was more than one [was:—Confederate in the fact:—Ay, more there

Or else to heaven she heaves them for revenge. Tit. Lucius, what book is that she tosseth so? Boy. Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphosis; My mother gave't me.

Mar. For love of her that's gone, Perhaps she cull'd it from among the rest.

Tit. Soft! see, how busily she turns the Help her:— [leaves!

What would she find?—Lavinia, shall I read? This is the tragic tale of Philomel,

And treats of Tereus' treason, and his rape; And rape, I fear, was root of thine annoy.

Mar. See, brother, see; note, how she quotes† the leaves.

Tit. Lavinia, wert thou thus surpris'd, sweet girl,

Ravish'd and wrong'd, as Philomela was, Forc'd in the ruthless,‡ vast, and gloomy

See, see!— [woods?—Ay, such a place there is, where we did hunt,

(O, had we never, never, hunted there!) Pattern'd by that the poet here describes,

By nature made for murders, and for rapes. Mar. O, why should nature build so foul a den, Unless the gods delight in tragedies!

Tit. Give signs, sweet girl,—for here are none but friends,—

What Roman lord it was durst do the deed: Or slunk not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst,

That left the camp to sin in Lucrece' bed? Mar. Sit down, sweet niece;—brother, sit down by me.—Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury,

Inspire me, that I may this treason find!—

My lord, look here;—Look here, Lavinia: This sandy plot is plain; guide, if thou canst,

This after me, when I have writ my name Without the help of any hand at all.

[He writes his Name with his Staff, and guides it with his Feet and Mouth.

Curs'd be that heart, that forc'd us to this shift!— [last,

Write thou, good niece; and here display, at What God will have discover'd for revenge:

Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain,

That we may know the traitors, and the truth! [She takes the Staff in her Mouth, and guides it with her Stumps, and writes. Tit. O, do you read, my lord, what she hath Stuprum—Chiron—Demetrius. [writ? Mar. What, what!—the lustful sons of Ta-mora Performers of this heinous, bloody deed?

Tit. Magne Dominator poli, Tam lentus audis scelera? tam lentus vides?

Mar. O, calm thee, gentle lord! although, I know,

There is enough written upon this earth, To stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts,

And arm the minds of infants to exclams. My lord, kneel down with me; Lavinia, kneel;

And kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector's hope;

And swear with me,—as with the woful feere,* And father, of that chaste dishonour'd dame,

Lord Junius Brutus sware for Lucrece' rape,— That we will prosecute, by good advice,

Mortal revenge upon these traitorous Goths, And see their blood, or die with this reproach.

Tit. 'Tis sure enough, an you know how, But if you hurt these bear-whelps, then beware: [once, The dam will wake; and, if she wind you

She's with the lion deeply still in league, And lulls him whilst she playeth on her back,

And, when he sleeps, will she do what she list. You're a young huntsman, Marcus; let it alone; And, come, I will go get a leaf of brass,

And with a gad† of steel will write these words, And lay it by: the angry northern wind

Will blow these sands, like Sybil's leaves, abroad,

And where's your lesson then?—Boy, what say you?

Boy. I say, my lord, that if I were a man, Their mother's bed-chamber should not be safe

Fore these bad-bondmen to the yoke of Rome. Mar. Ay, that's my boy! thy father hath full oft For this ungrateful country done the like.

Boy. And, uncle, so will I, an if I live. Tit. Come, go with me into mine armoury;

Lucius, I'll fit thee; and withal, my boy Shall carry from me to the empress' sons

Presents, that I intend to send them both: Come, come; thou'lt do thy message, wilt thou not? Boy. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms, grandsire. Tit. No, boy, not so; I'll teach thee another course.

Lavinia, come:—Marcus, look to my house; Lucius and I'll go brave it at the court;

Ay, marry, will I, Sir: and we'll be waited on. [Exeunt TITUS, LAVINIA, and BOY

Mar. O heavens, can you hear a good man groan,

* Tully's Treatise on Eloquence, entitled Orator.

† Succession. ‡ To quote is to observe. § Filices.

* Husband.

† The point of a spear.

And not relent, or not compassion him?
 Marcus, attend him in his ecstasy;
 That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart,
 Than foo-men's marks upon his batter'd shield:
 But yet so just, that he will not revenge:—
 Revenge the heavens for old Andronicus!

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—The same.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter AARON, CHIRON, and DEMETRIUS, at one Door; at another Door, young LUCIUS, and an Attendant, with a Bundle of Weapons, and Verses writ upon them.

Chi. Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius;
 He hath some message to deliver to us.

Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather.

Boy. My lords, with all the humbleness I may,
 I greet your honours from Andronicus;—
 And pray the Roman gods, confound you both.

[Aside.]

Dem. Gramercy,* lovely Lucius: What's the news?

Boy. That you are both decipher'd, that's the news,
 For villains mark'd with rape. [Aside.] May it please you,

My grandsire, well-advis'd, hath sent by me
 The goodliest weapons of his armoury,
 To gratify your honourable youth,
 The hope of Rome; for so he bade me say;
 And so I do, and with his gifts present
 Your lordships, that whenever you have need,
 You may be armed and appointed well:
 And so I leave you both, [Aside.] like bloody villains. [Exeunt Boy and Attendant.]

Dem. What's here? A scroll; and written round about?

Let's see;

*Integer vitæ, scelerisque purus,
 Non eget Mauri jaculis, nec arcu.*

Chi. O, 'tis a verse in Horace; I know it
 I read it in the grammar long ago. [well:]

Aar. Ay, just!—a verse in Horace:—right, you have it.—

Now, what a thing it is to be an ass! [Aside.]
 Here's no sound jest! the old man hath found their guilt; [lines]

And sends the weapons wrapp'd about with
 That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quick.
 But were our witty empress well-a-foot,
 She would applaud Andronicus' conceit.
 But let her rest in her unrest awhile.—

And now, young lords, was't not a happy star
 Led us to Rome, strangers, and, more than so,
 Captives, to be advanced to this height?
 It did me good, before the Palace gate
 To brave the tribune in his brother's hearing.

Dem. But me more good, to see so great a Basely insinuate, and send us gifts. [lord]

Aar. Had he not reason, lord Demetrius?
 Did you not use his daughter very friendly?

Dem. I would we had a thousand Roman dames

At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust.

Chi. A charitable wish, and full of love.

Aar. Here lacks but your mother for to say amen.

Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand more.

Dem. Come, let us go; and pray to all the
 For our beloved mother in her pains. [gods]

Aar. Pray to the devils; the gods have given us o'er. [Aside. Flourish.]

Dem. Why do the emperor's trumpets sound
 thus?

Chi. Belike, for joy the emperor hath a son.
 Dem. Soft; who comes here?

Enter a Nurse, with a Black-a-moor Child in her Arms.

Nur. Good morrow, lords:

O, tell me, did you see Aaron the Moor.

Aar. Well, more, or less, or ne'er a whit at
 all,

Here Aaron is: and what with Aaron now?

Nur. O gentle Aaron, we are all undone!
 Now help, or woe betide thee evermore!

Aar. Why, what a caterwauling dost thou keep! [nur:]

What dost thou wrap and fumble in this?

Nur. O, that which I would hide from he-ven's eye, [grac:]

Our empress' shame, and stately Rome's dis-
 She is deliver'd, lords, she is deliver'd.

Aar. To whom?

Nur. I mean, she's brought to bed.

Aar. Well, God

Give her good rest! What hath he sent her?

Nur. A devil.

Aar. Why then she's the devil's dam; a joyful issue.

Nur. A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful issue:

Here is the babe, as loathsome as a toad
 Amongst the fairest breeders of our clime.
 The empress sends it thee, thy stamp, thy seal,
 And bids thee christen it with thy dagger's point.

Aar. Out, out, you whore! is black so fair
 a hue?— [sur.]

Sweet blowse, you are a beautiful blossom.

Dem. Villain, what hast thou done?

Aar. Done! that which thou
 Canst not undo.

Chi. Thou hast undone our mother.

Aar. Villain, I have done thy mother.

Dem. And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone. [choice:]

Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed
 Accurs'd the offspring of so foul a fiend!

Chi. It shall not live.

Aar. It shall not die.

Nur. Aaron it must: the mother wills it so

Aar. What, must it, nurse? then let no man
 Do execution on my flesh and blood. [bat I]

Dem. I'll broach† the tadpole on my rapier's point; [patch it]

Nurse, give it me; my sword shall soon des-

Aar. Sooner this sword shall plough thy bowels up,

[Takes the Child from the Nurse and draws.] Stay, murderous villains! will you kill your brother?

Now, by the burning tapers of the sky,
 That shone so brightly when this boy was got,
 He dies upon my scimitar's sharp point,
 That touches this my first-born son and heir!
 I tell you, younglings, not Enceladus,†
 With all his threat'ning band of Typhon's brood,

Nor great Alcides,‡ nor the god of war,
 Shall seize this prey out of his father's hands.
 What, what; ye sanguine, shallow-hearted boys! [signs:]

Ye white-lim'd walls! ye alehouse painted
 Coal black is better than another hue,
 In that it scorns to bear another hue:

* Spit.

† A giant, the son of Titan and Terra.
 ‡ Hercules.

* I. e. Grand merci: great thanks.

For all the water in the ocean
Can never turn a swan's black legs to white,
Although she lave them hourly in the flood.
Tell the empress from me, I am of age
To keep mine own; excuse it how she can.

Dem. Wilt thou betray thy noble mistress
thus?

Aar. My mistress is my mistress; this, myself;

The vigour, and the picture of my youth:
This, before all the world, do I prefer;
This maugre* all the world, will I keep safe,
Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome.

Dem. By this our mother is for ever sham'd.

Chi. Rome will despise her for this foul escape.

Nur. The emperor, in his rage, will doom
her death.

Chi. I blush to think upon this ignomy.†

Aar. Why, there's the privilege your beauty bears:

Fie, treacherous hue! that will betray with blushing

The close enacts and counsels of the heart!
Here's a young lad fram'd of another leer:‡
Look, how the black slave smiles upon the
father;

As who should say, Old lad, I am thine own.
He is your brother, lords; sensibly fed
Of that self-blood that first gave life to you;
And, from that womb, where you imprison'd
He is enfranchised and come to light: [were,
Nay, he's your brother by the surer side,
Although my seal be stamped in his face.

Nur. Aaron, what shall I say unto the empress?

Dem. Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be
done,

And we will all subscribe to thy advice;
Save thou the child, so we may all be safe.

Aar. Then sit we down, and let us all consult.

My son and I will have the wind of you:
Keep there: Now talk at pleasure of your safety. [They sit on the Ground.

Dem. How many women saw this child of his?

Aar. Why, so, brave lords; When we all join in league,

I am a lamb: but if you brave the Moor,
The chafed boar, the mountain lioness,
The ocean swells not so as Aaron storms.—
But, say again, how many saw the child?

Nur. Cornelia the midwife, and myself,
And no one else, but the deliver'd empress.

Aar. The empress, the midwife, and yourself:

Two may keep counsel, when the third's away:
Go to the empress; tell her, this I said:—

[Slabbing her.

Weke, weke!—so cries a pig prepar'd to the
spit.

Dem. What mean'st thou, Aaron? Wherefore didst thou this?

Aar. O, lord, Sir, 'tis a deed of policy:
Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours?

A long-tongu'd babbling gossip? no, lords, no.
And now be it known to you my full intent.

Not far, one Muliteus lives, my countryman,
His wife but yesternight was brought to bed;
His child is like to her, fair as you are:

Go pack§ with him, and give the mother gold,
And tell them both the circumstance of all;
And how by this their child shall be advanc'd

And be received for the emperor's heir,
And substituted in the place of mine,
To calm this tempest whirling in the court;
And let the emperor dandle him for his own.
Hark ye, lords, ye see, that I have given her physic, [Pointing to the Nurse.

And you must needs bestow her funeral;
The fields are near, and you are gallant grooms:
This done, see that you take no longer days,
But send the midwife presently to me.

The midwife, and the nurse, well made away,
Then let the ladies tattle what they please.

Chi. Aaron, I see, thou wilt not trust the air
With secrets.

Dem. For this care of Tamora,
Herself, and hers, are highly bound to thee.

[Exit DEM. and CHI. bearing off the Nurse.

Aar. Now to the Goths, as swift as swallow
flies;

There to dispose this treasure in mine arms,
And secretly to greet the empress' friends.—
Come on, you thick-lipp'd slave, I'll bear you
hence;

For it is you that puts us to our shifts:
I'll make you feed on berries, and on roots,
And feed on curds and whey, and suck the goat,

And cabin in a cave; and bring you up
To be a warrior, and command a camp. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The same.—A Public Place.

Enter TITUS, bearing Arrows, with Letters at the ends of them; with him MARCUS, young LUCIUS, and other Gentlemen, with Bows.

Tit. Come, Marcus, come;—Kinsmen, this is the way:—

Sir boy, now let me see your archery;
Look ye draw home enough, and 'tis there
Terras Astræa reliquit: [straight:

Be you remember'd, Marcus, she's gone, she's fled. [shall

Sir, take you to your tools. You, cousins,
Go sound the ocean, and cast your nets;
Happily you may find her in the sea;
Yet there's as little justice as at land:—

No; Publius and Sempronius, you must do it;
'Tis you must dig with mattock, and with spade,

And pierce the inmost centre of the earth:
Then, when you come to Pluto's region,
I pray you, deliver him this petition:
Tell him, it is for justice, and for aid:

And that it comes from old Andronicus,
Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.—
Ah, Rome!—Well, well; I made thee miserable,

What time I throw the people's suffrages
On him that thus doth tyrannise o'er me.—
Go, get you gone; and pray be careful all,
And leave you not a man of war unsearch'd;

This wicked emperor may have shipp'd her
hence,

And, kinsmen, then we may go pipe for justice.

Mar. O, Publius, is not this a heavy case,
To see thy noble uncle thus distract?

Pub. Therefore, my lord, it highly us concerns,

By day and night to attend him carefully;
And feed his humour kindly as we may,
Till time beget some careful remedy.

Mar. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy.
Join with the Goths; and with revengeful
war

Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude,
And vengeance on the traitor Sabinus.

* In spite of. † I. e. Ignominy. ‡ Complexion.
§ Contrive, bargain with.

Well may'st thou know her by thy own portion,

For up and down she doth resemble thee
I pray thee, do on them some violent deed
They have been violent to me and mine.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us; this we do.

But would it please thee, good Andronicus
To send for Lucius, thy thrice valiant son
Who leads towards Rome a band of war
Goths,

And bid him come and banquet at thy house
When he is here, even at thy solemn feast
I will bring in the empress and her sons,
The emperor himself, and all thy foes;
And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel
And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart
What says Andronicus to this device?

Tit. Marcus, my brother!—'tis sad calls.

Enter Marcus.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius
Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths
Bid him repair to me, and bring with him
Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths
Bid him encamp his soldiers where they lie
Tell him, the emperor and the empress to Feast at my house: and he shall feast
them.

This do thou for my love; and so let him,
As he regards his aged father's life.

Mar. This will I do, and soon return again.

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business
And take my ministers along with me.

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder
with me;

(Or else I'll call my brother back again,
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.

Tam. What say you, boys? will you avenge
with him,

Whiles I go tell my lord the emperor,
How I have govern'd our determin'd jest!
Yield to his humour, smooth and speak fair, [A

And tarry with him, till I come again.

Tit. I know them all, though they suppose me mad;

And will o'er-reach them in their own device.
A pair of cursed hell-hounds, and their dogs
[A

Dem. Madam, depart at pleasure, leave
here.

Tam. Farewell, Andronicus: Revenge
To lay a complot to betray thy foes. [E

[Exit TAMAR]

Tit. I know thou dost; and, sweet Revenge,
farewell.

Chi. Tell us, old man, how shall we be ploy'd?

Tit. Tut, I have work enough for you to do
Publius, come hither, Caius, and Valentinus

Enter Publius, and others.

Pub. What's your will?

Tit. Know you these two?

Pub. Th' empress' sons,
I take them, Chiron and Demetrius.

Tit. Fie, Publius, fie! thou art too much
ceiv'd;

The one is Murder, Rape is the other's name
And therefore bind them, gentle Publius;
Caius, and Valentine, lay hands on them:
Oft have you heard me wish for such an hour
And now I find it; therefore bind them!

Till he be brought unto the empress' face,
For testimony of her foul proceedings:
And see the ambush of our friends be strong:
I fear, the emperor means no good to us.

Aer. Some devil whisper curses in mine ear,
And prompt me, that my tongue may utter
forth

The venomous malice of my swelling heart!

Luc. Away, inhuman dog! unhallow'd
slave!—

Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in.—

[Exeunt GOTHs, with AARON. Flourish.
The trumpets show, the emperor is at hand.

Enter SATURNINUS and TAMORA, with Tribunes,
Senators, and others.

Sat. What, hath the firmament more suns than one?

Luc. What boots* it thee, to call thyself a sun?

Mar. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break†
the parle;

These quarrels must be quietly debated.

The feast is ready, which the careful Titus
Hath ordain'd to an honourable end, [Rome:
For peace, for love, for league, and good to Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your places.

Sat. Marcus, we will.

[Hautboys sound. The Company sit down at Table.

Enter TITUS, dressed like a Cook, LAVINIA, veiled, young LUCIUS, and others. TITUS places
the Dishes on the Table.

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord: welcome,
dread queen;

Welcome, ye warlike Goths; welcome, Lucius;
And welcome, all: although the cheer be poor,
'Twill fill your stomachs; please you eat of it.

Sat. Why art thou thus attir'd, Andronicus?

Tit. Because I would be sure to have all
well,

To entertain your highness, and your empress.

Tam. We are beholden to you, good An-dronicus.

Tit. An if your highness knew my heart, you were.

My lord the emperor, resolve me this;

Was it well done of rash Virginus,
To slay his daughter with his own right hand,
Because she was enforc'd, stain'd, and deflower'd?

Sat. It was, Andronicus.

Tit. Your reason, mighty lord!

Sat. Because the girl should not survive her shame,

And by her presence still renew his sorrows.

Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual;
A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant,
For me, most wretched to perform the like:—
Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee;

[He kills LAVINIA.

And, with thy shame, thy father's sorrow die!

Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural, and unkind?

Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made me blind.

I am as woful as Virginus was: [he
And have a thousand times more cause than
To do this outrage; and it is now done.

Sat. What, was she ravished? tell, who did the deed.

Tit. Will't please you eat? will't please your highness feed?

Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus?

Tit. Not I; 'twas Chiron, and Demetrius:
They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue,
And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.

Sat. Go, fetch them hither to us presently.

Tit. Why, there they are both, baked in that pye;

Whereof their mother daintily hath fed,

Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred.

'Tis true, 'tis true; witness my knife's sharp point. [Killing TAMORA.

deed. [Killing TITUS.

People in confusion disperse. MARCUS,
LUCIUS, and their Partisans ascend the Steps before Titus' House.

Mar. You sad-fac'd men, people and sons of Rome,

By uproar sever'd, like a flight of fowl
Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts,

O, let me teach you how to knit again

This scatter'd corn into one mutual sheaf,
These broken limbs again into one body.

Sen. Lest Rome herself be bane unto her-
self;

And she, whom mighty kingdoms court'sy to,

Like a forlorn and desperate cast-away,

Do shameful execution on herself.

But if my frosty signs and chaps of age,

Grave witnesses of true experience,

Cannot induce you to attend my words,—

Speak, Rome's dear friend; [To LUCIUS.] as erst our ancestor,

When with his solemn tongue he did discourse,

To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear,

The story of that baleful burning night,

When subtle Greeks surpris'd king Priam's

Troy;

Tell us, what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears,

Or who hath brought the fatal engine in,

That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil

wound.—

My heart is not compact of flint, nor steel;

Nor can I utter all our bitter grief,

But floods of tears will drown my oratory,

And break my very utterance; even i'the time

When it should move you to attend me most.

Lending your kind commiseration:

Here is a captain, let him tell the tale;

Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him

speak.

Luc. Then, noble auditory, be it known to

That cursed Chiron and Demetrius [you,

Were they that murdered our emperor's brother;

And they it were that ravished our sister:

For their fell faults our brothers were beheaded;

[Our father's tears despis'd; and basely cozen'd

Of that true hand, that fought Rome's quarrel

And sent her enemies unto the grave. [out,

Lastly, myself unkindly banished, [out,

The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping

To beg relief among Rome's enemies;

Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears,

And op'd their arms to embrace me as a friend:

And I am the turn'd-forth, be it known to you,

That have preserv'd her welfare in my blood;

And from her bosom took the enemy's point,

Sheathing the steel in my advent'rous body.

Alas! you know, I am no vaunter, I;

* Advantage, benefit.

† I. e. Begin the parley.

My scars can witness, dumb although the
That my report is just, and full of truth.
But, soft; methinks, I do digress too much
Citing my worthless praise: O, pardon me
For when no friends are by, men praise
selves.

Mar. Now is my turn to speak; Behold
child,

[Pointing to the Child in the arms of a tendant.

(Of this was Tamora delivered;
The issue of an irreligious Moor,
Chief architect and plotter of these woes
The villain is alive in Titus' house,
Damn'd as he is, to witness this is true.
Now judge, what cause had Titus to rev
These wrongs, unspeakable, past patience
Or more than any living man could bear.
Now you have heard the truth, what say
Romans?

Have we done aught amiss? Show us where
And, from the place where you behold us
The poor remainder of Andronici
Will, hand in hand, all headlong cast us down
And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains
And make a mutual closure of our house.
Speak, Romans, speak; and, if you say
shall,

Lo, hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall.

Emil. Come, come, thou reverend man
Rome,

And bring our emperor gently in thy hand
Lucius our emperor; for, well I know,
The common voice do cry, it shall be so.

Rom. [Several speak.] Lucius, all hail
Rome's royal emperor!

Lucius, &c. descend.

Mar. Go, go into old Titus' sorrowful house

[To an Attendant

And hither hale that misbelieving Moor,
To be adjudg'd some direful slaughtering
death,

As punishment for his most wicked life.

Rom. [Several speak.] Lucius, all hail
Rome's gracious governor!

Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans; May I go
so,

To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away
But, gentle people, give me time awhile,—
For nature puts me to a heavy task;—
Stand all aloof:—but, uncle, draw you near
To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk:
O, take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lip

[Kisses Titus

These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stained
The last true duties of thy noble son! [Exit

SCENE, dispersedly in various countries.*

* That the reader may know through how many regions the scene of this drama is dispersed, it is necessary to observe, that Antioch was the metropolis of Syria; Tyre a city of Phenicia in Asia; Tarsus, the metropolis of Cilicia, a country of Asia Minor; Mitylene, the capital of Lesbos, an Island in the Egean sea; and Ephesus, the capital of Ionia, a country of the Lesser Asia.

From the Palace of Antioch.

Song of old† was sung,
As ancient Gower is come;
Man's infirmities,
Our ear, and please your eyes.
As sung at festivals,
At feasts, and holy ales;†
And ladies of their lives
For restoratives:
To make men glorious;
quius, eo melius.
In these latter times,
As more ripe, accept my rhymes,
To hear an old man sing,
Or wishes pleasure bring,
And wish, and that I might
Or you, like taper-light.—
Then, Antioch the great

In all Syria;
What mine authors say:)
Into him took a pheere,§
And left a female heir,
Blithe, and full of face,
Had lent her all his grace;
As the father liking took,
Incest did provoke:
To entice his own
Could be done by none.

Was, with long use, account^d no sin.
The beauty of this sinful dame
Made many princes thither frame,
To seek her as a bed-fellow,
In marriage-pleasures play-fellow:
Which to prevent, he made a law,
(To keep her still, and men in awe,)†
That whoso ask'd her for his wife,
His riddle told not, lost his life:
So for her many a wight did die,
As yon grim looks do testify.†
What now ensues, to the judgement of

On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.
Antioch, farewell! for wisdom sees, those men
Blush not in actions blacker than the night,
Will shun no course to keep them from the light,

One sin, I know, another doth provoke;
Murder's as near to lust, as flame to smoke.
Poison and treason are the hands of sin,
Ay, and the targets, to put off the shame:
Then, lest my life be cropp'd to keep you clear,
By flight I'll shun the danger which I fear.

[Exit.

Re-enter ANTIOCHUS.

Ant. He hath found the meaning, for the
which we mean
To have his head.

He must not live to trumpet forth my infamy,
Nor tell the world, Antiochus doth sin
In such a loathed manner:

And therefore instantly this prince must die;
For by his fall my honour must keep high.
Who attends on us there?

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. Doth your highness call?

Ant. Thaliard, you're of our chamber, and our mind

Partakes her private actions to your secrecy;
And for your faithfulness we will advance you.
Thaliard, behold, here's poison, and here's
gold;

We hate the prince of Tyre, and thou must kill him;

It fits thee not to ask the reason why,
Because we bid it. Say, is it done?

Thal. My lord,
'Tis done.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Ant. Enough; [haste.
Lest your breath cool yourself, telling your Mess. My lord, prince Pericles is fled.

[Exit MESSENGER.

Ant. As thou
Wilt live, fly after: and, as an arrow, shot
From a well experienc'd archer, hits the mark
His eye doth level at, so ne'er return,
Unless thou say, Prince Pericles is dead.

Thal. My lord, if I
Can get him once within my pistol's length,
I'll make him sure: so farewell to your highness. [Exit.

Ant. Thaliard, adieu! till Pericles be dead,
My heart can lend no succour to my head.
[Exit.

SCENE II.—Tyre.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter PERICLES, HELICANUS, and other Lords.

Per. Let none disturb us: Why this charge of thoughts?

The sad companion, dull-ey'd melancholy,
By me so us'd a guest is, not an hour,
In the day's glorious walk, or peaceful night,
(The tomb where grief should sleep,) can breed me quiet!

Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes
shun them,

And danger, which I feared, is at Antioch,
Whose arm seems far too short to hit me here:
Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits,
Nor yet the other's distance comfort me.

Then it is thus: the passions of the mind,
That have their first conception by mis-dread,
Have after-nourishment and life by care;
And what was first but fear what might be
done,

Grows elder now, and cares it be not done.
And so with me;—the great Antiochus (Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
Since he's so great, can make his will his act,)
Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence;

Nor boots it me to say, I honour him,
If he suspect I may dishonour him:

And what may make him blush in being known, [known;

He'll stop the course by which it might be
With hostile forces he'll o'erspread the land,
And with the ostent of war will look so huge,
Amazement shall drive courage from the state;
Our men be vanquish'd, ere they do resist,
And subjects punish'd, that ne'er thought of fence:

Which care of them, not pity of myself,
(Who am no more but as the tops of trees,
Which fence the roots they grow by, and defend them,)

Makes both my body pine, and soul to languish,
And punish that before, that he would punish.

1 Lord. Joy and all comfort in your sacred breast!

2 Lord. And keep your mind, till you return
Peaceful and comfortable! [to us,

Hel. Peace, peace, my lords, and give experience tongue.

They do abuse the king, that flatter him:
For flattery is the bellows blows up sin;
The thing the which is flatter'd, but a spark,
To which that breath gives heat and stronger glowing;

Whereas reproof, obedient, and in order,
Fits kings, as they are men, for they may err.
When signior Sooth here does proclaim a peace,
He flatters you, makes war upon your life:
Prince, pardon me, or strike me, if you please;
I cannot be much lower than my knees.

Per. All leave us else; but let your cares

What shipping and what lading's in our haven,
And then return to us. [Exit LORDS.] Helicanus, thou

Hast moved us: what seest thou in our looks?

Hel. An angry brow, dread lord.

Per. If there be such a dart in princes' frowns?

How durst thy tongue move anger to our face?

They have their nourishment?

Per. Thou speak'st like a physician, Heli-
Who minister'st a potion unto me, [canus;
That thou would'st tremble to receive thyself.
Attend me then: I went to Antioch, [death,
Where, as thou know'st, against the face of
I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty,
From whence an issue I might propagate,
Bring arms to princes, and to subjects joys.
Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder;
The rest (hark in thine ear,) as black as incest:

Which, by my knowledge found, the sinful father

Seem'd not to strike, but smooth: but thou know'st this,

'Tis time to fear, when tyrants seem to kiss. Which fear so grew in me, I hither fled, Under the covering of a careful night, (here, Who seem'd my good protector; and being Bethought me what was past, what might succeed.

I knew him tyrannous; and tyrants' fears Decrease not, but grow faster than their years: And should he doubt it, (as no doubt he doth,) That I should open to the listening air, How many worthy princes' bloods were shed, To keep his bed of blackness unalaid ope,— To lop that doubt, he'll fill this land with arms, And make pretence of wrong that I have done him;

When all, for mine, if I may call't offence, Must feel war's blow, who spares not innocence.

Which love to all (of which thyself art one, Who now reprov'st me for it)——

Hel. Alas, Sir!

Per. Drew sleep out of mine eyes, blood from my cheeks,

Mixings into my mind, a thousand doubts How I might stop this tempest, ere it came; And finding little comfort to relieve them, I thought it princely charity to grieve them.

Hel. Well, my lord, since you have given me leave to speak, Freely I'll speak. Antiochus you fear, And justly too, I think, you fear the tyrant, Who either by public war, or private treason, Will take away your life.

Therefore, my lord, go travel for a while, Till that his rage and anger be forgot, Or Destinies do cut his thread of life.

Your rule direct to any; if to me, Day serves not light more faithful than I'll be.

Per. I do not doubt thy faith;

But should be wrong my liberties in absence——

Hel. We'll mingle bloods together in the earth

From whence we had our being and our birth.

Per. Tyre, I now look from thee then, and to Tharsus

Intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee; And by whose letters I'll dispose myself.

The care I had and have of subjects' good, On thee I lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it.

I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath; Who shuns not to break one, will sure crack both:

But in our orbs* we'll live so round and safe, That time of both this truth shall ne'er convince,†

Thou show'st a subject's shine, I a true prince. [Exeunt]

SCENE III.—Tyre.—An Ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. So, this is Tyre, and this is the court. Here must I kill king Pericles; and if I do not, I am sure to be hanged at home: 'tis dangerous.—Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets. Now do I see he had some reason for it: for if a king bid a man be a villain, he is bound by the indenture of his oath to be one.—Hush, here come the lords of Tyre.

Enter HELLICANUS, ESCANUS, and other Lords.

Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre,

Further to question of your king's departure. His seal'd commission, left in trust with me, Doth speak sufficiently, he's gone to travel.

Thal. How! the king gone? [Ash.]

Hel. If further yet you will be satisfied, Why, as it were unlicens'd of your loves, He would depart, I'll give some light unto you. Being at Antioch——

Thal. What from Antioch? [Ash.]

Hel. Royal Antiochus (on what cause I know not,)

Took some displeasure at him; at least he judg'd so:

And doubting lest that he had err'd or mist, To show us sorrow, would correct himself; So puts himself unto the shipman's toil, With whom each minute threatens life or death.

Thal. Well, I perceive [Ash.]

I shall not be hang'd now, although I would; But since he's gone, the king it sure will please,

He reap'd the land, to perish on the sea.— But I'll present me. Peace to the lords of Tyre!

Hel. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome.

Thal. From him I come

With message unto princely Pericles; But, since my landing, as I have understood, Your lord has took himself to unknown travel. My message must return from whence it came.

Hel. We have no reason to desire it, since Commended to our master, not to us: Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire,— As friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre.

§ Blessing.

For now the wind begins to blow;
 Thunder above, and deeps below,
 Make such unquiet, that the ship [split;
 Should house him safe, is wreck'd and
 And he, good prince, having all lost,
 By waves from coast to coast is lost:
 All perishes of man, of pelf,
 No aught escapen but himself,
 Till fortune, tir'd with doing bad,
 Threw him ashore, to give him glad:
 And here he comes: what shall be next,
 Pardon old Gower; this 'longs the text.

SCENE I.—Pentapolis.—An open Place by the Sea Side.

Enter PERICLES, wet.

Per. Yet cease your ire, ye angry stars of heaven!
 Wind, rain, and thunder remember, earthly
 Is but a substance that must yield to you;
 And I, as fits my nature, do obey you;
 Alas, the sea hath cast me on the rocks,
 Wast'd me from shore to shore, and left me
 Nothing to think on, but ensuing death:
 Let it suffice the greatness of your powers,
 To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes;
 And having thrown him from your wat'ry
 Here to have death in peace, is all he'll crave.

Enter three FISHERMEN.

1 Fish. What, ho, Pilche!

2 Fish. Ho! come, and bring away the nets.

1 Fish. What Patch-breech, I sh—

2 Fish. What say you, master

1 Fish. Look how thou stirrest now! come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wannon.

3 Fish. Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men that were cast away before us, even now.

1 Fish. Alas, poor souls, it griev'd my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us, to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.

3 Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much, when I saw the porpus, how he bounced and umbled—hey sa—y are half fish, half fles—a plague on them, they e'er come, but I look to be wash'd. Master I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.

1 Fish. Why as men do a-land, the great ones eat up the little ones. I can compare our rich misers to not and so fit y as to a whale—a plays and tumbles, driving the poor ry before him, and at last devours them at a mouthful. Such whales have I heard on a'the land, who never leave gaping, till they've swallow'd the whole parish, church, steeple, bells, and all.

Per. A pretty moral.

3 Fish. But, master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the bellry.

2 Fish. Why, man?

3 Fish. Because he should have swallow'd me too: and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells, that he should never have left, till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish, up again. But if the good king Simonides were of my mind—

Per. Simonides?

3 Fish. We would purge the land of these drones that rob the bee of her honey.

Per. How from the busy subject of the sea

These fishers tell the infirmities of men;

And from their wat'ry empire recollect

All that may men approve, or men detect!

Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.

2 Fish. Honest! good fellow, what's that if it be a day fits you, scratch it out of the calendar, and no body will look after it.

Per. Nay, see, the sea hath cast upon your coast—

2 Fish. What a drunken knave was the man to cast thee in our way

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind.

In that vast tennis-court, hath made the ball For them to play upon—entreats you pity him. He asks of you, that never us'd to beg.

1 Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg? but them in our country of Greece, gets more with begging, than we can do with working.

2 Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes then?

Per. I never practis'd it.

2 Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve ere it is here's nothing to be got now-a-days, unless thou canst fish for't.

Per. What I have been, I have forgot to know;

But what I am, want teaches me to think: A man shrunk up with cold: my veins are chill,

And have no more of life than may suffice To give my tongue that heat, to ask your aid:

Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead For I am a man, pray see me buried.

1 Fish. Die quoth-a—Now gods forbid! have a gown here—come, put it on: keep thee warm. Now, afore me—a handsome fellow! Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll buy flesh for holidays, fish for fasting-days, and more o'er puddings and flap-jacks,* and—

Per. I thank you, Sir.

2 Fish. Hark you, my friend, you could not beg.

Per. I did but crave.

2 Fish. But crave? Then I'll turn crav—and so I shall scape whipping.

Per. Why, are all your beggars whipp'd then?

2 Fish. O, not all, my friend, not all. If all your beggars were whipp'd, I would not be better off, than to be beadle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net.

[Exit two of the FISHERMEN.]

Per. How well this honest mirth betrays their labour!

1 Fish. Hark you, Sir! do you know where you are?

Per. Not well.

1 Fish. Why, I'll tell you: this is the Pentapolis, and our king, the good Simonides.

Per. The good king Simonides, do you call him?

1 Fish. Ay, Sir, and he deserves to be call'd, for his peaceable reign, and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since from his subjects

He gains the name of good, by his government: How far is his court distant from this shore?

1 Fish. My Sir, half a day's journey, and I'll tell you I have a fair daughter, and to-morrow is her birth-day, and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world, to joust and tourneys for her love.

Per. Did but my fortunes equal my desire, I'd wish to make one there.

* Puddings. † To whip, much upon.

O, Sir, things must be as they may; a man cannot get, he may lawfully his wife's soul.

Two FISHERMEN, drawing up a net.

Help, master, help; here's a fish he net, like a poor man's right in the world hardly come out. Ha! bots on't, at last, and 'tis turn'd to a rusty armour, friends! I pray you, let me see it.

Fortune, yet, that after all my crosses, let me somewhat to repair myself; though it was mine own, part of mine heritage,

My dead father did bequeath to me, in strict charge, (even as he left his by Pericles, it hath been a shield [life,] and death; (and pointed to this race:)*

He sav'd me, keep it; in like necessity, let it protect thee from! it may defend thee. Where I kept, I so dearly lov'd it; though seas, that spare not any man, in a rage, though calm'd, they give't gain:

See for't; my shipwreck's now no ill, give here my father's gift by will.

What mean you, Sir?

I beg of you, kind friends, this coat of worth,

Is sometime target to a king; by this mark. He lov'd me dearly, for his sake, I wish the having of it;

Would you'd guide me to your sovereign's court,

That I may appear a gentleman; at ever my low fortunes better, your bounties; till then, rest your debtor.

Why, wilt thou tourney for the lady? to show the virtue I have borne in arms.

Why, do ye take it, and the gods good on't!

Ay, but hark you, my friend; 'twas made up this garment through the arms of the waters: there are certain rents, certain veils. I hope, Sir, if ye, you'll remember from whence you believe't, I will.

For your furtherance, I am cloth'd in steel;

Of all the rapture of the sea,

It holds his bidding on my arm;

Of value will I mount myself

For ourser, whose delightful steps

Te the gazer joy to see him tread.—

My friend, I yet am unprovided

Of bases.†

We'll sure provide: thou shalt have

Gown to make thee a pair; and I'll

Go to the court myself.

When honour be but a goal to my will;

I'll rise, or else add ill to ill.

[Exeunt.]

II.—The same.—A public Way, or street, leading to the Lists. A Partition by way of it, for the reception of the KING, QUEEN, LORDS, &c.

PERICLES, THAISA, LORDS, and Attendants.

Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?

Our for the arm. † Keeping.

‡ A kind of loose breeches.

1 Lord. They are, my liege;

And stay your coming to present themselves.

Sim. Return them, we are ready; and our

daughter,

In honour of whose birth these triumphs are,

Sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature gat

For men to see, and seeing wonder at.

[Exit a Lord.]

Thai. It pleaseth you, my father, to express

My commendations great, whose merit's less.

Sim. 'Tis fit it should be so; for princes are

A model, which heaven makes like to itself:

As jewels lose their glory, if neglected,

So princes their renown, if not respected.

'Tis now your honour, daughter, to explain

The labour of each knight, in his device.†

Thai. Which, to preserve mine honour, I'll perform.

Enter a Knight; he passes over the Stage, and his Squire presents his Shield to the Princess.

Sim. Who is the first that doth present himself?

Thai. A knight of Sparta, my renowned

father;

And the device he bears upon his shield

Is a black Æthiop, reaching at the sun;

The word,‡ Lux tua vita mihi.

Sim. He loves you well, that holds his life of you. [The second Knight passes.]

Who is the second, that presents himself?

Thai. A prince of Macedon, my royal father;

And the device he bears upon his shield

Is an arm'd knight, that's conquer'd by a lady:

The motto thus, in Spanish, Piu per dulçura,

que per fuerça.|| [The third Knight passes.]

Sim. And what's the third?

Thai. The third, of Antioch;

And his device, a wreath of chivalry:

The word, Me pompa prærexit apex.

[The fourth Knight passes.]

Sim. What is the fourth?

Thai. A burning torch, that's turned upside down;

The word, Quod me alit, me extinguit.

Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will,

Which can as well inflame, as it can kill.

[The fifth Knight passes.]

Thai. The fifth, a hand environed with clouds; [tried:]

Holding out gold, that's by the touchstone

The motto thus, Sic spectanda fides.

[The sixth Knight passes]

Sim. And what's the sixth and last, which the knight himself

With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd?

Thai. He seems a stranger; but his present is

A wither'd branch, that's only green at top;

The motto, In hac spe vivo.

Sim. A pretty moral;

From the dejected state wherein he is,

He hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish.

1 Lord. He had need mean better than his outward show

Can any way speak in his just commend:

For, by his rusty outside, he appears

To have practis'd more the whipstock,¶ than the lance.

2 Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes

To an honour'd triumph strangely furnish'd.

* I. e. Return them notice.

† Offer. ‡ The motto.

than by force.

‡ Emblem on a shield.

¶ I. e. More by sweetness

¶ Handle of a whip

3 Lord. And on that purpose let his armour
Until this day, to scour it in the dust. [rust]

Sim. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us own
The outward habit by the inward man.
But stay, the knights are coming; we'll withdraw.

Into the gallery. [Exeunt.
[Great shouts, and all cry, The mean knight!]

SCENE III.—The same.—A Hall of State.—
A Banquet prepared.

Enter SIMONIDES, THANA, LONAS, KNIGHTS,
and Attendants.

Sim. Knights,
To say you are welcome, were superfluous.
To place upon the velvet of your deeds,
As in a title-page, your worth in arms. [St.
Were more than you expect, or more than's
Since every worth in show commends itself.
Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast:
You are my guests.

Thai. But you, my knight and guest;
To whom this wreath of victory I give,
And crown you king of this day's happiness.

Per. 'Tis more by fortune, lady, than my merit.

Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is yours;

And here, I hope, is none that envies it.
In framing artists, art hath thus decreed,
To make some good, but others to exceed;
And you're her labour'd scholar. Come, queen
o' the feast, [place:]

(For, daughter, so you are,) here take your Marshal the rest, as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honour'd much by good Simonides.

Sim. Your presence glads our days; honour
we love,

For who hates honour, hates the gods above.

Merak. Sir, yond's your place.

Per. Some other is more fit.

1 Knight. Contend not, Sir; for we are gentlemen,

That neither in our hearts, nor outward eyes,
Eeny the great, nor do the low despise.

Per. You are right courteous knights.

Sim. Sit, sit, Sir; sit.

Per. By Jove, I wonder, that is king of
thoughts,

These eates resist me,* she not thought upon.

Thai. By Juno, that is queen
Of marriage, all the viands that I eat
Do seem unsavoury, wishing him my meat;
Sure he's a gallant gentleman.

Sim. He's but

A country gentleman;

He has done no more than other knights have Broken a staff, or so; so let it pass. [done;

Thai. To me he seems like diamond to a glass.

Per. You king's to me, like to my father's picture,

Which tells me, in that glory once he was;
Had princes sit, like stars, about his throne,
And he the sun, for them to reverence.
None that beheld him, but like lesser lights,
Did veil their crowns to his supremacy;
Where now his son's a glow-worm in the night,
The which hath fire in darkness, none in light;
Whereby I see that time's the king of men,
For he's their parent, and he is their grave,
And gives them what he will, not what they crave.

Sim. What, are you merry, knights!

* L. c. These delicacies go against my stomach.
† Lower.

1 Knight. Who can be other, in the presence?

Sim. Here, with a cup that's star'd with brim,

(As you do love, fill to your mistress' lip,
We drink this health to you.

Knights. We thank your grace.

Sim. Yet pause a while;

You knight, methinks, doth sit too mute;
As if the entertainment in our court
Had not a show might countervail his wet.
Note it not you, Thanax?

Thai. What is it

To me, my father?

Sim. O, attend, my daughter;

Princes, in this, should live like gods above
Who freely give to every one that comes
To honour them: and princes, not dunces,
Are like to guests, which make a saint, or
Are wonder'd at.

Therefore to make's entrance more seemly,
say,

We drink this standing-bowl of wine to us.

Thai. Alas, my father, it befits not us
Unto a stranger knight to be so bold,
He may my proffer take for an offence.

Since men take women's gifts for impudence.

Sim. How?

Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else.

Thai. Now, by the gods, he could not please me better. [sit]

Sim. And further tell him, we don't
know,

Of whence he is, his name and parentage.

Thai. The king my father, Sir, has drunk to
you.

Per. I thank him.

Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto his life.

Per. I thank both him and you, and pick him freely.

Thai. And further he desires to know of
you,

Of whence you are, your name and parentage.

Per. A gentleman of Tyre—(my name, Peri-
cles,

My education being in arts and arms,)—
Who, looking for adventures in the world,

Was by the rough seas rest of ships and men,
And, after shipwreck, driven upon this shore.

Thai. He thanks your grace; names himself
Pericles.

A gentleman of Tyre, who only by Misfortune of the seas has been bereft
Of ships and men, and cast upon this shore.

Sim. Now, by the gods, I pity his misfortune,

And will awake him from his melancholy
Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles,

And waste the time, which looks for other revels.

Even in your armours, as you are address'd,*
Will very well become a soldier's dance.

I will not have excuse, with saying, this
Loud music is too harsh for ladies' heads;

Since they love men in arms, as well as beds.
[The Knights dance]

So, this was well ask'd, 'twas so well perform'd, Sir; [form'd]

Here is a lady that wants breathing too:

And I have often heard, you knights of Tyre
Are excellent in making ladies trip;

And that their measures are as excellent.

you

To forbear choice i'the absence of your king;

I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.

SCENE V.—Pentapolis.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter SIMONIDES, reading a Letter, the KNIGHTS meet him.

1 Knight. Good morrow to the good Simonides.

Sim. Knights, from my daughter this I let you know,

That for this twelvemonth, she'll not undertake
A married life.

Her reason to herself is only known,
Which from herself by no means can I get.

2 Knight. May we not get access to her, my
lord?

Sim. 'Faith, by no means; she hath so strictly tied her

To her chamber, that it is impossible.

One twelve moons more she'll wear Diana's livery;

This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vow'd,
And on her virgin honour will not break it.

3 Knight. Though loath to bid farewell, we take our leaves. [Exeunt.

Sim. So

They're well despatch'd; now to my daughter's letter: [knight,

She tells me here, she'll wed the stranger
Or never more to view nor day nor light.

Mistress, 'tis well, your choice agrees with
mine;

I like that well:—nay, how absolute she's in't,
Not minding whether I dislike or no!

Well, I commend her choice;

And will no longer have it be delay'd.

Soft, here he comes:—I must dissemble it.

Enter PERICLES.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides!

Sim. To you as much, Sir! I am beholden to you,

For your sweet music this last night: my ears,
I do protest, were never better fed

With such delightful pleasing harmony.

Per. It is your grace's pleasure to commend;
Not my desert.

Sim. Sir, you are music's master.

Per. The worst of all her scholars, my good
lord.

Sim. Let me ask one thing. What do you think, Sir, of

My daughter?

Per. As of a most virtuous princess.

Sim. And she is fair too, is she not?

Per. As a fair day in summer; wondrous.

Sim. My daughter, Sir, thinks very
you;

Ay, so well, Sir, that you must be her
And she'll your scholar be; therefore lo

Per. What's here!

A letter, that she loves the knight of T.
'Tis the king's subtilty, to have my life.

O, seek not to intrap, my gracious lord

A stranger and distressed gentleman,

That never aim'd so high, to love your daughter

But bent all offices to honour her.

Sim. Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter thou art

A villain.

Per. By the gods, I have not, Sir.

Never did thought of mine levy offence

Nor never did my actions yet commence

A deed might gain her love, or you pleasure.

Sim. Traitor, thou liest.

Per. Traitor!

Sim. Ay, traitor, Sir.

Per. Even in his throat, (unless it be the
That calls me traitor, I return the lie.

Sim. Now, by the gods, I do applaud
courage.

Per. My actions are as noble as my throat
That never relish'd of a base descent.

And not to be a rebel to her state;

And he that otherwise accounts of me,

This sword shall prove he's honour's enemy.

sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie, till the ship be cleared of the dead.

Per. That's your superstition.

hath been observed; and we are strong in earnest. Therefore briefly yield her; for she must hatches, caul'd and bitum'd ready.

is this?

3 Sail. We are near Tharsus.

Per. Thither, gentle mariner, Alter thy course for Tyre. When canst thou reach it?

3 Sail. By break of day, if the wind cease.

Per. O make for Tharsus.

There will I visit Cleon, for the babe
Cannot hold out to Tyre; there I'll leave it
At careful nursing. Go thy ways, good mari-[I'll bring the body presently. [ser;

SCENE II.—Ephesus.—A Room in CRRIMON'S
House.

Enter CRRIMON, a SERVANT, and some persons who have been shipwrecked.

Cer. Philemon, ho!

Enter PHILEMON.

Phil. Doth my lord call?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men;
It has been a turbulent and stormy night.

Serv. I have been in many; but such a night
Till now, I ne'er endur'd. [as this,

Cer. Your master will be dead ere you return;

There's nothing can be minister'd to nature,
That can recover him. Give this to the 'pothe-
[And tell me how it works. [cary,

[To PHILEMON.

[Exit PHILEMON, SERVANT, and those who had been shipwrecked.

Enter two GENTLEMEN.

1 Gent. Good morrow, Sir.

2 Gent. Good morrow to your lordship.

Cer. Gentlemen,
Why do you stir so early?

1 Gent. Sir,
Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea,
Shook, as the earth did quake;
The very principals did seem to rend,
And all to topple; pure surprise and fear
Made me to quit the house.

2 Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so
'Tis not our husbandry.† [early;

Cer. O, you say well.

1 Gent. But I much marvel that your lordship, having [hours
Rich tire‡ about you, should at these early
Shake off the golden slumber of repose.
It is most strange,

* Ever-burning.

† The principals are the strongest rafters in the roof of a building.

‡ L. c. Economical prodigance, early rising.

Nature should be so conversant with pain,
Being thereto not compell'd.

Cer. I held it ever,
Virtue and cunning^a were endowments greater
Than nobleness and riches: careless heirs
May the two latter darken and expend;
But immortality attends the former,
Making a man a god. 'Tis known, I ever
Have studied physic, through which secret art,
By turning o'er authorities, I have (Together with my practice,) made familiar
To me and to my aid, the blest infusions
That dwell in vegetives, in metals, stones;
And I can speak of the disturbances
That nature works, and of her cures; which gives me

A more content in course of true delight
Than to be thirsty after tottering honour,
Or tie my treasure up in silken bags,
To please the fool and death.

2 Gent. Your honour has through Ephesus pour'd forth

Your charity, and hundreds call themselves
Your creatures, who by you have been restor'd:
And not your knowledge, personal pain, but even

Your purse, still open, hath built lord Cerimon
Such strong renown as time shall never—

Enter two SERVANTS with a chest.

Serv. So; lift there.

Cer. What is that?

Serv. Sir, even now

Did the sea toss upon our shore this chest;
'Tis of some wreck.

Cer. Set't down, let's look on it.

2 Gent. 'Tis like a coffin, Sir.

Cer. Whate'er it be,

'Tis wondrous heavy. Wrench it open straight;
If the sea's stomach be o'ercharg'd with gold,
It is a good constraint of fortune, that
It belches upon us.

2 Gent. 'Tis so, my lord.

Cer. How close 'tis cank'd and bitum'd!—
Did the sea cast it up?

Serv. I never saw so huge a billow, Sir,
As toss'd it upon shore.

Cer. Come, wrench it open; [sense.
Soft, soft!—it smells most sweetly in my

2 Gent. A delicate odour.

Cer. As ever hit my nostril; so,—up with it.
O you most potent god! what's here? a corse!

1 Gent. Most strange!

Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state; balm'd and entreasur'd

With bags of spices full! A passport too!
Apollo, perfect me i'the characters!

[Unfolds a scroll.

Here I give to understand,

[Reads.

(If e'er this coffin drive a-land.)

I, king Pericles, have lost

This queen, worth all our mandarin cost.

Who finds her, give her burying,

She was the daughter of a king:

Besides this treasure for a fee,

The gods requite his charity!

If thou liv'st, Pericles, thou hast a heart
'That even cracks for woe!—This chanc'd to-
night.

2 Gent. Most likely, Sir.

Cer. Nay, certainly to-night;
For look, how fresh she looks!—They were too rough,
That threw her in the sea. Make fire within;

Fetch hither all the boxes in my closet.
Death may usurp an nature many hours,
And yet the fire of life kindle again
The overpressed spirits. I have heard
Of an Egyptian, had nine hours dead,
By good appliance was recovered.

Enter a SERVANT, with boxes, napkins, &c.
Well said, well said; the fire and the cloth.—
The rough and woful music that we have,
Cause it to sound, beseech you.
The vial once more;—How thou stir'st, the block!—

The music there.—I pray you, give her air:—
Gentlemen,
This queen will live: nature awakes; a warmth
Breathes out of her; she hath not been ex-tranc'd

Above five hours. See, how she 'gins to blow
Into life's flower again!

1 Gent. The heavens, Sir,
Through you, increase our wonder, and set up
Your fame for ever.

Cer. She's alive; behold,
Her eyelids, cases to those heavenly jewels
Which Pericles hath lost,
Begin to part their fringes of bright gold;
The diamonds of a most praised water
Appear, to make the world twice rich. O live,
And make us weep to hear your state, fair
creature,

Rare as you seem to be! [She moves.

Thai. O dear Diana,
Where am I? Where's my lord? What world
is this?

2 Gent. Is not this strange?

1 Gent. Most rare.

Cer. Hush, gentle neighbours;
Lend me your hands: to the next chamber bear her.

Get linen; now this matter must be look'd to.
For her relapse is mortal. Come, come, come;
And Æsculapius guide us!

[Exeunt carrying THAISA away.

SCENE III.—Tharsus.—A Room in Cleon's
House.

Enter PERICLES, CLEON, DIONYZA, LYCH-
RIDA, and MARINA.

Per. We cannot but obey
The powers above us. Could I rage and roar
As doth the sea she lies in, yet the end Must be as 'tis. My babe Marina (whom,
For she was born at sea, I have nam'd so) here
I charge your charity withal, and leave her
The infant of your care; beseeching you
To give her princely training, that she may be

SCENE I.—Tharsus.—An open Place near the Sea-shore.

Enter DIONYZA and LEONINE.

Dion. Thy oath remember ; thou hast sworn to do it :

'Tis but a blow, which never shall be known.
Thou canst not do a thing i'the world so soon,

To yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience,

Which is but cold, inflame love in thy bosom,
Inflame too nicely ; nor let pity, which

Even women have cast off, melt thee, but be
A soldier to thy purpose.

Leon. I'll do't ; but yet she is a goodly creature.

Dion. The fitter then the gods should have her. Here

Weeping she comes for her old nurse's death.
Thou art resolv'd.

Leon. I am resolv'd.

Enter MARINA, with a Basket of Flowers.

Mar. No, no, I will rob Tellust† of her weeds, [blues.

The purple violets, and marigolds,

Shall, as a chaplet, hang upon thy grave,
While summer days do last. Ah me ! poor

maid,

Born in a tempest, when my mother died,
This world to me is like a lasting storm,

Whirring me from my friends.

Leon. Was't so?

Mar. My father, as nurse said, did not
 fear,

But cry'd, good seamen! to the sailors, gave
 His kingly hands with hauling of the ropes
 And, clasping to the mast, endur'd a sea
 That almost burst the deck, and from the

The master calls, and trebles their confusion.

Mar. It was when I was born:

Never was waves nor wind more violent.

Leon. Come, say your prayers speedily.

Mar. What mean you?

Leon. If you require a little space
 prayer,

I grant it: Pray; but be not tedious,
 For the gods are quick of ear, and I am slow
 To do my work with haste.

Mar. Why, will you kill me?

Leon. To satisfy my lady.

Mar. Why would she have me kill'd?

Now, as I can remember, by my troth,
 I never did her hurt in all my life;
 I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn
 To any living creature: believe me, la,
 I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly:
 I trod upon a worm against my will,
 But I wept for it. How have I offended,

Now, Sir, hast thou cried her through the market?

Boult. I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs; I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Bard. And I pr'ythee tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boult. Faith, they listened to me, as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description.

Bard. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on.

Boult. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that cowers* i' the hams?

Bard. Who? Monsieur Veroles?

Boult. Ay; he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow.

Bard. Well, well: as for him, he brought his disease hither: here he does but repair it.
 I know, he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boult. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this sign.

Bard. Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me;
 you must seem to do that fearfully, which you commit willingly; to despise profit, where you have most gain. To weep that you live as you do, makes pity in your lovers: Seldom, but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a meret profit.

Mar. I understand you not.

Boult. O, take her home, mistress, take her home: these blushes of hers must be quenched with some present practice.

Bard. Thou say'st true, i' faith, so they must:
 for your bride goes to that with shame, which is her way to go with warrant.

Boult. Faith some do, and some do not.
 But, mistress, if I have bargained for the joint,—

Bard. Thou may'st cut a morsel off the spit.

Boult. I may so.

Bard. Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boult. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Bard. Boult, spend thou that in the town:
 report what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn; therefore say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Boult. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels, as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly-inclined. I'll bring home some to-night.

Bard. Come your ways; follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters
 Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. [deep,

Who ever but his approbation added,
Though not his preconsent, he did not flinch
From honourable courses.

Dion. Be it so then:
Yet none does know, but you, how she
Nor none can know, Leonine being gone
She did disclaim my child, and stood betwixt
Her and her fortunes: None would look on
But cast their gazes on Marina's face;
Whilst ours was blurted at, and held a man
Not worth the time of day. It pierc'd

And though you call my course unnatural
You not your child well loving, yet I find
It greets me, as an enterprise of kindness
Perform'd to your sole daughter.

Cle. Heavens forgive it!

Dion. And as for Pericles,
What should he say? We wept after her he
And even yet we mourn: her monument
Is almost finish'd, and her epitaphs
In glittering golden characters express
A general praise to her, and care in us
At whose expense 'tis done.

O here he is.—

Sir, there's a barge put off from Mitylene.
And in it is Lysimachus the governor,
Who craves to come aboard. What is your will?

Hel. That he have his. Call up some gentlemen.

Tyr. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.

Enter two GENTLEMEN.

1 Gent. Doth your lordship call?

Hel. Gentlemen,
There is some of worth would come aboard; I pray you,
To greet them fairly.

[The GENTLEMEN and the two SAILORS descend, and go on board the Barge.

Enter, from thence, LYSIMACHUS and LORDS; the Tyrian GENTLEMEN, and the two SAILORS.

Tyr. Sail. Sir,
This is the man that can, in aught you would,
Resolve you.

Lys. Hail, reverend Sir! The gods preserve you!

Hel. And you, Sir, to out-live the age I am,
And die as I would do.

Lys. You wish me well.
Being on shore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs,
Seeing this goodly vessel ride before us,
I made to it, to know of whence you are.

Hel. First, Sir, what is your place?

Lys. I am governor of this place you lie before.

Hel. Sir,
Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king;
A man, who for this three months hath not
To any one, nor taken sustenance, [spoken
But to prorogue* his grief.

Lys. Upon what ground is his distemperature?

Hel. Sir, it would be too tedious to repeat;
But the main grief of all springs from the loss
Of a beloved daughter and a wife.

Lys. May we not see him, then?

Hel. You may indeed, Sir,
But bootless is your sight; he will not speak
To any.

Lys. Yet, let me obtain my wish.

Hel. Behold him, Sir: [PERICLES discovered.]
this was a goodly person,
Till the disaster, that, one mortal† night,
Drove him to this.

Lys. Sir, king, all hail! the gods preserve you! Hail,
Hail, royal Sir!

Hel. It is in vain; he will not speak to you.

1 Lord. Sir, we have a maid in Mitylene, I durst wager,
Would win some words of him.

Lys. 'Tis well bethought.
The, questionless, with her sweet harmony
And other choice attractions, would allure,
And make a battery through his deafen'd
Which now are midway stopp'd: [parts,† all as happy as of all the fairest, with her fellow-maidens, now within leafy shelter that abuts against an island's side.

He whispers one of the attendant LORDS.—

Exit LORD, in the Barge of LYSIMACHUS.

Hel. Sure, all's effectless; yet nothing we'll omit

* To lengthen or prolong his grief.
† Destructive. ; I. e. Fare.

That bears recovery's name. But, since your kindness [further,

We have stretch'd thus far, let us beseech you
That for our gold we may provision have,
Wherein we are not destitute for want,
But weary for the staleness.

Lys. O, Sir, a courtesy,
Which if we should deny, the most just God
For every graff would send a caterpillar,
And so inflict our province.—Yet once more Let me entreat to know at large the cause
Of your king's sorrow.

Hel. Sit, Sir, I will recount it;—
But see, I am prevented.

Enter, from the Barge, LORD, MARINA, and a young LADY.

Lys. O, here is
The lady that I sent for. Welcome, fair one!
Is't not a goodly presence?

Hel. A gallant lady.

Lys. She's such, that were I well assur'd she came

Of gentle kind, and noble stock, I'd wish
No better choice, and think me rarely wed.
Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty
Expect even here, where is a kingly patient:
If that thy prosperous-artificial feat
Can draw him but to answer thee in aught,
Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay
As thy desires can wish.

Mar. Sir, I will use
My utmost skill in his recovery,
Provided none but I and my companion
Be suffer'd to come near him.

Lys. Come, let us leave her,
And the gods make her prosperous! [MARINA sings.

Lys. Mark'd he your music?

Mar. No, nor look'd on us.

Lys. See, she will speak to him.

Mar. Hail, Sir! my lord, lend ear:—

SCENE I.—A Room of State in King LEAR's Palace.

Enter KENT, GLOSTER, and EDMUND.

Kent. I thought, the king had more affected the duke of Albany, than Cornwall.

Glo. It did always seem so to us: but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the dukes he values most; for equalities are so weigh'd, that curiosity[•] in neither can make choice of either's moiety.[†]

Kent. Is not this your son, my lord?

Glo. His breeding, Sir, hath been at my charge: I have so often blush'd to acknowledge him, that now I am brazed to it.

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glo. Sir, this young fellow's mother could: whereupon she grew round-wombed; and had, indeed, Sir, a son for her cradle, ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.[‡]

Glo. But I have, Sir, a son by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no dearer in my account: though this knave came somewhat saucily into the world before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair; there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged.—Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my lord.

Glo. My lord of Kent: remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.

Glo. Think you so?

Edm. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any further delay than this very evening.

Glo. He cannot be such a monster.

Edm. Nor is not, sure.

Glo. To his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him.—Heaven and earth!—Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you: frame the business after your own wisdom: I would unstate myself, to be in a due resolution.‡

Edm. I will seek him, Sir, presently; convey§ the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal.

Glo. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: Though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent|| effects: love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide: in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond cracked between son and father. This villain of mine comes under the prediction; there's son against father: the king falls from bias of nature; there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: Machinations, hollowness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves!—Find out this villain, Edmund, it shall lose thee nothing; do it carefully:—And the noble and true hearted Kent banished! his offence, honesty!—Strange! strange!

Edm. This is the excellent foppery of the world! that, when we are sick in fortune, (often the surfeit of our own behaviour,) we make guilty of our disasters, the sun, the moon, and the stars: as if we were villains by necessity; fools, by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and treachers,¶ by spherical predominance; drunkards, liars, and adulterers, by an enforced obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: An admirable evasion of whoremaster man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star! My father compounded with my mother under the dragon's tail; and my nativity was under ursa major;  so that it follows, I am rough and lecherous.—Tut, I should have been that I am, had the maidenliest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing. and pat he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy: My cue is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o' Bedlam.—O, these eclipses do portend these divisions! Fa, sol, la, mitt.

Edg. How now, brother Edmund? What serious contemplation are you in?

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes of succeed unhappily: as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, dearth, dissolutions of ancient amities; divisions in state, menaces and maledictions against king and nobles; needless diffidences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts,* nuptial breaches, and I know not what.

Edg. How long have you been a sectary astronomical?

Edm. Come, come; when saw you my father last?

Edg. Why, the night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him, by word or countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Edm. Bethink yourself, wherein you may have offended him: and at my entreaty, forbear his presence, till some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure; which at this instant so rageth in him, that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay.

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my fear. I pray you, have a continent‡ forbearance, till the speed of his rage goes slower; and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak: Pray you, go; there's my key:—If you do stir abroad, go armed.

Edg. Armed, brother?

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best: go armed; I am no honest man, if there be any good meaning towards you: I have told you what I have seen and heard, but faintly; nothing like the image and horror of it: Pray you, away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business.—

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner: go, get it ready. [Exit an Attendant.] How now, what art thou?

Kent. A man, Sir.

Lear. What dost thou profess? What wouldst thou with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem; to serve him truly, that will put me in trust; to love him that is honest; to converse with him that is wise, and says little; to fear judgement; to fight, when I cannot choose; and to eat no fish.

Lear. What art thou?

Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king.

Lear. If thou be as poor for a subject, as he is for a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldst thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Who wouldst thou serve?

Kent. You.

Lear. Dost thou know me, fellow?

Kent. No, Sir; but you have that in your countenance, which I would fain call master.

Lear. What's that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What services canst thou do?

Kent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, I am quality'd in; and the best of me is diligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young, Sir, to love a woman for singing; nor so old, to dote on her for any thing: I have years on my back forty-eight.

Lear. Follow me; thou shalt serve me; if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet.—Dinner, ho, dinner!—Where's my knave? my fool? Go you, and call my fool hither:

Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter not well.

Lear. Why came not the slave back when I call'd him?

Knight. Sir, he answer'd me in the same manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not!

Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is; but, to my judgement, your highness not entertain'd with that ceremonious affect as you were wont; there's a great abatement of kindness appears, as well in the great pendants, as in the duke himself also, to your daughter.

Lear. Ha! say'st thou so?

Knight. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot be silent, when I think your highness is wrong'd.

Lear. Thou but remember'st me of mine own conception; I have perceived a most faint neglect of late; which I have rather blamed mine own jealous curiosity,* than as a pretence† and purpose of unkindness: I will look further into't.—But where's my fool? I have not seen him these two days.

Knight. Since my young lady's going to France, Sir, the fool hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that; I have not-did it.—Go you, and tell my daughter I would speak with her.—Go you, call hither my fool.—

Re-enter STEWARD.

O, you Sir, you Sir, come you hither: I am I, Sir?

Stew. My lady's father.

Lear. My lady's father! my lord's knave! you whoreson dog! you slave! you cur!

Stew. I am none of this, my lord; I beseech you, pardon me.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal? [Striking.]

Stew. I'll not be struck, my lord.

Kent. Nor tripp'd neither; you base ball player. [Tripping up his heel.]

Lear. I thank thee, fellow; thou servest me, and I'll love thee.

Fool. Then 'tis like the breath of an unsee'd lawyer; you gave me nothing for't: Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?

Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. Pr'ythee, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to; he will not believe a fool.

[To KENT.]

Lear. A bitter fool!

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet fool?

Come place him here by me,—

Or do thou for him stand:

The sweet and bitter fool

Will presently appear;

The one in motley here,

The other found out there.

Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy?

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away; that thou wast born with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, 'faith, lords and great men will not let me; if I had a monopoly out, they would have part on't: and ladies too, they will not let me have all fool to myself; they'll be snatching.—Give me an egg, nuncle, and I'll give thee two crowns.

Lear. What two crowns shall they be?

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg i'the middle, and eat up the meat, the two crowns of the egg. When thou clovest thy crown i'the middle, and gavest away both parts, thou borrest thine ass on thy back over the dirt: Thou hadst little wit in thy bald crown, when thou gavest thy golden one away. Fool. I have used it, nuncle, ever since thou madest thy daughters thy mother: for when thou gavest them the rod, and put'st down thine own breeches,

Then they for sudden joy did weep, [Singing
And I for sorrow sung,
That such a king should play bo-peep,
And go the fools among.

Pr'ythee, nuncle, keep a schoolmaster that can teach thy fool to lie; I would fain learn to lie.

Lear. If you lie, Sirrah, we'll have you whipp'd.

Fool. I marvel, what kin thou and thy daughters are: they'll have me whipp'd for speaking true, thou'lt have me whipp'd for lying; and, sometimes, I am whipp'd for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind of thing, than a fool: and yet I would not be thee, nuncle; thou hast pared thy wit o'both sides, and left nothing in the middle: Here comes one o'the parings.

Enter GONERIL.

Yet have I left a daughter.

Make servants of their betters.

Dear goddess, hear! Suspend thy purpose, if Thou didst intend to make this creature fruitful!
Into her womb convey sterility!

Dry up in her the organs of increase;
And from her derogate body never spring
A babe to honour her! If she must teem,
Create her child of spleen; that it may live,
And be a thwart disnatur'd torment to her!
Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth!
With cadent tears fret channels in her cheeks;
Turn all her mother's pains, and benefits,
To laughter and contempt; that she may feel How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is
To have a thankless child!—Away, away!

He may enguard his dotage with their powers,
And hold our lives in mercy.—Oswald, I say!

ALB. Well, you may fear too far.

Gen. Safer than trust:
Let me still take away the harms I fear,

Not fear still to be taken. I know his heart.
What he hath utter'd, I have writ my sister;

If she sustain him and his hundred knights,

What, have you writ that letter to my sister?
Stew. Ay, madam.

Gen. Take you some company, and away to Inform her full of my particular fear; [horns.

And thereto add such reasons of your own,
As may compact it more. Get you gone;

And hasten your return. [Exit Stew.] No, no,

Enter LEAR, KENT, and FOOL.

Lear. Go you before to Gloster with these letters: acquaint my daughter no further with any thing you know, than comes from her demand out of the letter: If your diligence be not speedy, I shall be there before you.

Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter. [Exit.]

Fool. If a man's brains were in his heels, were't not in danger of kibes?

Lear. Ay, boy.

Fool. Then I pr'ythee, be merry; thy wit shall not go slipshod.

Lear. Ha, ha, ha!

Fool. Shalt see, thy other daughter will use thee kindly: for though she's as like this as a crab is like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.

Lear. Why, what canst thou tell, my boy?

Fool. She will taste as like this, as a crab does to a crab. Thou canst tell, why one's nose stands i'the middle of his face?

Lear. No.

Fool. Why, to keep his eyes on either side his nose; that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong:—

Fool. Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell?

Lear. No.

Fool. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a snail has a house.

Lear. Why?

Fool. Why, to put his head in; not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a case.

Lear. I will forget my nature.—So kind a father!—Be my horses ready?

Fool. Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven, is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight?

Fool. Yes, indeed: Thou wouldest make a good fool.

Lear. To take it again perforce!—Monster ingratitude!

Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How's that?

Fool. Thou shouldst not have been old, before thou hadst been wise.

Lear. O let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven!

Keep me in temper; I would not be mad!—

Enter GENTLEMAN.

How now! Are the horses ready?

Gent. Ready, my lord.

Lear. Come, boy.

Fool. She that is maid now, and laughs at my departure, Shall not be a maid long, unless things be cut shorter. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Court within the Castle of the Earl of GLOSTER.

Enter EDMUND and CURAN, meeting.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.

Cur. And you, Sir. I have been with your father; and given him notice, that the duke of Cornwall, and Regan his duchess, will be here with him to-night.

Edm. How comes that?

Cur. Nay, I know not: You have heard of the news abroad: I mean, the whispered ones, for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments?

Edm. Not I; 'Pray you, what are they?

Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward, 'twixt the dukes of Cornwall and Albany?

Edm. Not a word.

Cur. You may then, in time. Fare you well, Sir. [Exit.]

Edm. The duke be here to-night? The better! Best!

This weaves itself perforce into my business! My father hath set guard to take my brother; And I have one thing, of a queazy^{*} question, Which I must act:—Briefness, and fortune, work!—

Brother, a word; descend:—Brother, I say;

Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out, [moon]

Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the To stand his auspicious mistress:—

Glo. But where is he?

Edm. Look, Sir, I bleed.

Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund?

Edm. Fled this way, Sir. When by no means he could—

Glo. Pursue him, ho!—Go after.—[Exit Servant.] By no means,—what?

Or ere I'll weep:—O, fool, I shall go mad!

[Exit LEAR, GLOSTER, KENT, and FOOL.
Corn. Let us withdraw, 'twill be a storm.
[Storm heard at a distance.]

Reg. This house
Is little; the old man and his people cannot
Be well bestow'd.

Gen. 'Tis his own blame; he hath put Himself from rest, and must needs taste his folly.

Reg. For his particular, I'll receive him
But not one follower.

Gen. So am I purpos'd.
Where is my lord of Gloster?

Re-enter GLOSTER.

Corn. Follow'd the old man forth:—he is return'd.

Glo. The king is in high rage.

Corn. Whither is he going?

Glo. He calls to horse; but will I know not whither.

Corn. 'Tis best to give him way; he leads himself.

Gen. My lord, entreat him by no means to stay.

Glo. Alack, the night comes on, and the bleak winds

Do sorely ruffle; for many miles about
There's scarce a bush.

Reg. O, Sir, to wilful men,
The injuries that they themselves procure,
Must be their schoolmasters: Shut up your doors;

He is attended with a desperate train;
And what they may incense* him to, being apt
To have his ear abus'd, wisdom bids fear.

Corn. Shut up your doors, my lord; 'tis a wild night;

My Regan counsels well: come out o'the storm.
[Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Heath.—A Storm is heard, with Thunder and Lightning.

Enter KENT, and a GENTLEMAN, meeting.

Kent. Who's here, beside foul weather?

Gent. One minded like the weather, most unquietly.

Kent. I know you; Where's the king?

Gent. Contending with the fretful element:
Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea,
Or swell the curled waters 'bove the main,
That things might change, or cease: tears his white hair;

Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage,
Catch in their fury, and make nothing of:
Strives in his little world of man to outscorn
The to-and-fro-conflicting wind and rain.

* Instigate.

This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear* would
The lion and the belly-pinched wolf [couch,
Keep their fur dry, unbonneted he runs,
And bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him?

Gent. None but the fool; who labours to
His heart-struck injuries. [outjest

Kent. Sir, I do know you;
And dare, upon the warrant of my art,† [sion,
Commend a dear thing to you. There is divi-

Gent. I will talk further with you.

Kent. No, do not.

For confirmation that I am much more Than my out wall, open this purse, and take
What it contains: If you shall see Cordelia,
(As fear not but you shall,) show her this ring;

And she will tell you who your fellow|| is
That yet you do not know. Fie on this storm!
I will go seek the king.

Gent. Give me your hand: Have you no more Kent. Few words, but to effect, more than all yet;

Enter LEAR and FOOL.

Lear. Blow, wind, and crack your cheeks!

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Wilt break my heart?

Kent. I'd rather break mine own: Good my lord, enter.

Lear. Thou think'st 'tis much, that this contentious storm

Invades us to the skin: so 'tis to thee;

But where the greater malady is fix'd,

The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dst shun a bear:

But if thy flight lay toward the raging sea,

Thou'dst meet the bear i'the mouth. When the mind's free,

The body's delicate: the tempest in my mind

Doth from my senses take all feeling else,

Save what beats there.—Filial ingratitude!

Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand,

For lifting food to't?—But I will punish home:—

No, I will weep no more.—In such a night

To shut me out!—Pour on; I will endure:—

In such a night as this! O Regan, Goneril!—

Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave all,—

O, that way madness lies; let me shun that; No more of that,—

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Pr'ythee, go in thyself; seek thine own ease;

This tempest will not give me leave to ponder On things would hurt me more.—But I'll go in:

In, boy; go first.—[To the Fool.] You houseless poverty,—

Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep.—

[Fool goes in.]
Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,
That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm,
How shall your houseless heads, and unfed sides,

Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you

From seasons such as these? O, I have ta'en Too little care of this! Take physic, pomp; Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel; That thou may'st shake the superflux to them, And show the heavens more just.

Edg. [Within.] Fathom and half, fathom and half! Poor Tom!

[The Fool runs out from the Hovel.]

Fool. Come not in here, nuncle, here's a spirit.

Help me, help me!

Kent. Give me thy hand.—Who's there?

Fool. A spirit, a spirit; he says his name's poor Tom.

Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there i'the straw?

Come forth.

Enter EDGAR, disguised as a Madman.

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!—Through the sharp hawthorn blows the cold wind.—

Humph! go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Lear. Hast thou given all to thy two daughters? And art thou come to this?

Edg. Who gives any thing to poor Tom? whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, through ford and whirlpool, over bog and quagmire; that hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his pew; set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-arched bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor:—Bless thy five wits! Tom's a-cold.

O, do de, do de, do de.—Bless thee from whirlwinds, star-blasting, and taking! Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes: There could I have him now,—and there,—and there,—and there again, and there. [Storm continues.]

Lear. What, have his daughters brought him to this pass?—

Couldst thou save nothing? Didst thou give them all?

Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket, else we had been all ashamed.

Lear. Now, all the plagues that in the pendulous air

Hang fated o'er men's faults, light on thy daughters!

Kent. He hath no daughters, Sir.

Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have subdu'd nature

To such a lowness, but his unkind daughters.—

Is it the fashion, that discarded fathers

Should have thus little mercy on their flesh?

Judicious punishment! 'twas this flesh begot Those pelican daughters.

Edg. Pillicock sat on pillicock's-hill;—

Halloo, halloo, loo, loo!

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o'the foul fiend: Obey thy parents; keep thy word justly; swear not; commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array: Tom's a-cold.

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A serving-man, proud in heart and mind; that curled my hair; wore gloves in my cap;† served the lust of my mistress' heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven: one, that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it: Wine loved I deeply; dice dearly; and in woman, out-paramoured the Turk: False of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand; Hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes, nor the rustling of silks, betray thy poor heart to women: Keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend.—Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind: Says suum, mun, ha no nonny, dolphin my boy, my boy, sessa; let him trot by.

[Storm still continues.]

Lear. Why, thou were better in thy grave, than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies.—Is man no more than this? Consider him well: Thou owest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume:—Ha! here's three of us are sophisticated!—Thou art the thing itself: unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art.—(Off, off, you lendings:—Come; unbutton here.)

[Tearing off his Clothes.]
Fool. Pr'ythee, nuncle, be contented; this is a naughty night to swim in.—Now a little fire in a wild field were like an old lecher's heart; a small spark, all the rest of his body cold.—Look, here comes a walking fire.

Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet:

* To take is to blast, or strike with malignant influence.

† It was the custom to wear gloves in the hat, as the favour of a mistress.

‡ The words unbutton here, are probably only a marginal direction crept into the matter.

Kent. How fares your grace?

Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What is't you seek?

Glo. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water;‡ that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats cow-dung for sallies; swallows the old rat, and the ditch-dog; drinks the green mantle of the standing pool; who is whipped from tything to tything,¶ and stock-ed, punished, and imprisoned, who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, horse to ride, and weapon to wear,—

That it doth hate what gets it.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.

Enter Cornwall and Edmund.

Corn. I will have my revenge, ere I quit his house.

Edm. How, my lord, I may be crown'd that nature thus gives way to loyalty, no thing fears me to think of.

Corn. I now perceive, it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him out his death, but a provoking merit, set out by a reproveable badness in himself.

Edm. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just! This is the letter's spoke of, which approves him an absolute party to the advantages of France. O heavens! that this treason were not, or not in a detector!

Corn. Go with me to the duchess.

Edm. If the matter of this paper be certain you have mighty business in hand.

Corn. True, or false, it hath made threat of Gloucester. Seek out where thy father is, for he may be ready for our apprehensions.

Edm. [Aside.] If I find him comforting to king, it will stuff his suspicion more full.—I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool. He's mad, that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's oath.

Lear. It shall be done, I will arraign them
 straight:—

Fool. Her boat hath a leak,
 And she must not speak

Why she dares not come over to thee.

Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Hopdance cries in Tom's belly for two white herrings. Croak not, black angel; I have no food for thee.

Kent. How do you, Sir? Stand you not so amaz'd:

Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions?

Lear. I'll see their trial first:—Bring in the evidence.—

Thou robbed man of justice, take thy place;

And for one blast of thy minikin mouth,

Thy sheep shall take no harm.

Pur! the cat is grey.

Lear. Arraign her first; 'tis Goneril. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, she kicked the poor king her father.

Fool. Come hither, mistress; Is your name Goneril?

Lear. She cannot deny it.

Fool. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool.

Lear. And here's another, whose warp'd looks proclaim [there!]

What store her heart is made of.—Stop her Arms, arms, sword, fire!—Corruption in the place!

False justicer, why hast thou let her 'scape?

Edg. Bless thy five wits!

Lear. The little dogs and all,
 Tray, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at me.

Edg. Tom will throw his head at them:—

Be thy mouth or black or white,
 Tooth that poisons if it bite;
 Mastiff, grey-hound, mongrel grim,
 Hound, or spaniel, brach, or lym;†
 Or bobtail tike, or trundle-tail;

 in nature, that makes these hard hearts?—
 You, Sir, I entertain you for one of my hundred; only, I do not like the fashion of your garments: you will say, they are Persian attire; but let them be changed. [To EDGAR.]

 the curtains: So, so, so: We'll go to supper

world!

But that thy strange mutations§ make us hate
Life would not yield to age. [thee,

Old Man. O my good lord, I have been your tenant, and your father's tenant, these fourscore years.

Glo. Away, get thee away; good friend, be Thy comforts can do me no good at all, [gone:
Thee they may hurt.

Old Man. Alack, Sir, you cannot see your way.

Glo. I have no way, and therefore want no
eyes;

I stumbled when I saw: Full oft 'tis seen,
Our mean secures us; and our mere defects
Prove our commodities.—Ah, dear son Edgar,
The food of thy abused father's wrath!
Might I but live to see thee in my touch,
I'd say, I had eyes again!

Old Man. How now? Who's there?

Edg. [Aside.] O gods! Who is't can say, I am at the worst?

I am worse than e'er I was.

Old Man. Tis poor mad Tom.

Edg. [Aside.] And worse I may be yet:
The worst is not,

So long as we can say, This is the worst.

Old Man. Fellow, where goest?

Glo. Is it a beggar-man?

Old Man. Madman and beggar too.

Glo. He has some reason, else he could not beg.

I'the last night's storm I such a fellow saw;
Which made me think a man a worm: My son
Came then into my mind; and yet my mind
Was then scarce friends with him: I have heard more since:

As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods;
They kill us for their sport.

Edg. How should this be?—

Bad is the trade must play the fool to sorrow,

Ang'ring itself and others. [Aside.]—Bless thee, master!

Glo. Is that the naked fellow?

Old Man. Ay, my lord.

Glo. Then, pr'ythee, get thee gone: If, for my sake,

Thou wilt o'ertake us, hence a mile or twain,
I'the way to Dover, do it for ancient love;
And bring some covering for this naked soul,
Whom I'll entreat to lead me.

Old Man. Alack, Sir, he's mad.

Glo. 'Tis the time's plague, when madmen lead the blind.

Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure;
Above the rest be gone.

Old Man. I'll bring him the best 'parel that I have, [Exit.

Come on't what will.

Glo. Sirrah, naked fellow.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold—I cannot daub* it further. [Aside.

Glo. Come hither, fellow.

Edg. [Aside.] And yet I must.—Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed.

Glo. Know'st thou the way to Dover?

Edg. Both stile and gate, horse-way, and foot-path. Poor Tom hath been scared out of his good wits: Bless the good man from the foul fiend! [Five fiends have been in poor Tom at once; of lust, as Obidicut; Hobbididence, prince of dumbness; Mahu, of stealing; Modo, of murder; and Flibbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing; who since possesses chambermaids and waiting-women. So, bless thee,
master!]

Glo. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heaven's plagues [ed,
Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretch-Makes thee the happier:—Heavens, deal so still!

Let the superfluous, and lust-dieted man,
That slaves your ordinance,† that will not see Because he doth not feel, feel your power quickly;

So distribution should undo excess, [Dover?
And each man have enough.—Dost thou know

Edg. Ay, master,

Glo. There is a cliff, whose high and bending head

Looks fearfully in the confined deep:

Bring me but to the very brim of it,

And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear,

With something rich above me: from that place
I shall no leading need.

Edg. Give me thy arm;

Poor Tom shall lead thee. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before the Duke of ALBANY'S
Palace.

Enter GONERIL and EDMUND; STEWARD meeting them.

Gen. Welcome, my lord: I marvel, our mild
husband

Not met us on the way:—Now, where's your
master?

Stew. Madam, within; but never man so chang'd:

I told him of the army that was landed;
He smil'd at it: I told him, you were coming;
His answer was, The worse: of Gloster's treachery,

And of the loyal service of his son,

* Madman.

† I. e. It is better to be thus contemned and know it, than to be flattered by those who secretly contemn us.
‡ In hope.

§ Changes.

* Disguise.

† I. e. To make it subject to us, instead of acting in obedience to it.

When I inform'd him, then he call'd me out;
And told me, I had turn'd the wrong side
out:—
What most he should dislike, seems pleasant
What like, offensive.

Gen. Then shall you go no further.

[To Edmund.]
It is the coward's terror of his spite, [wrong;
That dares not undertake: he'll not feel Which tie him to an answer: Our wishes, on the way, [brother;

May prove effects.* Back, Edmund, to my
Hasten his masters, and conduct his powers:
I must change arms at home, and give the distaff

Into my husband's hands. This trusty servant Shall pass between us: ere long you are like to hear,

If you dare venture in your own behalf,
A mistress' command. Wear this; spare speech; [Giving a Feather.

Decline your head: this kiss, if it durst speak,
Would stretch thy spirits up into the air;—
Conceive, and fare thee well.

Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.

Gen. My most dear Gloucester!

[Exit Edmund.]
O, the difference of man, and man! To thee,
A woman's services are due; my foot
Urns my bed.

Stew. Madam, here comes my lord.

[Exit Steward.]

Enter ALBANY.

Gen. I have been worth the whistle.†

Alb. O Goneril!

[Wind
You are not worth the dust which the rude
blows in your face.—I fear your disposition:
That nature, which contains its origin,
Cannot be border'd certain in itself;
She that herself will sliver and disbranch
From her material sap, perforce must wither,
And come to deadly use.

Gen. No more; the text is foolish.

Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile: [done?

Filth's savour but themselves. What have you Tigers, not daughters, what have you perform'd?

A father, and a gracious aged man, [lick,
Whose reverence the head-lugg'd bear would
Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you [unlucky]

Could my good brother suffer you to do it?
A man, a prince, by him so benefited?
If that the heavens do not their visible spirits
Send quickly down to tame these vile offences,
'Twill come,
Humanity must perforce prey on itself,
Like monsters of the deep.

Gen. Milk-liver'd man!

[wrong;
That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for
Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning Thine honour from thy suffering; that not know'st,

Fools do those villains pity, who are punish'd
Ere they have done their mischief. Where's thy drum? [land;

France spreads his banners in our noiseless
With plumed helm thy slayer begins threats;
Whilst thou, a moral fool, sits't still, and cry'st,
Alack! why does he so?

Alb. See thyself, devil!

Proper deformity seems not in the fiend
So horrid, as in woman.

* I. e. Our wishes on the road may be completed.

† Worth calling for.

; Tear off.

Gen. O ruin, ruin!

Alb. Thou changed and self-cover'd fly,
Be-moan not thy feature. Were they but
To let these hands shed my blood,

They are apt enough to dislocate and tear
Thy flesh and bones!—How'er thou art
A woman's shape doth shield thee.

Gen. Murry, your murdered now!

Enter a Messenger.

Alb. What news?

Mess. O, my good lord, the Duke of Cowall's dead;

Slain by his servant, going to put out
The other eye of Gloucester.

Alb. Gloucester's eyes!

Mess. A servant that he bred, tho't it remorse,

Oppos'd against the act, bending his soul
To his great master; who, therewith urg'd, Flew on him, and amongst them fell he
dead:

But not without that harmful stroke, which Hath pluck'd him after.

Alb. This shows you are above,
You justices, that these our nether crimes
So speedily can venge!—But, O poor Gloucester,
Lost he his other eye?

Mess. Both, both, my lord.—

This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer,
'Tis from your sister.

Gen. [Aside.] One way I like this well,
But being widow, and my Gloucester with her,
May all the building in my fancy pluck
Upon my hateful life: Another way,
The news is not so tart.—I'll read and answer.

Alb. Where was his son, when they did take his eyes?

Mess. Come with my lady hither.

Alb. He is not here.

Mess. No, my good lord; I met him last
again.

Alb. Knows he the wickedness?

Mess. Ay, my good lord; 'twas he inform'd against him; [about

And quit the house on purpose, that their pre-
Might have the freer course.

Alb. Gloucester, I live

To thank thee for the love thou show'st me
And to revenge thine eyes.—Come hither,
friend;

Tell me what more thou knowest. [Exit.

SCENE III.—The French Camp near Dover.

Enter KENT, and a GENTLEMAN.

Kent. Why the king of France is so suddenly gone back know you the reason?

Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state, [which

Which since his coming forth is thought of;
Imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger,

That his personal return was most requir'd,
And necessary.

Kent. Who hath he left behind him general?

Gent. The Maréchal of France, Monsieur le Fer.

Kent. Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstration of grief?

Gent. Ay, Sir; she took them, read them to my presence;

And now and then an ample tear trill'd down:

* Inclination

Her delicate cheek : it seem'd, she was a queen
Over her passion ; who, most rebel-like,
Sought to be king o'er her.

Kent. O, then it mov'd her.

Gent. Not to a rage: patience and sorrow strove

Who should express her goodliest. You have Sunshine and rain at once: her smiles and tears

Were like a better day: Those happy smiles,
That play'd on her ripe lip, seem'd not to know
What guests were in her eyes; which parted thence,

As pearls from diamonds dropp'd.—In brief,
Would be a rarity most belov'd, if all
Could so become it.

Kent. Made she no verbal question?*

Gent. 'Faith, once, or twice, she heav'd the name of futher

Pantingly forth, as if it press'd her heart;
Cried, Sisters! sisters!—Shame of ludics!
sisters!

Kent! father! sisters! What? i'the storm? i'the
Let pity not be believed!—There she shook

The holy water from her heavenly eyes,
And clamour moisten'd: then away she started
To deal with grief alone.

Kent. It is the stars,
The stars above us, govern our conditions; †
Else one self mate and mate could not beget
Such different issues. You spoke not with her since?

Gent. No.

Kent. Was this before the king return'd?

Gent. No, since.

Kent. Well, Sir: The poor distress'd Lear is i'the town:

Who sometime, in his better tune, remembers
What we are come about, and by no means
Will yield to see his daughter.

Gent. Why, good Sir?

Kent. A sovereign shame so elbows him: his own unkindness,

That stripp'd her from his benediction, turn'd
To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights
To his dog-hearted daughters,—these things sting

His mind so venomously, that burning shame
Detains him from Cordelia.

Gent. Alack, poor gentleman!

Kent. Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers‡ you heard not?

Gent. 'Tis so; they are afoot.

Kent. Well, Sir, I'll bring you to our master
Lear,

And leave you to attend him: some dear cause,||
Will in concealment wrap me up awhile;
When I am known aright, you shall not grieve
Leading me this acquaintance. I pray you, go Along with me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The same.—A Tent.

Enter CORDELIA, PHYSICIAN, and SOLDIERS.

Cor. Alack, 'tis he; why, he was met even
now

As mad as the vex'd sea: singing aloud;
Crown'd with rank fumiter,¶ and furrow weeds,
With harlocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-
flowers,

Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our sustaining corn.—A century send forth;
Search every acre in the high grown field,

* Discourse, conversation.

† I. e. Let not pity be supposed to exist.

‡ Dispositions. § Forces. || Important business.

¶ Furnitory.

 Charlocks.

And bring him to our eye. [Exit an OFFICER.
What can man's wisdom do,
In the restoring his bereaved sense?
He, that helps him, take all my outward worth.

Phy. There is means, madam:

Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
The which he lacks; that to provoke in him,
Are many simples operative, whose power
Will close the eye of anguish.

Cor. All bless'd secrets,

All you unpublish'd virtues of the earth,
Spring with my tears! be aidant, and remediate,

In the good man's distress!—Seek, seek for Lest his ungovern'd rage dissolve the life
That wants the means to lead it.*

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Madam, news;

The British powers are marching hitherward.

Cor. 'Tis known before; our preparation stands

In expectation of them.—O dear father,

It is thy business that I go about;

Therefore great France [pitied.

My mourning, and important† tears, bath

No blown‡ ambition doth our arms incite,

But love, dear love, and our ag'd father's right:

Soon may I bear, and see him. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Room in GLOSTER'S Castle.

Enter REGAN and STEWARD.

Reg. But are my brother's powers set forth?

Stew. Ay, madam.

Reg. Himself

In person there?

Stew. Madam, with much ado:

Your sister is the better soldier.

Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at home?

Stew. No, madam.

Reg. What might import my sister's letter to
him?

Stew. I know not, lady.

Reg. 'Faith, he is posted hence on serious
matter.

It was great ignorance, Gloster's eyes being
To let him live; where he arrives, he moves

All hearts against us: Edmund, I think, is
In pity of his misery, to despatch [gone,

His nighted life;§ moreover, to descry

The strength o'the enemy.

Stew. I must needs after him, madam, with my letter.

Reg. Our troops set forth to-morrow; stay
with us;

The ways are dangerous.

Stew. I may not, madam;

My lady charg'd my duty in this business.

Reg. Why should she write to Edmund?
Might not you

Transport her purposes by word? Belike,
Something—I know not what:—I'll love thee

Let me unseal the letter. [much,

Stew. Madam, I had rather—

Reg. I know, your lady does not love her husband;

I am sure of that: and, at her late being here,
She gave strange o'ciliads,|| and most speaking

Stew. I, madam ?

Reg. I speak in understanding ; you as know it :

Therefore, I do advise you, take this note :
My lord is dead ; Edmund and I have talk
And more convenient is he for my hand,
Than for your lady's :—You may gather me
If you do find him, pray you, give him this
And when your mistress hears thus much of
I pray, desire her call her wisdom to her. [3]
So, fare you well.

If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor
Preferment falls on him that cuts him off.

Stew. Would I could meet him, madam !
would show

What party I do follow.

Reg. Fare thee well.

SCENE VI.—The Country near Dover.

Enter GLOUCESTER, and EDGAR, dressed like a Peasant.

Glo. When shall we come to the top of the same hill ?

Edg. You do climb up it now : look, how we labour.

Glo. Methinks, the ground is even.

Edg. Horrible steep :

Hark, do you hear the sea ?

Glo. No, truly.

Edg. Why, then your other senses grow in
By your eyes' anguish. [perfect]

Glo. So may it be, indeed : [speaking]

Methinks, thy voice is alter'd ; and thou
In better phrase, and matter, than thou didst

Edg. You are much deceiv'd ; in nothing am I chang'd,

But in my garments.

Glo. Methinks, you are better spoken.

Edg. Come on, Sir ; here's the place :—stand still.—How fearful

And dizzy 'tis, to cast one's eyes so low !

The crows, and choughs,† that wing the mid way air, [down]

Show scarce so gross as beetles : Half way hangs one that gathers samphire ;‡ dreadful trade !

Methinks, he seems no bigger than his head :
The fishermen, that walk upon the beach,
Appear like mice ; and yon' tall anchoring bark
Diminish'd to her cock ;|| her cock, a buoy
Almost too small for sight : The murmuring surge,

That on the unnumber'd idle pebbles chafes,
Cannot be heard so high :—I'll look no more ;
Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight
Topple¶ down headlong.

Glo. Set me where you stand.

Edg. Give me your hand : You are now within a foot

Of the extreme verge : for all beneath the moon
Would I not leap upright.

Glo. Let go my hand.

Here, friend, is another purse ; in it a jewel
Well worth a poor man's taking : Fairies, and
gods,

Prosper it with thee ! Go thou further off ;
Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.

Edg. Now fare you well, good Sir.

Glo. With all my heart.

Edg. Why I do trifle thus with his despair,
Is done to cure it.

Glo. O you mighty gods !

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Lear. Pass.

Glo. I know that voice.

Lear. Ha! Goneril!—with a white beard!—They flatter'd me like a dog; and told me, I had white hairs in my beard, ere the black ones were there. To say ay, and no, to every thing I said!—Ay and no too was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter; when the thunder would not peace at my bidding; there I found them, there I smelt them out. Go to, they are not men o'their words: they told me I was every thing; 'tis a lie; I am not ague-proof.

Glo. The trick|| of that voice I do well re-
Is't not the king? [member:

Lear. Ay, every inch a king:
When I do stare, see, how the subject quakes.
I pardon that man's life: what was thy cause?—

Adultery.—

Thou shalt not die: Die for adultery! No:
The wren goes to't, and the small gilded fly
Does lecher in my sight.

Let copulation thrive, for Gloster's bastard son
Was kinder to his father, than my daughters
Got 'tween the lawful sheets.

To't, luxury, pell-mell, for I lack soldiers.—
Behold yon' simpering dame,
Whose face between her forks presageth snow;
That minces virtue, and does shake the head
To hear of pleasure's name;

The fitchew, nor the soiled horse, goes to't
With a more riotous appetite.

Down from the waist they are centaurs,
Though women all above:

But¶ to the girdle do the gods inherit,
Beneath is all the fiends'; there's hell, there's
darkness,

There is the sulphurous pit, burning, scalding, stench, consumption;—Fie, fie, fie! pah; pah!
Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary,
to sweeten my imagination: there's money for thee.

Glo. O, let me kiss that hand!

Lear. Let me wipe it first; it smells of mortality.

Glo. O ruin'd piece of nature! This great world [me?
Shall so wear out to nought.—Dost thou know

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough.
Dost thou squiny†† at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid; I'll not love.—Read thou this challenge; mark but the penning of it.

Glo. Were all the letters suns, I could not see one.

Edg. I would not take this from report;—it
And my heart breaks at it. [is,

Lear. Read.

Glo. What, with the case of eyes?

Lear. O, ho, are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse?
Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light: Yet you see how this world goes.

Glo. I see it feelingly.

Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes, with no eyes. Look with thine ears: see how yon' justice rails upon yon' simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: Change places; and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief?—Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?

Glo. Ay, sir.

Lear. And the creature run from the cur?
There thou might'st behold the great image of authority: a dog's obeyed in office.

Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody hand:
Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own back;

Thou hotly lust'st to use her in that kind
For which thou whipp'st her. The usurer hangs the cozeners.

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes, and furr'd gowns, hide all. Plate sin with gold,

And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks:

Reason in madness!

Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes.

I know thee well enough; thy name is Gloster:
Thou must be patient; we came crying hither.
Thou know'st, the first time that we smell the
air,

We wawl, and cry:—I will preach to thee;

Citizens of Verona; several Men and Women, relations to both Houses; Maskers, Guards, Watchmen, and Attendants.
SCENE, during the greater part of the Play, in Verona: once, in the fifth Act, at Mantua.

PROLOGUE.

Two households, both alike in dignity,
In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
From forth the fatal loins of these two foes
A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life;
Whose misadventur'd piteous overthrows
Do, with their death, bury their parents' strife.
The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
And the continuance of their parents' rage,
Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,
Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage;
The which if you with patient ears attend
What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A public Place.

Enter SAMPSON and GREGORY, armed with Swords and Bucklers.

Sam. Gregory, o' my word, we'll not carry coals.*

Gre. No, for then we should be colliers.

Sam. I mean, as we be in choler, we'll draw.

Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out of the collar.

Sam. I strike quickly, being moved.

Gre. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.

Sam. A dog of the house of Montague moves
me.

Gre. To move, is—to stir; and to be valiant,
is—to stand to it: therefore, if thou art mov'd,
thou run'st away.

Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand: I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.

Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.

Sam. True; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall:— therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall, and thrust his maids to the wall.

Gre. The quarrel is between our masters, and us their men.

Sam. 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant:
when I have fought with the moon, I will be cruel with the maids; I will cut off their heads.

Gre. The heads of the maids?

Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maidenheads; take it in what sense thou wilt.

Gre. They must take it in sense, that feel
it.

Sam. Me they shall feel, while I am able to stand: and, 'tis known, I am a pretty piece of flesh.

Gre. 'Tis well, thou art not fish; if thou hadst, thou hadst been poor John.† Draw thy tool; here comes two of the house of the Montagues.‡

* A phrase formerly in use to signify the bearing depre-
sion.

† Poor John is fish, dried and salted.
‡ The disregard of concord is in character.

Enter ABRAHAM and BELTHASAR.

My naked weapon is out; quarrel, I
 thee.
 Now! turn thy back, and run?
 Hear me not.
 O, marry: I fear thee!
 Let us take the law of our sides; let
 us.
 Still frown, as I pass by; and let them
 they list.
 Lay, as they dare. I will bite my them; which is a disgrace to them, or it.
 O you bite your thumb at us, Sir?
 Do bite my thumb, Sir.
 O you bite your thumb at us, Sir?
 Is the law on our side, if I say—ay?
 O.
 O, Sir, I do not bite my thumb at you,
 I bite my thumb, Sir.
 O you quarrel, Sir?
 Quarrel, Sir? no, Sir.
 If you do, Sir, I am for you; I serve a man as you.
 Is better.
 Well, Sir.

Enter BENVOLIO, at a Distance.

Lay—better; here comes one of my kinsmen.
 'O, better, Sir.
 'O, lie.
 Draw, if you be men.—Gregory, re-by swathing blow. [They fight.
 'Art, fools; put up your swords; you
 t what you do.

[Beats down their Swords.

Enter TYBALT.

What, art thou drawn among these heartless hinds?
 O, Benvolio, look upon thy death.
 Do but keep the peace; put up thy
 sword,
 go it to part these men with me.
 What, drawn, and talk of peace? I hate the word,
 O hell, all Montagues, and thee:
 thee, coward. [They fight.

Several Partizans of both Houses, who join in; then enter CITIZENS, with Clubs.

Clubs,* bills, and partizans' strike
 beat them down! [They fight.
 With the Capulets! down with the Mon-

CAPOLET, in his Gown; and LADY CAPOLET.

What noise is this?—Give me my long sword, ho!
 O. A crutch, a crutch!—Why call you for a sword?
 My sword, I say!—Old Montague is wishes his blade in spite of me. [Come,
 MONTAGUE, and LADY MONTAGUE.
 Thou villain, Capulet,—Hold me not,
 let me go.
 No. Thou shalt not stir one foot to seek a foe.

Enter PRINCE, with Attendants.

Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace,
 of this neighbour-stained steel,—

! was the usual exclamation of an officer in the we now call Watch!

Will they not hear!—what ho! you men, you
 beasts,—

That quench the fire of your pernicious rage
 With purple fountains issuing from your veins,
 On pain of torture, from those bloody hands Throw your mistemper'd weapons to the ground,

And hear the sentence of your moved prince.—
 Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word,
 By thee, old Capulet and Montague,
 Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets;
 And made Verona's ancient citizens
 Cast by their grave beseeching ornaments,
 To wield old partizans, in hands as old,
 Canker'd with peace, to part your canker'd hate:
 If ever you disturb our streets again,
 Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace.
 For this time, all the rest depart away:
 You, Capulet, shall go along with me;
 And, Montague, come you this afternoon,
 To know our further pleasure in this case,
 To old Free-town, our common judgement-
 place.

Once more, on pain of death, all men depart.
 [Exeunt PRINCE, and Attendants; CAPOLET, LADY CAPOLET, TYBALT, CITIZENS, and Servants.

Men. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroad?

Speak, nephew, were you by when it began?
 Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary,

And yours, close fighting ere I did approach:
 I drew to part them; in the instant came
 The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar'd;
 Which, as he breath'd defiance to my ears,
 He swung about his head, and cut the winds,
 Who, nothing hurt withal, hiss'd him in scorn:
 While we were interchanging thrusts and blows,

[part,
 Came more and more, and fought on part and
 Till the prince came, who parted either part.

La. Men. O, where is Romeo?—saw you him
 to-day?

Right glad I am, he was not at this fray.

Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipp'd
 sun,

Peer'd forth the golden window of the east,
 A troubled mind drove me to walk abroad;
 Where,—underneath the grove of sycamore,
 That westward rooteth from the city's side,—
 So early walking did I see your son:
 Towards him I made; but he was 'ware of me,
 And stole into the covert of the wood:
 I, measuring his affections by my own,—
 That most are busied when they are meet alone,—

Pursu'd my humour, not pursuing his,
 And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me.

Men. Many a morning bath he there been seen,

[dew,
 With tears augmenting the fresh morning's
 Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep
 But all so soon as the all-cheering sun [sighs:
 Should in the furthest east begin to draw
 The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,
 Away from light steals home my heavy son,
 And private in his chamber pens himself;
 Shuts up his windows, looks fair daylight out,
 And makes himself an artificial night:
 Black and portentous must this humour prove,
 Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?

Men. I neither know it, nor can learn of him.

* Angry.

† Appeared.

I know his grievances, or he much does.
Men I would, thou wert so happy by
stay,

To hear true shift. Come, madam, let's go [Enter MONTAGUE, and Exit]

Ben Good-morrow, cousin.

Rom In the day so young?

Ben But new struck nine.

Rom Ah me! sad hours seem long
Was that my father that went hence so fast?

Ben It was. What sadness lengthens
Romeo's hours!

Rom Not having that, which having, makes them short.

Ben In love?

Rom That.

Ben O! love!

Rom Out of her favour, where I am in love.

Ben Alas, that love, so gentle in his view,
Should be so tyrannous and rough to prove!

Rom Alas, that love, whose view is muffled still,
Should, without eyes, see pathways to his will!

Where should we dine? O me!—What was here?

Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all.
Here's much to do with hate, but more with love.

Why, then, O brawling love! O loving hate!
O any thing, of nothing first create!

O heavy lightness! serious vanity!
Mis-shapen chaos of well-seeming forms!

Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, health!

Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is!
This love feel I, that feel no love in this.

Dost thou not laugh?

Ben No, coz, I rather weep.

Rom Good heart, at what?

Ben At thy good heart's oppression.

Rom Why, such is love's transgression.
Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast,

Which thou wilt propagate, to have it press
With more of these: this love, that thou

shows,

her, gentle Paris, get her heart,
to her consent is but a part;
gree, within her scope of choice consent and fair according voice.

I have invited many a guest,

per.*] and to them say,

Enter BENVOLIO and ROMEO.

burning,

lesperate grief cures with another's anguish :

Your plantain leaf is excellent for
that.
or what, I pray thee?
For your broken shin.
Why, Romeo, art thou mad?
Not mad, but bound more than a madman is:

guage.

Whither should they come?

Serv. Up.

Rom. Whither?

Serv. To supper; to our house.

Rom. Whose house?

Serv. My master's.

Rom. Indeed, I should have asked you that before.

Serv. Now I'll tell you without asking: My master is the great rich Capulet; and if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray, come and crush a cup of wine.* Rest you merry!

[Exit.

Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulet's
Sups the fair Rosaline, whom thou so lov'st;
With all the admired beauties of Verona:
Go thither; and, with unattainted eye,
Compare her face with some that I shall show,
And I will make thee think thy swan a crow.

Rom. When the devout religion of mine eye Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to fires!

[die,—

And these,—who, often drown'd, could never Transparent heretics, be burnt for liars!
One fairer than my love! th' all-seeing sun
Ne'er saw her match, since first the world begun.

Ben. Tut! you saw her fair, none else being by,

Herself pois'd† with herself in either eye:
But in those crystal scales, let there be weigh'd

Your lady's love against some other maid
That I will show you, shining at this feast,
And she shall scant‡ show well, that now shows best.

Rom. I'll go along, no such sight to be shown,

But to rejoice in splendour of mine own.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Room in CAPULET's House.

Enter Lady CAPULET and NURSE.

La. Cap. Nurse, where's my daughter? call her forth to me.

Nurse. Now, by my maidenhead,—at twelve year old,— [bird!—

I bade her come.—What, lamb! what, lady-
God forbid!—where's this girl?—what, Juliet!

Enter JULIET.

Jul. How now, who calls?

Nurse. Your mother.

Jul. Madam, I am here,

What is your will?

La. Cap. This is the matter:—Nurse, give leave awhile, [again;

We must talk in secret.—Nurse, come back
I have remember'd me, thou shalt hear our counsel.

Thou know'st, my daughter's of a pretty age.

Nurse. 'Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.

La. Cap. She's not fourteen.

Nurse. I'll lay fourteen of my teeth,

And yet, to my teen§ be it spoken, I have but four,—

She is not fourteen: How long is it now
To Lammas-tide?

* We still say in cant language—to crack a bottle.

† Weighed. ‡ Scarce, hardly. § To my sorrow

La. Cap. A fortnight, and odd days.

Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year
Come Lammas-eve at night, shall she be fourteen.

Susan and she,—(God rest all Christian souls
Were of an age.—Well, Susan is with God
She was too good for me: But, as I said,
(On Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen
That shall she, marry; I remember it well
'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years
And she was wean'd,—I never shall forget
it,—

(Of all the days of the year, upon that day:
For I had then laid wormwood to my dug,
Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall
My lord and you were then at Mantua:—
Nay, I do bear a brain:—but, as I said,
When it did taste the wormwood on the nib
(Of my dug, and felt it bitter, pretty fool!
To see it tetchy, and fall out with the dug.
Shake, quoth the dove-house: 'twas no more
I trow,

To bid me trudge.

And since that time it is eleven years:

For then she could stand alone; nay, by road,†

She could have run and waddled all about.
For even the day before, she broke her brow
And then my husband—God be with his soul!
'A was a merry man;—took up the child:
*'Yea, quoth he, dost thou fall upon thy face?
Thou wilt fall backward, when thou hast more wit.
Wilt thou not, Jule?'* and by my holy-dam,‡
The pretty wretch left crying, and said—Ay
To see now, how a jest shall come about!
I warrant, an I should live a thousand year
I never should forget it; Wilt thou not, Jule
quoth he:

And, pretty fool, it stinted,§ and said—Ay.

La. Cap. Enough of this; I pray thee, hold thy peace.

Nurse. Yes, madam; Yet I cannot choose but laugh,

To think it should leave crying, and say—Ay
And yet, I warrant, it had upon its brow
A bump as big as a young cockrel's stone;
A parlous knock; and it cried bitterly.

*'Yea, quoth my husband, fall'st upon thy face?
Thou wilt fall backward, when thou com'st to age.
Wilt thou not, Jule?'* it stinted, and said—Ay.

Jul. And stint thou too, I pray thee, nurse;
say I.

Nurse. Peace, I have done. God mark the to his grace!¶

Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er I nurs'd
An I might live to see thee married once,
I have my wish.

La. Cap. Marry, that marry is the very theme

I came to talk of:—Tell me, daughter Juliet,
How stands your disposition to be married?

Jul. It is an honour that I dream not of.

Nurse. An honour! were not I thine only
nurse,

I'd say, thou hadst suck'd wisdom from thy teat [teat

La. Cap. Well, think of marriage now younger than you,

Here in Verona, ladies of esteem,
Are made already mothers: by my count,
I was your mother much upon these years
That you are now a maid. Thus then, in brief;—

The valiant Paris seeks you for his love.

* I. e. I have a perfect remembrance or recollection.
† The cross. ‡ Holy dame, i. e. the blessed virgin.
§ It stopped crying. ¶ Favour.

Mer. You are a lover; borrow Cupid's wings,
And soar with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too sore enpierced with his shaft,
To soar with his light feathers; and so bound,
I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe:
Under love's heavy burden do I sink.

Mer. And, to sink in it, should you burden love;
Too great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is love a tender thing? it is too rough,
Too rude, too boist'rous; and it pricks like thorn.

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love; [down.—
Prick love for pricking, and you beat love
Give me a case to put my visage in:

[Putting on a Mask.

A visor for a visor!—what care I,
What curious eye doth quote* deformities?
Here are the beetle-brows, shall blush for me.

Ben. Come, knock, and enter; and no sooner
But every man betake him to his legs. [in,

Rom. A torch for me: let wantons, light of heart,
Tickle the senseless rushest with their heels;
For I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase,— I'll be a candle-holder, and look on,—
The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done.†

Mer. Tut! dun's the mouse, the constable's own word:
If thou art dun, we'll draw thee from the mire
Of this (save reverence) love, wherein thou stick'st

Up to the ears.—Come, we burn day-light, ho.

Rom. Nay, that's not so.

Mer. I mean, Sir, in delay
We waste our lights in vain, like lamps by day.
Take our good meaning; for our judgement sits
Five times in that, ere once in our five wits.

Rom. And we mean well, in going to this
But 'tis no wit to go. [mask;

Mer. Why, may one ask?

Rom. I dreamt a dream to-night.

Mer. And so did I.

Rom. Well, what was yours?

Mer. That dreamers often lie.

Rom. In bed, asleep, while they do dream things true.

Mer. O, then, I see, queen Mab hath been with you.

She is the fairies' midwife; and she comes
In shape no bigger than an agate-stone
On the fore-finger of an alderman,
Drawn with a team of little atomies;‡
Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep:
Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners' legs;

The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers;
The traces, of the smallest spider's web;
The collars, of the moonshine's wat'ry beams:
Her whip, of cricket's bone; the lash of film:
Her waggoner, a small grey-coated gnat,
Not half so big as a round little worm
Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid:
Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut,
Made by the joiner squirrel, or old grub,
Time out of mind the fairies' coach-makers.
And in this state she gallops night by night
Through lovers' brains, and then they dream of love: [straight:

On courtiers' knees, that dream on courtiers

* Observe.

† It was anciently the custom to strew rooms with rushes.

‡ This is equivalent to phrases in common use.—I am done for, it is over with me.

§ Atoms.

O'er lawyers' fingers, who straight dream on fees:

O'er ladies' lips, who straight on kisses dream:
Which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues,
Because their breaths with sweetmeats tainted are.

Sometime she gallops o'er a courtier's nose,
And then dreams he of smelling out a suit:‡
And sometimes comes she with a tithe-pig's tail,

Tickling a parson's nose as 'a lies asleep,
Then dreams he of another benefice:

Sometime she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,
And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats,
Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades,
Of healths five fathom deep; and then anon
Drums in his ear; at which he starts, and wakes;

And, being thus frightened, swears a prayer or
And sleeps again. This is that very Mab,
That plats the manes of horses in the night;
And bakes the elf-locks in foul sluggish hairs,
Which, once untangled, much misfortune bodes.

This is the hag, when maids lie on their backs,
That presses them, and learns them first to bear,
Making them women of good carriage.

This, this is she—

Rom. Peace, peace, Mercutio, peace;
Thou talk'st of nothing.

Mer. True, I talk of dreams;
Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing but vain fantasy;
Which is as thin of substance as the air;
And more inconstant than the wind, who woos

Even now the frozen bosom of the north,
And, being anger'd, puffs away from thence,
Turning his face to the dew-dropping south.

Ben. This wind, you talk of, blows us from ourselves;

Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Rom. I fear, too early: for my mind misgives,
Some consequence, yet hanging in the stars,
Shall bitterly begin his fearful date
With this night's revels; and expire the term
Of a despised life, clos'd in my breast,
By some vile forfeit of untimely death:
But He, that hath the steerage of my course,
Direct my sail!—On, lusty gentlemen.

Ben. Strike, drum. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Hall in CAPULET'S House.

Musicians waiting. Enter SERVANTS.

1 Serv. Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away? he shift a trencher! he scrape a trencher!

2 Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men's hands, and they unwashed too, 'tis a foul thing.

1 Serv. Away with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard;‡ look to the plate:—good thou, save me a piece of marchpane;§ and, as thou lovest me, let the porter let in Susan Grindstone, and Nell.—Antony! and Potpan!

2 Serv. Ay, boy; ready.

1 Serv. You are looked for, and called for, asked for, and sought for, in the great chamber.

2 Serv. We cannot be here and there too.—Cheerly, boys; be brisk a while, and the longer liver take all. [They retire behind.

Enter CAPULET, &c. with the Guests and the Maskers.

You are welcome, gentlemen! I have seen th
day.

That I have worn a visor; and could tell
A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear,
Such as would please;—'tis gone, 'tis gone
'tis gone:

You are welcome, gentlemen!—Come, musi cians, play.

A hall! a hall!* give room, and foot it, girls [Music plays, and they dance.

More light, ye knaves; and turn the tables up.
And quench the fire, the room is grown too
hot.—

Ah, Sirrah, this unlook'd-for sport comes well.
Nay, sit. nay, sit, good cousin Capulet;
For you and I are past our dancing days:
How long is't now, since last yourself and I
Were in a mask?

2 Cap. By'r lady, thirty years.

1 Cap. What, man! 'tis not so much; 'tis not so much:

'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio,
Come pentecost as quickly as it will,
Some five and twenty years; and then we mask'd.

2 Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more: his son is elder,
His son is thirty. [Sir:

1 Cap. Will you tell me that?

His son was but a ward two years ago.

Rom. What lady's that, which doth enrich the hand
Of yonder knight?

Serr. I know not, Sir.

Rom. O, she doth teach the torches to burn bright!

Her beauty hangs upon the cheek of night
Like a rich jewel in an Ethiop's† ear:
Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear!
So shows a snowy dove trooping with crows,
As yonder lady o'er her fellows shows,
The measure done, I'll watch her place of stand, [hand.

And, touching hers, make happy my rude
Did my heart love till now? forswear it, sight!
For I ne'er saw true beauty till this night.

Tyb. This, by his voice, should be a Montague:— [slave

Fetch me my rapier, boy:—What! dares the Come hither, cover'd with an antic face,
To fleer and scorn at our solemnity?
Now, by the stock and honour of my kin,
To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

1 Cap. Why, how now kinsman? wherefore storm you so?

Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe;
A villain, that is hither come in spite,
To scorn at our solemnity this night.

1 Cap. Young Romeo is't?

Tyb. 'Tis he, that villain Romeo.

1 Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him
He bears him like a portly gentleman; [alone,
And, to say truth, Verona brags of him,
To be a virtuous and well-govern'd youth:
I would not for the wealth of all this town,
Here in my house, do him disparagement:

* I. e. Make room.

I thank you, honest gentlemen; good night:—
More torches here!—Come on, then let's to bed. [late;

Ah, Sirrah, [To 2 Cap.] by my say,† it waxes
 I'll to my rest.

[Exeunt all but JULIET and NURSE.]

Jul. Come hither, nurse: What is yon gentleman?

Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.

Jul. What's he, that now is going out of door?

Nurse. Marry, that, I think, be young Petruchio.

Jul. What's he, that follows there, that would not dance?

Nurse. I know not.

Jul. Go, ask his name:—if he be married,
 My grave is like to be my wedding bed.

Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague,
 The only son of your great enemy. [gue;

Jul. My only love sprung from my only hate!

Too early seen unknown, and known too late!
 Prodigious birth of love it is to me,
 That I must love a loathed enemy.

Nurse. What's this? what's this?

Jul. A rhyme I learn'd even now
 Of one I danc'd withal.

[One calls within, Juliet!]

Nurse. Anon, anon:—

Come, let's away; the strangers all are gone.
 [Exeunt.]

Enter CHORUS.

Now old desire doth in his death-bed lie,
 And young affection gapes to be his heir;
 That fair, which love groan'd for, and would die,

With tender Juliet match'd, is now not fair.
 Now Romeo is belov'd, and loves again,
 Alike bewitched by the charm of looks;
 But to his foe suppos'd he must complain,
 And she steal love's sweet bait from fearful hooks:

Being held a foe, he may not have access
 To breathe such vows as lovers use to swear;
 And she as much in love, her means much
 To meet her new-beloved any where: [less
 But passion lends them power, time means to meet,

Temp'ring extremities with extreme sweet.
 [Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—An open Place, adjoining CAPULET'S Garden.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Can I go forward, when my heart is
 here?

Turn back, dull earth,‡ and find thy centre out.
 [He climbs the Wall, and leaps down within it.]

Enter BENVOLIO, and MERCUTIO.

Ben. Romeo! my cousin Romeo!

Mer. He is wise;

And, on my life, hath stolen him home to bed.

Ben. He ran this way, and leap'd this orchard wall:

Call, good Mercutio.

Mer. Nay, I'll conjure too.—

Romeo! humours! madman! passion! lover!
 Appear thou in the likeness of a sigh,

* A collation of fruit, wine, &c.

† Faith.

‡ I. e. Himself.

Speak but one rhyme, and I am satisfied;
 Cry but—Ah me! couple but—love and dove;
 Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word,
 One nick-name for her purblind son and heir,
 Young Adam Cupid, he that shot so trim,
 When king Cophetua lov'd the beggar-maid.*—

He heareth not, stirreth not, he moveth not;
 The apt is dead, and I must conjure him.—
 I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes,
 By her high forehead, and her scarlet lip,
 By her fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh,

And the demesnes that there adjacent lie,
 That in thy likeness thou appear to us.

Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him.

Mer. This cannot anger him: 'twould anger
 To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle [him
 Of some strange nature, letting it there stand
 Till she had laid it, and conjur'd it down;
 That were some spite: my invocation
 Is fair and honest, and, in his mistress' name,
 I conjure only but to raise up him.

Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among those trees,

To be consorted with the humorous‡ night:
 Blind is his love, and best befits the dark.

Mer. If love be blind, love cannot hit the Now will he sit under a medlar tree, [mark.
 And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit,
 As maids call medlars, when they laugh
 alone.—

Romeo, good night;—I'll to my truckle-bed;
 This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep:
 Come, shall we go?

Ben. Go, then; for 'tis in vain
 To seek him here, that means not to be found.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—CAPULET'S Garden.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. He jests at scars, that never felt a wound.—

[JULIET appears above, at a Window.]
 But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks!

It is the east, and Juliet is the sun!—
 Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon,
 Who is already sick and pale with grief,
 That thou her maid art far more fair than she:
 Be not her maid,‡ since she is envious;
 Her vestal livery is but sick and green,
 And none but fools do wear it; cast it off.—
 It is my lady; O, it is my love:

O, that she knew she were!— [that?
 She speaks, yet she says nothing; What of Her eye discourses, I will answer it.—

I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks:
 Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,
 Having some business, do entreat her eyes
 To twinkle in their spheres till they return.
 What if her eyes were there, they in her head
 The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars,

As daylight doth a lamp; her eye in heaven
 Would through the airy region stream so bright,
 That birds would sing, and think it were not
 night.

See, how she leans her cheek upon her hand!
 O, that I were a glove upon that hand,
 That I might touch that cheek!

* Alluding to the old ballad of the King and the Beggar.

† This phrase in Shakespeare's time was used as an expression of tenderness.

‡ Humid, moist.

§ A votary to the moon, to Diana.

Jul. Ah me!

Rom. She speaks:—

O, speak again, bright angel! for thou art
As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,
As is a winged messenger of heaven
Unto the white-upturned wond'ring eyes
Of mortals, that fall back to gaze on him,
When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds,
And sails upon the bosom of the air.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?

Deny thy father, and refuse thy name:
Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,
And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this? [Aside.]

Jul. 'Tis but thy name, that is my enemy;—
Thou art thyself though, not a Montague.
What's Montague? it is nor hand, nor foot,
Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part
Belonging to a man. O, be some other name!
What's in a name? that which we call a rose,
By any other name would smell as sweet;
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd,
Retain that dear perfection which he owes,
Without that title.—Romeo, doff[†] thy name;
And for that name, which is no part of thee,
Take all myself.

Rom. I take thee at thy word:
Call me but love, and I'll be new baptiz'd;
Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou, that, thus bescreen'd in night,
So stumblest on my counsel?

Rom. By a name
I know not how to tell thee who I am:
My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself,
Because it is an enemy to thee;
Had I it written, I would tear the word.

Jul. My ears have not yet drunk a hundred
words
Of that tongue's utterance, yet I know the Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague?

Rom. Neither, fair saint, if either thee dislike.

Jul. How cam'st thou hither, tell me? and
wherefore?

The orchard walls are high, and hard to climb;
And the place death, considering who thou art,
If any of my kinsmen find thee here.

Rom. With love's light wings did I o'er-perch these walls;
For stony limits cannot hold love out:
And what love can do, that dares love attempt,
Therefore thy kinsmen are no let[‡] to me.

Jul. If they do see thee, they will murder
thee.

Rom. Alack! there lies more peril in thine eye,
Than twenty of their swords; look thou but
And I am proof against their enmity.

Jul. I would not for the world, they saw thee
here.

Rom. I have night's cloak to hide me from their sight;
And, but thou love me, let them find me here:
My life were better ended by their hate,
Than death prorogued, wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place?

Rom. By love, who first did prompt me to inquire;
He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes.
I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far

* Owns, possesses.
‡ Hindrance.

† Do off.
‡ Unless thou love me.

As that vast shore wash'd with the surfet[‡]
I would adventure for such merchandise.

Jul. Thou know'st, the mask of night is my face;

Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek
For that which thou hast heard me speak tonight.

Fain would I dwell on form, fain, but not
What I have spoke; But farewell compliments!
Dost thou love me? I know, thou wilt Ay;

And I will take thy word: yet, if thou swear,
Thou may'st prove false; at lovers' perjury
They say, Jove laughs. O, gentle Romeo,
If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully!
Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won,
I'll frown, and be perverse, and say thee no,
So thou wilt woo; but, else, not for the world.
In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond,
And therefore thou may'st think my haviour
light:

But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true
Than those that have more cunning to be strange.[‡]

I should have been more strange, I must confess,
But that thou over-heard'st, ere I was won.
My true love's passion: therefore pardon me,
And not impute this yielding to light love,
Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear,
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops.—

Jul. O, swear not by the moon, the mean and chaste moon,

That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear at all;
Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self,
Which is the god of my idolatry,
And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dear love—

Jul. Well, do not swear: although I joy in
I have no joy of this contract to-night. [Exit.]
It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden,
Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be,
Ere one can say—It lightens. Sweet, good
night!

This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath,
May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet.

Good night, good night! as sweet repose and
rest

Come to thy heart, as that within my breast!

Rom. O, wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?

Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have to-
night?

Rom. The exchange of thy love's faithful vow for mine.

Jul. I gave thee mine before thou didst request it:

And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom. Wouldst thou withdraw it? for what purpose, love?

Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee again.
And yet I wish but for the thing I have:

My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep; the more I give to thee,
The more I have, for both are infinite.

[Nurse calls within.]
I hear some noise within; Dear love, adieu!

Anon, good nurse!—Sweet Montague, be true.
Stay but a little, I will come again. [Exit.]

Rom. O blessed blessed night! I am afear'd,
Being in night, all this is but a dream,
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.

* Behaviour.

‡ They.

‡ When.

Re-enter JULIET, above.

Jul. Three words, dear Romeo, and good night, indeed.
If that thy bent* of love be honourable, [row,
Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-mor-
By one that I'll procure to come to thee,
Where, and what time, thou wilt perform the
And all my fortunes at thy foot I'll lay, [rite;
And follow thee, my lord, throughout the
world:

Nurse. [Within.] Madam.

Jul. I come, anon:—But if thou mean'st not
I do beseech thee,— [well,

Nurse. [Within.] Madam.

Jul. By and by, I come:—
To cease thy suit, and leave me to my grief:
To-morrow will I send.

Rom. So thrive my soul,—

Jul. A thousand times good night! [Exit.

Rom. A thousand times the worse to want thy light.—

Love goes toward love, as schoolboys from their books;

But love from love, toward school with heavy looks. [Retiring slowly.

Re-enter JULIET, above.

Jul. Hist! Romeo, hist!—O, for a falconer's voice,

To lure this tassel-gentlet back again!

Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud;
Else would I tear the cave where Echo lies,
And make her airy tongue more hoarse than
mine

With repetition of my Romeo's name.

Rom. It is my soul, that calls upon my name: [night,

How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by
Like softest music to attending ears!

Jul. Romeo!

Rom. My sweet!

Jul. At what o'clock to-morrow
Shall I send to thee?

Rom. At the hour of nine.

Jul. I will not fail; 'tis twenty years till
then.

I have forgot why I did call thee back.

Rom. Let me stand here till thou remember
it.

Jul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand
there,

Rememb'ring how I love thy company.

Rom. And I'll still stay, to have thee still Forgetting any other home but this. [forget,

Jul. 'Tis almost morning, I would have thee
gone:

And yet no further than a wanton's bird;

Who lets it hop a little from her hand,

Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves,†

And with a silk thread plucks it back again,
So loving-jealous of his liberty.

Rom. I would, I were thy bird.

Jul. Sweet, so would I:

Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing.

Good night, good night! Parting is such sweet
sorrow,

That I shall say—good night, till it be morrow.

Rom. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!— [rest!

'Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to Hence will I to my ghostly father's cell:

His help to crave, and my dear hap‡ to tell.

SCENE III.—Friar LAURENCE's Cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE, with a Basket.

Fri. The grey-ey'd morn smiles on the frowning night, [light;
Checking the eastern clouds with streaks of
And flecked* darkness like a drunkard reels
From forth day's path-way, made by Titan's† wheels:

Now ere the sun advance his burning eye,
The day to cheer, and night's dank dew to dry,
I must fill up this osier cage of ours, [flowers.
With baleful weeds, and precious-juiced
The earth, that's nature's mother, is her tomb;
What is her burying grave, that is her womb;
And from her womb children of divers kind
We sucking on her natural bosom find;
Many for many virtues excellent,
None but for some, and yet all different.
O, mickle is the powerful grace,‡ that lies
In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities:

For nought so vile that on the earth doth live,
But to the earth some special good doth give;
Nor aught so good, but strain'd from that fair
use,

Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse:
Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied;
And vice sometime's by action dignified.
Within the infant rind of this small flower
Poison hath residence, and med'cine power:
For this, being smelt, with that part cheers
each part;

Being tasted slays all senses with the heart.
Two such opposed foes encamp them still
In man as well as herbs, grace, and rude will;
And, where the worser is predominant,
Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Good morrow, father!

Fri. Benedicite!

What early tongue so sweet saluteth me?—
Young son, it argues a distemper'd head,
So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed:
Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye,
And where care lodges, sleep will never lie:
But where unbruised youth with unstuff'd brain [reign:

Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth
Therefore thy earliness doth me assure,
Thou art up-rous'd by some distemp'ature;
Or, if not so, then here I hit it right—
Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.

Rom. That last is true, the sweeter rest was mine.

Fri. God pardon sin! wast thou with Rosa-line?

Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father? no;
I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.

Fri. That's my good son: But where hast thou been then?

Rom. I'll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again.
I have been feasting with mine enemy;
Where, on a sudden, one hath wounded me,
That's by me wounded; both our remedies
Within thy help and holy physic lies:
I bear no hatred, blessed man; for, lo,
My intercession likewise steads my foe.

Fri. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift;
Riddling confession finds but riddling shrift.

Rom. Then plainly know, my heart's dear love is set

On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:

By holy marriage: When, and where, and how,
We met, we woo'd, and made exchange of
I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,
That thou consent to marry us this day.

Fra. Holy Saint Francis! what a change is here!

Is Rosaline, whom thou didst love so dear,
So soon forsaken? young men's love then lies
Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.
Jesu Maria! what a deal of brine
Hath wash'd thy sorrow cheeks for Rosaline!
How much salt water thrown away in waste,
To season love, that of it doth not taste!
The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,
Thy old groans ring yet in my ancient ears;
Lo, here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit
Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet:
If e'er thou wast thyself, and these woes thine,
Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline;
And art thou chang'd? pronounce this sentence
then—

Women may fall, when there's no strength in Rom. Thou chid'st me oft for loving Rosa-line.

Fri. For doting, not for loving, pupil mine.

Rom. And had'st me bury love.

Fri. Not in a grave,

To lay one in, another out to have.

Rom. I pray thee, chide not: she, whom I love now,

Doth grace for grace, and love for love allow;
The other did not so.

Fri. O, she knew well,

Thy love did read by rote, and could not spell.
But come, young waverer, come go with me,
In one respect I'll thy assistant be;
For this alliance may so happy prove,
To turn your households' rancour to pure love.

Rom. O, let us hence; I stand on sudden haste.*

Fra. Wisely, and slow; they stumble, that run fast. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Street.

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be?
Came he not home to-night?

Ben. Not to his father's; I spoke with his
man.

Mer. Ah, that same pale hard-hearted wench,
that Rosaline,

Torments him so, that he will sure run mad.

Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman of old Capulet,

Hath sent a letter to his father's house.

Mer. A challenge, on my life.

Ben. Romeo will answer it.

Mer. Any man, that can write, may answer
a letter.

Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, being dared.

Mer. Alas, poor Romeo, he is already dead;
stabbed with a white wench's black eye; shot thorough the ear with a love-song; the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft† And is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?

pliments. He fights as you sing prick-song,§

Nurse. An 'a speak any thing against me, if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you: I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side.

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vexed, that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave!— Pray you, Sir, a word: and as I told you, my young lady bade me inquire you out; what she bade me say, I will keep to myself: but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say: for the gentlewoman is young; and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly, it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman, and very weak dealing.

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee,—

Nurse. Good heart! and, i'faith, I will tell her as much: Lord, lord, she will be a joyful
woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, Sir,—that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentleman-like offer.

Vile earth, to earth resign; end motion here:
And thou, and Romeo, press one heavy bier!

Nurse. O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best friend I had!

O courteous Tybalt! honest gentleman!
That ever I should live to see thee dead!

Jul. What storm is this, that blows so contrary?

Is Romeo slaughter'd; and is Tybalt dead?
My dear-lov'd cousin, and my dearer lord!—
Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general
doom!

For who is living, if those two are gone?
Nurse. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished;
Romeo, that kill'd him, he is banished.

Jul. O God!—did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's blood?

Nurse. It did, it did; alas the day! it did.

Jul. O serpent heart, hid with a flow'ring
Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave? [face]

When thou didst bower the spirit of a fiend
In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?

Was ever book, containing such vile matter,
So fairly bound? O, that deceit should dwell

In such a gorgeous palace!

Nurse. There's no trust,
No faith, no honesty in men; all perjur'd,
All frowsworn, all wrought, all dissemblers.—

Ah, where's my man? give me some appearance:— [me old.

These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make Shame come to Romeo!

Jul. Blister'd be thy tongue,
For such a wish! he was not born to shame:

Upon his brow shame is ashamed to sit:
For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd

Sole monarch of the universal earth.
O, what a beast was I to chide at him!

Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin?

Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?

Ah, poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth^a

When I, thy three-hours wife, have mangled
But, wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my cousin? [band:

That villain cousin would have kill'd my hus-

Your tributary drops belong to woe,
Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy. [slain:

My husband lives, that Tybalt would have
And Tybalt's dead, that would have slain my husband!

All this is comfort; Wherefore weep I then?
Some word there was, worse than Tybalt's

death,
That murder'd me: I would forget it fain;

But, O! it presses to my memory,
Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds:

Tybalt is dead, and Romeo—banished;
That—banished, that one word—banished,

a To smooth, in ancient language, is to speak in a soft way.

Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts.* Tybalt's death

Was woe enough, if it had added there:
Or,—if sour woe delights in fellowship,
And needly will be rank'd with other griefs,—
Why follow'd not, when she said—Tybalt's
Thy father, or thy mother, nay, or both, [dead,
Which modern lamentation might have mov'd?
But, with a rear-ward following Tybalt's death,
Romeo is banished,—to speak that word,
Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,
All slain, all dead.—Romeo is banished,—
There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,
In that word's death; no words can that woe
sound.—

Where is my father, and my mother, nurse?

Nurse. Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's
corse,

Will you go to them: I will bring you thither.

Jul. Wash they his wounds with tears? mine shall be spent,

When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment.
Take up those cords.—Poor ropes, you are beguil'd,

Both you and I, for Romeo is exil'd:
He made you for a highway to my bed;
But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed.

Come, cords; come, nurse; I'll to my wedding
bed;

And death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead!

Nurse. Hie to your chamber: I'll find Romeo
To comfort you:—I wot well where he is.

Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night;
I'll to him; he is hid at Laurence's cell.

Jul. O find him! give this ring to my true
knight,

And bid him come to take his last farewell.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Frier LAURENCE's Cell.

Enter Frier LAURENCE and ROMEO.

Fri. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fearful man;

Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity.

Rom. Father, what news? what is the prince's doom?

What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,
That I yet know not?

Fri. Too familiar
Is my dear son with such sour company:

I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom.

Rom. What less than doomsday is the prince's doom?

Fri. A gentler judgement vanish'd from his lips,

Not body's death, but body's banishment.

Rom. Ha! banishment? be merciful, say—
For exile hath more terror in his look, [death:
Much more than death: do not say—banish-
ment.

Fri. Hence from Verona art thou banished:
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.

Rom. There is no world without Verona
But purgatory, torture, hell itself. [walls,

Hence-banished is banish'd from the world,
And world's exile is death:—then banishment
Is death misterm'd: calling death—banishment,

Thou cut'st my head off with a golden axe,
And smil'st upon the stroke that murders me.

Fri. O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness!
Thy fault our law calls death; but the kind priace,

Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law,

And turn'd that black word death to ban-
ishment:

This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not.

Rom. 'Tis torture, and not mercy: heaven
here,

Where Juliet lives; and every cat, and dog,
And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
Live here in heaven, and may look on her.
But Romeo may not.—More validity,^a

More honourable state, more courtesy in
In carrion flies, than Romeo: they may see
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand,
And steal immortal blessing from her eye.

Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin.
But Romeo may not; he is banished.

Flies may do this, when I from this banish'd.
They are free men, but I am banished.

And say'st thou yet, that exile is not death?
Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-pointed knife,

No sudden mean of death, though he cry now,
But—banished—to kill me; banished!

O friar, the damned use that word in hell,
Howlings attend it. How hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd,
To mangle me, with that word—banishment?

Fri. Thou fond mad man, hear me but speak
a word.

Rom. O, thou wilt speak again of banish-
ment.

Fri. I'll give thee armour to keep off the Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy, [wall:
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.

Rom. Yet banished?—Hang up philosophy!
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom,
It helps not, it prevails not, talk no more.

Fri. O, then I see that madness have no ears.

Rom. How should they, when that wise man have no eyes?

Fri. Let me dispute with thee of thy rage.

Rom. Thou canst not speak of what thou dost not feel:

Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love,
An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banished,
Then might'st thou speak, then might'st thou tear thy hair,

And fall upon the ground, as I do now,
Taking the measure of an unmade grave.

Fri. Arise; one knocks; good Romeo, hide thyself. [Knocking within.]

Rom. Not I, unless the breath of heart-sick groans,

Mist-like, infold me from the search of eyes.
[Knocking.]

Fri. Hark, how they knock!—Who's there?
—Romeo, arise;

Thou wilt be taken:—Stay a while: stand up;

Run to my study:—By and by:—God's will!

What wilfulness is this?—I come, I come
[Knocking.]

Who knocks so hard? whence come you?
what's your will?

Nurse. [Within.] Let me come in, and you shall know my errand;

I come from lady Juliet.

Fri. Welcome then.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. O holy friar, O, tell me, holy friar,
Where is my lady's lord, where's Romeo?

^a Worth, value.

* I.e. Is worse than the loss of ten thousand Tybals.
† Common. ‡ Know.

Fri. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.

Nurse. O, he is even in my mistress' case, Just in her case!

Fri. O woeful sympathy! Pitious predicament!

Nurse. Even so lies she, Blubbering and weeping, weeping and blubbering:—

Stand up, stand up; stand, an you be a man. For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand; Why should you fall into so deep an ()?

Rom. Nurse!

Nurse. Ah Sir! ah Sir.—Well, death's the end of all.

Rom. Spak'st thou of Juliet? how is it with her?

Doth she not think me an old murderer, Now I have stain'd the childhood of our joy With blood remov'd but little from her own? Where is she? and how doth she? and what says

My conceal'd lady to our cancell'd love?

Nurse. O, she says nothing, Sir, but weeps and weeps;

And now falls on her bed; and then starts up, And Tybalt calls; and then on Romeo cries, And then down falls again.

Rom. As if that name, Shot from the deadly level of a gun, Did murder her; as that name's cursed hand Murder'd her kinsman.—O tell me, friar, tell In what vile part of this anatomy [me, Doth my name lodge? tell me, that I may sack

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate† tender

Of my child's love: I think, she will be rul'd

In all respects by me; nay more, I doubt it

Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed; [not.

Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love;

And bid her mark you me, on Wednesday

But, soft; What day is this? [next—

Par. Monday, my lord.

* Torn to pieces with thine own weapons.

† The whole of your fortune depends on this.
‡ Shut up. § Bold.

My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven ;
How shall that faith return again to earth,
Unless that husband send it me from heaven
By leaving earth!—Comfort me, counsel me.—
Alack, alack, that heaven should practise stratagems
Upon so soft a subject as myself!—
What say'st thou? hast thou not a word of joy?
Some comfort, nurse.

Nurse. 'Faith, here 'tis: Romeo
Is banished; and all the world to nothing,
That he dares ne'er come back to challenge
you;

Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth.
Then, since the case so stands as now it doth,
I think it best you married with the county.
O, he's a lovely gentleman!
Romeo's a dishclout to him; an eagle, madam,
Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye,
As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart,
I think you are happy in this second match,
For it excels your first: or if it did not,
Your first is dead; or 'twere as good he were,
As living here and you no use of him.

Jul. Speakest thou from thy heart?

Nurse. From my soul too;
(Or else beshrew them both.

Jul. Amen!

Nurse. To what?

Jul. Well, thou hast comforted me marvellous much.

Go in; and tell my lady I am gone,
Having displeas'd my father, to Laurence's cell,
To make confession, and to be absolv'd.

Nurse. Marry, I will; and this is wisely done.

[Exit.

Jul. Ancient damnation! O most wicked
fiend!

Is it more sin—to wish me thus forsworn,
Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue
Which she hath prais'd him with above compare

So many thousand times?—Go, counsellor;
Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twain.—

I'll to the friar, to know his remedy;
If all else fail, myself have power to die.

[Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Friar LAURENCE's Cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE and PARIS.

Fri. On Thursday, Sir? the time is very short.

Par. My father Capulet will have it so;
And I am nothing slow, to slack his haste.

Fri. You say, you do not know the lady's
mind;

Uneven is the course, I like it not.

Par. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's
death,

And therefore have I little talk'd of love;
For Venus smiles not in a house of tears.
Now, Sir, her father counts it dangerous,
That she doth give her sorrow so much sway;
And, in his wisdom, hastes our marriage,
To stop the inundation of her tears;
Which, too much minded by herself alone,
May be put from her by society:

Now do you know the reason of this haste.

Fri. I would I knew not why it should be slow'd.

[Aside.

Look, Sir, here comes the lady towards my cell.

Enter JULIET.

Par. Happily met, my lady, and my wife.

Jul. That may be, Sir, when I may see my wife.

Par. That may be, must be, love, on Thursday next.

Jul. What must be shall be.

Fri. That's a certain text.

Par. Come you to make confession to
father?

Jul. To answer that, were to confess my sin.

Par. Do not deny to him, that you love him.

Jul. I will confess to you, that I love him.

Par. So will you, I am sure, that you love
me.

Jul. If I do so, it will be of more price.
Being spoke behind your back, than in your face.

Par. Poor soul, thy face is much abus'd with tears.

Jul. The tears have got small victory
that;

For it was bad enough, before their spite.

Par. Thou wrong'st it, more than tears, with that report.

Jul. That is no slander, Sir, that is a truth;
And what I spake, I spake it to my face.

Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slan-der'd it.

Jul. It may be so, for it is not mine own.—
Are you at leisure, holy father, now;

Or shall I come to you at evening mass?

Fri. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter, now:—

My lord we must entreat the time alone.

Par. God shield, I should disturb devotion!—

Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse you.

Till then, adieu! and keep this holy kiss.

[Exit PARIS.

Jul. O, shut the door! and when thou hast done so,

Come weep with me; Past hope, past cure,
past help!

Fri. Ah, Juliet, I already know thy grief:
It strains me past the compass of my wits. I hear thou must, and nothing must prevent
On Thursday next be married to this county.

Jul. Tell me not, friar, that thou hear'st of
this,

Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it:
If, in thy wisdom, thou canst give no help,

Do thou but call my resolution wise,

And with this knife I'll help it presently.

God join'd my heart and Romeo's, thou hast
hands;

And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo seal'd,
Shall be the label to another deed,

Or my true heart with treacherous revolt

Turn to another, this shall slay them both:

Therefore, out of thy long-experienc'd time,

Give me some present counsel; or, behold,

'Twixt my extremes and me this bloody knife
Shall play the umpire,* arbitrating that

Which the commission† of thy years and art

Could to no issue of true honour bring.

Be not so long to speak; I long to die.

If what thou speak'st speak not of remedy.

Fri. Hold, daughter; I do spy a kind of
hope,

Which craves as desperate an execution

As that is desperate which we would prevent.

If, rather than to marry county Paris,

* Decide the struggle between me and my extremes.
† Authority or power.

Thou hadst the strength of will to slay thyself;
 Then is it likely, thou wilt undertake
 A thing like death to chide away this shame,
 That cop'st with death himself to scape from it;
 And, if thou dar'st, I'll give thee remedy.
Jul. O, bid me leap, rather than marry Paris,
 From off the battlements of yonder tower;
 Or walk in thievish ways; or bid me lurk
 Where serpents are; chain me with roaring
 Or shut me nightly in a charnel-house, [bears;
 O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattling bones,
 With reeky shanks, and yellow chapless skulls;
 Or bid me go into a new-made grave,
 And hide me with a dead man in his shroud;
 Things that, to hear them told, have made me
 tremble;
 And I will do it without fear or doubt,
 To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love.
Fri. Hold, then; go home, be merry, give consent
 To marry Paris: Wednesday is to-morrow;
 To-morrow night look that thou lie alone,
 Let not thy nurse lie with thee in thy chamber:
 Take thou this phial, being then in bed,
 And this distilled liquor drink thou off:
 When, presently, through all thy veins shall run
 A cold and drowsy humour, which shall seize Each vital spirit; for no pulse shall keep
 His natural progress, but surcease to beat:
 No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou liv'st;
 The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade
 To paly ashes; thy eyes' windows fall,
 Like death, when he shuts up the day of life;
 Each part, depriv'd of supple government,
 Shall stiff, and stark, and cold, appear like
 death:
 And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk death
 Thou shalt remain full two and forty hours,
 And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.
 Now when the bridegroom in the morning comes [dead:
 To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou
 Then (as the manner of our country is,)
 In thy best robes uncover'd on the bier,
 Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault,
 Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie.
 In the meantime, against thou shalt awake,
 Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift;
 And hither shall he come; and he and I
 Will watch thy waking, and that very night
 Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua.
 And this shall free thee from this present shame;
 If no unconstant toy, nor womanish fear,
 Abate thy valour in the acting it.

Jul. Give me, O give me! tell me not of fear.

Fri. Hold; get you gone, be strong and prosperous

In this resolve: I'll send a friar with speed
 To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord.

Jul. Love, give me strength! and strength shall help afford.

Farewell, dear father. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Room in CAPULET'S House.

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, NURSE, and SERVANTS.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ.— [Exit SERVANT.

Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.

2 Serv. You shall have none ill, Sir; for I'll try if they can lick their fingers.

Cap. How canst thou try them so?

2 Serv. Marry, Sir, 'tis an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers: therefore he, that cannot lick his fingers, goes not with me.

Cap. Go, begone.— [Exit SERVANT.

We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time.—

What, is my daughter gone to friar Laurence?

Nurse. Ay, forsooth.

Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good on her:

A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is.

Enter JULIET.

Nurse. See, where she comes from shrift* with merry look.

Cap. How now, my headstrong? where have you been gadding?

Jul. Where I have learn'd me to repent the
 Of disobedient opposition [sin

To you, and your behests;† and am enjoin'd
 By holy Laurence to fall prostrate here,

And beg your pardon:—Pardon, I beseech
 Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you. [you!

Cap. Send for the county; go tell him of this; [ing.

I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow morn-

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Laurence's
 cell;

And gave him what becomed‡ love I might,
 Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty.

Cap. Why, I am glad on't; this is well,— stand up: [ty;

This is as't should be.—Let me see the coun-
 Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither.—

Now, afore God, this reverend holy friar,
 All our whole city is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet,

To help me sort such needful ornaments
 As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow?

La. Cap. No, not till Thursday; there is time enough.

Cap. Go, nurse, go with her:—we'll to church to-morrow.

[Exit JULIET and NURSE.

La. Cap. We shall be short in our provision;
 'Tis now near night.

Cap. Tush! I will stir about, [wife:
 And all things shall be well, I warrant thee,

Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her;
 I'll not to bed to-night;—let me alone; [ho!—

I'll play the housewife for this once.—What,
 They are all forth: Well, I will walk myself

To county Paris, to prepare him up [light,
 Against to-morrow: my heart is wondrous

Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd.
 [Exit.

SCENE III.—JULIET'S Chamber.

Enter JULIET and NURSE.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best:—But, gentle nurse,

I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night;
 For I have need of many orisons§

To move the heavens to smile upon my state,
 Which, well thou know'st, is cross and full of sin.

Enter LADY CAPULET.

La. Cap. What, are you busy? do you need my help?

Jul. No, madam; we have cull'd such necessaries

As are behoveful for our state to-morrow:
 So please you, let me now be left alone,

And let the nurse this night sit up with you;
 For, I am sure, you have your hands full all,

In this so sudden business.

* Confession.

§ Commanda

† Prayer

La. Cap. Good night!
Get thee to bed, and rest; for thou hast need.
[Exeunt Lady CAPULET and NURSE.
Jul. Farewell!—God knows, when we shall meet again.

I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins,
That almost freezes up the heat of life:
I'll call them back again to comfort me;—
Nurse!—What should she do here?
My dismal scene I needs must act alone.—
Come, phial.—

What if this mixture do not work at all?
Must I of force be married to the county?—
No, no;—this shall forbid it:—lie thou there.—
[Laying down a Dagger.

What if it be a poison, which the friar
Subtly hath minister'd to have me dead;
Best in this marriage he should be dishonour'd,
Because he married me before to Romeo?
I fear, it is: and yet, methinks, it should not,
For he hath still been tried a holy man:
I will not entertain so bad a thought.—
How if, when I am laid into the tomb,
I wake before the time that Romeo
Come to redeem me? there's a fearful point!
Shall I not then be stifled in the vault,
To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes in,

And then die strangled ere my Romeo comes?
Or, if I live, in it not very like,
The horrible conceit of death and night,
Together with the terror of the place,—
As in a vault, an ancient receptacle, [bones
Where, for these many hundred years, the
Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd;
Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth, Lies fest'ring in his shroud; where, as they
say,

At some hours in the night spirits resort;—
Alack, alack! is it not like, that I,
So early waking,—what with loathsome smells;
And shrieks like mandrakes' torn out of the earth,

That living mortals, hearing them, run mad;—
O! if I wake, shall I not be distraught,
Environed with all these hideous fears?
And madly play with my forefathers' joints?
And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud? [bone,

And, in this rage, with some great kinsman's
As with a club, dash out my desperate brains?
O, look! methinks, I see my cousin's ghost
Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body
Upon a rapier's point:—Stay, Tybalt, stay!—
Romeo, I come! this do I drink to thee.

[She throws herself on the Bed.

SCENE IV.—CAPULET'S Hall.

Enter Lady CAPULET and NURSE.

La. Cap. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.

Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry.†

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd,
The curfeu bell hath wrung, 'tis three o'clock:—
Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica:
Spare not for cost.

Nurse. Go, go, you cot-quean, go,
Get you to bed; 'faith, you'll be sick to-morrow
For this night's watching.

* The fabulous accounts of the plant called a mandrake give it a degree of animal life, and when it is torn from the ground it groans, which is fatal to him that pulls it up.

† Distracted. ‡ The room where pies were made.

Cap. No, not a whit; What! I have watch'd ere now

All night for lesser cause, and so'er bend it

La. Cap. Ay, you have been a new-har'
in your time;

But I will watch you from such watching now.

[Exeunt Lady CAPULET, and Nurse.

Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!—Nurse,
What's there? [Enter Nurse]

Enter SERVANTS, with Spits, Logs, and Sails.

1 Serv. Things for the cook, Sir; but I have not what.

Cap. Make haste, make haste. [Exit 1 Serv.]

Sirrah, fetch drier logs;

Call Peter, he will show thee where they are.

2 Serv. I have a head, Sir, that will find at logs,

And never trouble Peter for the matter. [Exit 2 Serv.]

Cap. 'Mass, and well said; A merry wharson! ha,

Thou shalt be logger-head.—Good faith, 's

The county will be here with music straight,

[Musicians within.

For so he said he would. I hear him near:—

Nurse!—Wife!—what, ho!—what, nurse, I say!

Enter NURSE.

Go, waken Juliet, go, and trim her up;

I'll go and chat with Paris:—Hie, make haste,

Make haste! the bridegroom he is come a-
ready:

Make haste, I say! [Exit Nurse]

SCENE V.—JULIET'S Chamber; Juliet on the Bed.

Enter NURSE.

Nurse. Mistress!—what, mistress!—Juliet!

—fast, I warrant her, she:—

Why, lamb!—why, lady!—fie, you dog-a-
bed!—

Why, love, I say!—madam! sweet-heart!—
why, bride!

What, not a word?—you take your pratt-
worths now;

Sleep for a week: for the next night, I warr-

The county Paris hath set up his rest, [ma]

That you shall rest but little.—God forgive

(Marry and amen!) how sound is she asleep!

I needs must wake her:—Madam, madam,
madam!

Ay, let the county take you in your bed;

He'll fright you up, i'faith.—Will it not be!

What, dress'd! and in your clothes! and down
again!

I must needs wake you: Lady! lady! lady!

Alas! alas!—Help! help! my lady's dead!—

O, well-a-day, that ever I was born!—

Some aqua-vitæ, ho!—my lord! my lady!

Enter Lady CAPULET.

La. Cap. What noise is here?

Nurse. O lamentable day!

La. Cap. What is the matter?

Nurse. Look, look! O heavy day!

La. Cap. O me, O me!—my child, my only
life,

Revive, look up, or I will die with thee!—

Help, help!—call help.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. For shame, bring Juliet forth; her lord is come.

* Nurse was a term of endearment.

Nurse. She's dead, deceas'd, she's dead ;
alack the day !

La. Cap. Alack the day ! she's dead, she's dead, she's dead.

Cap. Ha ! let me see her :—Out, alas ! she's cold ;

Her blood is settled ; and her joints are stiff ;
Life and these lips have long been separated :
Death lies on her, like an untimely frost
Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.
Accursed time ! unfortunate old man !

Nurse. O lamentable day !

La. Cap. O woeful time !

Cap. Death, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail,

Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak.

Enter Friar LAURENCE and PARIS, with MUSICIANS.

Fri. Come, is the bride ready to go to church ?

Cap. Ready to go, but never to return :
O son, the night before thy wedding-day
Hath death lain with thy bride :—See, there she lies,

Flower as she was, deflowered by him.
Death is my son-in-law, death is my heir ;
My daughter he hath wedded ! I will die,
And leave him all ; life leaving, all is death's.

Fri. Have I thought long to see this morn-ing's face,
And doth it give me such a sight as this ?

La. Cap. Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful day !

Most miserable hour, that e'er time saw
In lasting labour of his pilgrimage !
But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,
But one thing to rejoice and solace in,
And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight.

Nurse. O woe ! O woeful, woeful, woeful
day !

Most lamentable day ! most woeful day,
That ever, ever, I did yet behold !

O day ! O day ! O day ! O hateful day !
Never was seen so black a day as this :

O woeful day, O woeful day !

Fri. Beguil'd, divorced, wronged, spited, slain !

Most detestable death, by thee beguil'd,
By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown !—

O love ! O life !—not life, but love in death !

Cap. Despis'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd !—

Uncomfortable time ! why cam'st thou now
To murder murder our solemnity ?—

O child ! O child !—my soul, and not my child !—

Dead art thou, dead !—alack ! my child is dead ;
And, with my child, my joys are buried !

Fri. Peace, ho, for shame ! confusion's cure lives not

In these confusions. Heaven and yourself
Had part in this fair maid ; now heaven hath

And all the better is it for the maid : [all,
Your part in her you could not keep from

death ;
But heaven keeps his part in eternal life.

The most you sought was—her promotion ;
For 'twas your heaven, she should be advanc'd :

And weep ye now, seeing she is advanc'd,
Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself ?

O, in this love, you love your child so ill,
That you run mad, seeing that she is well :

She's not well married, that lives married long ;
But she's best married, that dies married

young.
Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary

On this fair corse ; and, as the custom is,
In all her best array bear her to church :
For though fond nature bids us all lament,
Yet nature's tears are reason's merriment.

Cap. All things, that we ordained festival,
Turn from their office to black funeral :

Our instruments, to melancholy bells ;
Our wedding cheer, to a sad burial feast ;

Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change ;
Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse,

And all things change them to the contrary.

Fri. Sir, go you in,—and, madam, go with

him ;—
And go, Sir Paris ;—every one prepare

To follow this fair corse unto her grave :

The heavens do low'r upon you, for some ill ;
Move them no more, by crossing their high will. [Exeunt CAPULET, Lady CAPU-LET, PARIS, and FRIAR.

1 Mus. 'Faith, we may put up our pipes, and
be gone.

Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah, put up ;
put up ;

For, well you know, this is a pitiful case.

[Exit Nurse.
1 Mus. Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended.

Enter PETR.

Pet. Musicians, O, musicians, Heart's case, heart's case ; O, an you will have me live, play
—heart's case.

1 Mus. Why heart's case ?

Pet. O, musicians, because my heart itself plays—My heart is full of woe : O, play me some merry dump,* to comfort me.

2 Mus. Not a dump we ; 'tis no time to play
now.

Pet. You will not then ?

2 Mus. No.

Pet. I will then give it you soundly.

1 Mus. What will you give us ?

Pet. No money, on my faith ; but the gleek :†
I will give you the minstrel.

1 Mus. Then will I give you the serving-creature.

Pet. Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate. I will carry no crotchets : I'll re you, I'll sa you ; Do you note me ?

1 Mus. An you re us, and sa us, you note us.

2 Mus. Pray you, put up your dagger, and put out your wit.

Pet. Then have at you with my wit ; I will dry-beat you with an iron wit, and put up my iron dagger :—Answer me like men :

*When griping grief the heart doth wound,
And doleful dumps the mind oppress,
Then music, with her silver sound ;*

*Why, silver sound ! why, music with her silver
sound ?*

What say you, Simon Catling ?

1 Mus. Marry, Sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.

Pet. Pretty ! What say you, Hugh Rebeck ?

2 Mus. I say—silver sound, because musicians sound for silver.

Pet. Pretty too !—What say you, James Soundpost ?

3 Mus. 'Faith, I know not what to say.

Pet. O, I cry you mercy ! you are the singer :
I will say for you. It is music with her silver sound, because such fellows as you have seldom gold for sounding:—

Then music, with her silver sound,
With speedy help doth lend redress.

[Exit, singing.]

1 Mus. What a pestilent knave is this same?

2 Mus. Hang him, Jack! Come, we'll in here; tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner.
[Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Mantua.—A Street.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering eye of sleep,
My dreams presage some joyful news at hand:
My bosom's lord^{*} sits lightly in his throne;
And, all this day, an unaccustom'd spirit
Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts.

I dreamt, my lady came and found me dead;
(Strange dream! that gives a dead man leave to think,)

And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips,
That I reviv'd, and was an emperor.

Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd,
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy?

Enter BALTHASAR.

News from Verona!—How now, Balthasar?
Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar?
How doth my lady? Is my father well?
How fares my Juliet? That I ask again;
For nothing can be ill, if she be well.

Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill;
Her body sleeps in Capel's monument,
And her immortal part with angels lives;
I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault,
And presently took post to tell it you:
O pardon me for bringing these ill news,
Since you did leave it for my office, Sir.

Rom. Is it even so? then I defy you, stars!—
Thou know'st my lodging: get me ink and paper,

And hire post-horses; I will hence to-night.

Bal. Pardon me, Sir, I will not leave you thus:

Your looks are pale and wild, and do import
Some misadventure.

Rom. Tush, thou art deceiv'd;
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do:
Hast thou no letters to me from the friar?

Bal. No, my good lord.

Rom. No matter: get thee gone,
And hire those horses; I'll be with thee straight.
[Exit BALTHASAR.]

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night.

Let's see for means:—O, mischief, thou art swift

To enter in the thoughts of desperate men!

I do remember an apothecary,—

And hereabouts he dwells,—whom late I noted
In tatter'd weeds, with overwhelming brows,
Culling of simples;† meager were his looks,
Sharp misery had worn him to the bones:

And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,

An alligator stuff'd, and other skins

Of ill-shap'd fishes; and about his shelves

A beggarly account of empty boxes,

Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds,

Remnants of packthread, and old cakes of roses.

Were thinly scatter'd, to make up a show.

Noting this penny, to myself I said—

And if a man did need a poison now,

Whose sale is present death in Mantua,

Here lives a caitiff wretch would sell it him.

O, this same thought did but furnish my need;

And this same needy man must sell it me.

As I remember, this should be the house:

Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut—

What, ho! apothecary!

Enter APOTHECARY.

Ap. Who calls so loud?

Rom. Come hither, man.—I see, that thou art poor;

Hold, there is forty ducats: let me have
A dram of poison; such soon-speeding gun[‡]
As will disperse itself through all the veins,
That the life-weary taker may fall dead;
And that the trunk may be discharged of breath

As violently, as hasty powder fir'd
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb.

Ap. Such mortal drugs I have; but Mantua's law

Is death, to any he that utters them.

Rom. Art thou so bare, and full of wretchedness,

And fear'st to die? famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and oppression starveth in thy eyes,
Upon thy back hangs ragged misery,

The world is not thy friend, nor the world's law:

The world affords no law to make thee rich;
Then be not poor, but break it, and take this.

Ap. My poverty, but not my will, consents.

Rom. I pay thy poverty, and not thy will.

Ap. Put this in any liquid thing you will,
And drink it off; and, if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would despatch you straight.

Rom. There is thy gold; worse poison to men's souls,

Doing more murders in this loathsome world,
Than these poor compounds that thou may'st not sell:

I sell thee poison, thou hast sold me none.
Farewell; buy food, and get thyself in flesh.—
Come, cordial, and not poison; go with me
To Juliet's grave, for there must I use thee.
[Exit.]

SCENE II.—Friar LAURENCE's Cell.

Enter Friar JOHN.

John. Holy Franciscan friar! brother, ho!

Enter Friar LAURENCE.

Law. This same should be the voice of friar John.—

Welcome from Mantua: What says Romeo?
Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter.

John. Going to find a barefoot brother out,

One of our order to associate me,

Here in this city visiting the sick,

And finding him, the searchers of the town,

Suspecting that we both were in a house

Where the infectious pestilence did reign,

Seal'd up the doors, and would not let us forth;

So that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd.

Law. Who bare my letter then to Romeo?

* L. c. Love.

† Herbs.

‡ Stuff

John. I could not send it,—here it is again,—

Nor get a messenger to bring it thee,
So fearful were they of infection.

Lam. Unhappy fortune! by my brotherhood,
The letter was not nice,* but full of charge,
Of dear import; and the neglecting it
May do much danger: Friar John, go hence;
Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight
Unto my cell.

John. Brother, I'll go and bring't thee.
[Exit.]

Lam. Now must I to the monument alone;
Within this three hours will fair Juliet wake;
She will beshrew me much, that Romeo
Hath had no notice of these accidents:
But I will write again to Mantua,
And keep her at my cell till Romeo come;
Poor living corse, clos'd in a dead man's tomb! [Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Church-Yard; in it, a Monument belonging to the CAPULETS.

Enter PARIS, and his PAGE, bearing Flowers and a Torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy: Hence, and stand aloof;—

Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.

Under yon yew-trees lay thee all along,
Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground;
So shall no foot upon the church-yard tread, (Being loose, unfirm, with digging up of graves,)

But thou shalt hear it: whistle then to me,
As signal that thou hear'st something approach.

Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.

Page. I am almost afraid to stand alone
Here in the church-yard; yet I will adventure.
[Retires.]

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers I strew thy bridal bed:

Sweet tomb, that in thy circuit dost contain

The perfect model of eternity;

Pair Juliet, that with angels dost remain,

Accept this latest favour at my hands;

That living honour'd thee, and, being dead,
With funeral praises do adorn thy tomb!

[The Boy whistles.]

The boy gives warning, something doth approach.

What cursed foot wanders this way to-night,
To cross my obsequies, and true-love's rites?
What, with a torch!—muffle me, night, a while. [Retires.]

Enter ROMEO and BALTHASAR with a Torch, Mattock, &c.

Rom. Give me that mattock, and the wrenching iron.

Hold, take this letter; early in the morning

See thou deliver it to my lord and father.

Give me the light: Upon thy life I charge
thee,

Whate'er thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof,
And do not interrupt me in my course.

Why I descend into this bed of death,

Is, partly, to behold my lady's face: [ger

But, chiefly, to take hence from her dead fin-

A precious ring; a ring that I must use

In dear employment:† therefore hence, be-
gone:—

* I. e. On a trivial or idle subject.

† I. e. Action of importance.

But if thou, jealous, dost return to pry
In what I further shall intend to do,
By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint,
And strew this hungry church-yard with thy limbs:

The time and my intents are savage-wild;
More fierce, and more inexorable far,
Than empty tigers, or the roaring sea.

Bal. I will be gone, Sir, and not trouble
you.

Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship.—
Take thou that:

Live, and be prosperous; and farewell, good
fellow.

Bal. For all this same, I'll hide me hereabout;

His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt.

[Retires.]

Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of
death

Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth,

Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open,

[Breaking open the Door of the Monument.]

And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food!

Par. This is that banish'd haughty Montague,

[grief,

That murder'd my love's cousin;—with which

It is supposed the fair creature died,—

And here is come to do some villanous shame

To the dead bodies; I will apprehend him.—

[Advances.]

Stop thy unballow'd toil, vile Montague;

Can vengeance be pursu'd farther than death?

Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee:

Obeys, and go with me; for thou must die.

Rom. I must, indeed; and therefore came I hither.—

Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man, Fly hence and leave me;—think upon these
gone;

Let them affright thee.—I beseech thee, youth,

Heap not another sin upon my head,

By urging me to fury:—O, be gone!

By heaven, I love thee better than myself:

For I come hither arm'd against myself:

Stay not, begone;—live, and hereafter say—

A madman's mercy bade thee run away.

Par. I do defy thy conjurations,*

And do attach thee as a felon here.

Rom. Wilt thou provoke me? then have at thee, boy. [They fight.]

Page. O lord! they fight: I will go call the watch. [Exit PAGE.]

Par. O, I am slain! [Falls.]—If thou be merciful,

Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet. [Dies.]

Rom. In faith, I will:—Let me peruse this face;—

Mercutio's kinsman, noble county Paris:—

What said my man, when my betossed soul

Did not attend him as we rode? I think,

He told me, Paris should have married Juliet:—

Said he not so? or did I dream it so? [liet:

Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet,

To think it was so?—O, give me thy hand,

One writ with me in sour misfortune's book!

I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave,—

A grave? O, no; a lantern,† slaughter'd
youth,

For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes

This vault a feasting presence; full of light.

* I refuse to do as thou conjurest me to do, i. e. depart.

† The allusion is to a louvre or turret full of windows

by means of which ancient halls, &c. are illuminated.

‡ Presence chamber.

Death, lie thou there, by a dead man interr'd.

[Laying PARIS in the Monument.]

How oft when men are at the point of death
Have they been merry? which their keepers call

A lightning before death: O, how may I
Call this a lightning!—O, my love! my wife!
Death that hath suck'd the honey of thy
breath,

Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty:
Thou art not conquer'd; beauty's ensign yet
Is crimson in thy lips, and in thy cheeks,
And death's pale flag is not advanced there.—
Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet?
O, what more favour can I do to thee,
Than with that hand that cut thy youth in
twain,

To slander his that was thine enemy?
Forgive me, cousin!—Ah dear Juliet,
Why art thou yet so fair? Shall I believe
That unsubstantial Death is amorous;
And that the lean abhorred monster keeps
Thee here in dark to be his paramour?
For fear of that, I will still stay with thee;
And never from this palace of dim night
Depart again; here, here will I remain
With worms that are thy chambermaids; O,
Will I set up my everlasting rest;
And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars
From this world-wearied flesh.—Eyes, look your last!

Arms, take your last embrace! and lips, O you
The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss
A dateless bargain to engrossing death!—
Come, bitter conduct,* come, unsavoury guide!
Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on
The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark!
Here's to my love!—[Drinks.] O, true apothecary!

Thy drugs are quick.—Thus with a kiss I die.
[Dies.]

Enter at the other end of the Church-Yard, Friar LAURENCE, with a Lantern, Crow, and Spade.

Fri. Saint Francis be my speed! how oft tonight [there?]

Have my old feet stumbled at graves?—Who's
Who is it that consorts, so late, the dead?

Bal. Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well.

Fri. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good my
friend,
What torch is yond', that vainly lends his light
To grubs and eyeless skulls? as I discern,
It burneth in the Capels' monument.

Bal. It doth so, holy Sir; and there's my [master,]
One that you love.

Fri. Who is it?

Bal. Romeo.

Fri. How long hath he been there?

Bal. Full half an hour.

Fri. Go with me to the vault.

Bal. I dare not, Sir:

My master knows not, but I am gone hence;
And fearfully did menace me with death,
If I did stay to look on his intents.

Fri. Stay then, I'll go alone:—Fear comes upon me:

O, much I fear some ill unlucky thing.

Bal. As I did sleep under this yew-tree here,
I dreamt my master and another fought,
And that my master slew him.

Fri. Romeo? [Advances.]

Alack, alack, what blood is this, which stains
The stony entrance of this sepulchre!—

* Conductor.

What mean these masterless and gory souls
To lie discolour'd by this place of peace?

Romeo! O, pale!—Who else? what, Paris
too?

And steep'd in blood!—Ah, what a villain
Is guilty of this lamentable chance!—
The lady stirs.

Jul. O, comfortable fiend! where is my lord?
I do remember well where I should be,
And there I am:—Where is my Romeo?

Fri. I hear some noise.—Lady, come in that nest

Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep;
A greater power than we can contradict
Hath thwarted our intents; come, come, say
Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead,
And Paris too, come, I'll dispose of thee
Among a sisterhood of holy nuns:
Stay not to question, for the watch is coming;
Come, go, good Juliet,—[Noise again.] I do stay no longer.

Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not
away.—

What's here? a cup, clos'd in my true love's
Poison, I see, hath been his timeless end:—
O churl! drink all; and leave no friendly drop
To help me after!—I will kiss thy lips;
Haply, some poison yet doth hang on them,
To make me die with a restorative. [Kisses him.]
Thy lips are warm!

I Watch. [Within.] Lead, boy:—What
way?

Jul. Yea, noise?—then I'll be brief:—O happy dagger!

[Snatching Romeo's Dagger.]
This is thy sheath; [Stabs herself.] there rest, and let me die.

[Falls on Romeo's Body, and dies.]

Enter WATCH, with the PAGE of PARIS.

Page. This is the place; there, where the torch doth burn.

1 Watch. The ground is bloody; Search about the church-yard:

Go, some of you, whose'er you find, attack.
[Exeunt some.]

Pitiful sight! here lies the county slain;
And Juliet bleeding; warm, and newly dead,
Who here hath lain these two days buried—
Go, tell the prince,—run to the Capulets,— Raise up the Montagues,—some other search;— [Exeunt other WATCHMEN.]

We see the ground whereon these woes do lie;
But the true ground of all these piteous woes
We cannot without circumstance descry.

Enter some of the WATCH, with BALTHAZAR.

2 Watch. Here's Romeo's man, we found him in the church-yard.

1 Watch. Hold him in safety, till the prior come hither.

Enter another WATCHMAN, with Friar LAURENCE.

3 Watch. Here is a friar, that trembles, sighs, and weeps:
We took this mattock and this spade from him.
As he was coming from this church-yard side.

1 Watch. A great suspicion; Stay the first too.

Enter the PRINCE and Attendants.

Prince. What misadventure is so early up,
That calls our people from our morning's rest?

Enter CAPULET, Lady CAPULET, and others.

Cap. What should it be, that they so shriek abroad?

La. Cap. The people in the street cry—Romeo,

Some—Juliet, and some—Paris; and all run, With open outcry toward our monument.

Prince. What fear is this, which startles in our ears?

1 Watch. Sovereign, here lies the county Paris slain;

And Romeo dead; and Juliet, dead before, Warm and new kill'd.

Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes.

1 Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd Romeo's man;

With instruments upon them, fit to open These dead men's tombs.

Cap. O, heavens!—O, wife! look how our daughter bleeds!

This dagger hath mista'en,—for lo! his house* Is empty on the back of Montague,—

And is mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom.

La. Cap. O me! this sight of death is as a bell,

That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter MONTAGUE and others.

Prince. Come, Montague; for thou art early up,

To see thy son and heir more early down.

Mon. Alas, my liege, my wife is dead to-night;

Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her breath:

What further woe conspires against mine age?

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see.

Mon. O thou untaught! what manners is in this,

To press before thy father to a grave?

Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for a while,

Till we can clear these ambiguities, And know their spring, their head, their true descent;

And then will I be general of your woes, And lead you even to death: Meantime forbear,

And let mischance be slave to patience.—

Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Fri. I am the greatest, able to do least, Yet most suspected, as the time and place Doth make against me, of this direful murder;

And here I stand, both to impeach and purge Myself condemned and myself accus'd.

Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this.

Fri. I will be brief, for my short date of breath

Is not so long as is a tedious tale.

Romeo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet;

And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful wife:

I married them; and their stolen-marriage-day

Was Tybalt's doomsday, whose untimely death

Banish'd the new-made bridegroom from this city;

For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pin'd.

You—to remove that siege* of grief from her,—

Betroth'd, and would have married her perforce,

To county Paris:—Then comes she to me; And, with wild looks, bid me devise some means

To rid her from this second marriage, Or, in my cell there would she kill herself.

Then gave I her, so tutor'd by my art, A sleeping potion; which so took effect

As I intended, for it wrought on her The form of death: meantime I writ to Romeo,

That he should hither come as this dire night, To help to take her from her borrow'd grave,

Being the time the potion's force should cease.

But he which bore my letter, friar John, Was staid by accident; and yesternight

Return'd my letter back: Then all alone, At the prefixed hour of her waking,

Came I to take her from her kindred's vault; Meaning to keep her closely at my cell,

Till I conveniently could send to Romeo:

But, when I came, (some minute ere the time Of her awakening,) here untimely lay

The noble Paris, and true Romeo, dead.

She wakes; and I entreated her come forth, And bear this work of heaven with patience:

But then a noise did scare me from the tomb; And she, too desperate, would not go with me,

But (as it seems,) did violence on herself. All this I know; and to the marriage

Her nurse is privy: And, if aught in this

Miscarried by my fault, let my old life

Be sacrific'd, some hour before his time,

Unto the rigour of severest law.

Prince. We still have known thee for a holy man.—

Where's Romeo's man? what can he say in this?

Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet's death;

And then in post he came from Mantua, To this same place, to this same monument.

This letter he early bid me give his father;

And threaten'd me with death, going in the vault,

If I departed not, and left him there.

Prince. Give me the letter, I will look on it.—

Where is the county's page, that rais'd the watch?—

Sirrah, what made your master in this place?

Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave;

And bid me stand aloof, and so I did:

Anon, comes one with light to ope the tomb;

And, by and by, my master drew on him;

And then I ran away to call the watch.

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar's words,

Their course of love, the tidings of her death: And here he writes—that he did buy a poison

Of a poor 'pothecary, and therewithal

Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet.—

Where be these enemies? Capulet! Montague!—

See, what a scourge is laid upon your hate, That heaven finds means to kill your joys with love!

And I, for winking at your discords too,

LET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

lla! Bernardo!

Ber. Say.
What, is Horatio there?
Hor. A piece of him.
Ber. Welcome, Horatio; welcome, good
Marcellus.
Hor. What, has this thing appear'd again
to-night?
Ber. I have seen nothing.
Mar. Horatio says, 'tis but our fantasy;
And will not let belief take hold of him,
Touching this dreaded sight, twice seen of us;
Therefore I have entreated him along,
With us to watch the minutes of this night;
That, if again this apparition come,
He may approve^a our eyes, and speak to it.
Hor. Tush! tush! 'twill not appear.
Ber. Sit down awhile;
And let us once again assail your ears,
That are so fortified against our story,
What we two nights have seen.
Hor. Well, sit we down,
And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.
Ber. Last night of all,
When yon same star, that's westward from the pole, [heaven
Had made his course to illume that part of Where now it burns, Marcellus, and myself,
The bell then beating one,— Mar. Peace, break thee off; look, where it comes again!

Enter GHOST.

Ber. In the same figure like the king that's dead.
Mar. Thou art a scholar, speak to it, Horatio.
Ber. Looks it not like the King? mark it,
Horatio.

Hor. Most like:—it harrows^a me with fear, and wonder.

Mar. It would be spoke to.

Mar. Speak to it, Horatio.

Hor. What art thou, that usurp'st this time of night,

Together with that fair and warlike form
In which the majesty of buried Denmark
Did sometimes march? by heaven I charge thee, speak.

Mar. It is offended.

Hor. See! it stalks away.

Hor. Stay; speak: speak I charge thee, speak. [Exit Ghost.

Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.

Hor. How, now, Horatio? you tremble, and look pale:

Is not this something more than fantasy?
What think you of it?

Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe,
Without the sensible and true avouch
Of mine own eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the king?

Hor. As thou art to thyself:

Such was the very armour he had on,
When he the ambitious Norway combated;
So frown'd he once, when, in angry parle,[†]
He smote the sledged[‡] Polack[§] on the ice.
'Tis strange.

Mar. Thus, twice before, and jump[¶] at this dead hour,
With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work, I knew not;

But, in the gross and scope of mine opinion,
This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows,

Why this same strict and most observant watch
So nightly toils the subject of the land;
And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,
And foreign mart for implements of war;
Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore task

Does not divide the Sunday from the week:
What might be toward, that this sweaty haste
Doth make the night joint-labourer with the
Who is't, that can inform me? [day;

Hor. That can I;

At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king,
Whose image even but now appear'd to us,
Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,
Thereto prick'd on by a most emulate pride,
Dar'd to the combat; in which our valiant Hamlet [him,)

Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a seal'd com-

Did forfeit, with his life, all those his lands,
Which he stood seiz'd of, to the conqueror:

Against the which, a moiety competent
Was gaged by our king; which had return'd

But to recover of us, by strong hand,
And terms compulsory, those 'Invincible

Is the main motive of our preparations;
The source of this our watch; and the chief

Well may it sort,[†] that this portentous sign Comes armed through our watch; so like the

Hor. A mote it is, to trouble the mind's eye.
In the most high and palmy[‡] state of Rome,
A little ere the mightiest Julius fell, [fall
The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted
Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets.

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my partizan?

Hor. Do, if it will not stand.

Hor. 'Tis here!

Mar. 'Tis gone! [Exit Ghost.

We do it wrong, being so majestic,
To offer it the show of violence;
For it is, as the air, invulnerable,
And our vain blows malicious mockery.

Hor. It was about to speak, when the cock crew.

Hor. And then it started like a guilty thing
Upon a fearful summons. I have heard,
The cock, that is the trumpet of the morn,
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat
Awake the god of day; and, at his warning,
Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
The extravagant and erring[¶] spirit hies
To his confine: and of the truth herein
This present object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock.
Some say, that ever 'gainst that season comes Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
This bird of dawning singeth all night long:
And then they say no spirit dares stir abroad;

strike,

No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm,
So hallow'd and so gracious is the time.

Hor. So I have heard, and do in part believe
But, look, the morn, in russet mantle clad, [it.
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastern hill:
Break we our watch up; and, by my advice,
Let us impart what we have seen to-night
Unto young Hamlet: for, upon my life,
This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him:
Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it,
As needful in our loves, fitting our duty?

Mar. Let's do't, I pray; and I this morning
know

Where we shall find him most convenient.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same.—A Room of State in the same.

*Enter the KING, QUEEN, HAMLET, POLONIUS, LAERTES, VOLTIMAND, CORNELIUS, LORDS,
and Attendants.*

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's death

The memory be green; and that it us befitted
To bear our hearts in grief, and our whole kingdom

To be contracted in one brow of woe;
Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature,
That we with wisest sorrow think on him,
Together with remembrance of ourselves.

Therefore our sometime sister, now our queen,
The imperial jointress of this warlike state,
Have we, as 'twere, with a defeated joy,—
With one auspicious, and one dropping eye;
With mirth in funeral, and with dirge in marriage,

In equal scale weighing delight and dole,*—

Taken to wife: nor have we herein barr'd
Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone
With this affair along:—For all, our thanks.

Now follows, that you know, young Fortinbras,—

Holding a weak supposal of our worth;
Or thinking, by our late dear brother's death,
Our state to be disjoint and out of frame,
Collegued with this dream of his advantage,
He hath not fail'd to pester us with message,
Importing our surrender of those lands
Lost by his father, with all bandst of law,
To our most valiant brother.—So much for
him.

Now for ourself, and for this time of meeting.
Thus much the business is: We have here writ
To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,—
Who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely hears
Of this his nephew's purpose,—to suppress
His further gait; herein; in that the levies,
The lists, and full proportions, are all made
Out of his subject:—and we here despatch
You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand,
For bearers of this greeting to old Norway;
Giving to you no further personal power
To business with the king, more than the scope
Of these dilated articles allow. [duty.

Farewell; and let your haste commend your Cor. Vol. In that, and all things, will we show our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing; heartily farewell.

[Exeunt VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.
And now, Laertes, what's the news with you?
You told us of some suit; What is't, Laertes?
You cannot speak of reason to the Dane,

And lose your voice: What wouldst thou beg,
Laertes,

That shall not be my offer, not thy asking?
The head is not more native to the heart,
The hand more instrumental to the mouth,
Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father
What wouldst thou have, Laertes?

Laer. My dread lord,
Your leave and favour to return to France;
From whence though willingly I came to Denmark,

To show my duty in your coronation;
Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend again toward France, [don.

And bow them to your gracious leave and par-King. Have you your father's leave? What says Polonius?

Pol. He hath, my lord, [wrung from me my slow leave,

By laboursome petition; and, at last,
Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent:]
I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time be thine,

And thy best graces: spend it at thy will.—

But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son,—

Ham. A little more than kin, and less than kind.* [Aside.

King. How is it, that the clouds still hang on you?

Ham. Not so, my lord, I am too much i'the
sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nighted colour off, [mark.

And let thine eye look like a friend on Den-
Do not, for ever, with thy veiled lids†

Seek for thy noble father in the dust:

Thou know'st, 'tis common; all, that live,
must die,

Passing through nature to eternity.

Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.

Queen. If it be,

Why seems it so particular with thee?

Ham. Seems, madam! nay, it is; I know not seems.

'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspiration of forc'd breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,
Nor the dejected haviour of the visage,
Together with all forms, modes, shows of grief, [seem,

That can denote me truly: These, indeed,
For they are actions that a man might play:

But I have that within, which passeth show;
These, but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature, Hamlet,

To give these mourning duties to your father:
But, you must know, your father lost a father;
That father lost his; and the survivor bound
In filial obligation, for some term

To do obsequious sorrow: But to perséver
In obstinate condolment, is a course

(Of impious stubbornness; 'tis unmanly grief:
It shows a will most incorrect to heaven;

A heart unfortified, or mind impatient;
An understanding simple and unschool'd:

For what, we know, must be, and is as common

As any the most vulgar thing to sense,
Why should we, in our peevish opposition,

Take it to heart? Fie! 'tis a fault to heaven,

* Nature: a little more than a kinsman, and less than a natural one.

† Lowering eye.

A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,
To reason most absurd; whose common theme
Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first corse, till he that died to-day,
This must be so. We pray you, throw to earth
This unprevailing woe; and think of us
As of a father: for let the world take note,
You are the most immediate to our throne;
And, with no less nobility of love,
Than that which dearest father bears his son,
Do I impart toward you. For your intent
In going back to school in Wittenberg,
It is most retrograde* to our desire:
And, we beseech you, bend you to remain
Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye,
Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.

Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers,
Hamlet;

I pray thee, stay with us, go not to Wittenberg.

Ham. I shall in all my best obey you, madam.

King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply;
Be as ourself in Denmark.—Madam, come;
This gentle and unforc'd accord of Hamlet
Sits smiling to my heart: in grace whereof,
No jocund health, that Denmark drinks to-day,
But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell;
And the king's rouser the heaven shall bruit
again,

Re-speaking earthly thunder. Come away.

[Exeunt KING, QUEEN, Lords, &c. POLONIUS, and LAERTES.]

Ham. O, that this too too solid flesh would Thaw, and resolve itself into a dew! [melt,
Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd [God!
His canon|| 'gainst self-slaughter! O God! O
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seem to me all the uses of this world!
Fie on't! O fie! 'tis an unweeded garden,
That grows to seed; things rank, and gross in nature, [this!
Possess it merely.¶ That it should come to
But two months dead!—nay, not so much, not
So excellent a king; that was, to this, [two:
Hyperion to a satyr: so loving to my mother,
That he might not beteem†† the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth!
Must I remember? why, she would hang on
As if increase of appetite had grown [him,
By what it fed on: And yet, within a month,— Let me not think on't;—Frailty, thy name is woman!—

A little month; or ere those shoes were old,
With which she follow'd my poor father's
body,
Like Niobe, all tears;—why she, even she,— O heaven! a beast, that wants discourse of
reason,
Would have mourn'd longer,—married with my uncle,
My father's brother; but no more like my father,
Than I to Hercules: Within a month;
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing in her galled eyes,
She married:—(O most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to incestuous sheets!
It is not, nor it cannot come to, good;
But break, my heart: for I must hold my tongue!

Enter HORATIO, BERNARDO, and MARCELLUS.

Hor. Hail to your lordship!

Ham. I am glad to see you well:
Horatio,—or I do forget myself.

Hor. The same, my lord, and your power want ever.

Ham. Sir, my good friend; I'll change my name with you.

And what make you from Wittenberg, Ham
Marcellus?

Mar. My good lord,—

Ham. I am very glad to see you; good even
Sir.—

But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.

Ham. I would not hear your enemy say so.
Nor shall you do mine ear that violence,
To make it trust of your own report
Against yourself: I know, you are no traitor.
But what is your affair in Elsinore?

We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart.

Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral.

Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow-student;

I think, it was to see my mother's wedding.

Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon.

Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio! the funeral baked meats*

Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.

'Would I had met my dearest† foe in heaven

Or ever I had seen that day, Horatio!—

My father,—Methinks, I see my father.

Hor. Where,

My lord?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.

Hor. I saw him once, he was a goodly king.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.

Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw! who?

Hor. My lord, the king your father.

Ham. The king my father?

Hor. Season your admiration for a while
With an attent† ear; till I may deliver,
Upon the witness of these gentlemen,
This marvel to you.

Ham. For God's love, let me hear.

Hor. Two nights together had these gentle-
men,

Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch,

In the dead waist and middle of the night,

Been thus encounter'd. A figure like your

Armed at point, exactly, cap-à-pe, [father,
Appears before them, and, with solemn march,

Goes slow and stately by them: thrice he walk'd,

By their oppress'd and fear-surprized eyes,

Within his truncheon's length; whilst they,

Almost to jelly with the act of fear, [disturb Stand dumb, and speak not to him. This to me

In dreadful secrecy impart they did;

And I with them, the third night, kept the watch:

Where, as they had deliver'd, both in time.

Form of the thing, each word made true and
good,

The apparition comes: I knew your father:
These hands are not more like.

Ham. But where was this?

Hor. My lord, upon the platform where we watch'd.

Ham. Did you not speak to it?

Hor. My lord, I did;

But answer made it none: yet once, methought,

It lifted up its head, and did address

Itself to motion, like as it would speak:

But, even then, the morning cock crew loud;

ment at a funeral.

And at the sound it shrunk in haste away,
And vanish'd from our sight.

Ham. 'Tis very strange.

Hor. As I do live, my honour'd lord, 'tis true;

And we did think it writ down in our duty,
To let you know of it.

Ham. Indeed, indeed, Sirs, but this troubles
Hold you the watch to-night? [me.

All. We do, my lord.

Ham. Arm'd, say you?

All. Arm'd, my lord.

Ham. From top to toe?

All. My lord, from head to foot.

Ham. Then saw you not
His face.

Hor. O, yes, my lord; he wore his beaver^a up.

Ham. What, look'd he frowningly?

Hor. A countenance more
In sorrow than in anger.

Ham. Pale, or red?

Hor. Nay, very pale.

Ham. And fix'd his eyes upon you?

Hor. Most constantly.

Ham. I would, I had been there.

Hor. It would have much amaz'd you.

Ham. Very like,

Very like: Stay'd it long?

Hor. While one with moderate haste might tell a hundred.

Mar. Ber. Longer, longer.

Hor. Not when I saw it.

Ham. His beard was grizzl'd? no?

Hor. It was, as I have seen it in his life,
A sable silver'd.

Ham. I will watch to-night;
Perchance, 'twill walk again.

Hor. I warrant, it will.

Ham. If it assume my noble father's person,
I'll speak to it, though hell itself should gape,
And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
If you have hitherto conceal'd this sight,
Let it be tenable in your silence still;
And whatsoever else shall hap to-night,
Give it an understanding, but no tongue;
I will requite your loves: So, fare you well:
Upon the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve,
I'll visit you.

All. Our duty to your honour.

Ham. Your loves, as mine to you: Farewell.

[Exeunt HORATIO, MARCELLUS, and BER-NARDO.

My father's spirit in arms! all is not well;
I doubt some foul play: 'would, the night were
come!

Till then sit still, my soul: Foul deeds will rise, Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes. [Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in POLONIUS' House.

Enter LAERTES and OPHELIA.

Laer. My necessities are embark'd; fare-

And convoy is assistant, do not sleep,
But let me hear from you.

Oph. Do you doubt that?

Oph. No more but so?

^a That part of the helmet which may be lifted up.

Laer. Think it no more:

For nature, crescent,^a does not grow alone
In thews,[†] and bulk; but, as this temple
waxes,

The inward service of the mind and soul
Grows wide withal. Perhaps, he loves you
now;

And now no soil, nor cautel,[‡] doth besmirch
The virtue of his will: but, you must fear,
His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own;

For he himself is subject to his birth:

He may not, as unvalued persons do,
Carve for himself; for on his choice depends
The safety and the health of the whole state;

And therefore must his choice be circumscrib'd
Unto the voice and yielding of that body,

Whereof he is the head: Then if he says he loves you,

It fits your wisdom so far to believe it,
As he in his particular act and place [ther,

May give his saying deed; which is no fur-

Or lose your heart; or your chaste treasure

Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister;
And keep you in the rear of your affection,

Out of the shot and danger of desire.
The chariest^{††} maid is prodigal enough,

If she unmask her beauty to the moon:
Virtue itself escapes not calumnious strokes:

The canker galls the infants of the spring,
Too oft before their buttons be disclos'd;

And in the morn and liquid dew of youth
Contagious blastments are most imminent.

Be wary then: best safety lies in fear;
Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

Laer. () fear me not.
I stay too long;—But here my father comes.

Enter POLONIUS.

A double blessing is a double grace;
Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

Pol. Yet here, Laertes! aboard, aboard, for

The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,
And you are staid for: There,—my blessing

Take each man's censure,* but reserve thy judgement.

Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy:
For the apparel oft proclaims the man;
And they in France, of the best rank and station,

Are most select and generous,† chiefly in that.
Neither a borrower, nor a lender be:
For loan oft loses both itself and friend;
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.§
This above all,—To thine ownself be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.
Farewell; my blessing season|| this in thee!

Laer. Most humbly do I take my leave, my lord.

Pol. The time invites you; go, your servants tend.¶

Laer. Farewell, Ophelia; and remember well
What I have said to you.

Oph. 'Tis in my memory lock'd,
And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Laer. Farewell. [Exit LAERTES.]

Pol. What is't, Ophelia, he hath said to you?

Oph. So please you, something touching the lord Hamlet.

Pol. Marry, well bethought:
'Tis told me, he hath very oft of late
Given private time to you: and you yourself
Have of your audience been most free and bounteous,

If it be so, (as so 'tis put on me,
And that in way of caution,) I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly.
As it behoves my daughter, and your honour:
What is between you? give me up the truth.

Oph. He hath, my lord, of late, made many
Of his affection to me. [tenders]

Pol. Affection? puh! you speak like a green
girl,

Unsifted in such perilous circumstance.
Do you believe his tenders, as you call them?

Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

Pol. Marry, I'll teach you: think yourself a baby;

That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay,
Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly;

Or (not to crack the wind of the poor phrase,
Wrangling it thus,) you'll tender me a fool.

Oph. My lord he hath importun'd me with
In honourable fashion.†† [love,

Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it; go to, go to.

Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech, my lord,
With almost all the holy vows of heaven.

Pol. Ay, springes to catch woodcocks. I do
know,

When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Lends the tongue vows: these blazes, daughter,

Giving more light than heat,—extinct in both,
Even in their promise, as it is a making.—
You must not take for fire. From this time,
Be somewhat scanter of your maiden presence;
Set your entreatments‡‡ at a higher rate,
Than a command to parley. For lord Hamlet,
Believe so much in him, That he is young;

And with a larger tether* may be walk.
Then may be given you: In few, Ophelia.
Do not believe his vows: for they are brokers.
Not of that die which their investments are
But mere implorators‡ of unholy suits.
Breathing like sanctified and pious bonds.
The better to beguile. This is for all.—
I would not, in plain terms, from this time
forth,

Have you so slander any moment's leisure.
As to give words or talk with the lord Hamlet.
Look to't, I charge you; come your ways.

Oph. I shall obey, my lord. [Exit]

SCENE IV.—The Platform.

Enter HAMLET, HORATIO, and MARCELLUS.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.

Hor. It is a nipping and an eager air.

Ham. What hour now?

Hor. I think, it lacks of twelve.

Mar. No, it is struck.

Hor. Indeed? I heard it not; it then drew near the season,

Wherein the spirit held is wont to walk.

[A Flourish of Trumpets, and Drums shot off, within.]

What does this mean, my lord?

Ham. The king doth wake to-night and takes his rouse.¶

Keeps wassel,¶ and the swaggering up-spring reels;¶¶

And, as he drains his draughts of Rhenish,
The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray at
The triumph of his pledge.

Hor. Is it a custom?

Ham. Ay, marry, is't:

But to my mind,—though I am native here,
And to the manner born,—it is a custom
More honour'd in the breach, than the observance.

This heavy-headed revel, east and west,
Makes us traduc'd, and tax'd of other nations:
They clepe it us, drunkards, and with a swinish phrase

Soil our addition; and, indeed it takes
From our achievements, though perform'd at height,

The pith and marrow of our attribute.

So, oft it chances in particular men.

That, for some vicious mode of nature in us,
As, in their birth, (wherein they are not guilty,
Since nature cannot choose his origin.

By the o'ergrowth of some complexion,
Oft breaking down the pales and forts of rea-
son;

Or by some habit, that too much o'er-leavens
The form of plausible manners;—that makes
men,—

Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect.

Being nature's livery, or fortune's star.—

Their virtues else (be they as pure as snow,
As infinite as man may undergo,)

Shall in the general censure take corruption
From that particular fault: The dram of flesh
Doth all the noble substance often cloy
To his own scandal.

Enter GHOST.

Hor. Look, my lord, it comes!

Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us!—

And, for the day, confin'd to fast in fires,
Till the foul crimes, done in my days of nature,
Are burn'd and purg'd away. But that I am
To tell the secrets of my prison-house, [forbid
I could a tale unfold, whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul; freeze thy young
blood;

Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their Thy knotted and combined locks to part,
Like quills upon the fretful porcupine:

But this eternal blazon* must not be
To ears of flesh and blood:—List, list, O list!—
If thou didst ever thy dear father love,—

HAM. O heaven!

GHOST. Revenge his foul and most unnatural murder.

HAM. Murder?

GHOST. Murder most foul, as in the best it is;
But this most foul, strange, and unnatural.

HAM. Haste me to know it; that I, with wings as swift

As meditation, or the thoughts of love,

May sweep to my revenge.

GHOST. I find thee apt;

And duller shouldst thou be than the fat weed
That rots itself in ease on Lethæ wharf, [hear:
Wouldst thou not stir in this. Now, Hamlet,
'Tis given out, that sleeping in mine orchard,†
A serpent stung me; so the whole ear of Den-
Is by a forged process of my death [mark
Rankly abus'd: but know, thou noble youth,
The serpent that did sting thy father's life,
Now wears his crown.

HAM. O, my prophetic soul! my uncle!

GHOST. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate
beast,

With witchcraft of his wit, with traitorous gifts,
(O wicked wit, and gifts, that have the power
So to seduce!) won to his shameful lust

The will of my most seeming virtuous queen:

O, Hamlet, what a falling-off was there!

From me, whose love was of that dignity,

That it went hand in hand even with the vow

I made to her in marriage; and to decline

Upon a wretch, whose natural gifts were poor
To those of mine!

But virtue, as it never will be mov'd,

Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven;

So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd,

Will sate‡ itself in a celestial bed,

And prey on garbage.

But, soft! methinks, I scent the morning air;

My custom always of the afternoon, [chard,

Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,

With juice of cursed hebenon§ in a vial,

And in the porches of mine ears did pour

The leperous distilment: whose effect

That, swift as quicksilver, it courses through

The natural gates and alleys of the body;

* Display. † Garden. ‡ Satisfac. \ Unharm.

All my smooth body.

With all my imperfections on my head:

O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible!
If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not;
Let not the royal bed of Denmark be
A couch for luxury and damned incest.
But, howsoever thou pursu'st this act,
Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive
Against thy mother aught; leave her to heaven
And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,
To prick and sting her. Fare thee well a

It is, Adieu, adieu! remember me.
I have sworn't.

Hor. [Within.] Heaven secure him!

Ham. So be it!

Mar. [Within.] Illo, ho, ho, my lord!

Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy! come, bird, come.

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Mar. How is't, my noble lord?

Hor. What news, my lord?

Ham. O wonderful!

Hor. Good my lord, tell it.

Ham. No;

You will reveal it.

Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven.

Mar. Nor I, my lord.

Ham. How say you then; would heart of man once think it?—

But you'll be secret,——

Hor. Mar. Ay, by heaven, my lord.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Room in POLONIUS' House.

Enter POLONIUS and REYNALDO.

Pol. Give him this money, and these notes,
 Reynaldo.
 Rey. I will, my lord.
 Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good
 Reynaldo,
 Before you visit him, to make inquiry
 Of his behaviour.
 Rey. My lord, I did intend it.
 Pol. Marry, well said: very well said. Look you, Sir,
 Inquire me first what Danskers* are in Paris;
 And how, and who, what means, and where they keep,
 What company, at what expense; and finding,
 By this encompassment and drift of question,
 That they do know my son, come you more nearer
 Than your particular demands will touch it:
 Take you, as 'twere, some distant knowledge
 of him;
 As thus,—*I know his father, and his friends,
 And, in part, him;—Do you mark this, Rey-naldo?*
 Rey. Ay, very well, my lord.
 Pol. And, in part, him;—but, you may say,
 not well:
*But, if't be he I mean, he's very wild;
 Addicted so and so;—and there put on him
 What forgeries you please; marry, none so
 rank
 As may dishonour him; take heed of that;
 But, Sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips,
 As are companions noted and most known
 To youth and liberty.*
 Rey. As gaming, my lord.
 Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, quarrelling,
 Drabbing:—You may go so far.
 Rey. My lord, that would dishonour him.
 Pol. 'Faith, no; as you may season it in the charge.
 You must not put another scandal on him,
 That he is open to incontinency;
 That's not my meaning: but breathe his faults
 so quaintly,
 That they may seem the taints of liberty:
 The flash and out-break of a fiery mind;
 A savageness† in unreclaimed blood,
 Of general assault.

* Danes.

† Wildness.

Rey. But, my good lord,——

Pol. Wherefore should you do this?

Rey. Ay, my lord,
 I would know that.

Pol. Marry, Sir, here's my drift;
 And, I believe, it is a fetch of warrant:
 You laying these slight sullies on my son,
 As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i'the working,
 Mark you,
 Your party in converse, him you would sound,
 Having ever seen in the prenominate* crimes,
 The youth you breathe of, guilty, be assur'd,
 He closes with you in this consequence;
Good Sir, or so; or friend, or gentleman,—
 According to the phrase, or the addition,
 Of man, and country.

Rey. Very good, my lord.

Pol. And then, Sir, does he this,—He does—
 What was I about to say?—By the mass, I was about to say something:—Where did
 I leave?

Rey. At, closes in the consequence.

Pol. At, closes in the consequence,—Ay, marry;

He closes with you thus:—*I know the gentle-
 I saw him yesterday, or t'other day,* [man;
Or then, or then; with such, or such; and, as you say,

*There was he gaming; there o'erlook in his rouse;
 There falling out at tennis: or, perchance,
 I saw him enter such a house of sale,
 (Videlicet,† a brothel,) or so forth.—*

See you now;

Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth:
 And thus do we of wisdom and of reach,
 With windlances, and with assays of bias,
 By indirections find directions out;
 So, by former lecture and advice,
 Shall you my son: You have me, have you not?

Rey. My lord, I have.

Pol. God be wi' you; fare you well.

Rey. Good my lord,——

Pol. (Observe his inclination in yourself.)

Rey. I shall, my lord.

Pol. And let him play his music.

Rey. Well, my lord. [Exit.

Enter OPHELIA.

Pol. Farewell!—How now, Ophelia? what's
 the matter;

Oph. O, my lord, my lord, I have been so affrighted!

Pol. With what, in the name of heaven?

Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my closet,

Lord Hamlet,—with his doublet all unbrac'd;
 No hat upon his head; his stockings foul'd,
 Ungarter'd, and down-gyved‡ to his ankle;
 Pale as his shirt; his knees knocking each
 And with a look so piteous in purport, [other;
 As if he had been loosed out of hell,
 To speak of horrors,—he comes before me.

Pol. Mad for thy love?

Oph. My lord, I do not know;

But, truly, I do fear it.

Pol. What said he?

Oph. He took me by the wrist, and held me hard;

Then goes he to the length of all his arm;
 And, with his other hand thus o'er his brow,
 He falls to such perusal of my face,
 As he would draw it. Long stay'd he so;
 At last,—a little shaking of mine arm,

And thrice his head thus waving up & down,—

He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound,
As it did seem to shatter all his bulk,*
And end his being: That done, he lets me go
And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd
He seem'd to find his way without his eyes;
For out o'doors he went without their helps,
And, to the last, bended their light on me.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern!
Moreover that we much did long to see you,
The need, we have to use you, did provoke
Our hasty sending. Something have you heard
Of Hamlet's transformation; so I call it,
Since not the exterior nor the inward man
Resembles that it was: What it should be,
More than his father's death, that thus hath put him
So much from the understanding of himself,
I cannot dream of: I entreat you both,

That you vouchsafe your rest here in our

So much as from occasion you may glean,
Whether aught, to us unknown, afflicts him
That, open'd, lies within our remedy. [thus,

Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you;
And, sure I am, two men there are not living,
To whom he more adheres. If it will please
you
To show us so much gentry,† and good-will,
As to expend your time with us a while,
For the supply and profit of our hope,
Your visitation shall receive such thanks
As fits a king's remembrance.

You are welcome, masters; welcome, all:—I am glad to see thee well:—welcome, good friends.—O, old friend! I remember, one said, there were no sallads in the lines, to make the matter savoury; nor no matter in the phrase, that might indite§§ the author of affection:¶¶ but called it, an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly loved: 'twas Æneas' tale to Dido; and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's slaughter: If it live in your memory, begin at this line; let me see, let me see;— good accent, and good discretion.

1 Play. Anon he find him Striking too short at Greeks; his antique
sword,

Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls,
Repugnant to command: Unequal match'd,
Pyrrhus at Priam drives; in rage, strikes wide;
But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword
The unnerv'd father falls. Then senseless Ilium, Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top
Stoops to his base; and with a hideous crash Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear: for, lo! his
sword,

Which was declining on the milky head
Of reverend Priam, seem'd i'the air to stick;
So, as a painted tyrant, Pyrrhus stood;
And, like a neutral to his will and matter,
Did nothing.

But, as we often see, against some storm,
A silence in the heavens, the rack[†] stand still,
The bold winds speechless, and the orb below
As hush as death: anon the dreadful thunder
Doth rend the region: So, after Pyrrhus' pause,
A roused vengeance sets him new a-work;
And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall
On Mars' armour, forg'd for proof eternal[‡]
With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword
Now falls on Priam.—

Out, out, thou strumpet, Fortune! All you
In general synod, take away her power;
Break all the spokes and fellies from her wheel,
And bowl the round nave down the hill of heaven,
As low as to the fiends!

Will bring him to his wonted way again,

To both your honours.

OPH. Madam, I wish it may. [Exit QUEEN.]

POL. Ophelia, walk you here:—Gracious, so

please you,

We will bestow ourselves:—Read on this book: [To OPHELIA.]

That show of such an exercise may colour

Your loneliness.—We are oft to blame in this,— [visage,]

'Tis too much prov'd,‡—that, with devotion's

And pious action, we do sugar o'er

The devil himself.

KING. O, 'tis too true! how smart

A lash that speech doth give my conscience!

The harlot's cheek, beautied with plastering art,

Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it,

Than is my deed to my most painted word:

O heavy burden! [Aside.]

POL. I hear him coming; let's withdraw, my lord. [Exit KING and POLONIUS.]

Enter HAMLET.

HAM. To be, or not to be, that is the question:—

Whether 'tis nobler in the mind, to suffer

The stings and arrows of outrageous fortune;

Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,

And, by opposing, end them?—To die,—to sleep,—

No more;—and, by a sleep, to say we end

The heart-ache, and the thousand natural shocks

That flesh is heir to,—'tis a consummation

Devoutly to be wish'd. To die;—to sleep;—

To sleep! perchance to dream;—ay, there's the rub: [come,]

For in that sleep of death what dreams may

When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,‡

Must give us pause: There's the respect,

That makes calamity of so long life: [time,]

For who would bear the whips and scorns of

The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's con-

tumely,††

The pangs of despis'd love, the law's delay,

The insolence of office, and the spurs

That patient merit of the unworthy takes,

When he himself might his quietus‡‡ make

With a bare bodkin§§ who would fardels¶¶

bear,

To grunt and sweat under a weary life;

But that the dread of something after death,—

The undiscover'd country, from whose bowels¶¶¶

No traveller returns,—puzzles the will;

And makes us rather bear those ills we have,
Than fly to others that we know not of?
Thus conscience does make cowards of us all
And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought;
And enterprises of great pith and moment,
With this regard, their currents turn awry,
And lose the name of action.—Soft you, now
The fair Ophelia:—Nymph, in thy orisons^a
Be all my sins remember'd.

Oph. Good my lord,
How does your honour for this many a day?

Ham. I humbly thank you; well.

Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of
yours,
That I have longed long to re-deliver;
I pray you, now receive them.

Ham. No, not I;
I n-ver gave you aught.

Oph. My honour'd lord, you know right well,
you did;
And, with them, words of so sweet breath
compos'd [lost,
As made the things more rich: their perfume
Take these again; for to the noble mind,
Rich gifts wax poor, when givers prove un-
There, my lord. [kind.

Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?

Oph. My lord?

Ham. Are you fair?

Oph. What means your lordship?

Ham. That if you be honest, and fair, you should admit no discourse to your beauty.

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty?

Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd, than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness; this was sometime a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.

Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe
so.

Ham. You should not have believed me: for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock, but we shall relish of it: I loved you not.

Oph. I was the more deceived.

Ham. Get thee to a nunnery; Why wouldst thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest; but yet I could accuse me of such things, that it were better, my mother had not borne me: I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious; with more offences at my beck,[†]
than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in: What should such fellows as I do crawling between earth and heaven! We are arrant knaves, all; believe none of us: Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where's your father?

Oph. At home, my lord.

Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him; that he may play the fool no where but in's own house. Farewell.

Oph. O, help him, you sweet heavens!

Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry; Be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny. Get thee to a nunnery; farewell:
Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool;
for wise men know well enough, what monsters you make of them. To a nunnery, go; and quickly too. Farewell.

Oph. Heavenly powers, restore him!

Ham. I have heard of your paintings too, well enough; God hath given you one face,
and you make yourselves another: you jig,

lings;* who, for the most part, are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb show, and noise: I would have such a fellow whipped for o'er-doing Termagant; it out-herods Herod:† Pray you, avoid it.

1 Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature: for any thing so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first, and now, was, and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time, his form and pressure.‡ Now this, overdone, or come tardy off, though it make the unskillful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of which one, must, in your allowance,§ o'erweigh a whole theatre of others. O, there be players, that I have seen play,—and heard others praise, and that highly—not to speak it profanely, that, neither having the accent of Christians, nor the gait of Christian, Pagan, nor man, have so strutted, and bellowed, that I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

1 Play. I hope, we have reformed that indifferently with us.

Ham. O, reform it altogether. And let those, that play your clowns, speak no more than is set down for them: for there be of them, that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too; though, in the meantime, some necessary question|| of the play be then to be considered: that's villainous; and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready.—

[Exeunt PLAYERS.]

Enter POLONIUS, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

How now, my lord? will the king hear this piece of work?

Pol. And the queen too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the players make haste.—

[Exit POLONIUS.]

Will you two help to hasten them?

Both. Ay, my lord.

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.]

Ham. What, ho; Horatio!

Enter HORATIO.

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man As e'er my conversation cop'd withal.

Hor. O, my dear lord,—

Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter:

For what advancement may I hope from thee, That no revenue hast, but thy good spirits, To feed, and clothe thee? Why should the poor be flatter'd?

No, let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp; And crook the pregnant¶ hinges of the knee, Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear?

Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice, And could of men distinguish her election,

She hath seal'd thee for herself: for thou hast been

As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing; A man, that fortune's buffets and rewards Hast ta'en with equal thanks: and bless'd are those,

[mingled,] Whose blood and judgement are so well co- That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger To sound what stop she please: Give me that man

[him] That is not passion's slave, and I will wear In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart,

As I do thee.—Something too much of this.—

There is a play to-night before the king;

One scene of it comes near the circumstance,

Which I have told thee of my father's death.

I pr'ythee, when thou seest that act afoot,

Even with the very comment of thy soul

Observe my uncle; if his occulted* guilt

Do not itself unkennel in one speech,

It is a damned ghost that we have seen;

And my imaginations are as foul

As Vulcan's stithy.† Give him heedful note:

For I mine eyes will rivet to his face;

And, after, we will both our judgements join

In censure‡ of his seeming.

Hor. Well, my lord:

[ing,] If he steal aught, the whilst this play is play-

And scape detecting, I will pay the theft.

Ham. They are coming to the play; I must be idle:

Get you a place.

Danish March.—A Flourish.—Enter KING, QUEEN, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and others.

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet?

Ham. Excellent, i'faith; of the camelion's dish: I eat the air, promise-crammed: You cannot feed capons so.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet; these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now. My lord,—you played once in the university, you say?

[To POLONIUS.]

Pol. That did I, my lord; and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. And what did you enact?

Pol. I did enact Julius Cæsar; I was killed i'the Capitol; Brutus killed me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him, to kill so capital a calf there.—Be the players ready?

Ros. Ay, my lord, they stay§ upon your patience.

Queen. Come hither, my dear Hamlet, sit by me.

Ham. No, good mother, here's metal more attractive.

Pol. O ho! do you mark that? [To the KING.]

Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap?

[Lying down at OPHELIA's Feet.]

Oph. No, my lord.

Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Do you think, I meant country matters?

Oph. I think nothing, my lord.

Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between maids' legs.

Oph. What is, my lord?

Ham. Nothing.

Oph. You are merry, my lord.

¶ Quick, ready.

Ham. O! your only jig-maker. What should a man do, but be merry? for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within these two hours.

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.
Ham. So long? Nay, then let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables.* O heavens! die two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope, a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year: But, by'r-lady, he must build churches then: or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse; whose epitaph is, For, O, for, O, the hobby-horse is forgot.

Trumpets sound. The dumb Show follows.

Enter a King and a Queen, very lovingly; the Queen embracing him, and he her. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck: lays him down upon a bank of flowers; she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Anon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Queen returns; finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away. The poisoner wooes the Queen with gifts; she seems loath and unwilling awhile, but, in the end, accepts his love. [Exit.

Oph. What means this, my lord?

Ham. Marry, this is mitching mallecho;† it means mischief.

Oph. Belike, this show imports the argument of the play.

Enter PROLOGUE.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: the players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you'll show him: Be not you ashamed to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught; I'll mark the play.

Pro. For us, and for our tragedy,

Here stooping to your clemency,

We beg your hearing patiently.

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the posy of a ring?

Oph. 'Tis brief: my lord.

Ham. As woman's love.

Enter a KING and a QUEEN.

P. King. Full thirty times hath Phoebus' cart‡ gone round Neptune's salt wash, and Tellus'§ orbed ground;

And thirty dozen moons, with borrow'd sheen,* About the world have times twelve thirties been; [hands.

Since love our hearts, and Hymen did our Unite commutual in most sacred bands.

P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon

Make us again count o'er, ere love be done! But, woe is me, you are so sick of late, So far from cheer, and from your former state, That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust, Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must: For women fear too much, even as they love;

And women's fear and love hold passion's reign In neither aught, or in extremity.

Now, what my love is, proof hath made you. And as my love is siz'd,* my fear is so.

Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;

Where little fears grows great, great love attains.

P. King. Faith, I must leave thee, I shall shortly too;

My operant powers their functions leave.

And thou shalt live in this fair world below,

Honour'd, belov'd; and, happily, one as kind

For husband shalt thou—

P. Queen. O, confound the rest!

Such love must needs be treason in my breast.

In second husband let me be accus'd:

None wed the second, but who kill'd the first.

Ham. That's wormwood.

P. Queen. The instances; that second marriage move,

Are base respects of thrift, but none of love.

A second time I kill my husband dead.

When second husband kisses me in bed.

P. King. I do believe, you think what you speak;

But, what we do determine, oft we break.

Purpose is but the slave to memory;

(Of violent birth, but poor validity;

Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree.

But fall, unshaken, when they mellow be.

Most necessary 'tis, that we forget

To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt.

What to ourselves in passion we propose.

The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.

The violence of either grief or joy

Their own enactures with themselves destroy.

Where joy most revels, grief doth most lament.

Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident.

This world is not for aye, nor 'tis not strange

That even our loves should with our tenors

change;

For 'tis a question left us yet to prove.

Whether love lead fortune, or else fortune lead love.

The great man down, you mark his fall;

flies;

The poor advanc'd makes friends of enemies.

And hitherto doth love on fortune tell.

For who not needs, shall never lack a friend.

And who in want a hollow friend doth find.

Directly seasons him his enemy.

But, orderly to end where I begun,—

Our wills, our fates, do so contrary run,

That our devices still are overthrown;

Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own.

So think thou wilt no second husband wed.

But die thy thoughts, when thy first husband

dead.

P. Queen. Nor earth to give me food,

Heaven light!

Sport and repose lock from me, day and night.

To desperation turn my trust and hope.

An anchor's cheer in prison be my song.

Each opposite, that blanks the face of joy,

Meet what I would have woe, and it is so.

Both here, and hence, pursue me like a god.

If, once a widow, ever I be woe!

Ham. If she should break it now,—

[To Ophelia]

P. King. 'Tis deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here a while;

My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile

The tedious day with sleep.

P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain;

And never come mischance between us twain.

Ham. Madam, how like you this play?

Queen. The lady doth protest too much, methinks.

Ham. O, but she'll keep her word.

King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in't?

Ham. No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest; no offence i'the world.

King. What do you call the play?

Ham. The mouse-trap.* Marry, how? Tropically: This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna: Gonzago is the duke's name; his wife, Baptista: you shall see anon; 'tis a knavish piece of work: But what of that? your majesty, and we that have free souls, it touches us not: Let the galled jade wince,† our withers are unwrung.—

Enter LUCIANUS.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king.

Oph. You are as good as a chorus, my lord.

Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.

Oph. You are keen, my lord, you are keen.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning, to take off my edge.

Oph. Still better, and worse.

Ham. So you mistake your husbands.—Begin, murderer;—leave thy damnable faces, and begin. Come;—

Doth bellow for revenge.

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing;

Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected,

With Hecate's ban† thrice blasted, thrice infected,
Thy natural magic and dire property,
On wholesome life usurp immediately.

[Pours the Poison into the Sleeper's Ears.]

Ham. He poisons him i'the garden for his estate. His name's Gonzago: the story is extant, and written in very choice Italian: You shall see anon, how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Oph. The king rises.

Ham. What! frightened with false fire!

Queen. How fares my lord?

Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light:—away!

Pol. Lights, lights, lights!

[Exeunt all but HAMLET and HORATIO.]

Ham. Why, let the stricken deer go weep,

The hart ungalled play:

For some must watch, while some must sleep;

Thus runs the world away.—

Would not this, Sir, and a forest of feathers,§ (if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk|| with me,) with two Provencial roses on my razed¶ shoes, get me a fellowship in a cry of players, Sir?

Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one, I.

For thou dost know, O Damon, dear,

This realm dismantled was

Of Jove himself; and now reigns here

A very, very—peacock.

Hor. You might have rhymed.

Ham. Ah, ha!—Come, some music; come, the recorders.*—

Why then, belike,—he likes it not, perdy.†—

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Come, some music.

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The king, Sir,—

Ham. Ay, Sir, what of him?

Guil. Is, in his retirement, marvellously distempered.

Ham. With drink, Sir?

Guil. No, my lord, with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richer, to signify this to the doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation, would, perhaps, plunge him into more choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from my affair.

Ham. I am tame, Sir:—pronounce.

Guil. The queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment: if not, your pardon, and my return, shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guil. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseased: But, Sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother: therefore no more, but to the matter: My mother, you say,—

Ros. Then thus she says; Your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admiration.

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother!—But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration? impart.

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet, ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any further trade‡ with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. And do still, by these pickers and stealers.§

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? you do, surely, but bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend.

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be, when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark?

Ham. Ay, Sir, but, While the grass grows,—the proverb is something musty.

Enter the PLAYERS, with Recorders.

O, the recorders:—let me see one.—To withdraw with you:—Why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Guil. O, my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmannerly.

* A kind of flute.

‡ Business.

† Par Dors

§ Wards.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseech you.

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. 'Tis as easy as lying: govern these ventages,* with your fingers and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops.

Guil. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony; I have not the skill.

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me. You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass: and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ; yet cannot you make it speak. 'Sblood, do you think, I am easier to be played on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me.

Enter POLONIUS.

God bless you, Sir.

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently.

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud, that's almost in shape of a camel?

Pol. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel, indeed.

Ham. Methinks, it is like a weasel.

Pol. It is backed like a weasel.

Ham. Or, like a whale?

Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then will I come to my mother by and by.—They fool me to the top of my bent.†—I will come by and by.

Pol. I will say so. [Exit POLONIUS.]

Ham. By and by is easily said.—Leave me, friends. [Exit Ros. GUIL. HOR. &c.]

'Tis now the very witching time of night;
When churchyards yawn, and hell itself breathes out

Contagion to this world: Now could I drink
hot blood,

And do such business as the bitter day Would quake to look on. Soft; now to my mother,—

O, heart, lose not thy nature; let not ever

The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom:

Let me be cruel, not unnatural:

I will speak daggers to her, but use none;

My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites:

How in my words soever she be shent,‡

SCENE III.—A Room in the same.

Enter KING, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. I like him not; nor stands it safe with us, [you;

To let his madness range. Therefore, prepare

I your commission with forthwith despatch,

And he to England shall along with you:

The terms of our estate may not endure

Hazard so near us, as doth hourly grow

Guil. We will ourselves provide:

Most holy and religious fear it is,

To keep those many bodies safe.

That live, and feed, upon your majesty.

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound
With all the strength and armour of the mind
To keep itself from 'noyance: but nature can
That spirit, upon whose weal depend and rest
The lives of many. The cease of majesty
Dies not alone; but, like a gulf, doth draw
What's near it, with it: it is a massy wheel,
Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount,
To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things

Are mortis'd and adjoin'd; which, when
Each small annexment, petty consequence,
Attends the boist'rous ruin. Never alone
Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage;

For we will fetters put upon this fear.

Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros. Guil. We will haste us.

[Exit ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.]

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's Behind the arras* I'll convey myself, [closet:
To hear the process; I'll warrant, shall tell him home:

And tell you what I know.

King. Thanks, dear my lord.
[Exit POLONIUS.]

O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven,
It hath the primal eldest curse upon't,
A brother's murder!—Pray can I not,
Though inclination be as sharp as will.
My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent,
And, like a man to double business bound,
I stand in pause where I shall first begin,
And both neglect. What if this cursed hand
Were thicker than itself with brother's blood,
Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens
To wash it white as snow? Whereto serves mercy,

But to confront the visage of offence?
And what's in prayer, but this two-fold force—
To be forestalled, ere we come to it,
Or pardon'd, being down? Then I'll look up;
My fault is past. But, O, what form of prayer
Can serve my turn? Forgive me my foul murder!—

That cannot be; since I am still possess'd
Of those effects for which I did the murder.
My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen.
May one be pardon'd, and retain the offence?
In the corrupted currents of this world,
Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice,
And oft 'tis seen, the wicked prize itself
Buys out the law: But 'tis not so above;
There is no shuffling, there the action lies
In his true nature; and we ourselves are compell'd,

Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults,
To give in evidence. What then? what rests?
Try what repentance can: What can it not?
Yet what can it, when one can not repent?

Ham. Nay, I know not:

POLONIUS.

Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is
this!

Ham. A bloody deed;—almost as bad, good
mother,

As kill a king, and marry with his brother.

Queen. As kill a king!

Ham. Ay, lady, 'twas my word.—

Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell!
[To POLONIUS.

I took thee for thy better; take thy fortune:
Thou find'st, to be too busy, is some danger.—
Leave wringing of your hands: Peace; sit you
down,

And let me wring your heart: for so I shall,
If it be made of penetrable stuff;
If damned custom have not braz'd it so,
That it be proof and bulwark against sense.

Queen. What have I done, that thou dar'st wag thy tongue

In noise so rude against me?

Ham. Such an act,

That blurs the grace and blush of modesty;
Calls virtue, hypocrite; takes off the rose
From the fair forehead of an innocent love,
And sets a blister there; makes marriage-vows
As false as dicers' oaths: O, such a deed
As from the body of contraction* plucks
The very soul; and sweet religion makes
A rhapsody of words: Heaven's face doth glow;

Yea, this solidity and compound mass,
With tristful-visage, as against the doom,
Is thought-sick at the act.

Queen. Ah me, what act, [dex?;

Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on

The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.
See, what a grace was seated on this brow:
Hyperion's[§] curls; the front of Jove himself;
An eye like Mars, to threaten and command;
A station|| like the herald Mercury,
New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill;
A combination, and a form, indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his seal,
To give the world assurance of a man:
This was your husband.—Look you now, what follows:

Here is your husband; like a mildew'd ear,
Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you sponge!—what replication should be made by the son of a king?

Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?

Ham. Ay, Sir; that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end: He keeps them, like an ape, in the cor-

King. At supper? Where?

Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten: a certain convocation of politic worms are e'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else, to fat us; and we fat ourselves for maggots: Your fat king, and your lean beggar, is but variable service; two dishes, but to one table; that's the end.

King. Alas, alas!

Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king; and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

King. What dost thou mean by this?

Ham. Nothing, but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.

King. Where is Polonius?

Ham. In heaven; send thither to see: if your messenger find him not there, seek him i'the other place yourself. But, indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.

tance seal,
And you must put me in your heart for friend;
Sith* you have heard, and with a knowing ear,
That he, which hath your noble father slain,
Pursu'd my life.

Laer. It well appears:—But tell me,
Why you proceeded not against these feats,
So crimeful and so capital in nature,
As by your safety, greatness, wisdom, all things else,
You mainly were stirr'd up.

King. O, for two special reasons; [new'd,†
Which may to you, perhaps, seem much unsi-But yet to me they are strong. The queen his mother,

Lives almost by his looks; and for myself,
(My virtue, or my plague, be it either which,)
She is so conjunctive to my life and soul,
That, as the star moves not but in his sphere,
I could not but by her. The other motive,
Why to a public count I might not go,
Is, the great love the general gender; bear him:
Who, dipping all his faults in their affection,
Work like the spring; that turneth wood to stone, [arrows,

Converts his gyves‡ to graces; so that my
Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them.

Laer. And so have I a noble father lost;
A sister driven into desperate terms;
Whose worth, if praises may go back again,
Stood challenger on mount of all the age
For her perfections:—But my revenge will
come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that: you must not think,
That we are made of stuff so flat and dull,
That we can let our beard be shook with danger, [more:

And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear
I loved your father, and we love ourself;
And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine,—
How now? what news?

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet:
This to your majesty; this to the queen.

King. From Hamlet! who brought them?
Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say: I saw them not: [them

They were given me by Claudio, he receiv'd
Of him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them:—
Leave us. [Exit MESSENGER.

What should this mean ! Are all the rest come back ?

Or is it some abuse, and no such thing ?

Laer. Know you the hand ?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character. Naked,—
And in a postscript here, he says, alone :
Can you advise me ?

Laer. I am lost in it, my lord. But let him
come :

It warms the very sickness in my heart,
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth,
Thus diddest thou.

King. If it be so, Laertes,
As how should it be so? how otherwise?—
Will you be rul'd by me ?

Laer. Ay, my lord ;
So you will not o'errule me to a peace.

King. To thine own peace. If he be now
return'd,—

As checking* at his voyage, and that he means
No more to undertake it,—I will work him
To an exploit, now ripe in my device,
Under the which he shall not choose but fall :
And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe ; {tice,
But even his mother shall uncharge the prac-
And call it, accident.

Laer. My lord, I will be rul'd ;
The rather, if you could devise it so,
That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right.
You have been talk'd of since your travel much,
And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality Wherein, they say, you shine : your sum of parts
Did not together pluck such envy from him,
As did that one ; and that, in my regard,
Of the unworthiest siege.†

Laer. What part is that, my lord ?

King. A very ribband in the cap of youth,
Yet needful too ; for youth no less becomes
The light and careless livery that it wears,
Than settled age his sables, and his weeds,
Importing health and graveness.—Two months
since,

Here was a gentleman of Normandy,—
I have seen myself, and serv'd against, the French, {lant
And they can well on horseback : but this gal-
Had witchcraft in't ; he grew unto his seat ;
And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,
As he had been incorps'd and demi-natur'd
With the brave beast : so far he topp'd my
thought,

That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks,
Come short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman, was't ?

King. A Norman.

Laer. Upon my life, Lamord.

King. The very same.

Laer. I know him well, he is the brooch,‡ indeed,
And gem of all the nation.

King. He made confession of you :
And gave you such a masterly report,
For art and exercise in your defence,§
And for your rapier most especial,
That he cried out, 'twould be a sight indeed,
If one could match you : the scrimers|| of their

He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor

How now, sweet queen?

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,

So fast they follow:—Your sister's drown'd, Laer. Drown'd! O, where?

Queen. There is a willow grows ascant the brook,

That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream;
Therewith fantastic garlands did she make
Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples,§

That liberal|| shepherds give a grosser name,
But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call
them:

There on the pendent boughs her coronet weeds
Clambering to hang, an envious sliver broke;
When down her weedy trophies, and herself,
Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide;

And, mermaid-like, awhile they bore her up:
Which time, she chanted snatches of old tunes;

As one incapable of her own distress,
Or like a creature native and indu'd
Unto that element: but long it could not be,
Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay
To muddy death.

Laer. Alas then, she is drown'd?

Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor
Ophelia,

And therefore I forbid my tears: But yet
It is our trick; nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will: when these are
gone,

The woman will be out.¶—Adieu, my lord!
I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze,
But that this folly drowns it. [Exit.

King. Let's follow, Gertrude:
How much I had to do to calm his rage!
Now fear I, this will give it start again;
Therefore, let's follow. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Church-Yard.

Enter Two CLOWNS, with Spades, &c.

1 Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial, that wilfully seeks her own salvation?

2 Clo. I tell thee, she is; therefore make her grave straight:†† the crowner hath set on her,
and finds it Christian burial.

1 Clo. How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence?

2 Clo. Why, 'tis found so.

1 Clo. It must be se offendendo; it cannot be else. For here lies the point: If I drown myself wittingly, it argues an act: and an act hath three branches; it is, to act, to do, and to perform: argal,‡‡ she drowned herself wittingly.

2 Clo. Nay, but hear you, Goodman delver.

1 Clo. Give me leave. Here lies the water;

good: here stands the man; good: If the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, he goes; mark you that: but if the water come to him, and drown him, he drowns not himself: argal, he, that is not guilty of his own death, shortens not his own life.

2 Clo. But is this law?

1 Clo. Ay, marry is't; crowner's-quest law.

2 Clo. Will you ha' the truth on't? If this had not been a gentlewoman, she should have been buried out of Christian burial.

1 Clo. Why, there thou say'st: And the more pity; that great folks shall have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves, more than their even* Christian. Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers; they hold up Adam's profession.

2 Clo. Was he a gentleman?

1 Clo. He was the first that ever bore arms.

2 Clo. Why, he had none.

1 Clo. What, art a heathen? How dost thou understand the scripture? The scripture says,
Adam digged; Could he dig without arms?
I'll put another question to thee: if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself—

2 Clo. Go to.

1 Clo. What is he, that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

2 Clo. The gallows-maker; for that frame out-lives a thousand tenants.

1 Clo. I like thy wit well, in good faith; the gallows does well: But how does it well? it does well to those that do ill: now thou dost ill, to say, the gallows is built stronger than the church; argal, the gallows may do well to thee. To't again; come.

2 Clo. Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter?

1 Clo. Ay, tell me that, and unyoke.†

2 Clo. Marry, now I can tell.

1 Clo. To't.

2 Clo. Mass, I cannot tell.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO, at a distance.

1 Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it;
for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating: and, when you are asked this question next, say, a grave-maker; the houses, that he makes, last till doomsday. Go, get thee to Yaughan, and fetch me a stoup of liquor.
[Exit 2 CLOWNS.

1 CLOWN digs, and sings.

*In youth, when I did love, did love,‡
Methought, it was very sweet,
To contract, O, the time, for, ah, my behove,
O, methought, there was nothing meet.*

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business? he sings at grave-making.

Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

Ham. 'Tis e'en so: the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense.

be the scull of a lawyer? Where he has quid-dits now, his quillets; his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the scores with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Humph! This fellow might be in a time a great lover of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries. Is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his bare pate full of the dirt? will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyances of his lands will hardly lie in this box, and must the inheritor himself have no more? ha!*

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep skins?

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calves skins too.

seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow — Whose grave's this, sirrah?*

therefore thou liest*

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

I were to consider too curiously, to so.

Yet have I in me something dangerous, Which let thy wisdom fear: Hold off thy hand King. Pluck them asunder.

Queen. Hamlet, Hamlet!

All. Gentlemen,—

Hor. Good my lord, be quiet.

[The Attendants part them, and they come out of the Grave.]

Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this theme,

Until my eye-lids will no longer wag.

Queen. O my son! what theme?

Ham. I lov'd Ophelia; forty thousand bro- thers

Could not, with all their quantity of love, Make up my sum.—What wilt thou do for her?

King. O, he is mad, Laertes.

Queen. For love of God, forbear him.

Ham. 'Zounds, show me what thou'lt do:

Woul't weep? woul't fight? woul't fast? woul't

lear thyself?

Woul't drink up Eail? eat a crocodile? I'll do't.—Dost thou come here to whine?

To outface me with leaping in her grave? Be buried quick with her, and so will I:

And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw Millions of acres on us; till our ground,

Singeing his pate against the burning zone, Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou'lt mouth,

I'll rant as well as thou.

Queen. This is mere madness:

And thus awhile the fit will work on him;

Anon, as patient as the female dove, When that her golden couplets are disclos'd,†

His silence will sit drooping.

Ham. Hear you, Sir;

What is the reason that you use me thus?

I lov'd you ever: But it is no matter;

Let Hercules himself do what he may,

The cat will mew, and dog will have his day.

[Exit.]

King. I pray thee, good Horatio, wait upon him.—

[Exit HORATIO.] Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech;

Good Gertrude, set some watch over your son.—

This grave shall have a living monument: An hour of quiet shortly shall we see;

Till then, in patience our proceeding be.

Ham. Up from my cabin,
My sea-gown scarf'd about me, in the dark
Grop'd I to find out them: had my desire;
Finger'd their packet; and, in fine, withdrew
To mine own room again: making so bold,
My fears forgetting manners, to unseal
Their grand commission; where I found, Ho-

But wilt thou hear now how I did proceed?

Hor. Ay, beseech you.

A baseness to write fair, and labour'd much
How to forget that learning; but, Sir, now
It did me yeoman's service: Wilt thou know
The effect of what I wrote?

Hor. Ay, good my lord.

Ham. An earnest conjuration from the king,—

As England was his faithful tributary;
As love between them like the palm might
flourish;
As peace should still her wheaten garland
wear,

And stand a comma‡‡ 'tween their amities;
And many such like as's of great charge,—
That, on the view and knowing of these contents,

Without debatement further, more, or less,
He should the bearers put to sudden death,
Not shriving§§-time allow'd.

Hor. How was this seal'd?

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordinant;

I had my father's signet in my purse,
Which was the model|| of that Danish seal:
Folded the writ up in form of the other;

Osr. Of Laertes?

Ham. Of him, Sir.

Osr. I know, you are not ignorant—

Ham. I would, you did, Sir; yet, in faith, if you did, it would not much approve me;—Well, Sir.

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is—

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but, to know a man well, were to know himself.

Osr. I mean, Sir, for his weapon; but in the reputation laid on him by them, in his mood, he's unfellowed.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons: but, well.

Osr. The king, Sir, hath wagered with him six Barbary horses: against the which he has impawned, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, &c. and so: Three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hilt, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Osr. I knew, you must be edified by the margin,^b ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, Sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more german to the matter, if we could carry a cannon by our sides; I would, it might be hangers till then. But, on: Six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal conceited carriages; that's the French bet against the Danish: Why is this impawned, as you call it?

Osr. The king, Sir, hath laid, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits; he hath laid, on twelve for nine; and it would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How, if I answer, no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall: If it please his majesty, it is the breathing time of day with me: let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him, if I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame, and the odd hits.

Ham. Yours, yours.—He does well to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for's turn.

Hor. This lapwing^c runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did comply[†] with his dug, before he sucked it. Thus has he (and many more of the same breed, that, I know, the drowsy age dotes on,) only got the taint of the time, and outward habit of encounter; a kind of yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most fond and winnowed opinions; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

Enter a LORD.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commended him to you by young Osrif, who brings back to him, that you attend him in the hall: He sends to know, if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes, they follow the king's pleasure: if his fitness speaks, mine is ready; now, or whensoever, provided I be so able as now.

Lord. The king, and queen, and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you, to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes, before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me. [Exit Lord.

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so; since he went into France, I have been in continual practice; I shall win at the odds. But thou wouldst not think, how ill all's here about my heart: but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord,—

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gain-giving,[‡] as would, perhaps, trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike any thing, obey it: I will forestal^{} their repair hither, and say, you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury; there is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all: Since so man, of aught he leaves, knows, what is't to leave betimes? Let be.

Enter KING, QUEEN, LAERTES, LORDS, OSRIF, and Attendants, with Foils, &c.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

[The KING puts the Hand of LAERTES into that of HAMLET.

Ham. Give me your pardon, Sir: I have done you wrong;

Not pardon it, as you are a gentleman. This presence knows, and you must needs have heard,

How I am punish'd with a sore distraction.

§ B

What I have done,
That might your nature, honour, and excep-
Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness.
Was't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never, Hamlet:

If Hamlet from himself be ta'en away,
And, when he's not himself, does wrong La-
ertes,

Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it.
Who does it then? His madness? If't be so,
Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd,
His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy.

Sir, in this audience,
Let my disclaiming from a purpos'd evil
Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,
That I have shot my arrow o'er the house,
And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature,
Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most
To my revenge: but in my terms of honour,
I stand aloof, and will no reconciliation,
Till by some elder masters, of known honour,
I have a voice and precedent of peace,
To keep my name ungor'd: But till that time,
I do receive your offer'd love like love,
And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely;
And will this brother's wager frankly play.—
Give us the foils; come on.

Laer. Come, one for me.

Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes; in mine ignorance
Your skill shall, like a star i' the darkest night,
Stick fiery off, indeed.

Laer. You mock me, Sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osric.—
Cousin Hamlet,

You know the wager!

Ham. Very well, my lord; [side.

Your grace hath laid the odds o' the weaker

King. I do not fear it: I have seen you both:—

But since he's better'd, we have therefore odds.

Laer. This is too heavy, let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well: These foils have all a length? [They prepare to play.

Os. Ay, my good lord.

King. Set me the stoupest of wine upon that table:—

If Hamlet gives the first or second hit,
Or quit in answer of the third exchange,
Let all the battlements their ordnance fire;
The king shall drink to Hamlet's better breath;
And in the cup an union shall he throw,
Richer than that which four successive kings
In Denmark's crown have worn; Give me the cups;

And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,
The trumpet to the cannoneer without, [earth,
The cannons to the heavens, the heaven to
Now the king drinks to Hamlet.—Come, begin;—
And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, Sir.

Laer. Come, my lord. [They play.

Ham. One.

Laer. No.

Ham. Judgement.

Os. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Laer. Well,—again.

King. Stay, give me drink; Hamlet, this pearl is thine;

Here's to thy health.—Give him the cup.

[Trumpets sound; and Cannon shot off within.

Ham. I'll play this bout first, set it by awhile.

[tion, Come.—Another hit; What say you?

[They play.

Laer. A touch, a touch, I do confess.

King. Our son shall win.

Queen. He's fat, and scant o' breath.—

Here, Hamlet, take my napkin,* and dry brows:

The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good madam,—

King. Gertrude, do not drink.

Queen. I will, my lord; I pray you, pardon
me.

King. It is the poison'd cup; it is so.

Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by leave.

Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Laer. My lord, I'll hit him now.

King. I do not think it.

Laer. And yet it is almost against my conscience.

Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes; but dally;

I pray you, pass with your best violence.

I am afraid, you make a wanton of me.

Laer. Say you so? come on. [They play.

Os. Nothing neither way.

Laer. Have at you now.

[LAERTES wounds HAMLET; then, as if King, they change Rapiers, and HAM-
LET wounds LAERTES.

King. Part them, they are incens'd.

Ham. Nay, come again. [The Queens join.

Os. Look to the queen there, ho!

Her. They bleed on both sides:—How is't
my lord?

Os. How is't, Laertes?

Laer. Why, as a woodcock to my own springe, Osric;

I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the queen?

King. She swoons to see them bleed.

Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink,—O my dear Hamlet!

The drink, the drink: I am poison'd! [Os.

Ham. O villainy!—Ho! let the door be lock'd:

Treachery! seek it out. [LAERTES falls.

Laer. It is here, Hamlet: Hamlet, thou art
slain;

No medicine in the world can do thee good,

In thee there is not half an hour's life;

The treacherous instrument is in thy hand.

Unbated, and envenom'd: the foul practice

Hath turn'd itself on me; lo, here I lie.

Never to rise again: Thy mother's poison'd;

I can no more; the king, the king's to blame.

Ham. The point

Envenom'd too!—Then, venom, to thy work.

[Stabs the King.

Os. & Lords. Treason! treason!

King. O, yet defend me, friends, I am but hurt.

Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murd'rous,
damned Dane,

Drink off this potion:—Is the union here?

Follow my mother. [King dies.

Laer. He is justly serv'd;

It is a poison temper'd by himself.—

Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet:

Mine and my father's death come not upon
thee;

Nor thine on me. [Dies.

Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow
thee.

I am dead, Horatio:—Wretched queen, adieu!—

You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
That are but mutes or audience to this act,
Had I but time, (as this fell sergeant,* death,
Is strict in his arrest,) O, I could tell you,—
But let it be:—Horatio, I am dead;
Thou liv'st; report me and my cause aright
To the unsatisfied.

Hor. Never believe it;
I am more an antique Roman than a Dane,
Here's yet some liquor left.

Ham. As thou'rt a man,— [it.—

O God!—Horatio, what a wounded name,
Things standing thus unknown, shall live be-

And in this harsh world draw thy breath, in
To tell my story.—

[March afar off, and Shot within.

What warlike noise is this?

Oer. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland,

To the ambassadors of England gives
This warlike volley.

Ham. O, I die, Horatio;
The potent poison quite o'er-crows† my spirit;
I cannot live to hear the news from England:
But I do prophesy the election lights
On Fortinbras; he has my dying voice;
So tell him, with the occurrents,‡ more or less,
Which have solicited,§—The rest is silence.

And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!—
Why does the drum come hither?

|| Heap of dead game.

¶ A word of censure when more game was destroyed than was reasonable.

What feast is toward in thine eternal cell,
That thou so many princes, at a shot,
So bloodily hast struck?

I Amb. The sight is dismal;
And our affairs from England come too late:
The ears are senseless, that should give us
hearing,

To tell him, his commandment is fulfill'd,
That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead:
Where should we have our thanks?

Hor. Not from his mouth,*
Had it the ability of life to thank you;
He never gave commandment for their death.
But since, so jump† upon this bloody question,
You from the Polack‡ wars, and you from England,

Are here arriv'd; give order, that these bodies
High on a stage be placed to the view;
And let me speak, to the yet unknowing world,
How these things come about: So shall you
Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts; [hear
Of accidental judgements, casual slaughters;
Of deaths put on by cunning, and forc'd cause;
And, in this upshot, purposes mistook
Fall'n on the inventors' heads: all this can I Truly deliver.

Fort. Let us haste to hear it,
And call the noblest to the audience.
For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune;
I have some rights of memory in this kingdom,
Which now to claim my vantage doth invite
me.

Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to speak,
And from his mouth whose voice will draw
on more:

But let this same be presently perform'd,
Even while men's minds are wild; lest more
On plots and errors, happen. [mischance

Fort. Let four captains
Bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage;
For he was likely, had he been put on,
To have prov'd most royally: and, for his passage,

The soldier's music, and the rites of war,
Speak loudly for him.—

Take up the bodies:—Such a sight as this Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.
Go, bid the soldiers shoot. [A dead march.

[Exeunt, bearing off the dead Bodies; after which, a Peal of Ordnance is shot off.

Rod. Tush, never tell me, I take it much unkindly,

As if the strings were thine,—shouldst know of this.

Iago. 'Sblood, but you will not hear me:—
If ever I did dream of such a matter,
Abhor me.

 After your own sense; yea, though our proper
 son
 Stood in your action.||
 Bra. Humbly I thank your grace.
 Here is the man, this Moor; whom now, it seems,

* Easy dispute. † State of defence. \ Combat.
 ‡ Without. \ Accompaniment.

Your special mandate, for the state affairs,
Hath hither brought.

Duke & Sen. We are very sorry for it.

Duke. What, in your own part, can you say to this? [To OTHELLO]

Bra. Nothing but this is so.

Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend
sirs,

My very noble and approv'd good masters,
That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter,

It is most true; true, I have married her;
The very head and front of my offending Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech,

And little bless'd with the set phrase of peace;
For since these arms of mine had seven years
pith, [us'd]

Till now some nine moons wasted, they have
Their dearest action* in the tented field;
And little of this great world can I speak,
More than pertains to feats of broil and battle;
And therefore little shall I grace my cause,
In speaking for myself: Yet, by your gracious
patience,

I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver
Of my whole course of love; what drugs, what charms,

What conjuration, and what mighty magic,
(For such proceeding I am charg'd withal,)
I won his daughter with.

Bra. A maiden never bold;
Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion
Blush'd at herself; And she,—in spite of nature,

Of years, of country, credit, every thing,—
To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on!
It is a judgement maim'd, and most imperfect,
That will confess—perfection so could err
Against all rules of nature; and must be driven
To find out practices of cunning hell,
Why this should be. I therefore vouch again,
That with some mixtures powerful o'er the
blood,

Or with some dram conjur'd to this effect,
He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this, is no proof;
Without more certain and more overt test,†
Than these thin habits, and poor likelihoods
Of modern seeming,‡ do prefer against him.

I Sen. But, Othello, speak;—
Did you by indirect and forced courses
Subdue and poison this young maid's affections?

Or came it by request, and such fair question
As soul to soul affordeth?

Oth. I do beseech you,
Send for the lady to the Sagittary.§
And let her speak of me before her father:
If you do find me foul in her report,
The trust, the office, I do hold of you,
Not only take away, but let your sentence
Even fall upon my life.

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither.

Oth. Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place.—

[Exit IAGO and Attendants]

And, till she come, as truly as to heaven
I do confess the vices of my blood,
So justly to your grave ears I'll present
How I did thrive in this fair lady's love,
And she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello.

Oth. Her father lov'd me; oft invited me;

* Best exertion. † Open proof. ‡ Weak show.

ng in his eye. Most gracious duke, unfolding lend a gracious ear;
Ist me find a charter in your voice,
Ist my simpleness.

Duke. What would you, Desdemona?

Des. That I did love the Moor to live with
him,

My downright violence and storm of fortunes
May trumpet to the world; my heart's subdued

Even to the very quality of my lord:
I saw Othello's visage in his mind;
And to his honours, and his valiant parts,
Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate.
So that, dear lords, if I be left behind,
A moth of peace, and he go to the war,
The rights for which I love him, are bereft me,
And I a heavy interim shall support
By his dear absence: Let me go with him.

Oth. Your voices, lords:—beseech you, let her will

Have a free way.
Vouch with me, heaven; I therefore beg it not
To please the palate of my appetite;
Nor to comply with heat, the young affects,*
In my distinct and proper satisfaction;
But to be free and bounteous to her mind:
And heaven defend† your good souls, that you
think

I will your serious and great business scant,
For she is with me: No, when light-wing'd toys

Of feather'd Cupid seel‡ with wanton dulness
My speculative and active instruments,
That my disports corrupt and taint my business,
Let housewives make a skillet‡ of my helm,¶
And all indign and base adversities
Make head against my estimation!

Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for her stay, or going: the affair cries—
haste,

And speed must answer it; you must hence
to-night.

Des. To-night, my lord?

Duke. This night.

Oth. With all my heart.

Duke. At nine i'the morning here we'll meet
again.

Othello, leave some officer behind,
And he shall our commission bring to you;
With such things else of quality and respect,
As doth import you.

Oth. Please your grace, my ancient;
A man he is of honesty and trust:
To his conveyance I assign my wife, [think
With what else needful your good grace shall
To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be so.—

Good night to every one.—And, noble Signior,
[To BRABANTIO.

If virtue no delighted beauty lack,
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black.

1 Sen. Adieu, brave Moor! use Desdemona
well.

Bra. Look to her, Moor; have a quick eye to see;

She has deceiv'd her father, and may thee.

[Exit DUKE, SENATORS, OFFICERS, &c.

Oth. My life upon her faith.—Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee;
I pr'ythee, let thy wife attend on her;
And bring them after in the best advantage.—
Come, Desdemona; I have but an hour
Of love, of worldly matters, and direction,
To spend with thee, we must obey the time.

[Exit OTHELLO and DESDEMONA.

Red. Iago.

Iago. What say'st thou, noble heart?

* Grise, from degrees.

words of consolation.

¶ A small kettle. ¶ Helmet.

Rod. What will I do, thinkest thou?

Iago. Why, go to bed, and sleep.

Rod. I will incontinently* drown myself.

Iago. Well, if thou dost, I shall never love thee after it. Why, thou silly gentleman!

Rod. It is silliness to live, when to live is a torment: and then have we a prescription to die, when death is our physician.

Iago. O villainous! I have looked upon the world for four times seven years, and since I could distinguish between a benefit and an injury, I never found a man that knew how to love himself. Ere I would say, I would drown myself for the love of a Guinea-hen, I would change my humanity with a baboon.

Rod. What should I do? I confess, it is my shame to be so fond,† but it is not in virtue to amend it.

Iago. Virtue? a fig! 'tis in ourselves, that we are thus, or thus. Our bodies are our gardens; to the which our wills are gardeners. so that if we will plant nettles, or sow lettuce; set hyasop, and weed up thyme, supply it with one gender of herbs, or distract it with many, either to have it steril with idleness, or manured with industry; why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance of our lives had not one scale of reason to poise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most preposterous conclusions. But we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitted lusts; whereof I take this, that you call—love, to be a sect,§ or a sin.

Rod. It cannot be.

Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood, and a permission of the will. Come, be a man: Drown thyself! drown cats, and blind puppies. I have professed me thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable toughness. I could never better stead thee than now. Put money in thy purse; follow these wars; defeat thy favour with an usurped beard,¶ I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be, that Desdemona should long continue her love to the Moor,—put money in thy purse,—nor he his to her. it was a violent commencement, and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration,—put but money in thy purse—These Moors are changeable in their wills;—fill thy purse with money. the food that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as bitter as colicquintida. She must change for youth: when she is sated with his body, she will find the error of her choice—She must have change, she must: therefore put money in thy purse.—If thou wilt needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning. Make all the money thou canst. If sanctimony and a frail vow, betwixt an erring‡ barbarian and a supersubtle Venetian, be not too hard for my wits, and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her; therefore make money. A pox of drowning thyself! it is clean out of the way. seek thou rather to be hanged in compassing thy joy, than to be drowned and go without her.

Rod. Wilt thou be fast to my hopes, if I depend on the issue?

Iago. Thou art sure of me,—Go, make money:—I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again and again, I hate the Moor: My cause is hearted: thine hath no less reason.

* Immediately. † Foolish. ‡ Unbridled.

Let us be conjunctive in our revenge, him: if thou canst cuckold him, thou dost sell a pleasure, and me a sport. To many events in the womb of time, will be delivered. Traverse,* go, and get money. We will have more of this, row. Adieu.

Rod. Where shall we meet?

Iago. At my lodging.

Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you know your way?

Rod. What say you?

Iago. No more of drowning, do you!

Rod. I am changed. I'll sell all up.

Iago. Go to; farewell. put money in your purse. [Exit Rod.]

SCENE I.—A Sea-port Town in Cypri Platform.

Mon. What from the cape can you descry

1 Gent. Nothing at all: it is a high-flood;

I cannot, 'twixt the heaven and the earth,
Descry a sail.

Mon. Methinks, the wind hath spoil'd

and Attendants.

The riches of the ship is come on shore!
Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees;—
Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heavens,
Before, behind thee, and on every hand,
Enwheel thee round.

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio.

What tidings can you tell me of my lord?

Cas. He is not yet arriv'd; nor know I aught
But that he's well, and will be shortly here.

Des. O, but I fear;—How lost you company?

Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies

Parted our fellowship: But, hark! a sail.

That I extend my manners: 'tis my breeding
That gives me this bold show of courtesy.

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips,

As of her tongue she oft bestows on me,
You'd have enough.

Des. Alas, she has no speech.

Iago. In faith, too much;

I find it still, when I have list to sleep:

Marry, before your ladyship, I grant,
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking.

Emil. You have little cause to say so.

Iago. Come on, come on; you are pictures

Saints in your injuries, devils being offended,
Players in your housewifery, and housewives

Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk;
You rise to play, and go to bed to work.

Emil. You shall not write my praise.

Iago. No, let me not.

Des. What wouldst thou write of me, if thou shouldst praise me?

Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to't;
For I am nothing, if not critical.†

It plucks out brains and all: But my Muse labours.

And thus she is deliver'd.
If she be fair and wise,—fairness, and wit,
The one's for use, the other useth it.

Des. Well prais'd! How if she be black and witty?

Iago. If she be black, and thereto have a wit,
She'll find a white that shall her blackness fit.

Des. Worse and worse.

Rod. How, if fair and foolish?

Iago. She never yet was foolish that was fair;

For even her folly help'd her to an heir.

Des. There are old fond^a paradoxes, to make fools laugh i'the alehouse. What miserable praise hast thou for her that's foul and foolish?

put on the vouch of very malice itself?

Iago. She that was ever fair, and never proud;

Had tongue at will, and yet was never loud;
Never lack'd gold, and yet was never gay;
Fled from her wish, and yet said,—now I may;
She that, being anger'd, her revenge being nigh,

Made her wrong stay, and her displeasure fly:
She, that in wisdom never was so frail,
To change the cod's head for the salmon's tail;
She that could think, and ne'er disclose her
mind,

See suitors following, and not look behind;
She was a wight,—if ever such wight were,—
Des. To do what?

Iago. To suckle fools, and chronicle small beer.

Des. O most lame and impotent conclusion!
—Do not learn of him, Emilia, though he be thy husband.—How say you, Cassio? is he not a most profane and liberal counsellor?

Cas. He speaks home, madam; you may relish him more in the soldier, than in the scholar.

Iago. [Aside.] He takes her by the palm:
Ay, well said, whisper: with as little a web as this, will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do; I will gyve^b thee in thine own courtship. You say true;
'tis so indeed: if such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenantry, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft,

fingers to your lips? would, they were clysterpipes for your sake!—[Trumpet.] The Moor,
I know his trumpet.

Cas. 'Tis truly so.

Des. Let's meet him, and receive him.

Cas. Lo, where he comes!

Enter OTHELLO, and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair warrior!

Des. My dear Othello!

Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content,

To see you here before me. O my soul's joy!
If after every tempest come such calms,
May the winds blow till they have waken'd
death!

And let the labouring bark climb hills of Olympus-high; and duck again as low
As hell's from heaven! If it were now to die,
'Twere now to be most happy, for, I feel
My soul hath her content so absolute,
That not another comfort like to this
Succeeds in unknown fate.

Des. The heavens forbid,
But that our loves and comforts should increase,
Even as our days do grow!

Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers!—
I cannot speak enough of this content,
It stops me here; it is too much of joy.
And this, and this, the greatest discords in [Kissing her.]

That e'er our hearts shall make!

Iago. O, you are well tun'd now!
But I'll set down the pegs that make the music,
As honest as I am.

Oth. Come, let's to the castle.—
News, friends, our wars are done, the Turks are drown'd.

How do our old acquaintance of this isle—
Honey, you shall be well dear'd^c in Cyprus.
I have found great love amongst them to my sweet,

I prattle out of fashion,^d and I dote
In mine own comforts.—I pry thee, good Iago,
Go to the bay, and disembark my coffers;
Bring thou the master to the citadel.
He is a good one, and his worthiness
Does challenge much respect.—Come, Desdemona, once more well met at Cyprus.

[Exit OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, and Attendants.]

Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the ho-bour. Come hither. If thou be'st valiant,— (they say) base men, being in love, have this nobility in their natures more than is common to them,—list me. The lieutenant to-night watches on the coast of guard:—First, I will tell thee this—Desdemona is directly in love
with him.

Rod. With him? why, 'tis not possible.

Iago. Lay thy finger—thus, and let thy ear be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor, but for bragging, and telling her fantastical lies: And will she love him still for prating? let not thy discreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil?
When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be,—again to inflame it, and to give satiety a fresh appetite,—loveliness in favour; sympathy in years, manners, and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in:
Now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused,
begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and sicken
the Moor; very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice. Now,
Sir, this granted, (as it is a most pregnant and

A devilish knave! besides, the knave is handsome, young; and hath all those requisites in him, that fully and green minds[†] look after: A pestilent complete knave; and the woman hath found him already.

[And. I cannot believe that in her; she is full of most blessed condition.†

[Iago. Blessed fig's end! the wine she drinks is made of grapes: if she had been blessed, she would never have loved the Moor: Blessed coddling! Didst thou not see her paddie with the palm of his hand? didst not mark that?

[And. Yes, that I did; but that was but courtesy.

[Iago. Lechery, by this hand; an index, and a severe prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips, that their breaths embraced together. Villains' thoughts, Roderigo! when these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, and incorporate imagination: Pish!—But, Sir, be you ruled by me: I have brought you from Venice. Watch you tonight; for the command, I'll lay't upon you: Cassio knows you not;—I'll not be far from you: Do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting a discipline; or from what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably instate.

[And. Well.

[Iago. Sir, he is rash, and very sudden in anger; and, haply, with his truncheon may strike at you: Prove him, that he may: for, out of that, will I cause these of Cyprus waiting; whose qualification shall come into true taste again, but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey your desires, by the means I shall then have preferred them; and the impediment most easily removed, without the which there are no expectation of our prosperity.

[And. I will do this, if I can bring it to any opportunity.

[Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at a strudel: I must fetch his necessaries ashore, ere well.

[And. Adieu. [Exit.]

[Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it; [dit]

but she loves him, 'tis apt, and of great consequence—howbeit that I endure him not,— of a constant, loving, noble nature;

and, I dare think, he'll prove to Desdemona most dear husband. Now I do love her too;

Which thing to If this poor trash[‡] of Venice, whom I trash For his quick heating, stand the putting on, I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip; Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb,†— For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too; Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward me,

For making him egregiously an ass, And practising upon his peace and quiet Even to madness. 'Tis here, but yet confus'd; Knavery's plain face is never seen, till we'd. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter a HERALD, with a Proclamation; People following.

[Herald. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and vallant general, that, upon certain tidings now arrived, importing the mere perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph; some to dances, some to make bon-fires, each man to what sport and revel his addiction leads him; for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptials: So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open; and there is full liberty of feasting, from this present hour of five, till the bell hath told eleven. Heaven bless the tale of Cyprus, and our noble general, Othello! [Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and Attendants.

OTH. Good Michael, look you to the guard to night:

Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop, Not to out-sport discretion.

CAS. Iago hath direction what to do; But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye Will I look to't.

OTH. Iago is most honest. Michael, good night: To-morrow, with our earliest, [love,

Let me have speech with you.—Come, my dear The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue;

[To DESDEMONA.] That profit's yet to come 'twixt me and you.— Good night. [Exit OTT. Des. and Attend.]

Enter IAGO.

CAS. Welcome, Iago: We must to the watch. Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 'tis not yet ten o'clock: Our general cast's us thus early, for the love of his Desdemona; whom let us not therefore blame; he hath not yet made wanton the night with her: and she is sport for Jove.

CAS. She's a most exquisite lady.

Iago. And, I'll warrant her, full of game.

CAS. Indeed, she is a most fresh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a parley of provocation.

CAS. An inviting eye; and yet methinks right modest.

‡ Worthless fellow.

† The term for a ring put on a hand to hinder his running.

‡ In the present manner.

† Entire.

‡ Dressed.

† Mind works. ‡ Qualities, disposition of mind.
‡ Throwing a shoe upon his disciples. † Perhaps.
‡ To advance them.

Iago. And, when she speaks, is it not an alarm to love?

Cas. She is, indeed, perfection.

Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets! Come, lieutenant, I have a stoop of wine; and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants, that would fain have a measure to the health of the black Othello.

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago; I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking: I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.

Iago. O, they are our friends; but one cup; I'll drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified* too, and, behold, what innovation it makes here: I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more.

Iago. What, man! 'tis a night of revels; the gallants desire it.

Cas. Where are they?

Iago. Here at the door; I pray you, call them in.

Cas. I'll do't; but it dislikes me.

[Exit Cassio.]

Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon him, With that which he hath drunk to-night already,

He'll be as full of quarrel and offence
As my young mistress' dog. Now, my sick fool, Roderigo,
Whom love has turn'd almost the wrong side
outward,

To Desdemona hath to-night carous'd
Potations pottle deep; and he's to watch:
Three lads of Cyprus,—noble swelling spirits,
That hold their honours in a wary distance,
The very elements of this warlike isle,—
Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups,
And they watch too. Now, 'mongst this flock of drunkards

Am I to put our Cassio in some action
That may offend the isle:—But here they come:
If consequence do but approve my dream,
My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Re-enter CASSIO, with him MONTANO and Gentlemen.

Cas. 'Fore heaven, they have given me a rouset already.

Mon. Good faith, a little one; not past a pint, as I am a soldier.

Iago. Some wine, ho!

And let me the canakin clink, clink; [Sings.

And let me the canakin clink:

A soldier's a man;

A life's but a span;

Why then, let a soldier drink.

Some wine, boys! [Wine brought in.]

Cas. 'Fore heaven, an excellent song.

Iago. I learned it in England, where, (indeed) they are most potent in potting: your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander,—Drink, ho!—are nothing to your English.

Cas. Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinks you, with facility, your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit ere the next pottle can be filled.

Cas. To the health of our general.

* Slightly mixed with water. † A little more than enough.

To cure him of this evil. But hark! what noise?

[Cry within,—Help! help!

Re-enter CASSIO, driving in RODERIGO.

Cas. You rogue! you rascal!

Mon. What's the matter, lieutenant?

Cas. A knave!—teach me my duty!

I'll beat the knave into a twiggen* bottle.

Red. Beat me!

Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue?

[Striking RODERIGO.

Mon. Nay, good lieutenant, [Staying him.
I pray you, Sir, hold your hand.

Cas. Let me go, Sir,

Or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.

Mon. Come, come, you're drunk.

Cas. Drunk! [They fight.

Iago. Away, I say! go out, and cry—a mutiny! [Aside to ROD. who goes out.

Nay, good lieutenant,—alas, gentlemen,—

Help, ho!—Lieutenant,—Sir,—Montano,—Sir;—

Help, masters!—Here's a goodly watch, indeed! [Bell rings.

Who's that that rings the bell?—Diablo, ho!

The town will rise, God's will, lieutenant!
You will be sham'd for ever. [hold;

Enter OTHELLO, and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here?

Mon. I bleed still, I am hurt to the death;—he dies.

Oth. Hold, for your lives.

Iago. Hold, hold, lieutenant, Sir, Montano, gentlemen,—

Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?

Hold, hold! the general speaks to you; hold, for shame!

Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence ariseth this?

Are we turn'd Turks; and to ourselves do that,
Which heaven bath forbid the Ottomites?

For Christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl:

He that stirs next to carve for his own rage,
Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.—

Silence that dreadful bell, it frights the isle
From her propriety.—What is the matter, masters?—

Honest Iago, that look'st dead with grieving,
Speak, who began this? on thy love, I charge thee.

Iago. I do not know;—friends all but now, even now,

In quarter, and in terms like bride and groom
Devesting them for bed: and then, but now,
(As if some planet had unwitting men,)

Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,
In opposition bloody. I cannot speak

Any beginning to this peevish odds;

And 'would in action glorious I had lost

Thes' legs, that brought me to a part of it!

Oth. How comes it, Michael, you are thus forgot?

Cas. I pray you, pardon me, I cannot speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont be civil;

The gravity and stillness of your youth

The world hath noted, and your name is great

In mouths of wisest censure; What's the mat-

That you unlace your reputation thus, [ter,

And spend your rich opinion, for the name

Of a night-brawler? Give me answer to it.

* A wicker bottle.

† I. e. You have thus forgot yourself.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger;
Your officer, Iago, can inform you—

While I spare speech, which something now offends me;—

Of all that I do know: nor know I aught
By me that's said or done amiss this night;

Unless self-charity* be sometime a vice;

And to defend ourselves it be a sin,

When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven,

My blood begins my safer guides to rule;

And passion, having my best judgement col-

Assays to lead the way: If once I stir, [lied,†

Or do but lift this arm, the best of you Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know

How this foul rout began, who set it on;

And he that is approv'd‡ in this offence,

Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth,

Shall lose me.—What! in a town of war,

Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear,

To manage private and domestic quarrel,

In night, and on the court and guard of safety!

'Tis monstrous.—Iago, who began it?

Mon. If partially affin'd,§ or leagu'd in office,

Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,

Thou art no soldier.

Iago. Touch me not so near: [mouth,

I had rather have this tongue cut from my

Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio;

Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth

Shall nothing wrong him.—Thus it is, general.

Montano and myself being in speech,

There comes a fellow, crying out for help;

And Cassio following him with determin'd
sword,

To execute upon him: Sir, this gentleman

Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause;

Myself: he crying fellow did pursue,

Lest, by his clamour, (as it so fell out,)

The town might fall in fright: he, swift of foot,

Outran my purpose; and I return'd the rather

For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,

And Cassio high in oath; which, till to-night,

I ne'er might say before: when I came back,

(For this was brief,) I found them close together,

At blow, and thrust: even as again they were,

When you yourself did part them.

More of this matter can I not report:—

But men are men; the best sometimes forget:—

Though Cassio did some little wrong to him,—

As men in rage strike those that wish them
best,—

Yet, surely, Cassio, I believe, receiv'd,

From him that fled, some strange indignity,

Which patience could not pass.

Oth. I know, Iago,

Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter,

Making it light to Cassio:—Cassio, I love

But never more be officer of mine.— [thee;

Enter DESDEMONA, attended.

Look, if my gentle love be not rais'd up;—

I'll make thee an example.

Des. What's the matter, dear?

Oth. All's well now, sweeting; Come away to bed.

Sir, for your hurts,

Myself will be your surgeon: Lead him off.

[To MONTANO who is led off.

Iago, look with care about the town;

And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted.—

* Care of one's self.

† Darkened.

‡ Convicted by proof.

§ Related by nearness of office.

Come, Desdemona; 'tis the soldiers' life,
To have their balmy slumbers wak'd with strife.

[Exeunt all but IAGO and CASSIO.]

Iago. What, are you hurt, lieutenant?

Cas. Ay, past all surgery.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!

Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation! O,
I have lost my reputation! I have lost the immortal part, Sir, of myself; and what remains is bestial.—My reputation, Iago, my reputation.

Iago. As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodily wound; there is more offence in that, than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition;
oft got without merit, and lost without deserving: You have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What, man!
there are ways to recover the general again:
You are but now cast in his mood,* a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offenceless dog, to af-fright an imperious lion: sue to him again, and he's yours.

Cas. I will, rather sue to be despis'd, than to deceive so good a commander, with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an officer. Drunk?
and speak parrot?† and squabble? swagger?
swear? and discourse fustian with one's own shadow?—O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee—devil!

Iago. What was he that you followed with your sword? What had he done to you?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is it possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore.—O, that men should put an enemy in their mouths, to steal away their brains!
that we should, with joy, revel, pleasure, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough:
How came you thus recovered?

Cas. It hath pleased the devil, drunkenness, to give place to the devil, wrath: one unper-fectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moraler:
As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not befallen; but, since it is as it is, mend it for your own good.

Cas. I will ask him for my place again; he shall tell me, I am a drunkard! Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange!
—Every inordinate cup is unblessed, and the ingredient is a devil.

Iago. Come, come, good wine is a good familiar creature, if it be well used; exclaim no more against it. And, good lieutenant, I think, you think I love you.

Cas. I have well approved it, Sir.—I drunk!

Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunk at some time, man. I'll tell you what you shall do. Our general's wife is now the general;—
I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and denotement of her parts and graces:—confess yourself freely to her; im-portune her; she'll help to put you in your place again: she is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, that she holds it a vice in her goodness, not to do more!

is requested: This broken joint, betwixt and her husband, entreat her to split my fortunes against any lay^a worth:
this crack of your love shall grow strong it was before.

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest in the sincerity of my honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely; and, before morning, I will beseech the virtuous mora to undertake for me: I am down my fortunes, if they check me here.

Iago. You are in the right. Good lieutenant; I must to the watch.

Cas. Good night, honest Iago. [Exit]

Iago. And what's he then, that says, the villain?

When this advice is free, I give, and Probal to thinking, and (indeed) the
To win the Moor again? For, 'tis not
The inclining Desdemona to subdue in any honest suit; she's fram'd as firm
As the free elements. And then for
To win the Moor,—were't to reap baptism,

All seals and symbols of redemption in
His soul is so enfetters'd to her love,
That she may make, unmake, do what
Even as her appetite shall play the game
With his weak function. How an villain,

To counsel Cassio to this parallel; or Directly to his good? Divinity of hell!
When devils will their blackest sins;
They do suggest, at first with heaven
As I do now: For while this honest
Pleads Desdemona to repair his fortune
And she for him pleads strongly to the
I'll pour this pestilence into his ear,
That she repels him for her body's sake!
And, by how much she strives to do!
She shall undo her credit with the Moor.
So will I turn her virtue into pitch;
And out of her own goodness make the
That shall enmesh them all.—How derigo?

Enter RODERIGO.

Rod. I do follow here in the chase a hound that hunts, but one that fil-cry. My money is almost spent; I have to-night exceedingly well cudgelled think, the issue will be—I shall have experience for my pains: and so,
money at all, and a little more wit,
Venice.

Iago. How poor are they, that have tience!

What wound did ever heal, but by deeds?
Thou know'st we work by wit, and witchcraft;

And wit depends on dilatory time.
Does't not go well? Cassio hath beat
And thou, by that small hurt, hath

Cassio:

Though other things grow fair against
Yet fruits, that blossom first, will first Content thyself awhile.—By the morning;

Pleasure, and action, make the hours
short.—

Retire thee; go where thou art billeted.
Away, I say; thou shalt know more be

* Dismissed in his anger.

† Talk idly.

^a Bet, or wager. † Liberal, bountiful.
[†] Even. ‡ Tempt. § Recall.

Nay, get thee gone. [Exit ROD.] Two things are to be done,—

My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress ;
I'll set her on ;

Myself, the while, to draw the Moor apart,
And bring him jump* when he may Cassio find

Soliciting his wife:—Ay, that's the way ;
Dull not device by coldness and delay. [Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Before the Castle.

Enter CASSIO, and some MUSICIANS.

Cas. Masters, play here, I will content your pains,
Something that's brief; and bid—good-morrow, general. [Music.]

Enter CLOWN.

Clo. Why, masters, have your instruments been at Naples, that they speak i'the nose
thus?

1 Mus. How, Sir, how!

Clo. Are these, I pray you, called wind instruments?

1 Mus. Ay, marry, are they, Sir.

Clo. O, thereby hangs a tail.

1 Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, Sir?

Clo. Marry, Sir, by many a wind instrument that I know. But, masters, here's money for you: and the general so likes your music, that he desires you, of all loves, to make no more noise with it.

1 Mus. Well, Sir, we will not.

Clo. If you have any music that may not be heard, to't again: but, as they say, to hear music, the general does not greatly care.

1 Mus. We have none such, Sir.

Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away: Go; vanish into air; away.

[Exit MUSICIANS.]

Cas. Dost thou hear, my honest friend?

Clo. No, I hear not your honest friend. I hear you.

Cas. Pr'ythee, keep up thy quilllets.† There's a poor piece of gold for thee: if the gentlewo-man that attends the general's wife, be stirring, tell her, there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech: Wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring, Sir; if she will stir hither, I shall seem to notify unto her. [Exit.]

Enter IAGO.

Cas. Do, good my friend.—In happy time,
Iago.

Iago. You have not been a-bed then?

Cas. Why, no; the day had broke
Before we parted. I have made bold, Iago,
To send in to your wife: My suit to her
Is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona
Procure me some access.

Iago. I'll send her to you presently;
And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor
Out of the way, that your converse and business

May be more free. [Exit.]

Cas. I humbly thank you for't. I never knew
A Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. Good morrow, good lieutenant: I am sorry

For your displeasure;* but all will soon be well.
The general, and his wife, are talking of it,
And she speaks for you stoutly: The Moor replies,

That he, you hurt, is of great fame in Cyprus,
And great affinity; and that, in wholesome
wisdom,

He might not but refuse you: but, he protests,
he loves you;

And needs no other suitor, but his likings,
To take the saf'st occasion by the front,
To bring you in again.

Cas. Yet, I beseech you,—

If you think fit, or that it may be done,
Give me advantage of some brief discourse
With Desdemona alone.

Emil. Pray you, come in;

I will bestow you where you shall have time
To speak your bosom freely.

Cas. I am much bound to you. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and GENTLEMEN.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot;
And, by him, do my duties to the state:
That done, I will be walking on the works,
Repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good lord, I'll do't.

Oth. This fortification, gentlemen,—shall we see't?

Gent. We'll wait upon your lordship.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—Before the Castle.

Enter DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and EMILIA.

Des. Be thou assur'd, good Cassio, I will do
All my abilities in thy behalf.

Emil. Good madam, do; I know it grieves
my husband,
As if the case were his.

Des. O, that's an honest fellow.—Do not doubt, Cassio,
But I will have my lord and you again
As friendly as you were.

Cas. Bounteous madam,
Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio,
He's never any thing but your true servant.

Des. O, Sir, I thank you: You do love my
lord:

You have known him long; and be you well
assur'd,

He shall in strangeness stand no further off
Than in a politic distance.

Cas. Ay, but, lady,
That policy may either last so long,
Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet,
Or breed itself so out of circumstance,
That, I being absent, and my place supplied,
My general will forget my love and service.

Des. Do not doubt that; before Emilia here,
I give thee warrant of thy place: assure thee,
If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it
To the last article: my lord shall never rest;
I'll watch him tame,† and talk him out of patience;

His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift;
I'll intermingle every thing he does
With Cassio's suit: Therefore be merry, Cas-
For thy solicitor shall rather die, [sio;]
Than give thy cause away.

* The displeasure you have incurred from Othello.

† Hawks are tamed by keeping them from sleep.

* Just at the time.

† Nice distinctions.

Enter OTHELLO, and IAGO, at a distance.

Emil. Madam, here comes
My lord.

Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.

Des. Why, stay,
And hear me speak.

Cas. Madam, not now; I am very ill at ease,
Unfit for mine own purposes.

Des. Well, well,
Do your discretion. [Exit Cassio.

Iago. Ha! I like not that.

Oth. What dost thou say?

Iago. Nothing, my lord: or if—I know not what.

Oth. Was not that Cassio, parted from my wife?

Iago. Cassio, my lord? No, sure, I cannot think it.

That he would steal away so guilty-like,
Seeing you coming.

Oth. I do believe 'twas he.

Des. How now, my lord?
I have been talking with a suitor here,
A man that languishes in your displeasure.

Oth. Who is't you mean?

Des. Why, your lieutenant Cassio. Good
my lord,

If I have any grace, or power to move you,
His present reconciliation take;

For, if he be not one that truly loves you,
That errs in ignorance, and not in cunning*
I have no judgement in an honest face:

I prythee, call him back.

Oth. Went he hence now?

Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled,
That he hath left part of his grief with me;
I suffer with him. Good love, call him back.

Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time.

Des. But shall't be shortly?

Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you.

Des. Shall't be to-night at supper?

Oth. No, not to-night.

Des. To-morrow dinner then?

Oth. I shall not dine at home;
I meet the captains at the citadel.

Des. Why then, to-morrow night; or Tuesday morn; [morn;—

Or Tuesday noon, or night; or Wednesday
I pray thee, name the time; but let it not Exceed three days: in faith, he's penitent;

And yet his trespass, in our common reason, (Save that, they say, the wars must make examples

Out of their best,†) is not almost a fault
To incur a private check: When shall he come?

Tell me, Othello. I wonder in my soul,
What you could ask me, that I should deny,
Or stand so mumbling on. What! Michael

Cassio, [time,
That came a wooing with you; and many a
When I have spoke of you dispraisingly.

Hath ta'en your part; to have so much to do
To bring him in! Trust me, I could do much,—

Oth. Prythee, no more: let him come when he will;

I will deny thee nothing.

Des. Why, this is not a boon;

'Tis as I should entreat you wear your gloves,
Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you
Or sue to you to do peculiar profit [warm;

To your own person: Nay, when I have a suit,
Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed,

* Knowledge.

; Heavens.

† Best men.

It shall be full of poize* and difficulty,
And fearful to be granted.

Oth. I will deny thee nothing.
Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,
To leave me but a little to myself.

Des. Shall I deny you? no: Farewell, my
lord.

Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I will come to thee straight.

Des. Emilia, come:—Be it as your faces teach you;

Whate'er you be, I am obedient.

[Exit, with Emilia.

Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition can't soul,

But I do love thee! and when I love thee so,
Chaos is come again.

Iago. My noble lord,——

Oth. What dost thou say, Iago?

Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you went my lady,

Know of your love?

Oth. He did, from first to last: Why dost thou ask?

Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought,
No further harm.

Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?

Iago. I did not think, he had been acquainted with her.

Oth. O, yes, and went between us very oft.

Iago. Indeed?

Oth. Indeed! ay, indeed;—Dost thou think ought in that?

Is he not honest?

Iago. Honest, my lord?

Oth. Ay, honest.

Iago. My lord, for aught I know.

Oth. What dost thou think?

Iago. Think, my lord?

Oth. Think, my lord!

By heaven, he echoes me,
As if there were some monster in his thought Too hideous to be shown.—Thou dost say something: [that.

I heard thee say but now,—Thou lik'st not
When Cassio left my wife; What dost thou
like?

And, when I told thee—he was of my count
In my whole course of wooing, thou credit,
Indeed? [that.

And didst contract and purse thy brow ag-
As if thou then had'st shut up in thy brain
Some horrible conceit: If thou dost love me, show me thy thought.

Iago. My lord, you know I love you.

Oth. I think, thou dost; [honesty,

And,—for I know thou art full of love and
And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st them breath,— [more

Therefore these stops of thine fright me the
For such things in a false disloyal knave,
Are tricks of custom; but, in a man that's just,
They are close denotements, working from the
That passion cannot rule. [honest.

Iago. For Michael Cassio,—

I dare be sworn, I think that he is honest.

Oth. I think so too.

Iago. Men should be what they seem;
Or, those that be not, 'would they might seem
none!

Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.

Iago. Why, then,

I think that Cassio is an honest man.

Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this:

I pray thee, speak to me as to thy thinking.

* Thought.

As thou dost ruminatè; and give thy worst
of thoughts
The worst of words.

Iago. Good my lord, pardon me;
Though I am bound to every act of duty,
I am not bound to that all slaves are free to.
Utter my thoughts? Why, say, they are vile and false,—

As where's that palace, whereinto foul things
Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so
But some uncleanly apprehensions [pure,
Keep leets,* and law-days, and in session sit
With meditations lawful?

Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend,
Iago,
If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st
his ear
A stranger to thy thoughts.

Iago. I do beseech you,—
Though I, perchance, am vicious in my guess,
As, I confess, it is my nature's plague
To spy into abuses; and, oft, my jealousy
Shapes faults that are not,—I entreat you then,
From one that so imperfectly coniects,† You'd take no notice; nor build yourself a trouble
Out of his scattering and unsure observance:—
It were not for your quiet, nor your good,
Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom,
To let you know my thoughts.

Oth. What dost thou mean?

Iago. Good name, in man, and woman, dear
my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls:
Who steals my purse, steals trash; 'tis something, nothing;
'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;
But he, that filches from me my good name,
Robs me of that, which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thought.

Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your
hand;
Nor shall not, whilst 'tis in my custody.

Oth. Ha!

Iago. O, beware, my lord, of jealousy;
It is the green-ey'd monster, which doth mock
The meat it feeds on: That cuckold lives in bliss, [er;
Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wrong-
But, O, what damned minutes tells he o'er,
Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet strongly loves!

Oth. O misery!

Iago. Poor, and content, is rich, and rich enough;
But riches, fineless,‡ is as poor as winter,
To him that ever fears he shall be poor:—
Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend
From jealousy!

Oth. Why? why is this?

Think'st thou, I'd make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? No: to be once in doubt, [goat,
Is—once to be resolv'd: Exchange me for a
When I shall turn the business of my soul
To such exsufflicate and blown surmises,

Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances

Where virtue is, these are more virtuous:°
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear, or doubt of her revolt;
For she had eyes, and chose me: No, Iago;
I'll see, before I doubt; when I doubt, prove;
And, on the proof, there is no more but Away at once with love, or jealousy. [this,— Iago. I am glad of this, for now I shall have reason

To show the love and duty that I bear you
With franker spirit: therefore, as I am bound,
Receive it from me:—I speak not yet of proof.
Look to your wife; observe her well with Cas-sio;

Wear your eye—thus, not jealous, nor secure:
I would not have your free and noble nature,
Out of self-bounty, be abus'd; look to't:
I know our country disposition well;
In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks
They dare not show their husbands; their best conscience
Is—not to leave undone, but keep unknown.

Oth. Dost thou say so?

Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying
you;
And, when she seem'd to shake, and fear
your looks,
She lov'd them most.

Oth. And so she did.

Iago. Why, go to, then;
She that, so young, could give out such a seeming,†
To seel; her father's eyes up, close as oak,—
He thought, 'twas witchcraft:—But I am much to blame;
I humbly do beseech you of your pardon,
For too much loving you.

Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.

Iago. I see, this hath a little dash'd your spirits.

Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.

Iago. Trust me, I fear it has.
I hope, you will consider, what is spoke Comes from my love;—But, I do see you are mov'd:—
I am to pray you, not to strain my speech
To grosser issues,§ nor to larger reach,
Than to suspicion.

Oth. I will not.

Iago. Should you do so, my lord,
My speech should fall into such vile success
As my thoughts aim not at. Cassio's my worthy
friend:—
My lord, I see you are mov'd.

Oth. No, not much mov'd:—
I do not think but Desdemona's honest.

Iago. Long live she so! and long live you to think so!

Oth. And yet, how nature erring from itself,—

Iago. Ay, there's the point:—As,—to be bold with you,—
Not to affect many proposed matches,
Of her own clime, complexion, and degree;
Whereto, we see, in all things nature tends:
Foh! one may smell, in such, a will most
rank,
Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural.—
But pardon me; I do not, in position,
Distinctly speak of her: though I may fear,
Her will, recoiling to her better judgement,
May fall to match you with her country forms,
And (happily) repent.

Oth. Farewell, farewell:
If more thou dost perceive, let me know more;
Set on thy wife to observe: Leave me, Iago.

Iago. My lord, I take my leave. [Going.]

Oth. Why did I marry?—This honest creature, doubtless, [unfolds] sees and knows more, much more, than he.
Iago. My lord, I would, I might entreat your honour

To scan this thing no further; leave it to time;

Much will be seen in that. In the meantime,
Let me be thought too busy in my fears,

And hold her free, I do beseech your honour.

Oth. Fear not my government.

Iago. I once more take my leave. [Exit.]

Your dinner, and the generous islanders,
By you invited, do attend your presence.

Oth. I am to blame.

Des. Why is your speech so faint? are you not well?

Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.

Des. Faith, that's with watching; 'twill away again:

Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
It will be well.

Oth. Your napkin¶ is too little;

[He puts the Handkerchief from him, and it drops.]

Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.

Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.

It speaks against her with the other proofs.

Cassio lies?

Clw. I dare not say, he lies any where.

Des. Why, man?

Clw. He is a soldier; and for me to say a soldier lies, is stabbing.

Des. Go to; Where lodges he?

Clw. To tell you where he lodges, is to tell you where I lie.

Des. Can any thing be made of this?

Clw. I know not where he lodges; and for me to devise a lodging, and say—he lies here, or he lies there, were to lie in my own throat.

Des. Can you inquire him out, and be edified by report?

Clw. I will catechise the world for him; that is, make questions, and by them answer.

Des. Seek him, bid him come hither: tell him, I have moved my lord in his behalf, and hope, all will be well.

Clw. To do this, is within the compass of man's wit; and therefore I will attempt the doing it. [Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO.

Iago. Will you think so?

Oth. Think so, Iago?

Iago. What,
To kiss in private?

Oth. An unauthoris'd kiss.

Iago. Or to be naked with her friend abed,
An hour, or more, not meaning any harm?

Oth. Naked abed, Iago, and not mean harm?
It is hypocrisy against the devil:

They that mean virtuously, and yet do so,
The devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt
heaven.

Iago. So they do nothing, 'tis a venial slip:
But if I give my wife a handkerchief,—

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why then 'tis hers, my lord; and, being hers,
She may, I think, bestow't on any man.

Oth. She is protectress of her honour too;
May she give that?

Iago. Her honour is an essence that's not seen;

They have it very oft, that have it not:

But, for the handkerchief,—

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it:—

Thou said'st,—O, it comes o'er my memory,
As doth the raven o'er the infected house,
Boding to all,*—he had my handkerchief.

Iago. Ay, what of that?

Oth. That's not so good, now.

Iago. What, if I had said, I had seen him do you wrong?

Or heard him say,—As knaves be such abroad,
Who having, by their own importunate suit,
Or voluntary dotage of some mistress,
Convinced or supplied† them, cannot choose
But they must blab—

Oth. Hath he said any thing?

Iago. He hath, my lord; but be you well as-
No more than he'll unswear. [sur'd,

Oth. What hath he said?

Iago. 'Faith, that he did,—I know not what he did.

Oth. What? what?

Iago. Lie—

Oth. With her?

Iago. With her, on her; what you will.

Oth. Lie with her! lie on her!—We say, lie on her, when they belie her: Lie with her!
that's fulsome.—Handkerchief,—confessions,
—handkerchief.—To confess, and be hanged for his labour;—First to be hanged, and then to confess:—I tremble at it. Nature would that shake me thus:—Pish!—Noses, ears, and lips:—Is it possible?—Confess!—Handkerchief!—O devil!— [Falls in a Trance.

Iago. Work on,
My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are caught;

And many worthy and chaste dames, even thus,
All guiltless meet reproach.—What, ho! my
lord!

Enter CASSIO.

My lord, I say! Othello!—How now, Cassio?

Cas. What is the matter?

Iago. My lord is fallen into an epilepsy;
This is his second fit; he had one yesterday.

Cas. Rub him about the temples.

Iago. No, forbear:

The lethargy must have his quiet course:
If not, he foams at mouth; and, by and by,
Breaks out to savage madness. Look he stin:
Do you withdraw yourself a little while,
He will recover straight; when he is gone,
I would on great occasion speak with you.—

How is it, general? have you not hurt your head?

Oth. Dost thou mock me?

Oth. A horned man's a monster, and a beast.

And many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Iago. Good Sir, be a man;
Think, every bearded fellow, that's but yet'd,
May draw with you: there's millions now
alive,

That nightly lie in those unproper beds,
Which they dare swear peculiar; your case is better.

O, 'tis the spite of hell, the fiend's arch-mock,
To lip a wanton in a secure couch,
And to suppose her chaste! No, let me know;
And, knowing what I am, I know what she shall be.

Oth. O, thou art wise; 'tis certain.

Iago. Stand you awhile apart;
Confine yourself but in a patient list:
Whilst you were here, ere while mad with
your grief,

(A passion most unsuited such a man.)
Cassio came hither: I shifted him away,
And laid good 'scuse upon your ecstasy;
Bade him anon return, and here speak with me; [self.]

And mark the flours, the gibes, and notable

That dwell in every region of his face;
For I will make him tell the tale anew.—
Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and
when

He hath, and is again to cope your wife;
I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, patience.
Or I shall say, you are all in all in spleen.
And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago?

I will be found most cunning in my patience:
But (dost thou hear?) most bloody.

Iago. That's not amiss;

But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw?
[OTHELLO withdraws.]

Now will I question Cassio of Bianca,
A housewife, that, by selling her desires,
Buys herself bread and clothes: it is a creature
That dotes on Cassio,—as 'tis the strumpet's plague,

To beguile many, and be beguil'd by one;
He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain
From the excess of laughter:—Here he comes:—

Re-enter CASSIO.

As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad;

Oth. Look, how he laughs already! [Aside.

Iago. I never knew a woman love man so.
Cas. Alas, poor rogue! I think i'faith she loves me.

Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs it out. [Aside.

Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?
Oth. Now he importunes him
To tell it o'er: Go to; well said, well said.

Iago. She gives it out, that you shall marry

Cas. I marry her!—what? a customer!‡ I think it so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. So, so, so, so: They laugh that win.
[Aside.

Iago. 'Faith, the cry goes, that you shall marry her.

Cas. Pr'ythee, say true.
Iago. I am a very villain else.

Oth. Have you scored me? Well. [Aside.

Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out:
she is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.

Oth. Iago beckons me; now he begins the story. [Aside.

Cas. She was here even now; she haunts me in every place. I was, the other day, talking on the sea-bank with certain Venetians; and thither comes this bauble; by this hand, she falls thus about my neck;—

Oth. Crying, O dear Cassio! as it were: his gesture imports it. [Aside.

Cas. So hangs, and lolls, and weeps upon me; so hales, and pulls me: ha, ha, ha!—

Oth. Now he tells, how she pluck'd him to my chamber: O, I see that nose of yours, but not that dog I shall throw it to. [Aside.

Cas. Well, I must leave her company.
Iago. Before me! look where she comes.

Enter BIANCA.

Cas. 'Tis such another fitchew!§ marry, a perfumed one.—What do you mean by this haunting of me?

Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you!
What did you mean by that same handkerchief, you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the whole work?—A likely piece of work, that you should find it in your chamber, and not know who left it there! This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work? There,—give it your hobby-horse: wheresoever you had it, I'll take out no work on't.

Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca? how now?
how now?

Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkerchief! [Aside.

Enter LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, and Attendants.

Lod. 'Save you, worthy general!

Oth. With all my heart, Sir.

Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet
you. [Gives him a Packet.

Bian. An you'll come to supper to-night, you may: an you will not, come when you are next prepared for. [Exit.

Iago. After her, after her.

Cas. 'Faith I must, she'll rail in the streets
else.

Iago. Will you sup there?

Cas. 'Faith, I intend so.

Iago. Well, I may chance to see you; for I would very fain speak with you.

Cas. Pr'ythee, come; Will you?

Iago. Go to; say no more. [Exit Cassio.

Oth. How shall I murder him, Iago?

Iago. Did you perceive how he laughed at his vice?

Oth. O, Iago!

Iago. And did you see the handkerchief?

Oth. Was that mine?

Iago. Yours, by this hand: and to see how he prizes the foolish woman, your wife! she gave it to him, and he hath given it his whore.

Oth. I would have him nine years a killing:—A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!

Iago. Nay, you must forget that.

Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damned to-night; for she shall not live: No, my heart is turned to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O, the world hath not a sweeter creature: she might lie by an emperor's side, and command him tasks.

Iago. Nay, that's not your way.

Oth. Hang her! I do but say what she is:—
So delicate with her needle!—An admirable musician! O, she will sing the savageness out of a bear!—Of so high and plenteous wit and invention!—

Iago. She's the worse for all this.

Oth. O, a thousand, a thousand times:—
And then, of so gentle a condition!*

Iago. Ay, too gentle.

Oth. Nay, that's certain: But yet the pity of it, Iago!—O, Iago, the pity of it, Iago!

Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend; for, if it touch not you, it comes near nobody.

Oth. I will chop her into messes:—Cuckold
me!

Iago. O, 'tis foul in her.

Oth. With mine officer!

Iago. That's fouler.

Oth. Get me some poison, Iago; this night:—I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body and beauty unprovide my mind again:
this night, Iago.

Iago. Do it not with poison, strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.

Oth. Good, good: the justice of it pleases;
very good.

Iago. And, for Cassio,—let me be his undertaker: You shall hear more by midnight.

[A Trumpet within.

Oth. Excellent good.—What trumpet is that same?

Iago. Something from Venice, sure. 'Tis
Lodovico,
Come from the duke: and, see, your wife is
with him.

Enter LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, and Attendants.

Lod. 'Save you, worthy general!

Oth. With all my heart, Sir.

Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet
you. [Gives him a Packet.

* Ignorant.

† A common woman.

‡ Title of lieutenant.

§ A pole-cat.

* Of so sweet a disposition.

Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures.
[Opens the Packet and reads.]
 Des. And what's the news, good cousin Lodovico?
 Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior; Welcome to Cyprus.
 Lod. I thank you: How does lieutenant Cassio?
 Iago. Lives, Sir.
 Des. Cousin, there's fallen between him and my lord
 An unkind breach: but you shall make all well.
 Oth. Are you sure of that?
 Des. My lord?
 Oth. This fail you not to do, as you will—
[Reads.]
 Lod. He did not call; he's busy in the paper. Is there division 'twixt thy lord and Cassio?
 Des. A most unhappy one; I would do much
 To atone* them, for the love I bear to Cassio.
 Oth. Fire and brimstone!
 Des. My lord?
 Oth. Are you wise?
 Des. What, is he angry?
 Lod. May be, the letter mov'd him;
 For, as I think, they do command him home, Deputing Cassio in his government.
 Des. By my troth, I am glad on't.
 Oth. Indeed.
 Des. My lord?
 Oth. I am glad to see you mad.
 Des. How, sweet Othello?
 Oth. Devil! [Striking her.]
 Des. I have not deserv'd this.
 Lod. My lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice,
 Though I should swear I saw it: 'Tis very Make her amends, she weeps. [much;]

 Des. I will not stay to offend you. [Going.]
 Lod. Truly, an obedient lady:—
 I do beseech your lordship, call her back.
 Oth. Mistress,—
 Des. My lord?
 Oth. What would you with her, Sir?
 Lod. Who, I, my lord?
 Oth. Ay; you did wish, that I would make her turn:
 Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on,
 And turn again; and she can weep, Sir, weep;
 And she's obedient, as you say,—obedient,—
 Very obedient;—Proceed you in your tears.—
 Concerning this, Sir,—O well-painted passion!
 I am commanded home:—Get you away;
 I'll send for you anon.—Sir, I obey the mandate,
 And will return to Venice;—Hence, avaunt!
[Exit DESDEMONA.]
 Cassio shall have my place. And,—Sir, to-
 night,
 I do entreat that we may sup together.
 You are welcome, Sir, to Cyprus.—Goats, and monkies! [Exit.]
 Lod. Is this the noble Moor whom our full

 Whom passion could not shake? whose solid virtue
 The shot of accident, nor dart of chance,
 Could neither graze, nor pierce?
 Iago. He is much chang'd.

* Reconcile.

Lod. Are his wits safe? is he not light of brain?
 Iago. He is that he is; I may not breathe my censure.
 What he might be,—if, what he might, he is
 I would to heaven, he were. [Exit.]
 Lod. What, strike his wife!
 Iago. 'Faith, that was not so well; 'Tis
 'would I knew,
 That stroke would prove the worst.
 Lod. Is it his use?
 Or did the letters work upon his blood,
 And new-create this fault?
 Iago. Alas, alas!
 It is not honesty in me to speak
 What I have seen and known. You shall deserve him;
 And his own courses will denote him so,
 That I may save my speech: Do but go on.
 And mark how he continues.
 Lod. I am sorry, that I am deceiv'd in him.
[Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO and EMILIA.

Oth. You have seen nothing then?
 Emil. Nor ever heard; nor ever did suspect.
 Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and she together.
 Emil. But then I saw no harm: and then I heard [then]
 Each syllable, that breath made up between
 Oth. What, did they never whisper?
 Emil. Never, my lord.
 Oth. Nor send you out o'the way?
 Emil. Never.
 Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask,
 nor nothing?
 Emil. Never, my lord.
 Oth. That's strange.
 Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest, [other,]
 Lay down my soul at stake: if you think Remove your thought; it doth abuse your dis-
 son.

 For, if she be not honest, chaste, and true,
 There's no man happy; the purest of their
 Is foul as slander. [wives]
 Oth. Bid her come hither:—go.—
[Exit EMILIA.]
 She says enough:—yet she's a simple bawd.
 That cannot say as much. This is a subtle whore,
 A closet-lock-and-key of villanous secrets:
 And yet she'll kneel, and pray; I have seen her do't.

Re-enter EMILIA, with DESDEMONA.

Des. My lord, what is your will?
 Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.
 Des. What is your pleasure?
 Oth. Let me see your eyes;
 Look in my face.
 Des. What horrible fancy's this?
 Oth. Some of your function, mistress;
[To EMILIA.]
 Leave procreants alone, and shut the door;
 Cough, or cry—hem, if any body come:
 Your mystery, your mystery;—nay, despatch.
[Exit EMILIA.]
 Des. Upon my knees, what doth your speech import?
 I understand a fury in your words,
 But not the words.

Why, what art thou?
Your wife, my lord; your true
val wife.
Come, swear it, damn thyself;
being like one of heaven, the devils
themselves
fear to seize thee: therefore be double-
-thou art honest. [damn'd,
Heaven doth truly know it.
Heaven truly knows, that thou art false
as hell.
To whom, my lord? with whom? How am I false?
O Desdemona!—away! away! away!
Alas, the heavy day!—Why do you nest.

O, ay; as summer flies are in the shambles,
icken even with blowing. O thou weed,
rt so lovely fair, and smell'st so sweet,
e sense aches at thee.—'Would, thou had'st ne'er been born!
Alas, what ignorant sin have I commit-

By heaven, you do me wrong.
Are not you a strumpet?
No, as I am a Christian:
reserve this vessel for my lord,
ny other foul unlawful touch,
ot to be a strumpet, I am none.
What, not a whore?
No, as I shall be saved.
Is it possible?
O, heaven forgive us!

Oth. I cry you mercy, then;
I took you for that cunning whore of Venice,
That married with Othello.—You, mistress,

Re-enter EMILIA.

That have the office opposite to Saint Peter,
And keep the gate of hell; You! you! ay,
you!

We have done our course; there's money for your pains;

I pray you, turn the key, and keep our counsel. [Exit.

Emil. Alas, what does this gentleman conceive?— [lady?

How do you, madam? how do you, my good

Des. 'Faith, half asleep.

Emil. Good madam, what's the matter with
my lord?

Des. With who?

Emil. Why, with my lord, madam.

Des. Who is thy lord?

Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady.

Des. I have none: Do not talk to me, Emilia;

I cannot weep; nor answer I have none,
But what should go by water. Pr'ythee, to-
night

Lay on my bed my wedding sheets,—remem-
And call thy husband hither. [ber;—

Emil. Here is a change, indeed! [Exit.

Des. 'Tis meet I should be us'd so, very
meet.

How have I been behav'd, that he might stick
The small'st opinion on my great'st abuse?

Re-enter EMILIA, with IAGO.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam? How is it with you?

Des. I cannot tell. Those, that do teach young babes,

Do it with gentle means, and easy tasks:
He might have chid me so; for, in good faith,
I am a child to chiding.

Iago. What's the matter, lady?

Emil. Alas, Iago, my lord hath so bewhor'd
her,

Thrown such despite and heavy terms upon
As true hearts cannot bear. [her,

Des. Am I that name, Iago?

Iago. What name, fair lady?

Des. Such as, she says, my lord did say I was.

Emil. He call'd her, whore; a beggar, in his drink,

Could not have laid such terms upon his callet.*

Iago. Why did he so?

Des. I do not know; I am sure, I am none
such.

Iago. Do not weep, do not weep; Alas, the
day!

Emil. Has she forsook so many noble matches,

Her father, and her country, and her friends,
To be call'd—whore? would it not make one weep?

Des. It is my wretched fortune.

Iago. Beshrew him for it!

How comes this trick upon him?

Des. Nay, heaven doth know.

Emil. I will be hang'd, if some eternal vil-
Some busy and insinuating rogue, [lain,
Some cogging cozening slave, to get some office, [else.

Have not devis'd this slander; I'll be hang'd

Iago. Fie, there is no such man; it is impossible.

Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon him!

Emil. A better pardon him! and hell gnaw his bones!

Why should he call her, where? who keeps her company?

What place? what time? what form? what likelihood?

The Moor's abused by some most villainous, some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow:—

O, heaven, that such opportunities^a thou'dst And put in every honest hand a whip, To lash the rascal naked through the world, Even from the east to the west!

Iago. Speak within door.

Emil. O, so upon him! some such squire he was,

That turn'd your wit the scamy dider without, And made you to suspect me with the Moor.

Iago. You are a fool; go to.

Des. O good Iago,

What shall I do to win my lord again?

Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven,

I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel:—

If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love, Either in discourse of thought, or actual deed;

Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense,

Delighted them in any other form;

Or that I do not yet, and ever did,

And ever will,—though he do shake me off

To haggard divorcement,—love him dearly,

Comfort forever me! Unkindness may do much;

And his unkindness may defeat my life,

But never taint my love. I cannot say, where;

It does abhor me, now I speak the word;

To do the act that might the addition earn,

Not the world's mass of vanity could make me.

Iago. I pray you, be content: 'tis but his humour;

The business of the state does him offence,

And he does chide with you.

Des. If 'twere so other,—

Iago. It is but so, I warrant you. [Trumpets. Hark, how these instruments summon to supper!

And the great messengers of Venice stay:

Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.

[Exit DEADDEMONA and EMILIA.]

Enter RODERIGO.

How now, Roderigo?

Red. I do not find, that thou deal'st justly with me?

Iago. What in the contrary?

Red. Every day thou dost st^b me with some device, Iago; and rather (as it seems to me now,) keep'st from me all conveyency, than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will, indeed, no longer endure it: Nor am I yet persuaded, to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered.

Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo?

Red. 'Faith, I have heard too much; for your words and performances are so kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly.

Red. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me, to deliver to Desdemona, would half have corrupted a virgin: You have told me—she has received them, and returns expectations and comforts of union and acquittance,^c but I find none.

Iago. Well; go to; very well.

Red. Very well! go to! I cannot go to; nor do not very well: By this last day, it is very scurvy; and begin to be scolded in it.

Iago. Very well.

Red. I tell you, 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona: I will return me my jewels, I will give every suit, and repeat my unfeigned solicitation: I will assure yourself, I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Red. Ay, and I have said nothing, but will I protest intendment of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see thou'st reason in it; and even from this instant, do build on that better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo: Thou hast taken against a most just exception; but, yet, I protest, have dealt most directly in thy affairs.

Red. It hath not appeared.

Iago. I grant, indeed, it hath not appeared; and your suspicion is not without all judgment. But, Roderigo, if thou hast it within thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever,—I mean, purpose, courage, and valour,—this night do it: If thou the next night following open not Desdemona, take me from this world off treachery, and devise engines for my life.

Red. Well, what is it? is it within me, and compass?

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission from Venice, to depose Cassio in that place.

Red. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O, no; he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident; wherein none can be so determined, as the removing of Cassio.

Red. How do you mean—removing of him?

Iago. Why, by making him incapable of Othello's place; knocking out his brains.

Red. And that you would have me do?

Iago. Ay; if you dare do yourself a profit, and a right. He sups to-night with a banquet, and thither will I go to him;—he knows not yet of his honourable fortune: If you will watch his going thence, (which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one,) you may take him at your pleasure: I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a security in his death, that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste, about it.

Red. I will hear further reason for this.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied. [Exit.]

Dost thou in conscience think,—tell me, Emil.
That there be women who abuse their husbands
In such gross kind?

Emil. There be some such, no question.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. Why, would not you?

Des. No, by this heavenly light!

Emil. Nor I neither by this heavenly light;
I might do't as well i'the dark.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. The world is a huge thing: 'Tis a great price

For a small vice.

Des. Good troth, I think thou wouldst not.

Emil. By my troth, I think I should; and undo't, when I had done. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring; nor for measures of lawn; nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition: but, for the whole world,—Why, who would not make her husband a cuckold, to make him a monarch?
I should venture purgatory for't.

Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong for the whole world.

Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i'the world; and, having the world for your labour,
'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.

Des. I do not think there is any such wo-
man.

Emil. Yes, a dozen; and as many
To the vantage, as would store the world they play'd for.

But, I do think, it is their husbands' faults,
If wives do fall: Say, that they slack their duties,

And pour our treasures into foreign laps;
(Or else break out in peevish jealousies, Throwing restraint upon us; or, say, they strike us,

Or scant our former havingt in despite;
Why, we have galls; and, though we have some grace, [know,

Yet we have some revenge. Let husbands
Their wives have sense† like them: they see,
and smell,

And have their palates both for sweet and sour
As husbands have. What is it that they do.

When they change us for others? Is it sport?
I think it is; And doth affection breed it?

I think, it doth; Is't frailty, that thus errs?

It is so too: And have not we affections?

Desires for sport? and frailty, as men have?
Then, let them use us well: else, let them
know,

The ills we do, their ills instruct us to.

^a No for more.

such usage send,
Not to pick bad from bad; but, by bad, mend!

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Street.

Enter IAGO and RODERIGO.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk; straight will he come:
Wear thy good rapier bare,* and put it home;
Quick, quick; fear nothing; I'll be at thy elbow:

It makes us, or it mars us; think on that,
And fix most firm thy resolution.

Rod. Be near at hand; I may miscarry in't.

Iago. Here, at thy hand; be bold, and take thy sword. [Retires to a little distance.]

Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed;
And yet he has given me satisfying reasons:—
'Tis but a man gone:—forth, my sword; he dies. [Goes to his stand.]

Iago. I have rubb'd this young quat almost to the sense,† [Cassio,
And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill
Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my gain: Live Roderigo,
He calls me to a restitution large
Of gold, and jewels, that I bobb'd‡ from him,
As gifts to Desdemona;
It must not be: if Cassio do remain,
He hath a daily beauty in his life,
That makes me ugly; and, besides, the Moor
May unfold me to him; there stand I in much peril:

No, he must die:—But so, I hear him coming.

Enter CASSIO.

Rod. I know his gait, 'tis he;—Villain, thou diest.

[Rushes from his post, and makes a pass at CASSIO.]

Cas. That thrust had been mine enemy indeed,
But that my coat is better than thou think'st;
I will make proof of thine.

[Draws, and wounds RODERIGO.]

Rod. O, I am slain!

[IAGO rushes from his post, cuts CASSIO behind in the Leg, and exit.]

Cas. I am maim'd for ever:—Help, ho! murder! murder! [Falls.]

Enter OTHELLO, at a distance.

Oth. The voice of Cassio:—Iago keeps his word.

Rod. O, villain that I am!

Oth. Hark! 'tis even so.

Cas. O, help! ho! light! a surgeon!

Oth. 'Tis he:—O brave Iago, honest, and just, [wrong!]

That hast such noble sense of thy friend's Thou teachest me,—Minion, your dear lies
dead,

And your fate hies apace:—Strumpet, I come:
Forth of my heart those charms, thine eyes,
are blotted;

Thy bed, lust-stain'd, shall with lust's blood be spotted. [Exit OTHELLO.]

* Unsheathed.
† Flashed.

‡ To the quick.
Out.

Lend me a garter: So.—O, for a chair,
him easily hence!

Alas, he faints:—O Cassio! Cassio!
Cassio!

Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash party in this injury.—

awhile, good Cassio.—Come, come;
a light.—Know we this face, or no?
y friend, and my dear countryman,
? no:—Yes, sure; O heaven, Roderigo.

What, of Venice?

Even he, Sir; did you know him?

Know him? ay.

Signior Gratiano! I cry you gentle
pardon;

body accidents must excuse my man-neglected you.

am glad to see you.

How do you, Cassio?—O, a chair, a chair!

Roderigo!

He, he, 'tis he:—O, that's well said;
—the chair:— [A Chair brought in.]

Id man bear him carefully from hence;
the general's surgeon.—For you, mis-
ress,

your labour. He that lies slain here,
Cassio,

dear friend: What malice was beween you?

one in the world; nor do I know the
man.

To BIAN.] What, look you pale?— ), bear him out o'the air.

[CAR. and ROD. are borne off.]
good gentlemen:—Look you pale,
mistress?

erceive the greatness of her eye?—
on stare, we shall hear more anon:—

er well; I pray you, look upon her;
ec, gentlemen? nay, guiltiness will argues were out of use.

[speak,

Enter EMILIA.

Las, what's the matter; what's the matter, husband?

assio hath here been set on in the ark,

igo, and fellows that are scap'd;
et slain, and Roderigo dead.

Alas, good gentleman! alas, good assio!

his is the fruit of whoring.—Pr'y-tee, Emilia,

of Cassio where he supp'd to-
night:—

you shake at that?

le supp'd at my house, but I there-re shake not.

, did he so? I charge you, go with e.

ie, lie upon thee, strumpet!
am no strumpet; but of life as ho-
at thus abuse me.

[next,

s I? so! lie upon thee!
nd gentlemen, let's go see poor Cas-o dress'd.—

[tale.—

stress, you must tell us another
n you to the citadel,

oy lord and lady what has happ'd.—
go on, I pray f.—This is the night,

[Aside.

r makes me, or fardoes* me quite.
[Exeunt.

* Under.

SCENE II.—A Bedchamber: DESDEMONA in Bed asleep.—A Light burning.

Enter OTHELLO.

Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul,—

Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars!—
It is the cause.—Yet I'll not shed her blood;

Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow,
And smooth as monumental alabaster,

[Takes off his Sword.

Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men.
Put out the light, and then put out the light:*

If I quench thee, thou flaming minister,
I can again thy former light restore,

Should I repeat ice:—but once put out thine,
Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature,

I know not where is that Promethean heat,
That can thy light relume. When I have pluck'd thy rose,

I cannot give it vital life again,
It needs must wither:—I'll smell it on the tree.—

[Kissing her.

O balmy breath, that dost almost persuade Justice to break her sword!—One more, one

more.—

Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill
thee,

And love thee after:—One more, and this the last:

So sweet was ne'er so fatal. I must weep,
But they are cruel tears: This sorrow's heavenly;

It strikes, where it doth love.—She wakes—
Des. Who's there? Othello?

Oth. Ay, Desdemona.

Des. Will you come to bed, my lord?

Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona?

Des. Ay, my lord.

Oth. If you bethink yourself of any crime,
Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven and grace,
Solicit for it straight.

Des. Alas, my lord, what may you mean by
that?

Oth. Well, do it, and be brief; I will walk
by:

I would not kill thy unprepared spirit;
No,—Heaven forbid it!—I would not kill thy soul.

Des. Talk you of killing?

Oth. Ay, I do.

Des. Then, heaven
Have mercy on me!

Oth. Amen, with all my heart!

Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill
me.

Oth. Humph!

Des. And yet I fear you: for you are fatal
then,

When your eyes roll so: Why I should fear, I know not,

Since guiltiness I know not; but yet, I feel,
I fear.

Oth. Think on thy sins.

Des. They are loves I bear to you.

Oth. Ay, and for that thou diest.

Des. That death's unnatural, that kills for loving.—

Alas, why gnaw you so your nether lip?
Some bloody passion shakes your very frame:
These are portents; but yet, I hope, I hope,
They do not point on me.

Oth. Peace, and be still!

Des. I will so: What's the matter?

* I. e. The Light of Life.

* T. e. e.

Oth. That handkerchief, which I so lov'd, and gave thee,
Thou gav'st to Cassio.

Des. No, by my life and soul;
Send for the man, and ask him.

Oth. Sweet soul, take heed, [bed.
Take heed of perjury; thou'rt on thy death-

Des. Ay, but not yet to die.

Oth. Yes, presently:
Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin;
For to deny each article with oath, [tion,
Cannot remove, nor choke, the strong concep-
That I do groan withal. Thou art to die.

Des. Then, Lord have mercy on me!

Oth. I say, amen.

Des. And have you mercy too!—I never did
Offend you in my life; never lov'd Cassio,
But with such general warranty of heaven
As I might love: I never gave him token.

Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in his hand.

O perjur'd woman! thou dost stone my heart,
And mak'st me call, what I intend to do,—
A murder, which I thought a sacrifice: *
I saw the handkerchief.

Des. He found it then;
I never gave it him:—Send for him hither,
And let him confess a truth.

Oth. He hath confess'd.

Des. What, my lord?

Oth. That he hath—us'd thee.

Des. How? unlawfully?

Oth. Ay.

Des. He'll not say so.

Oth. No, his mouth is stopp'd;
Honest Iago hath ta'en order for't. †

Des. My fear interprets then,—What, is he dead?

Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge
Had stomach for them all.

Des. Alas! he is betray'd, and I undone.

Oth. Out, strumpet! Weep'st thou for him to my face?

Des. O, banish me, my lord, but kill me
not.

Oth. Down, strumpet!

Des. Kill me to-morrow, let me live to-night.

Oth. Nay, if you strive,——

Des. But half an hour.

Oth. Being done,
There is no pause.

Des. But while I say one prayer.

Oth. It is too late. [He smothers her.

Emil. [Within.] My lord, my lord! what,
ho! my lord! my lord!

Oth. What noise is this?—Not dead! not yet quite dead?

I, that am cruel, am yet merciful;
I would not have thee linger in thy pain.—
So, so. ‡

Emil. [Within.] What ho! my lord, my
lord!

Oth. Who's there?

Emil. [Within.] O, good my lord, I would speak a word with you.

Oth. Yes;—'tis Emilia:—by and by.—She's
dead.

'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death:
The noise was high.—Ha! no more moving?

* A sacrifice atoning for thy crime.

† Has taken measures.

‡ It is supposed that some theatrical direction has been omitted, and that, when Othello says, "So, so," he then stabs her. After the repetition of wounds, Desdemona might speak again with propriety, and yet very soon expire.

Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,*
I'd not have sold her for it.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. Ay, 'twas he that told me first;
An honest man he is, and hates the slime
That sticks on filthy deeds.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. What needs this iterance,† woman? I say, thy husband.

Emil. O mistress, villany hath made mocks
with love!—

My husband say, that she was false?

Oth. He, woman;
I say, thy husband: Dost understand the word?
My friend, thy husband, honest, honest Iago.

Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul
Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart;
She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.

Oth. Ha!

Emil. Do thy worst:
This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven,
Than thou wast worthy her.

Oth. Peace, you were best.

Emil. Thou hast not half the power to do me harm,

As I have to be hurt;‡ O gull! O dolt!
As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed,—
I care not for thy sword; I'll make thee
known,

Though I lost twenty lives:—Help! help, ho!
help!

The Moor has kill'd my mistress; Murder!
murder!

Enter MONTANO, GRATIANO, and IAGO.

Mon. What is the matter?—How now, general?

Emil. O, are you come, Iago? you have done
well,
That men must lay their murders on your neck.

Gra. What is the matter?

Emil. Disprove this villain, if thou be'st a
man:

He says, thou told'st him that his wife was false:

I know, thou didst not, thou'rt not such a villain; Speak, for my heart is full.

Iago. I told him what I thought; and told no more

Than what he found himself was apt and true.

Emil. But did you ever tell him, she was false?

Iago. I did.

Emil. You told a lie; an odious, damned lie;
Upon my soul, a lie; a wicked lie:—

She false with Cassio?—Did you say, with Cassio?

Iago. With Cassio, mistress; Go to, charm
your tongue.

Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I am bound to speak;

My mistress here lies murder'd in her bed.

All. O heavens forfend!§

Emil. And your reports have set the murder
on.

Oth. Nay, stare not, masters; it is true, indeed.

Gra. 'Tis a strange truth.

Mon. O monstrous act!

Emil. Villany, villany, villany!—

I think upon't,—I think,—I smell't;—O vil-lany!

I thought so then;—I'll kill myself for grief.—
O villany, villany!

Iago. What, are you mad? I charge you, get you home.

Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to
speak;

'Tis proper I obey him, but not now:—

Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home.

Oth. O! O! O! [Hanging over his wife.

Emil. Nay, lay thee down, and roar;
For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent,
That e'er did lift up eye.

Oth. O, she was foul! [Rising.

I scarce did know you, uncle: There lies your niece,

Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly stopp'd:

I know, this act shows horrible and grim.

Gra. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father's dead;

Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief
Shore his old thread in twain: did he live now,
This sight would make him do a desperate turn,
Yea, curse his better angel from his side,
And fall to reprobation.

Oth. 'Tis pitiful: but yet Iago knows,
That she with Cassio hath the act of shame
A thousand times committed; Cassio confess'd it:

And she did gratify his amorous works
With that recognizance and pledge of love
Which I first gave her; I saw it in his hand;
It was a handkerchief, an antique token
My father gave my mother.

Emil. O heaven! O heavenly powers!

Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Emil. 'Twill out, 'twill out;—I hold my peace, Sir? no;

No, I will speak as liberal* as the air;
Let heaven, and men, and devils, let them all,
All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.

Iago. Be wise, and get you home.

Emil. I will not.

[IAGO offers to stab his Wife.

Gra. Fie!

Your sword upon a woman?

Emil. O thou dull Moor! that handkerchief thou speak'st of,

I found by fortune, and did give my husband;
For often, with a solemn earnestness,
(More than, indeed, belong'd to such a trifle,)
He begg'd of me to steal it.

Iago. Villanous whore!

Emil. She gave it Cassio! no, alas; I found
And I did give't my husband. [It,

Iago. Filth, thou liest.

Emil. By heaven, I do not; I do not, gentlemen:

O murd'rous coxcomb! what should such a fool

Do with so good a wife?

[IAGO stabs EMILIA, then runs out.

Oth. Are there no stones in heaven,
But what serve for the thunder?—Precious villain!

Gra. The woman falls; sure, he has kill'd
his wife.

Emil. Ay, ay; O, lay me by my mistress' side!

Gra. He's gone, but his wife's kill'd.

Mon. 'Tis a notorious villain. Take you this weapon,

Which I have here recover'd from the Moor:
Come, guard the door without; let him not pass,

* A precious stone. † Repetition.
‡ "More can I bear than you dare excuse."
§ Forbid.

But kill him rather; I'll after that same villain,
 For 'tis a damned slave.

[Exeunt MONTANO and GRATIANO.]

Oth. I am not valiant neither,
 But every puny whipster gets my sword:—
 But why should honour outlive honesty?
 Let it go all.

Emil. What did thy song bode, lady?
 Hark, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan,

And die in music;—Willow, willow, willow.—
 Moor, she was chaste; she lov'd thee, cruel
 Moor;

So come my soul to bliss, as I speak true;
 So speaking as I think, I die,—I die. [Dies.]

Oth. I have another weapon in this chamber,
 It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's temper;—

O, here it is:—Uncle, I must come forth.

Gra. [Within.] If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear;

Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Look in upon me then, and speak with
 me,

Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.

Re-enter GRATIANO.

Gra. What's the matter?

Oth. Behold! I have a weapon;
 A better never did itself sustain
 Upon a soldier's thigh: I have seen the day,
 That, with this little arm, and this good sword,
 I have made my way through more impediments

Than twenty times your stop:—But, O vain boast!

Who can control his fate? 'tis not so now.—
 Be not afraid, though you do see me weapon'd;
 Here is my journey's end, here is my butt,
 And very sea-mark of my utmost sail.
 Do you go back dismay'd? 'tis a lost fear;
 Man but a rush against Othello's breast,
 And he retires:—Where should Othello go?—
 Now, how dost thou look now? O ill-starr'd wench!

Pale as thy smock! when we shall meet at compt,† [ven,
 This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven,
 And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my girl?

Even like thy chastity.—
 O cursed, cursed slave!—Whip me, ye devils,
 From the possession of this heavenly sight!
 Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur!
 Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire!—
 O Desdemona! Desdemona! dead?
 Dead? O! O! O!

Enter LODOVICO, MONTANO, CASSIO, carried in a Chair, and Officers, with IAGO, prisoner.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate
 man?

Oth. That's he, that was Othello; here I am.

Lod. Where is that viper? bring the villain
 forth.

Oth. I look down towards his feet;‡—but that's a fable:

If that thou be'st a devil, I cannot kill thee.

[OTHELLO wounds IAGO.]

Lod. Wrench his sword from him.

Iago. I bleed, Sir; but not kill'd.

* Steel is hardened by being put red-hot into very cold water.

† Account.

‡ To see if his feet be cloven.

not easily jealous, but, being wrought,
 Ex'd in the extreme; of one, whose hand,
 The base Judean, threw a pearl away,
 Worth twice as many as all his tribe; of one, whose sub-du'd eyes,
 Unused to the melting mood,
 Turn'd like the Arabian trees
 Medicinal gum: Set you down this:
 Say, besides,—that in Aleppo once,
 A malignant and a turban'd Turk
 Venetian, and traduc'd the state,
 By the throat the circumcised dog,
 Mote him—thus. [Stabs himself.
 O bloody period!
 All, that's spoke, is marr'd.
 I kiss'd thee, ere I kill'd thee;—No way but this, [Falling upon DESDEMONA.
 ; myself, to die upon a kiss. [Dies.

Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had no
 weapon;
 For he was great of heart.
 Lod. O Spartan dog,
 More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea!
 Look on the tragic loading of this bed;
 [To Iago.
 This is thy work: the object poisons sight;—
 Let it be hid.—Gratiano, keep the house,
 And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,
 For they succeed to you.—To you, lord governor,
 Remains the censure of this hellish villain;
 The time, the place, the torture,—O enforce
 it!
 Myself will straight aboard; and, to the state,
 This heavy act with heavy heart relate.
 [Exeunt.
 * Judgement.
